Vol. 26 No. 252 | QUINCY, MASS., WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 1, 1911 | PRICE TWO CENTS

VENERABLE TEACHER OFFERS RESIGNATION AFTER LONG SERVICE

For 46 Years Instructor At Adams School Miss Eliza C. Sheahan Would Like To Retire

Board Offers Miss Sheahan Leave Of Absence

Miss Eliza C. Sheahan for 46 years a teacher in the public schools of Quincy has resigned her position, requestisg that it take effect Dec. 22. The resignation of Miss Sheahan came as a great surprise to the school committee and much regret was expressed on the part of the members of the board that it should have been received.

Miss Sheahan, as stated above has been one of the teaching corps of the Quincy schools for 46 years, having been appointed in Sept. 1865 and as far as known has always been connected with the Adams school. She has been one of the most valuable and loyal of the teachers and her resignation is very much to be regretted as Quincy can ill afford to lose such a valuable one.

The board did not accept the resignation, but did vote to ask Miss Sheahan to take a year's leave of absence at half pay beginning Dec. 22. It is hoped in this way that her services may be retained for many more years

Messrs. Curtis, McKay and Burke were the absent members.

The resignation of Miss Mary L. Rogers of the Cranch school was received.

Drawings were received from Messrs Hurd & Gore for the completion of the hall in the Quincy school building and the Chairman of the Board was authorized to approve the same.

It was voted to expend the income from the Rock Island fund in the purchase of reference books for the High school library.

It was voted to request the State Board of Education to examine the evening drawing school of Quincy, with a view of taking it as a state industrial school. If this is done the state bears half the expense of maintaining the school.

At the June meeting of the Board it was voted that the Chairman be requested to appoint a committee consisting of one member of the school committee and six citizens interested in manufacturing, who with the Chairman of the School Committee and Superintendent should investigate and report as to the possibility of establishing a vocational school for boys also a committee consisting of five women who with the superintendent should investigate and report on the possibility of establishing a vocational school for girls in Quincy.

Chairman Miller announced that he had appointed the following as these committees.

Boy's vocational school, Herbert S. Barker representing the school committee, H. Gerrish Smith, Harry L. Rice, Frank Burgess, Alexander W. Russell, H. A. Marr and Frank Hibbitt.

Girl's vocational school, Mrs. John D. Mackay, Mrs. Derter E. Wadsworth, Mrs. Walter H. Pinkham, Mrs. W Ward Witcher and Mrs. John W. Walsh.

SOCIAL WAS DELIGHTFUL

Christian Endeavor Pres. Church Enjoy Hallowe'en

PROCEEDS FOR BUILDING FUND

One of the most successful socials ever held by the Christian Endeavor society of the First Presbyterian church, was the Hallowe'en party given in the lecture room Tuesday evening.

The guests were ushered in by two ghosts and at eight o'clock the fun began. Many delightful games were played and biting the doughnuts and apples that hung from the ceiling, proved great fun.

The apple biting contest was won by Miss Helen Elrick and William Michael, and each was presented a pretty Hallowe'en souvenir. Each guest was given a small pasteboard pumpkin to which was attached his fortune and as each one read his aloud it all afforded much amusement.

Refreshments were served by the Social committee which consisted of home-made doughnuts, coffee, popcorn balls, and apples.

More games were played and music enjoyed until 10.30 when the happy company started for home.

The lecture room was most tastefully decorated, and presented a pretty picture as one entered. Orange and black crepe paper, autumn leaves, pumpkins and black witches were in evidence throughout the room. On the side of each coffee cup was pasted either owls or witches.

The ghosts were Lawrence Butler and William Michael.

The Social committee deserve much credit for the success of the affair, which is due greatly to their hard work and planning. The members of the committee are Lillian McIntosh (chairman) Jennie Norrie, Mary Morrison, Annie Cummings, Belle McIntosh, Everett Clark, Lawrence Butler, William Michael, George Craig and George Shirley.

The proceeds of this social is for the building fund of the church and a goodly amount was realized.

SENTENCE OF WOMAN SUSPENDED

Mrs. Alice C. Crawshaw who was arrested at the Quincy depot Tuesday noon, as she was about to take a train with Sydney Gordon, with whom it is alleged she had run away, was brought into court this morning and arraigned on the technical charge of drunkenness. Her husband was present and after consultation with the court, a sentence of three months in the house of correction was imposed and the sentence suspended until July 2, 1912. Gordon who was booked for drunkenness was released at the station.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM INJURY

Horse Became Startled And Ran Down Beale Street

ONE MAN JUMPED

Louis A. Fagan of 42 Newcomb street, in company with two companions had a narrow escape from serious injury at Wollaston Tuesday night when a horse that re was driving ran away. When on Beale street near Newport avenue something startled the horse and he started on the gallop over the railroad bridge. The first jump snapped the breeching and as the wagon went down hill it began to hit the horse's hind legs. This frightened him still more and as he increased his speed caused Fagan to lose hold of the reins.

Fagan was forced to jump and landed in the road, escaping with a damaged suit and a few scratches. When nearing Hancock street one of the other occupants of the wagon regained one of the reins and brought the horse short up against a fence on Beale street. This stopped the runaway and the two young men escaped injury. The horse and wagon except for a few minor scratches were uninjured. Fagan is the proprietor of the Fagan Antique Furniture Company.

RINGING FALSE ALARM WAS VERY COSTLY

Sending false alarms of fire as a Hallowe'en stunt proved to be an expensive piece of fun for Arthur Swanson of Dysart street, for he must contribute the sum of $25 to reimburse the city for the expense of calling out the fire department.

Swanson and some other young men were out for fun Tuesday night and it is alleged that he sent in the alarm from Box 122 that sounded at 10.06. Officer Forde who was near, promptly arrested him and he was taken to the police station.

This morning in court, the court continued the case on probation until April 5, 1912, with the understanding that in the mean time Swanson shall pay $1 per week toward the costs, until the sum of $25 has been paid.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

Mrs. Arthur H. Dunstan entertained a few friends at her home 17 Dysart street, Tuesday evening. The house was prettily decorated, appropriate to Hallowe'en. The evening was spent playing games and vocal and piano selections were rendered by Miss Algie Keene, Miss Gill, Miss Lillian Collins, Miss Florence Collins and Miss A. Clinton. During the evening a buffet lunch was served and at a late hour the guests wended their way homeward declaring it to have been one of the pleasantest evenings they ever spent.

QUINCY HIGH PUTS ONE OVER ON TEAM FROM BROCKTON

In Fiercely Contested Game Local Boys Prove Winners 6-0

Game Best Seen At Park For Some Time

Preventing the strong Brockton High team from placing the pigskin over the line when within a distance of 2 yards from the touchdown mark, and urged on to a vigorous degree by this performance, the Quincy High School football warriors rushed the ball with rejuvenated confidence in the third period and by calling captain Johnson to the fore on a tackle rush, were enabled to send Brockton High down to a 6 to 0 defeat Tuesday afternoon at Merrymount Park. The many ardent admirers of the local team fairly went wild with delight when Captain Johnson went over the line, and for a time the scene of the contest resembled an abode of exuberance, just as is wont to take place when those who have been held in check for some time have at last been given unrestrained freedom.

The victory was a signal one, especially from a standpoint of rivalry, and the enthusiasm was all the more intensified when Page kicked the ball cleanly between the two goal posts. The game had been eagerly awaited for some time, and the local boys were strong in their anticipations to revert the score so that it would make up in equal proportion to the fate handed out when Brockton High was encountered in Brockton about a year ago.

Coach Staff was alert to the occasion. He himself is a Brockton product and no one knew any more about the deficiencies of the visiting team than he. Yet the Brockton boys were no less tardy to round out into shape, and the exhibition at Merrymount Park yesterday was the best that has been seen in local circles for a long time. It was a game for blood throughout, yet it was played in a sportsmanlike manner, and in such a way as to reflect credit, not only upon the members of both teams, but upon the game of football itself.

Coach Staff used just eleven players on the local team, and every one of them was at his best. The Brockton line was on the average about the same weight as the local line, but the ability of the Quincy players to show up to advantage at critical moments, offset the highly commendable work performed by the backfield of the visiting combination. These three men seemed a whole team in themselves and it is safe to say that a better football trio than Saxton, McGlincey and Howe would be hard to find in interscholastic circles.

Yet the Quincy backfield was no less efficient, and the timely end rushes of Holmes, the heavy line bucking of Finlay and the punting and aggressiveness of Page were easily discernible and all who have followed the team this season acclaimed their work of yesterday to have been about the best ever.

The work of Larkin at end was highly conspicuous, and on two or three occasions "Mecca" was seen to get the opposing runner, even though he was being aided by an interference of three of his co-workers. The interference work of the Brockton team was very noticeable, more so in fact than the interference of the winning combination.

On three occasions the visiting team successfully executed a "fake" punt manoeuvre and though the forward passed was called into play several times, it failed to acquire any distances for either side, punting

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Orville Wright says man is a natural flier, but you'd never think it to ride on some of our accommodation trains.

The Chinese rebels have captured a war chest of $750,000, but they have lost more than this by quitting work at the laundry.

Figures being produced to show that only one out of 86 murderers in this country is executed, it is evidently much safer to commit homicide than the crime of track walking.

A New Jersey man has been arrested charged with stealing $100 worth of barrels from the Standard Oil company, but John D. may have left them around loose hoping someone would carry them off.

Kaiser Wilhelm honored Ambassador Leischmann by talking half an hour with him in private. If the Kaiser wanted to know about American coinditions, we hope Mr. Leischmann gave him a full account of the Philadelphia-New York ball games.

Citizens of Quincy and other cities in the Metropolitan district opposing the idea of annexation to Boston will be interested to hear that no' less a personage than President Eliot condemns the idea just now. He says: "While the annexation of the suburban towns and cities to Boston might be desirable, it was not so until a better municipal government had been secured."

Now let the good work go on. Governor Dix of New York has signed the Grady bill, equalizing the salaries of the school teachers in New York City. The enactment of the bill is a victory for the women school teachers after years of endeavor. Absolutely no reason can be advanced why a woman should receive less wages than a man, for the same work, at school teaching or in any other profession. The fault has been witr the woman in accepting less, making conditions unsatisfactory for both sexes. The evil once started is of course hard to overcome.

POLICE AND POLITICS.

"Vote to keep the police out of politics" says the Massachusetts civil Service Association in a mighty good circular, giving reasons, which it has just issued. Of all departments of the city government, it says, that of police comes in closest contact with the daily life of the people. It is not too much to say that the police, more largely than any other organ of government, influence public and private morality and fix the standard of civic ideals.

Now let us see. It is a fact that in all cities and in such towns as have accepted the Civil Service law appointments to the police force are made for merit only, after a careful inquiry as to mental, physical and moral qualifications. Office is held continuously during good behavior, the right of removal being expressly limited by law. No such safeguard is, however extended to the head of the police department. In some cities it is the custom to reappoint efficient police chiefs, but in others the chief changes with each change of administration.

Consequently the position becomes the football of politics and is often declined by the best men, who prefer the greater security and non-partisan basis of the lower grades in the service.

The chiefs of police have long been desirous of receiving the same protection for honest and efficient work as is given to other members of the department.

The rigor or laxity with which restructive laws that effect the conduct of the individual citizen are enforced depends largely on the attitude of the head of the police force. It is, therefore, essential for the efficient administration of the department, not only that the chief shall be a man of strong character and intelligence, but also that he shall have all possible protection in carrying out his duties.

Any police chief will testify that there are at times almost overwhelming obstacles in the way of those who wish honestly and impartially to enforce the law. The chief is often faced with the unpleasant choice of either losing his position or closing his eyes to flagrant infringements of law and order.

Finally, the longre tenure of office will enable police chiefs to familiarze themselves with the character and efficiency of the men under them and to carry out a continuous line of policy; the greater security will make them more independent in executing restructive laws.

PRETTY PARTY ON HALLOWE'EN

Was Given At Wollaston Unitarian Church

BY KING'S DAUGHTERS

A pretty Hallowe'en party took place in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Friendship committee of Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters.

At the entrance the guests were met by a ghostly figure in white beside an illuminated pumpkin lantern who silently demanded their admission. Next they were taken up to a ghost who gave them a handshake that was very cold and clammy. A number of ghosts flitted among the guests and made the scene a weird one.

The decorations were very effective the many Japanese lanterns and Halowe'en ornaments making the scene a pretty one. Bobbing for apples, blowing eggshells, hunting fortunes and other games of the night were indulged in.

An appropriate luncheon was served and incidental music by George Critchley and his daughter Miss May Critchley was enjoyed.

In charge of the affair was a committee composed of Mrs. E. R. Frost, Mrs. Eric H. Ewertz, Miss Helen Foster, Mrs. George Badger, Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, Mrs. George Thompson, Mrs. Walter Baker, Mrs. R. W. Oldham.

A SANE CHRISTMAS.

There has been considerable said the last few years about a sane Fourth of July and all the talk and thought has brought forth much good. Now there are other days and things that it would be better if more thought and sane judgment was brought to bear. How about Christmas? Don't some of us go too far? Hasn't it become "a give and take sort of a proposition," instead of a gift of love? How many give what they can afford and no more? Do they not say "so and so is used to nice things and I must get something pretty nice" and more money is expended than is wise. How about the poor people do we make their Christmas bright by pretty as well as useful gifts or have we expended all our money on our own family and friends. Then again do we shop early and take account of the overworked clerks in the stores? There are a lots of things about Christmas that might be saner, without causing any unhappiness which would better carry out the spirit of "Peace on earth and good will to men."

MANY FRIENDS INTERESTED IN WEDDING

Of Miss Isadore Chase Lull Daughter of Former School Official

A wedding of interest to Quincy friends of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Warren Lull of Newport, Rhode Island, because of their residence here for several years when Mr. Lull was superintendent of the Quincy schools, was solemnized Tuesday evening at Channing Memorial church, Newport, the bride being their daughter, Isadore Chase Lull, who also has many friends here. The groom Warren Thurber Gould is a Massachusetts man being the son of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Gould of Malden.

The ceremony was solemnized by Rev. William Safford Jones, pastor of the church, formerly of the Unitarian church in Randolph. The ceremony was at half-past six and witnessed by a large gathering of friends. The bride's attendants were: Miss Rena Harwood Chase of Leominster, Mass., cousin of the bride, as maid of honor and Misses Miriam and Rosamond Gould of Malden, Mass., sisters of the groom; Mrs. Ralph R. Barker, Jr., of Newport, R. I., and Miss Edna H. Bowne of East Orange, N. J., as bridesmaids. The groom's brother Bertram Cheever Gould of Malden, Mass., acted as his best man and the ushers were: Edwin J. Hylan, Lowell, Mass., Paul T. Wise, Clinton, Mass., Edward B. Horne, Winchester, Mass., Howard M. Bartlett, Malden, Mass., Dr. John H. Blodgett, Boston, William J. O'Meara, New York, Herbert W. Rice and Alfred G. Chaffee of Providence, R. I.

A reception followed the ceremony, being held in Channing Memorial parish house which was beautifully decorated as was the church in autumn flowers, palms and green foliage. The bridal party formed an exceptionally pretty group of soft coloring against the floral background. The bride's gown was of Liberty satin and point Lierre lace with pearl trimmings, tulle veil caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Pink marquisette over pink messaline with crystal trimmings worn by the maid of honor and two bridesmaids in blue marquisette over blue messaline and the other two in pink marquisette over pink messaline, completed the pretty color scheme. The attendants' gowns were all trimmed with dark fur and crystal and they carried baskets of Farleyense ferns.

Mrs. Lull the bride's mother wore a very handsome costume of violet, marquisette over violet messaline with crystal and lace trimmings and the groom's mother Mrs. Gould a beautiful gown of pink and white brocaded satin with trimmings of duchesse and rose point lace.

After receiving the congratulations of their friends Mr. and Mrs. Gould left that night on a wedding trip and on their return are to reside at Hingham, Mass., where they will be at home to their friends after January first.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

CIVIC PRIDE.

Editor of Ledger:

In your issue of Oct. 31, I was pleased to see a very deserving compliment to Mr. Henry M. Faxon for his exercise of civic pride in the widening of Hancock street. There is plenty of room for a number of our real estate owners upon our most popular streets and the square to follow his example. I wish the owner of the old shack at the corner of Washington and Temple streets, and the owner of the one at the corner of Washington and Foster streets had as large a lump of civic pride as our progressive Henry M. Faxon, and would remove those eye-sores located within a stones throw of four of our most beautiful buildings, viz: te historic Stone Temple, the new Court House, the Public Library, the Y. M. C. A. building and the Post office. What would strangers to Quincy say and what would their impression of Quincy be after viewing those?

At the time the street railroad petitioned for the privilege to erect a freight depot on Washington street there were petitions, protests, and clamor all along the line both sides of Washington street, and today it is an ornament not excelled east of Foster street, and real estate owners would not now have it removed.

Yours,
Albert Keating.

Quincy, Oct. 31, 1911.

Q.—Will the Apostle Peter be the doorkeeper in heaven, since Jesus said to him, "I will give unto you the keys of the kingdom of heaven?"—(Matthew xvi, 19.)

Answer.—The "Kingdom" in this Scripture represents those who become true followers of Jesus. "Keys" are a symbol of power to open. To the Apostle Peter was delegated the privilege and authority of first opening the message and work of the Gospel to the Jews, and later to the Gentiles. He did the opening work of the New Dispensation, first to the Jews at Pentecost, at which time as we read, "Peter stood up with the eleven;" he took the initiative, he opened the Gospel invitation to the Jews and the other Apostles followed him. There he used one key. More than three years later he used the other key to open the message of the Kingdom of heaven to the Gentiles when the Lord sent him to preach the Gospel to Cornelius who was the first Gentile to accept the Lord Jesus Christ; therefore the first to become a member of the Kingdom of heaven class. Thus we see that the Apostle Peter long ago used the keys referred to in this Scripture. There will be no occasion ever to use them again. Those who reach heaven will not pass through literal doors.

German professor declares that the only kind of music Americans care for is "rag-time." Yet Americans crowd to the concerts of orchestras which scorn rag-time. We suspect, however, that some persons would like to hear what rag-time played by the Boston Symphony would sound like.—New Bedford Standard.

STEEL vs. WOOD

Your old black walnut desk may be a good looking piece of furniture but it isn't the modern place to keep your valuable papers, your jewelry, or money. It can burn readily, its lock is easy to pick or break, its concealment is insufficient. A steel box in our burglar proof, fire-defying vault will cost you $5 a year—(only half the cost of a similar box in Boston). Use one and stop worrying.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB. ....

The Hallowe'en dance last week at Alpha hall under the auspices of the Literature committee, Mrs. Short, chairman, was a great success. The decorations were pretty as well as unique, carrying out the Hallowe'en idea. The party was so successful and enjoyable that it will probably become an annual feature.

Under this committee the current events lectures by Mrs. May Alden Ward will be continued this season, the first one being on Friday afternoon, Nov. 3, at the clubhouse, Presidents hill. This class will be a large one as the ladies find Mrs. Ward a most entertaining speaker.

The executive board meets at the club house for its November meeting at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard and Mrs. William G. Shaw are to represent the club at the State Federation, Nov. 16, at Haverhill.

Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard is to be a guest of the Professional Woman's club, on Tuesday at hotel Vendome, Boston.

The next meeting of the club seems a long way off as the second Tuesday comes the last date it possibly could, being a full two weeks into the month. It promises to be a fine meeting.

Anyone wishing to consign articles to the Arts and Crafts exchange the 2d and 4th Tuesdays of each month should bring the articles not later than 2 o'clock on club days. Any salable article of fancy work suitable for Christmas gifts will be received. Regular classes are to be formed in millinery, dressmaking, basketry, jewelry, leather, china painting, stenciling and irish crochet. Anyone wishing to join these classes kindly send name as soon as possible to the chairman of the Arts and Crafts, Mrs. Jelinek so classes may be formed immediately. Outsiders may join by paying a small extra fee which entitles them to join any or all the classes.

"AND THE CAT CAME BACK"

Wrapped In Laundry Bundle And Taken Long Ride

RETURNS THIS MORNING

It has often been said that a cat taken a long distance will readily find its way home. This saying proved to be true in the case of the pet cat of Mrs. Lydia C. Hultman of Revere road.

Tuesday, Mrs. Hultman tidd up a large bundle of soiled clothing for tht wet wash. Unknown to her the pet family cat crawled into the bundle for a nap. When the bundle was tied up puss was inside. The bundle was thrown in the wet wash wagon and carted about the city for several hours before it finally reached the laundry. The employees at the laundry got somewhat of a fright when the bundle was opened to see a cat jump out and scamper away.

This morning when Mrs. Hultman opened her outer door she was very much surprised to see her pet waiting to get in. Apparently he was none the worse for his trip but the question is, how did it find its way home.

HALLOWE'EN AT HALL PLACE.

A Hallowe'en party was held at Hall Place M. E. Church, Tuesday P. M. They had as guests about twenty members from Epworth League of the Wollaston M. E. church. The church was decorated in corn stalks, witches, cats, crepe paper, and pumpkin lanterns, while a big black spider held sway in one corner, and a witches' hut attracted attention in another corner. Even the moon did not fail to put in his appearance early in the evening and his jovial face was a happy testimony to the fun the "spirits" were having.

When the guests arrived they were shown the way upstairs by two ghosts, and after removing their wraps were conducted downstairs again to a dimly lighted room. Here the two ghosts were joined by others and together they held high carnival for a while.

Ghost stories were told by Miss Hilda Frances and Mrs. Martin. There were piano solos by Miss Helen Martin and a duet by Lawrence Martin and Camille Fuller. Forfeits, the eating of apples suspended by a string, lighting the candle and blowing out the candle were played and evoked great laughter. Refreshments consisting of apples, peanut taffy, corn crisp and marshmallows were served.

The party broke up at a late hour everyone declaring it a most enjoyable evening.

The affair was in charge of Miss C. B. Hodgkinson, fourth vice president of the League. Miss Maud E. Hodgkinson was chairman of the decorating committee and both were assisted by other members.

PRETTY WEDDING AT ATLANTIC

When Miss Ethel Apollonio Became Bride of John Walters

WILL RESIDE AT DUXBURY

Atlantic was the scene of a pretty home wedding this afternoon the bride being Miss Ethel Apollonio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer M. Appollonio of 53 Botolph street, and the groom John Walters of Duxbury.

The ceremony was performed at 3 o'clock by Rev. Thomas W. Davison of the Memorial church. Walter Harriott of Everett was best man and the bride had two attendants, Miss Bessie Norrse and Miss Ethel Bezanson of Marshfield. The ushers were Harvey Holt and Norman Keene.

The bride was charming in a gown of white messaline, with veil caught with lilies of the valley and carrying a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The attendants were also in white, their gowns being white muslin. Green and white was the color scheme in the floral decorations of the house with the exception of the dining room which was in pink and white.

A reception followed the ceremony until five o'clock after which Mr. and Mrs. Walters left for a wedding trip. They are to reside at Duxbury where they will be at home to their friends after Nov. 15th.

GOES TO NIAGARA FOR PRISONER

Inspector Goodhue received a telegram from Niagara Falls this morning, announcing the arrest at that place of Domenico DiRamio who is wanted in Quincy for the larceny of less than $100 from Amaldo DiNicola last August. DiNicola runs an Italian bank in a small way, on Canal street, and DiRamio was employed by him as a clerk. On the day of the alleged larceny he was sent to Boston with money to deposit, but instead of so doing, skipped. He has been traced from place to place until he was located in Niagara Falls where he was arrested.

Inspector Goodhue is going to that city tonight to bring him back

CHORAL SOCIETY.

Study of the "Golden Legend" is proving very popular with the Choral society and growing familiarity with its beauties is adding pleasure to each rehearsal. Conductor McConathy's interpretations promise to be well carried out by our singers and friends of the society may well anticipate hearing a splendid rendering of this great modern work.

In other years many have thought that the choral concerts have not been advertised early enough to reach all who desire to hear them. This year the executive board and members of the society will start the subscription ticket sale much earlier. In this way it is hoped to reach everyone interested and add one more stone to the strong foundation from which the officers hope this society may grow to be one of the best in the country.

VOTES FOR WOMEN.

In a letter to the Hartford Courant, Miss Caroline Ticknor makes the point that while doubtless many able, intelligent and conservative women are enrolled under the yellow flags which bear aloft the motto, "Votes for Women," it is an undisputed fact that the majority of the standard bearers who are out to exploit their cause, display but little of those qualities which are the portion of every orderly, self-respecting citizen. The history of every worthy cause is bound up with the history of noble and inspiring exponents of the cause who have worked faithfully and untiringly for the cause, not for themselves.

The reverse of this statement is true of the majority of the ill-bred and lawless women who publicly espouse the equal suffrage platform. They prove themselves devoid of all those traits most needed in the public spirited citizen. Take for instance the "heckling" through the Commonwealth of the Republican candidate for Governor by Miss Margaret Foley and her companions. Miss Foley has said "I assured them we were a non-partisan organization, standing for no party, but backing the candidate who stood for us." This statement sums up accurately the attitude and aims of those suffragettes who go before the public. They demand woman's suffrage at any price. They have but one object in view, to get something which they desire for themselves. They do not pause to inquire if it is a good thing for the state and the nation. They do not scruple to back anyone who backs their cause or to knife anyone who is opposed to it.

Miss Foley and her following, while they defy the law, stir up disorder everywhere, quarrel with the police and court the cheapest notoriety, do so without the least pretension of patriotic purpose to justify their actions. They are out to secure "votes for women." Were they inspired by any preconceived idea of how they are to purify this country's politics, or elevate its public service, they would, no doubt, set forth their aims and plans. They cry out that the ballot is something that woman ought to have but do not stop to ask, if, on the other hand, the woman is something the ballot ought to have. If they would pause to consider this question in their own state of Massachusetts, the present problem confronting them would bid them hesitate to prove their claim. If they were really intent upon furthering municipal reform in Massachusetts, they would consider the practical conditions which now surround them, The problems of Massachusetts are those of her large manufacturing towns, such as Lawrence, Lowell, Fall River and New Bedford. These cities have all a huge foreign population and several of them a majority of women. The city of Boston today has a two-thirds foreign population and 5000 more women than men. Who can think soberly and sensibly upon this subject and yet wish to bestow the ballot upon this horde of ignorant who will outnumber their intelligent sisters in the proportion of ten to one?

The statement "We are non-partisan, but back the candidate who stands for us," is an announcement which does litle credit to those who made it. It is not patriotism and it is not good politics, but is, alas, quite characteristic of the suffrage regime.

Anty Drudge's Washing Test.

Anty Drudge—"This basket of clothes was boiled and rubbed the old-fashioned way but ten times, yet the fibre has been so weakened that they're full of holes. The other basket was washed the same number of times the Fels-Naptha way, and there is not a break in them—fabric as strong apparently as when it came off the loom."

Does Monday morning find your kitchen like a Turkish bath and steam filtering into every room? If you enjoy the odor of boiling clothes, well and good. If you don't, then use Fels-Naptha soap. Fels-Naptha will cleanse your clothes in cold or lukewarm water—no boiling—in half the time it takes by the old-fashioned way. Hard-rubbing and all the other disagreeable features of wash-day done away with.

Use it according to directions on the red and green wrapper.

TAFT AT PITTSBURG

Star Attraction at Celebration of Steam Navigation Centennial

Pittsburg, Nov. 1.—President Taft's second swing around the circle, as originally planned, came to an end here with the most enthusiastic and by far the noisiest demonstration he has experienced in all the 12,000 miles he has traveled.

Pittsburg celebrated the centennial of steam navigation on western rivers and Mr. Taft was the star attraction in the celebration.

There were close to 150,000 persons at the wharf on the Monongahela river when the president was taken aboard the steamboat Virginia to review the "fleet" anchored there.

For five minutes every whistle on every steamboat, river tug, barge or motor boat within miles was tied down.

BRIEFS

Loyal Temperance Legion will meet at Protection hall, Thursday afternoon t 4 o'clock all are invited to attend in ull numbers.

Miss Maria Josselyn formerly of Standish avenue returned Tuesday to her home in Dorchester, after a week's visit with Mrs. Roderick D. Hall of Davis street.

The Quincy Charitable society holds its annual meeting on Monday evening, Nov. 6, at half past seven at the residence of Mrs. E. Granville Pratt, 1061 Hancock street.

Just to show that Quincy is "in the running" in any kind of competition Dr. W. G. Kendall won first prize and Mr. W. B. Glover third for pears at the fruit show of the Boston Chamber of Commerce last week. The competition was open to all New England.

"LOUIE" OPENS EMPORIUM.

"Louie" the veteran peanut vender has opened an establishment on Hancock street, near Beach street, Wollaston. Louie has been a familiar figure for many years at the football and baseball games in Merrymount park and is well known to the many that attend them. His unfailing reply of "Same time yesterday" to the question "what time is it?" is always sure to raise a laugh.

A PRIZE WINNER.

At the meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural society committee on Saturday the first prize, a silver medal for best fruit garden was awarded to Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic. The winning of this prize for two consecutive seasons in competition with the owners of large estates with scores of gardeners in charge is a credit to one who has but an acre on which he raises more first prize winning fruit than any other amateur horticulturist in New England.

ITALY HAS BIG JOB ON HAND IN TRIPOLI

Hundred Thousand Men Needed For Army of Occupation

London, Nov. 1.—Owing to the censorship, the "news" from Tripoli must be taken with a large grain of salt. Italy has squelched the war correspondents and some of them, principally at Malta, are "getting back" at Rome by sending greatly exaggerated stories.

There probably is no doubt that the Italians have taken summary measures to clean out the Arabs in the city of Tripoli who received them with open arms and then conspired to stab them in the back.

Italy has caught a Tartar in Tripoli, and just now she is where she cannot let go. The seriousness of the campaign may be understood when it is known that Italy is now preparing an army of occupation of 100,000 men.

NO-LICENSE IS GAINING

Interesting Meetings Held In Boston On Monday

DR. ELIOT SPEAKS

Delcevare King, chairman of the executive committee of the No-License league presided over the important conferences held in Kingsley Hall, Boston on Monday afternoon and evening. John R. Anderson opened the discussion on "What Drink Does," saying it demoralizes everybody it touches, wipes out national honor and costs nearly two billions in money to the United States, besides a waste of grain, other materials and of industry five billions more.

George A. Gordon of Worcester, associate secretary of the league, opened the discussion on "Basic Ideas," telling of the league's objects.

Rev. Mr. Hersey of Somerville criticised the law under which no one but the Mayor or police was free to examine records of sales.

Theodore H. Raymond, treasurer of the league, said a fund of about five cents per inhabitant is necessary to carry on a successful municipal campaign.

Frank M. Rand of Haverhill, where the fight was lost last year, said that the contributors to last year's fund were in favor of going ahead this year and were coming up with their contributions.

Mr. Raymond claimed that nobody with the same amount of money $7000 had accomplished so much in any movement. That small amount must be had in order to carry on the movement with most of the financial support coming from two individuals. He believed the amount should be made up by individuals and organizations in the various communities.

Mr. Goodyear of Haverhill urged the necessity of secretaries in every city or town league.

Francis Heseltine of Lynn told of a committee's work in remedying the drink nuisance on street cars coming from license places.

J. W. Brittain of Westboro, Mr. Strong of Natick, George A. Alden of Brockton, Mr. Tilton of Woburn, Mr. Evans of Salisbury, Philip Emerson of Lynn, Charles A. Bliss of Newburyport and Arthur J. Davis spoke briefly.

Mrs. Erving W. Engler gave an account of how the women of Lynn conducted the distribution of campaign buttons and window cards, decorating, prize speaking, lunches at the polls, mass meeting, etc.

Mrs. Frank L. Young of the Dorchester Woman's Club told about women's work for bubbling drinking fountains, boys' organizations, the new municipal building, which they started; getting men to the polls, cooking schools for women in the interest of temperance.

At the banquet served between 6 and 7 o'clock Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard reported encouraging progress in the cause of no-license.

Calling the evening session to order Dr. Eliot said:

"It is easier to get legislation than to obtain its enforcement against liquor selling, child labor, social evil and in favor of the fundamental reform of all reforms—social service.

"This No-License League presents a somewhat discouraging history in saying that it made no progress until 1906. This seems a mistake. It is true that the progress has been mostly in the last five years, and this is most encouraging. There has been progress through organization, permanent officials, literature and system of work, and more than these, in the adherence of cities and towns to no-license policy. The town or city that is worst off is the one which wobbles from no-license to license year after year.

"But if we survey the whole State we must admit that progress has been painfully slow, although the league has proved that economical results have been obtained, and arrests have diminished. Another demonstration is that one who has to use his senses in his occupation has his power diminished by the use of alcohol. Why this fact is not accepted in the great state of Massachusetts is because of the weakness of humanity, on account of which men and women indulge in that which exhilarates for the moment, when they know they will be the worse for it afterward.

"This is essentially a religious work, intended to elevate the moral and spiritual condition of mankind. There is nothing to hinder you and me from persisting in this work with vigor, enthusiasm and success."

Other important addresses were made by Robert A. Woods, who spoke regarding the "Bar and Bottle law." Arthur J. Davis, field secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, who suggested an "8 o'clock opening bill," instead of 6, as now.

The Neal Dow Quartet sang two campaign songs and others spoke regarding permanent headquarters, permanent secretaries and training schools for the league.

Rev. Fr. Doody of Cambridge was the next speaker, and in presenting him to speak on "The Saloon—A Menace," Dr. Eliot said: "The question of annexation to Boston is of the greatest importance to the Metropolitan District, and it seems to me that the municipalities had better delay until the city of Boston has a better government than it has now."

Fr. Doody said in part: "In our parochial school are 1500 children, all taught in the principles of temperance and no-license. While the present law is not so perfect as it should be, I have thought the reasons were largely commercial. I have always sympathized with you, and have cooperated with you as far as possible, and will continue to do so. While selling alcoholic beverages is not declared unlawful by the church, it is the cause, here in America of every sin and evil known to man."

Falconio Expresses Appreciation of Kindness Shown Him

HAS PROOFS OF GREAT WORK

Washington, Nov. 1.—An apostolic valedictory was sent to all the archbishops and bishops of the Roman Catholic church by Mgr. Diomede Falconio, the papal delegate to the United States.

"By a letter of the 18th inst.," announced the delegate, "his eminence, Cardinal Merry del Val, informs me that his holiness, Pope Pius the Tenth, will be pleased to promote me to the high dignity of the cardinalate on the occasion of the next consistory, which will take place on the 27th of November."

Mgr. Falconio, saying that "my elevation to the cardinalate will mark the end of my m' ion as apostolic delegate to the United States," expresses his highest appreciation of all the kindness shown him by the people of the United States during his tenure of office as representative of the pontiff.

"In a most especial manner," reads the official letter, "my thanks are due to the American hierarchy, the lustre of the Catholic church of the United States.

"I carry with me to Rome the best and most consoling proofs of the great religious and social work which is being successfully carried on in this vast republic through the earnest zeal of the bishops and the efficient co-operation of their beloved clergy and faithful people.

"When at Rome, under the shadow of St. Peter's, though far away from you, I shall ever remember with joy and pride this flourishing portion now so endeared to me of Christ's divine church, and I shall constantly pray that God may shower in abundance upon you all His choicest gifts."

The letter officially promulgates the holy see's appointment of Mgr. Bonaventure Cerretti as charge d'affaires.

Cardinals to Go Abroad

Rome, Nov. 1.—In creating Archbishop Farley cardinal, the pope will assign him to the titular church of Sancta Maria Supra Minerva, which was the church held by the late Cardinal McCloskey, the first American to reach the cardinalate. This church stands on the site of a temple of Minerva, dedicated by Pompey after his victories in Asia, and destroyed at the beginning of the sixteenth century. It was founded by the Dominican friarrs and is the only Gothic church in Rome that has retained its original architecture. It contains precious works of art, including the famous statue of Christ by Michael Angelo.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Filth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

SYNOPSIS

Anna Granger, devoted mother of two small children, discovers that her husband is a weak character and that he has lied to her about a woman.

Posing as Miss Dale, she becomes stenographer to Burton Temple, through whose evidence her husband has been imprisoned. She thinks Temple is the guilty man and is acting the spy to clear her husband's name for his sake and that of her children.

Anna discovers that Temple was one of her girlhood's ideals. Thinking her a single woman, he tells her her husband was a liar and perjurer.

Temple has detectives on the trail of Brady, an accomplice of Granger, looking for evidence. Anna is searching for evidence against Temple, who becomes interested in her.

Despite herself, Anna becomes fond of Temple, although determined to convict him for the honor of her boys. Temple's detectives discover Rosa Fanchon, the woman for whom Granger was a thief.

Temple desires to marry Anna. She rebuffs him, questioning his honor. Temple is indicted for the crime for which Granger is suffering imprisonment.

Once in the privacy of her own room Anna told Mrs. Mason everything. She sat there now, twisting and untwisting her hands in silence, her face very white, her pupils wide and black.

"And now," she began again dully, "I shall have to go before the man I have wronged and make my awful confession. I shall have to face the first big look of incredulity sweeping over him; then the tightening of his lion lips and lastly, perhaps, the pity of his eyes. Oh, I can't, I can't. I never knew before that I was a coward. But I am, I am!"

"Anyhow, dearie," ventured Mrs. Mason, "you've done your duty toward your children—you have cleared their name."

"Not really I haven't, not really and truly. Why, Mrs. Mason, I've just told you their father's guilty—guilty as hell! And to think I shall have to go back again to Westfield and take up my life with that man!" Her brows twitched and she trembled.

"Yes," pursued the stern old Puritan who, because of a peculiar twist of conscience, could see the matter only from one side. "It's the debt you owe the boys, Anna. No woman has any right to give helpless souls the wrong father. And when the day of reckoning comes it's she must pay, not the children she's betrayed into life. Oh, look here! Here's something I was just going to bring you when Mr. Temple rang the bell for me. It had just come in the post."

From her pocket Mrs. Mason drew an envelope, out of which she took two enclosures.

"They sent them to me, as I told them," she explained to the wan mother, handing her the children's letters.

"Harold writes pretty well for five, doesn't he, Mrs. Mason," observed Anna with pride, opening the younger boy's missive first. And she read aloud:

"Dear Mother—When are you coming home? I am well. I hope you are well. I had a stomach ache. The cat had kittens. Are you coming home next week? Robbie says he is going to be president. He's been it every day this week. Won't you please make Robbie not be president every day right along? He lets me be vice president, but that's no fun. When are you coming home? Very respectfully, your son, HAROLD GRANGER."

"And what does Robbie's letter say?" asked Mrs. Mason as Anna stopped to wipe the foolish little mother tears from her eyes.

"My Dearest Muddie (she began with a sorrowful pride in her voice. "Bobs has never left off calling me 'Muddie,' Mrs. Mason. Don't you think it's dear and pretty of him?)—Do not worry. Everything is quite all right. Harold had the stomach ache, but that's all right too. Harold misses you when we go to bed, but I don't, not till after Harold's got to sleep. Your son,

"He signed it Robert Granger No. 2, the second," finished she, drawing a long, sobbing breath. "Oh, my boys, my boys! Whatever can I do to scotch the criminal traces of Robert Granger the first that may be running in your blood?"

Mrs. Mason considered it the moment for interfering on Robert's behalf.

"He just made one terrible mistake, Anna, that's all."

"I don't know," said Anna, slowly shaking her head. "I don't much think that temptation develops any qualities, good or bad, not a temptation at least that has any deliberate consent of the will. No, it doesn't develop them. It only shows a man what he already is. Temptation's a test, that's all.

"Why, you see he wasn't even man enough to come to me and tell me that he'd been tempted. Instead he must offer the plea of a martyr—fool me, trick me, lie to me. I can't stand a lying man!" Again she seemed to smell the sickening, cloying honeysuckles.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE FIGHTING HOPE.

CRAVEN rang sharply for Mrs. Mason.

"Isn't Miss Dale better yet? Hasn't she recovered sufficiently at least to remember the combination of that safe? By heavens, woman, she must! There's a letter in there we must get out and take into town tonight. We've already missed the last decent train, and now there's nothing left for us but to take that thundering motorcar of Temple's and drive in!" Craven spoke irately. He was past the limits of patience.

"I've been talking to her," said Mrs. Mason quietly. "I think she is soon coming down herself."

"Puritans and petticoats!" muttered Craven after Mrs. Mason's retreating figure. "I bet there'll be a man at that typewriter next time," looking angrily at the empty desk.

Temple came in and looked at it too. "It's my fault," he said. "I should have sense enough to remember the combination myself. Poor Miss Dale! She's all tuckered out. We've worked her too hard."

"She's coming down in a few minutes, Mrs. Mason has just said," observed Craven, with a slight sneer.

And she did come down. The door on the other side of the room opened and Anna Granger entered. She was white as alabaster. The full terribleness of what she had done was tugging at her heart and soul.

"Ah, you have slept? You are better?" cried Temple, rising to greet her. Then turning to Craven: "Would you mind giving orders to the chauffeur to have the car ready in about an hour? We'll get there in good enough time."

"Got to go in that infernal eighty horsepower thing, after all. Bet you anything we strike a rock or something and hear angels' wings on our way!" was Craven's comment as he left the room.

MANY AUTO FATALITIES

Nearly a Hundred In Massachusetts In Eleven Months

Boston, Nov. 1.—What is termed as carelessness on the part of the pedestrians is causing an appalling number of deaths and injuries by automobiles on the streets and roads of Massachusetts. Up to yesterday no less than 1357 accidents in which motor vehicles were concerned have been reported to the highway commission in the past eleven months.

There have been during the past eleven months nearly 100 deaths and about 1100 injuries caused by automobile accidents. In the previous twelve months there were 73 deaths and 963 accidents.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Unless President Taft or death intervenes a woman will be hanged in the national capital Nov. 20, the district supreme court having affirmed the sentence of Mattie Lomax, a negress, condemned to die for murdering her husband.

A petition bearing 50,000 names has been presented to the president asking clemency for the woman. The prisoner is now critically ill and may not live to see the day set for her execution.

POTASH FOUND IN AMERICA

Secretary Wilson Says It Will Save Country $12,000,000 a Year

Washington, Nov. 1.—Rich potash deposits, said to contain more than enough of this substance to supply the needs of the United States, have been located in the west by scientists of the department of agriculture, according to Secretary Wilson.

This discovery, the secretary declares, will mean a saving of $12,000,000 a year to this country, as heretofore the United States has been spending about that sum annually in buying its potash from Germany. Wilson would not state where the deposits were situated.

KILLED WOMAN WITH POISON

Grand Jury Finds Richeson Caused Miss Linnell's Death

INDICTED ON FIVE COUNTS

Any and All Ways That Poison Might Have Been Given to Victim Are Covered—Motive For Crime Explained by Her Physical Condition—Case of Clergyman Continued In the Municipal Court

Boston, Nov. 1.—Clarence V. T. Richeson was indicted on five counts for the murder of Avis Linnell. The grand jury of Suffolk county gave as its opinion, after due deliberation and on oath, "that the said Richeson, wilfully and of his malice aforethought, did poison, kill and murder said Linnell."

The dramatic close of the four days of consideration of the case by the grand jury came yesterday afternoon, when the members of the jury filed through the corridor into the courtroom. Crowds elbowed their way into the large courtroom, and all stood tense, gazing upon Charles Dane, foreman of the jury.

Dane kept his eyes steadfast on Clerk Manning. There was no emotion apparent in his face, and the eager watchers could glean nothing of the report he was to make. The stillness of the crowded room was the only hint as to what was to come. The grim silence promised tragedy.

Clerk Manning's voice, suddenly breaking the stillness, caused the listeners to start. "Gentlemen," said he, "have you anything to report to the court at this time?"

"We have," replied Dane, and he walked to the desk and placed a parchment upon it.

Clrence V. T. Richeson had been indicted for murder in the first degree on the day which was to have been his wedding day.

Today a copy of the indictment will be served on Richeson in jail, and in all probability he will be arraigned in the superior criminal court tomorrow.

There are five counts in the indictment. Four of the counts are variations of the first chief count, and are intended to cover up any and all ways that the poison might have been given to Avis Linnell.

The other count, the longest of all, treats of the physical condition of the murdered girl. It explains the motive for the crime, saying that Richeson gave the poison to Avis, representing it to be a medicine that would relieve her physical condition, when he knew that it was a deadly poison and used for no such purpose as was represented.

Previous to his indictment Richeson appeared in the municipal court to answer to the charge on which he was arrested. It was evident from his appearance that he has aged in the days since he was taken from the Edmands home by Chief Inspector Dugan and Deputy Watts. The case was continued at the request of the police.

The news of the indictment of Richeson was received with cheers in Hyannis, the town where he was pastor for two years, and the home of the murdered girl.

There was no crowd on hand to see the prisoner as there had been when he first was brought into court on the day of his arrest. The court proceedings were brief and were carried out without the least friction.

CORONERS IN ACCORD

Said to Have Reported That Mrs. Nickerson Was Murdered

Newport, R. I., Nov. 1.—The report of the coroner's inquest on the death of Mrs. Lillian S. Nickerson of Boston, who disappeared from the Joy line steamer Georgia while en route from Providence to New York and whose body was later picked up at Little Compton, was filed with the clerk of the superior court here.

The report is sealed and can only be opened by order of the court. It is understood that the report will say that death was due to violence on the part of some unknown person and that the woman was dead before her body touched the water.

The woman's death occurred some months ago and the inquest covered a considerable period of time. It was held under the direction of Coroners Gifford and Lincoln, who concur in the report.

Schooner Thirty-Six Days Out From Potomac River Reaches Boston

Boston, Nov. 1.—The three-masted schooner Annie Ainslie, which was given up as lost several weeks ago, arrived in port yesterday from the Potomac river, establishing a record time for slowness for that trip.

The craft was out thirty-six days and was at the mercy of gales and hurricanes for more than a month. She was driven far out to sea many times, and although the distance of the trip should be but 600 miles, the schooner logged more than 1800 miles.

STATEMENTS UNTRUE SAYS MR. NICKERSON

Did Not Authorize Those Appearing In Boston Papers

LEDGER WILL BE ADVISED

When asked about the statements that appeared in the Boston papers today relative to the representative fight in the sixth Norfolk district, Nathan G. Nickerson, whose name will appear on the ballot as the Democratic progressive candidate for the office already referred to, stated that there was no truth in the statements and that he had never authorized anybody to issue them. The statements were to the effect that Mr. Nickerson was about to make a house to house canvas of the voters in sixth Norfolk district, asking them not to vote for him at the coming elections, but instead to vote for his opponent William J. Leslie. The reports also said that Mr. Nickerson was going to draw up a circular explaining his attitude.

Both of these reports were denied emphatically by Mr. Nickerson today. Mr. Nickerson said that he spent yesterday fishing, as announced exclusively in yesterday's Ledger, and that he had not as yet had time in which to give out a statement. In commenting upon the reports in the Boston papers, Mr. Nickerson said, "There is absolutely no truth in such assertions, they are all rot. Further more I never authorized anybody to make them, as I have not as yet had time to issue a statement." In concluding, Mr. Nickerson said that he would issue a statement in the course of a day or so and that he would forward the same to the Ledger for publication.

A COMMUNICATION.

Rednor P. Coombs, candidate for the senate from the first Norfolk district sends the following communication for publication in the Ledger. He says it is in answer to a letter of Senator Barnes which appeared in a local paper recently. The letter follows:

Editor, the Ledger:

Senator Barnes voted for a fake set of resolutions on the question of direct election of U. S. Senators, resolutions which are really a protest against the popular election of Senators and would turn over to the federal authorities control and supervision of election which rightfully belong to the people of the State of Massachusetts.

Senate Journal page 983 date Tuesday, May 2, 1901, bill to constitute 8 hours a day's work for public employees was read a second time on the question of ordering it to a third reading—Senator George L. Barnes is recorded as voting against ordering it to a third reading. The bill however was ordered to a third reading by a vote of 29 to 8. Barnes was one of the 8 to vote No. If Barnes will try to fool the people on these issues, it is safe to assume that he will try to fool them on other measures that come before the Senate.

(Signed) Rednor P. Coombs.

LEAGUE'S OPEN MATCH.

In the opening match of the Y. M. C. A. bowling league, Quincy defeated Brockton in straight strings leading at the finish by 31 pins. Burns was high man for Quincy on three strings with a total of 265. Thomas had the highest individual string, a 94. For Brockton, Gilligan did the best bowling, with 94 for his highest single string and 258 for a total. The visiting team came confident of winning the match but seemed to be unable to cope with the local bowlers. All the home bowlers did consistent work despite the fact that they had but little practice. Manager Elder and Brooks were unable to be present last evening and they are known to be first string men so that the prospects for a successful season are assured.

FOOTBALL

was resorted to in a large measure by both teams and in this department the honors must be requited to Page, who in the very first period, when Brockton had lost the ball on the two-yard line, and he himself was 5 yards behind the goal line, kicked the ball to the middle of the field, thereby eliminating any danger on the part of his team mates.

The weather, at the start of the game, was most unfavorable, and the drizzly rain was largely responsible for the many fumbles of the local eleven in the early part of the struggle.

The local boys used the tackle rush play in fine style and it was successfully worked three times. The work of the Brockton ends, in getting down under punts, was a special feature of the contest yet it would be a difficult task to pick out the shinning stars of the game, for every man in the game accredited himself in a splendid manner. White and Johnson frequently punctured the opposing line, and they opened "great holes" for Finlay to test his prowess.

Bill was in the lineup in place of Smith and he certainly lived up to all that was expected from him. A large gathering of rooters accompanied the Brockton team and frequent outbursts of joy were always forthcoming from them when a Brockton player netted any great gain.

The team work of the local eleven was consistent throughout, and the players seemed to strengthen as the game progressed. This victory places the local eleven more firmly in the limelight, and before the season closes Quincy High should be without a peer in the interscholastic world. The special features of the game can be best ascertained from a detail of the contest.

The ball was interchanged after the kickoff and the work of both elevens was on in earnest. Brockton got possession of the ball in the middle of the field and started things agoing at once. Efforts to advance the ball to any great degree proved fruitless and the ball was again in the territory of Quincy High.

The local eleven advanced the ball a few yards on the first two rushes within striking distance of the centre of the field. On the third down Quincy tried the forward pass but it was intercepted by McGlincey who ran about 35 yards before being downed. Brockton was held for downs, however, and was forced to punt. Holmes received the kick and was tackled almost in his tracks.

Successive rushes reaped considerable gains for the local team, but it was forced to relinquish the ball to Brockton High on the 40 yard line. McGlincey was again given the ball, but was thrown by Blackmur for a loss. Brockton was penalized for offside play and the ball was now on the 45 yard line of the local team

Brockton still maintained the ball, and after gaining downs, fumbled the first ball. The ball passed through several hands on both sides and was finally regained by Brockton. It was now on Quincy's 25 yard line with the third down for the visitors. On a fake punt McGlincey netted 10 yards and it was Brockton's first down. To add to the event, Quincy High was penalized and the ball was now within 10 yards of Brockton's goal post. A couple of rushes placed it on the 3 yard line. One yard was gained on the first rush, but on the the next successive rush the ball was stopped by the local boys when within a distance of 2 yards from their opponents' goal. Here the ball went to Quincy after a remarkable performance of strength and endurance

On the very first play, Page was called back for a punt and he booted the ball out of danger to the middle of the field. Saxton went through on the first rush for 10 yards. No gain was netted on the second down, and Page caught the punt on his own 20 yard line.

Page circled left end for 20 yards. The forward pass was tried but failed. Holmes gained 10 yards. It was now Brockton's ball and on the first rush, Larkin made a splendid tackle of McGlincey. The ball was now in the middle of the field and in Quincy's possession.

Brockton was penalized 10 yards. On a punt by Brockton, Page signaled for a fair catch and got the ball on his own 20 yard line. Blackmur, on a quarter-back rush gained 2 yards. Holmes was given the ball on the next play and by a sensational piece of zig zag dodging ran 20 yards before being thrown. This was the end of the first period and no score had as yet been made.

Quincy punted to Brockton and McGlincey ran 3 yards with the ball. A series of rushes enabled the visitors to place the ball in the middle of the field and when Blackey was thrown for a loss of three yards, Brockton decided to punt. The ball was kept midway between the two goal posts for a long time and finally Quincy came in possession of it on its own 45 yard line. The left half back on Brockton went through for 5 yards. Brockton was again forced to punt and the ball went to Quincy in the middle of the field. The fake punt was again used, and as before, McGlincey gained 10 yards. Quincy also decided to punt on failing to gain and after a couple of fumbles the ball went to Brockton on Quincy's own 25 yard line.

Brockton again got the ball and Johnson regained a fumble on the same 25 yard line. Successive rushes failed to gain any distances for Brockton and Quincy was now in a fine position to start for a goal. The ball interchanged twice during the remainder of the period and aggressive work on the part of the local team enabled Captain Johnson's team to place the ball on the visitors' 25 yard line.

Third Period.

The local boys entered the field in the third period with renewed confidence. Johnson gained about 5 yards on his tackle play. Finlay broke through the line for 5 more and the work of Page and Finlay placed the ball within 5 yards of a touchdown. Brockton held the local boys and punted out to the 45 yard line. Page went through for 15 yards. Finlay went through for 3 yards and it was now the third down. Blackmur tried a field goal but it failed. Brockton rushed the ball to no avail and it was again in the hands of the local players.

Finlay broke through the opposing line for 15 yards. Johnson on a tackle play went round for 4 yards. The forward pass was tried by Quincy High but failed. It was now Brockton's ball on its own 15 yard line. The first two rushes netted no gains. The next one netted about 10 yards and the ball went to the local boys on the visitors' 25 yard line. Finlay went through for 3 yards. Page gained the same distance. Finlay gained 10 yards on the next rush. Blackmur failed to gain. The local team failed to gain the down and Brockton got the ball. Brockton punted and Blackmur ran the ball back for a distance of 10 yards. Finlay gained 2 yards. Brockton again got the ball but failed to make downs. Brockton punted to Holmes on the 30 yard line and it was the local eleven's ball within 25 yards of the goal. The first rush by Finlay netted 3 yards. Johnson, on a tackle play gained 10 yards. Finlay went through for 5 yards. Holmes went through for 4 yards and on the next rush Johnson placed the ball over the goal line on tackle rush. It was a great performance and the crowd went wild when Page kicked the goal. Score Q. H. S. 6; B. H. S. 0.

The ball was interchanged on the kickoff and the period ended with the ball in possession of Brockton in the middle of the field.

The last period was also a warm one and the visitors used every effort to rush the ball to advantage. Brockton maintained the ball on the middle of the field and on the first rush Howe went through for 10 yards. Quincy acquired the pigskin and the ball went to Brockton on its own 25 yard line. No gains were reaped and Brockton punted. The ball was now in Quincy's territory and Holmes succeeded in advancing it to the middle of the field. Brockton reaped great gains and Quincy prevented a seeming touchdown by intercepting a forward pass on its own 15 yard line.

Quincy punted and Brockton got the ball on a fair catch. Blackey gained 15 yards when Brockton again got the ball in the middle of the field, after the local eleven had failed to gain the required distance. Lagerstedt netted 15 yards. Brockton punted and Page got the ball in the middle of the field. The ball was changed a couple of times and it was in Quincy's possession, on Brockton's 45 yard line when the game ended. The game was without doubt the best seen on the local ground this year and Brockton High proved to be the toughest proposition that Coach Staff's team has thus far encountered.

Powder Point is scheduled as the attraction for next Friday, and another victory should be forthcoming on this occasion.

Where Only Two Share a Line

"Yes, I thought it over pretty carefully and finally decided I'd have a two-party telephone.

"With only one other subscriber on the line, it is less apt to be 'busy' when I want to use it or when some one wants to talk to me. As I figure it out, my chances of being able to use the telephone, or to be called without a 'line busy' report, are just about eight times as good as when I had a four-party line.

"'Divided ringing' will be a great comfort, too—no bell to sound except my own. I won't have to wonder whether it was 'ring four' or 'ring five,' and be either breaking into other people's talkor missing calls.

"Between you and me, it will also disappoint the curious, should you happen to have a listener on the line, because she won't hear your bell and so know when you are being called. Better look into this.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

As was expected, "Eddie" Reagan, the well known local boxer, gave "Yankee" Evans, the hard hitting Brockton fistic artist, the time of his life in a six round bout at the Armory A. A. last night. The contest was declared a draw, but in reality it was a signal victory for the local boy, who had accepted to poose Evans on a two days notice, thereby filling in for "Nedzo" Bennett, who is laid up with an injured hand. Reagan himself was not in the best of condition, for his back has been rather lame as a result of participating in a football game last Saturday.

This makes the first draw that has ever been alloted to Reaga and up to last night he had won every bout in which he had been carded. He stayed with Evans all the time and had he known two weeks ago that he was to appear last evening, he could have undoubtedly put in enough training to enable him to secure a victory over the Brockton artist.

Judging from the following comment, taken from the morning Herald, it would seem that another victory is forthcoming Friday.

"Coach Larry Duffy of Powder Point school was a spectator at the Quincy High-Brockton High game at Quincy yesterday afternoon. The Quarry city eleven is by no means a weakling, as its playing this fall shows Powder Point is to play Quincy on Friday, and a great battle should result. The boys from Duxbury will, however, have to be much stronger to defeat Quincy than they were against Allen school on Monday."

Indianapolis, Nov. 1.—Having demonstrated that he can lower the price of potatoes and fruit by selling direct to the people, Mayor Shank is planning to sell fresh meat in the same way.

He says he finds from prices quoted that the dealers are making too much profit on fresh meats. He figures that he can lower meat 25 to 35 per cent.

DRAW IN USE.

The temporary draw at the Fore River bridge, which is to be used while the great 125-foot draw is under construction was opened for traffic on Wednesday. The change was necessitated on account of the fact that the draw of the old bridge was but 100 feet in width and this was found much too narrow to allow the passage of the great battleships now being built at the Fore River shipyard.

RECEIVE GREAT RECEPTION

Barnes-Leslie Rally Big Affair At Wollaston Today

THE SPEECHES

A rally in the interests of George L. Barnes, candidate for re-election to the Senate from the first Norfolk district and William J. Leslie, candidate for the House from the sixth Norfolk district, both on the republican ticket, was held at the Tubular Rivet Works at 12.30 P. M. today. The meeting was presided over by Frank Shay of Wollaston, and was attended by a large number of the employees of the Tubular Rivet Works.

Mr. Leslie was the first speaker. He said he considered it a pleasure to have the opportunity to address the working people of the Tubular Rivet Works, because he himself worked there at one time in overalls, and furthermore married a girl who had also worked there at one time. He spoke highly of the record of Senator Barnes, whom he temed an honest and efficient public servant. He then went on to speak of the issues which were at hand and told how other sections of the country were to pattern after Massachusetts in this coming election.

Confining himself to his own dampaign, he said that he had no great record of achievements to offer like his opponent, but that during his short stay in the council he had voted according to his oath of office. He said that the only thing his opponent seemed to have against him was the fact that he had voted against the half holiday bill for city laborers. Mr. Leslie then went on to explain his attitude on this bill and voted against it, he said, because he thought it was an infringement upon the working men, who had to pay the taxes. In concluding he talked at length on the redistricting proposition that was to come before the next legislature. He said

DOUBLE LEGALS FORENOONS

As each day of our progress upward shows itself, the worth of the suits we are selling becomes more and more in evidence. (This is not an opinion arrived at in our own conceit, that might be biased.) It's the verdict of the men—men who know value—who know quality—who can tell perfect fitting garments as apart from the merely fair.

Therefore today we offer unapproachable suits for the nobby dressing young man or the more conservative fellow further along in years—and every suit will beget your confidence and hold it.

The mother with a growing boy, a boy that is full of life-doesn't want to pay all "out doors" for a suit, but every mother wants her boy to dress well. Here we protect her purse. Low rent and small expenses gives us an advantage in making low prices.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The parade on the Hudson is called the biggest naval pageant in our history, and some New Yorkers will actually stop making money for a minute and a half to look at it.

Keep in mind the redistricting plan for Quincy and make sure that the candidate to whom you will give your vote is in favor of it and will work for it when taken up by the legislature.

That chunk of Windsor granite "as large as a small house," which is being written up so frequently, would be only a good-sized pebble for the Barre quarryman.—Barre Times.

Wonder what it would be alongside of that stone that left Quincy a short time ago?

To what better use can the old place be put when the family is scattered or the older members have been gathered to their heavenly home, than to give it over to the benefit of others. Alice Stone Blackwell is to be commended for giving the home of her father Henry B. Blackwell and of her mother Lucy Stone at Popes Hill as a memorial to them, to the New England Hospital for Women and Children. The house will be used as a convalescents home.

Everybody likes to see the boys have fun and plenty of it—but the limit has been reached and passed when it comes to fooling with the fire alarm boxes. Warning of a substantial nature was given in the local court this morning when a young fellow was heavily fined for calling out the fire department last night for no other reason than to help with the Hallowe'en festivities. It is to be hoped that the seriousness of the affair may be realized.

There was a run on a Quincy bank last night but there was no cause for alarm as it was to deposit money and not to get it out. It was the monthly deposit night and also the beginning of a new series of the Quincy Co-operative bank and so popular has this place of saving become that depositors line up waiting for the doors of the bank to open. The money on deposit in the Quincy and Wollaston Cooperative banks and the Quincy Savings bank, indicate that Quincy people are prospering and are also thrifty.

The present generation of the Adams family is as fearless and outspoken in their town, state or country's welfare as of old. It takes courage and loyalty to come out frankly as did Charles F. Adams, 2d, Wednesday at a public hearing of the Governor's council at the State house regarding the Governor's nominations for state boards and commissions. Mr. Adams could not be present but his letter left no doubt in any mind as to his position regarding an important appointment for he said: "In my opinion he is entirely lacking in a sense of justice and fairness as to be utterly unfitted for the position of railroad commissioner. He is, moreover, so lacking in executive qualities as to seriously handicap the effectiveness of any organization of which he is a part. Considering the difficulty and importance of the questions likely to arise between the commonwealth and its railroads and railways, I believe that the confirmation would be in the nature of a public calamity. May I add that I feel great regret at saying this of a gentleman with whom my relations were in every way entirely pleasant? But when asked, it seems a public duty to speak."

A woman physician, writing of her personal experience of woman suffrage in New Zealand declares that the emancipators of woman have gone very much too far. The inflated statements of a few who lead the "van of progress" would lead many people to believe that a few acts on a statute-book have made a Utopia in the Southern Pacific. Even if this were true it would not be necessarily a proper model for other countries to copy. But whether woman suffrage is the cause, or the consequence, or merely an accompaniment, the fact remains that New Zealand is not a country of happy family life. Marriage is not as frequent as it should be in a young country; the small birth rate causes continual anxiety; the high death rate among children is a disgrace to the women of New Zealand, and the proportion of nervous children is very large. The standard of education is low, and divorce and separation are grievously common. Wife desertion is so serious in extent that special arrangments have had to be made with the authorities at Sydney, which is the nearest port for any one in a hurry to leave the country.

All this does not make quite such a rosy-hued picture of New Zealand as is drawn at the suffragette meetings. If looks as if "votes for women" had not succeeded in making home a heaven or produced in New Zealand a family Paradise. Woman has already such an important place in the system, and such important and varied work to do, that she has no time, or should have no time for politics in any country, but least of all in new countries.

HINTS TO ADVERTISERS.

A writer on advertising subjects tells this story:—A man advertised fur lined overcoats, reduced from $50 to $30. No reason for the cut was given. He sold very few.

The lease of another dealer in the same line expired, and he was ordered to vacate in two weeks. He advertised this fact, and announced that his fur lined coats would be reduced from $50 to $40. He sold all he had.

This incident illustrates the analytical scrutiny with which the public analyses advertising to see if it is reasonable.

Still another hint from the same writer. A boot black was noticed one day shouting, "Shines, five cents." He was not very busy. Not far off was another stand occupied by a boy whose outfit and location were in no way different. It was Saturday afternoon. "Get your Sunday shine, five cents," he shouted, and he was hustling all the time.

The boy succeeded because he made the public realize that the service he had to sell was one of which they felt the immediate need. His appeal had timeliness, and it showed instinct for the news element in advertising. These incidents are full of suggestion to seekers for publicity.

A GREAT RECORD.

Nearly a half century as an instructor in the schools of Quincy is the wonderful record of Miss Eliza C. Sheahan who recently tendered her resignation to the school board. Of a gratifying nature is the information that faithful service in this case is appreciated and will be substantially rewarded the board having voted to extend the worthy teacher a year's leave of absence with a proper remuneration.

Service such as Miss Sheahan has given the city can not be estimated. It would be hard to give a suitable reward,, but here's hoping that her vacation may be beneficial, proving in some small way the high esteem in which she is held by those in charge of educational matters, as well as the community at large.

Q.—What is meant by the expression "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth?" (Exodus xxi, 24.)

Answer.—The Law given to the Israelites by the Lord, through Moses as the Mediator for that nation, was designed to emphasize and impress the lesson of the Divine principle of JUSTICE on the minds of the people. All through that wonderful system of laws this principle is boldly prominent. Justice is inexorable, demanding an exact equivalent for the thing that is lost or injured by a violation of the principles of righteousness. The scales must balance perfectly. Just as the laws of the material or natural realm are fixed and absolute; and any violation of these laws of nature must exact the penalty; so also in the moral realm. As surely as cause and effect are related, so any violation of the principles of righteousness demands a recompense and the penalty is exacted. There is no escape. Let no one deceive himself on this point. If one wilfully injures another, he has to the same extent injured himself. The law of action and reaction operates in the moral realm just as positively as in the arrangements of the material universe. He is happiest who observes the principles of righteousness most fully, and he is unhappiest who violates them most. It follows, therefore, that love is the fulfilling of the Law. Love for the Lord would prompt one to be obedient to His just commands and love for the neighbor would induce one to do good unto all men as the opportunities were presented. This great truth was beautifully set forth by the Master and His Apostles, See Matthew xxii, 37-40, and Romans xiii, 10. Who does not appreciate the principles of Justice as expressed in the "Golden Rule?" And yet how few are observing this rule! Consequently, how much unhappiness there is in the world!

BANK DIGNITY
It looks well to use checks. Buying a money order or sending a registered letter to pay a bill is expensive, and it doesn't create the impression that you are particularly prosperous. Paying your bills by check helps give you standing. Don't forget, appearances do count for something in this world. For your pride's sake, open a bank account and pay by check.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Tuesday, Quincy High defeated Brockton High, at Merrymount park. The final score was Quincy 6, Brockton 0. The game was a tight one and drew a large crowd of spectators. Johnson scored Quincy's touchdown in the third quarter of the game. Page kicked goal. he game proved one of Quincy's toughest battles and it looked as though Brockton would score at one time. All of the Quincy boys worked hard and with Coach Staff deserve great credit. They have now won six and lost two games.

On Friday, at Merrymount park, will come the clash with Powder Point high. This game will be an interesting one as Powder Point has a strong team.

This afternoon the inter-class run comes off. The distance is 2-1-4 miles The first three men over the line receive numerals and the first man over receives a white Q, as this is a new school record.

Dr. James H. Van Sickle, formerly superintendent of public instruction in Baltimore, Maryland, but who is now superintendent of schools in Springfield, Massachusetts, visited the Willard school Tuesday.

Monday, Miss Annie Burns, first grade teacher, visited schools in Everett and Brookline. She saw some excellent work in both places.

The report cards have been issued for the first period of the school year. Parents should give them their careful attention. Each pupil should have an average rank of 3 in each study to pass from one grade to the next higher grade. A pupil who is marked 4 in any study is not doing satisfactory work.

The schools will not be in session Friday, owing to the meeting of the Norfolk County Teachers' Association. The program for this year promises to be exceptionally interesting and helpful.

LYNN SHOE STRIKE COMES TO AN END

Men Return to Work Pending Arbitration of Difficulties

Lynn, Mass., Nov. 2.—There was a general return of striking shoe cutters in Lynn to work in the shoe shops yesterday. The men went to work on a forty-five-hour-a-week basis, pending the final adjustment by an arbitration board of the cutters' demand for an eight-hour day.

At the labor headquarters a statement was issued to the effect that no Knights of Labor shoe cutter had reported that a manufacturer had refused to allow him to return to work.

In several instances some of the men were informed that there was no work for them, but that there would be in a short time. The manufactures had been of the opinion that the difficulty would not be settled for some time to come, and therefore had neglected to secure a new supply of leather.

Slain by Highwaymen

New Orleans, Nov. 2.—Edgar H. Farrar, Jr., a lawyer, son of the president of the American Bar association, was shot and killed at Penisto and Magnolia streets by two unidentified highwaymen. The robbers escaped.

HIS POSITION

Editor of Ledger:

In your issue of last night there appears an acticle by my democratic opponent for the Senate in which he accuses me of trying to fool the voters of Quincy; I desire to ask the voters of Quincy to read the following statement and I shall then be content to leave it to them to say who it is that is trying to deceive them.

My opponent says in his article that I voted against the eight hour bill, but that I have endeavored to make it appear that I voted for it. Now why doesn't Mr. Coombs tell the voters of Quincy the whole truth instead of half of it. I have stated several times in Quincy in public, as well as in the communication to which Mr. Coombs refers that I voted against the eight hour bill on its first roll call for the reason that it contained a section which was clearly unconstitutional, and that I stated on the floor of the Senate that I would vote for the bill if the unconstitutional section was removed. The supreme court of Massachusetts by a unanimous opinion said the section was unconstitutional and it was removed from the bill, and I then voted in favor of the bill as I had previously promised to do.

Would Mr. Coombs have me vote for legislation that is unconstitutional? Is that what he wants the voters of Quincy to understand? Does he mean to say that he would vote for a bill that contains provisions contrary to the Constitution of this state, if he had taken an oath as a Senator to support it?

I am also glad to note that in his communication my opponent finally admits that I voted in favor of the elections of U. S. Senators by direct vote of the people. I have been told that he has frequently asserted during the campaign that I voted against it.

Respectfully,
George L. Barnes.

THE FORE RIVER BRIDGE.

Editor of Ledger:

Work widening the draw of the Fore River bridge was begun Wednesday although preparations toward that end have been going on for some time much to the discomfort of people obliged to cross each day.

Those who have been in the habit of using the street cars or walking across the bridge have been, and are still, seriously discommoded and are entitled to better conditions and a safe passage.

I know of several North Weymouth people who come to business in Quincy each day, especially ladies, who do not dare cross the bridge after dark. Some of these take the round about way of going by train from Quincy to Weymouth Heights and then the street car to North Weymouth, a long and expensive journey which eats into the weekly wage.

It would seem as though these people should be properly safeguarded and the very best possible accommodation given in the way of a well lighted and safe footway over the bridge.

As the closing of the bridge for the next three months takes in the darkest and stormiest ones of the year shouldn't the authorities take immediate steps to improve present condition?

A Sufferer.

$150,000 IN POSTAL BANKS.

The report of Postmaster Mansfield of Boston on the postal savings depositories for the first quarter, beginning Aug. 1 and ending at 6.30 P. M., Oct. 31st, shows that $150,665 was deposited to the creditors of 4081 accounts. Of this sum $17,500 has been placed on deposit at the eight stations in the city proper and adjoining districts by 702 persons and 3,379 persons deposited $133,165 at the central office.

The report further shows that $426,492 was paid back, of that sum $25,435 being refunded at the central office depository. Savings cards and stamps to the value of $2,722.50 were issued at the federal banks.

The central office depository was opened to the public Aug. 1, and Oct. 9 the system was extended to eight postal stations, the depositories in these offices being opened on that day.

From the report it is apparent that the federal banking system is a success. Of the station depositories that at the Hanover street station led with $5,594 deposited to the credit of 139 persons. Next came the Essex street station with $2,486 to the credit of 110 accounts, and the North postal station with $2,378 and 121 depositors came third. The Roxbury Crossing office did the lowest business $869, credited to 46 depositors.

BRIEFS

John Wood of California, formerly of Quincy, is in town renewing acquaintances.

Warren Edwards of Washington, D. C., formerly of Quincy is in town for a few days visit.

President Taft has appointed Nov. 30, the last day of the month as Thanksgiving day.

Mr. Casspole of Everett, a former resident of Atlantic has purchased the Tudhope place on Webster street for occupancy.

The new street railway turnout on Billings road, Norfolk Downs has been completed and will be put into service as soon as the signal lights are installed.

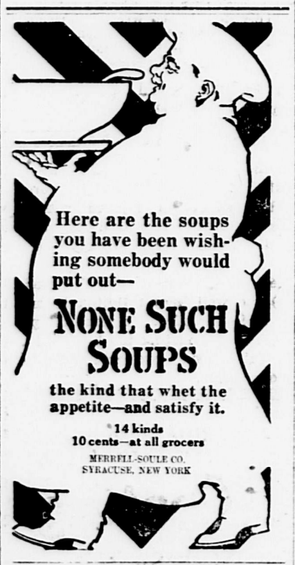

A load of lumber capsized on Newport avenue, Wednesday afternoon, in such a way as to fall across the street railway track completely, blocking travel for a time.

From all accounts there will be a plentiful supply of candidates for the City Council from all of the wards of the city. From the men mentioned for the office it looks as though the city would get a strong council next year.

The Sevsters club was entertained this week at a Hallowe'en party by Miss Ethel Vogler. Games pertaining to the festival were enjoyed and the table decorations of ghosts-skeletons and witches were also in keeping with the spirit of the celebration.

Meetings of the City Council Committees on Streets and Licenses are scheduled for Monday evening before the meeting of the council A meeting of the special committee to consider the advisibility of changes in the city charter will be held immediately after the council meeting.

Carlton Stocker, a well known and popular young man of Atlantic left Monday for the West. Kakama, Washington is his destination and the best wishes of his friends for success in his new business go with him. WILL NOT BE CANDIDATE

Jas. F. Burke Says He Will Not Enter The Contest

SAYS WALL THE MAN

There was a eprsistent rumor in democratic circles last evening that James F. Burke, in all probability, would be a democratic candidate for Mayor. Prominent democratic and republican friends, as well, have urged him to run, but Mr. Burke himself refuses to become a candidate. When interviewed by a Ledger reporter this morning he said that he never had any intention of becoming a candidate and that under no consideration will he consent to become one at the present time.

He desired to thank those who had urged his candidacy for mayoralty honors. Considerable talk prevailed at the democratic city committee meeting last evening and the question of a mayorality candidate was discussed at length. Unless some else comes to the front, before 7.30 o'clock this evening, James E. Wall will be the man wro will carry the democratic banner.

LITERARY AFTERNOON.

Although a day of clouds and rain nearly fifty club women assembled at the home of Mrs. William H. Doble on South street Wednesday afternoon for the second lesson in Modern Literature in charge of Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney under the auspices of the Literature committee of the Quincy Women's club.

Mrs. Gurney's talk was most interesting and entertaining as well as highly instructive and she proved a most admirable exponent of Maurice Maeterlinck's peculiar genius the topic of the afternoon, which she said was most opportune while the Blue Bird was being given in Boston and Maeterlinck's wife Mme. Leblanc who is now in this country taking a leading part in several of his operas including "Pelleas et Melisander" Mrs. Gurney contrasted Isben and Maeterlinck their problem plays, both get much out of life, it is the passions of life against conventionalism, while Isben is narrow Maeterlinck sees about him, living close to life. He was born in Ghentin 1862 and all his life has been something of an enigma to even his intimate friends. He was graduated from the Jesuit college of St. Barbe and admitted to the bar but law did not appeal to him and he devoted himself to short story writing but even litterateurs were not at all certain in their minds as to their real worth and he was 27 when he "wrote "La Princess Maleine" a friend offered to set up the manuscript in type if he would turn the crank of a hand press and he agreed. The edition comprised 25 copies.

His success was assured when Mirbeau was so impressed with the play that he wrote a three-column review of it in "La Figaro" and set the world talking.

Inter his later dramas Maeterlinck has woven the ideas of destiny the unknown determining force of life, and he has accomplished this with a spiritual sensitiveness more delicate than that displayed by any other modern writer. He gives no detailed plan or scheme of predestination save in the simple symbol of "The Blue Bird." Mrs. Gurney spoke of several of his essays including "The life of the Bee" all dealing with the mystic. She read the story of "Sightless" which is his contribution on the women question. His Blue Bird has caused a great amount of discussion and it is expected he will receive the Nobel (?) prize because it has a distinct moral uplift. Mrs. Gurney said Maeterlincks' wife was a woman of rare intellect and charm with a touch of genius herself and that she had been an ideal helpmate to her husband and inspired him where inspiration was needed.

He takes pleasure in doing things for the sake of doing them in the best way possible and it has been said that no personality in the literary world is as whimsical and mysterious and as interesting as the author of "The Blue Bird who slept in an arm chair in a friend's study utterly oblivious of the fact that an English audience had sat in judgment on his drama and acclaimed it a masterpiece and informed he smiled stretched himself and went to bed. Mrs. Gurney brought her lecture to a close by reading in her delightful manner from Ardiane and "Barbe Blene" and the "Land of memory "from the Blue Bird. Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann of 65 Goffe street is to open her house for the next lesson on November 15, Subject—Wilde and Shaw the English writers.

MEETING OF CITY COMMITTEE

the present time concerning the cause of democracy was the best that could be expected and that from the results thus far, it looked as if the people throughout the city were awakened to the situation as never before.

Councilman Smith, in talking upon the municipal caucuses urged that a full slate be made and that a man be asked to run for every office for which there is a vacancy. He also said that a number of strong men were enrolled in the democratic party and asserted that some of these men could land councilmanic seats if they would only consent to become candidates.

Rednor P. Coombs, candidate for senate from the first Norfolk district, was the first speaker. He told of the active campaign which he has been conducting all along and said that he was confident of being elected when the ballots are counted on the seventh of November. He took Senator Barnes to account for the many misrepresentations of him that he had tried to put before the people of the district. He said that Mr. Barnes had made statements about him which were unfounded and unwarranted and he also asserted that he had offered to meet Mr. Barnes at the Braintree Club, in order that the matter might be placed in a clear light. Mr. Coombs said that the present senatorial incumbent had failed to put in an appearance or to accept the challenge to meet in joint debate.

Mr. Coombs said that a few more votes than he received in Quincy than last year, will surely elect him, because his strength is continually increasing in the outside places. He said that the republicans had in mind to issue campaign literature at the eleventh hour and added that Mr. Barnes was escaping the charges made against him solely on technicalities. He urged the voters to get out on election day and predicted a sweeping victory for the democratic party.

Michael T. Sullivan, candidate for representative from the fifth Norfolk district was next introduced. He told of the different parties who were rallying to his support and felt confident of being pronounced a winner on election day. He said he had not scheduled many rallies during the past week, but continued that his time will be consumed in this direction from now until election day. He also touched upon the municipal campaign and saw no reason why a big vote should not be noticeable on the seventh of November.

John J. McDevitt, candidate for the House from the sixth Norfolk district, spoke next. He said he did not feel that there was any suggestion he could offer for the municipal caucuses, for his time was greatly taken up at present in his campaign for representative. He told those present of the work he had put in during the past two weeks, and said that while he realized that he had a hard fight on, he felt sure that he would be elected, because of the fact that he had received assurances from the most prominent men in his district many of whom reside in his opponent's own ward. He then outlined what he intended to do during the remaining days and said that in the event of his election, the voters of the district will have no cause to regreat their action.

Mayor William T. Shea followed Mr. McDevitt. He said he had not attended a meeting, owing to business pressure, for some time, but from the sentiment that prevailed at the gathering he felt assured that the candidates were meeting with success. He also touched upon the mayoralty question, but positively refused to have his name mentioned as a candidate for the office. He said that the situation in the sixth Norfolk district was a most trying one, now that there are three candidates in the field, but argued that the intelligence of the voters would offset any unfavorable tendency and that Mr. McDevitt would be pronounced a winner. He also complimented the candidates on the work that had been put in and said that active work by the members of the committee on election day will be of great assistance to the candidates.

It was decided to hold a monster open air rally in City Square next Saturday evening and Chairman Smith said that a list of well known orators had been secured for the occasion. A committee was appointed to make arrangement for the affair and it is expected that one of the largest rallies ever held in local circles will be in evidence.

Other speakers were Councilman Frank J. Duffy, ex-councilman William H. Flynn, William Kelly, Thomas Griffin, Peter M. Sullivan, Charles C. McCue, Alfred LaCroix, James Grant, and Galen Bowditch. Papers were taken out for various offices and it is expected that a full list will be filed tonight.

PIG MATCHES LANDSCAPE

But Owner Does Not Appear Satisfied With Coat of Green

Holbrook, Mass., Nov. 2.—A green pig strolling about the yard of Henry Hirsh of Union street attracted considerable attention. Crowds of idlers assembled around the porker and wondered where the pig with the new shade came from.

Hirsh's house and barn are green, so are about a score of squashes in his garden near by. When the pig roamed into the garden the crowd could not tell where the squashes began and the pig left off.

Finally two young men admitted that when they discovered a gallon of green paint in the rear of the barn they couldn't resist the impulse of having the pig adapted to his environments. Now Hirsh says he may sue for damages, although the pig does not appear to be bothered by his new color.

HAGGERTY IS INSANE

Slayer of His Three Children Is Sent to an Asylum

Boston, Nov. 2.—Thomas Haggerty, who was arrested last May on the charge of murdering his three daughters, aged 4, 7 and 9 years, and who was subsequently indicted for murder, has been declared insane by alienists employed on the case, and this morning was brought before the superior criminal court and committed to an asylum.

The murder occurred on the top floor of a Calumet street dwelling house, when Haggerty returned to his home, after tucking his three little daughters in bed and kissing each good night, turned on the gas, stole quietly out of the room and locked the door.

DEATH OF MRS. MANTELL

Actor Reaches His Home Too Late to See Co-Star Alive

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., Nov. 2.—Mrs. Marie B. Mantell, wife of Robert C. Mantell, the actor, and herself well known as a co-star with her husband, died at her summer home here, Brucewood. Mantell reached Brucewood a few hours too late to see his wife before she died.

Miss Russell, as she was known upon the stage, played the leading female roles in all of Mantell's Shakesperian classic and romantic presentations.

She was born in Brooklyn and was educated in its public schools, at St. Joseph's academy, Flushing, N. Y., and at Emerson college, Boston. Her first appearance as an actress was in "The Avalanche" in 1894. She married Mantell in 1900.

MEYER REVIEWS BIG FLEET OF WARSHIPS

Salutes From 1700 Guns Greet Secretary of the Navy

New York, Nov. 2.—The curtain was officially rung up here upon the greatest naval demonstration the United States has ever seen with the review of the gigantic fleet of 102 ships of war by Secretary of the Navy Meyer and the senate and house committee on naval affairs.

Battle thunder such as New York has never before heard was the greeting for the officials upon the presidential private yacht Mayflower, which was in commission to convey the official visitors around the armada.

Secretary Meyer "broke his flag" on board the Mayflower about 2 o'clock, the yacht moving up to the Connecticut for the admiral and and his under officers to pay their respects. The schedule called for the Mayflower passing every ship in the majestic seven-mile line.

The honor of firing the first salute of nineteen guns to Secretary Meyer fell to the flagship Connecticut. In all 1700 guns thundered out their acclaim as the secretary moved past the battleships.

Flags fluttered from every peak in the crisp autumnal breeze and on shore hundreds of thousands of spectators gathered to witness the inspiring spectacle.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES — NO SLATE — NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

Temple desires to marry Anna. She rebuffs him, questioning his honor. Temple is indicted for the crime for which Granger is suffering imprisonment.

"Miss Dale"—Temple fixed her gaze with a whimsical, ineffable smile—"the key to my liberty and my good name lies in my safe yonder. It is you only who can give it to me. I am glad."

He came a step nearer and a great light shone in his eyes. "It is the princess of my enchanted palace who shall give it to me. That is good."

With one long sobbing that rent itself straight from her torn heart, Anna stepped back.

"What is it, dear?" he cried, springing toward her, a big, wrapping tenderness in his voice. "You know, don't you? I am cleared now. That letter is the proof I have been waiting for. I bring you honor, sweet; the penknife isn't all now."

"Oh, wait, wait, just a little minute!" she cried, struggling pitifully for self mastery.

"Oh, but surely you've guessed it, Anna. I love you with a love that has been waiting a good many years. I want you to be my wife, dear, won't you? Won't you?" He was holding her hands now compellingly, fighting for her answer in serene, unswerving fashion as had ever been his manner of fighting for all things that he wanted much.

But she swept back from him with a gesture. Then the words came with a rush:

"Mr. Temple, I have deceived you. I have deceived you from the first. I have been here under false pretenses. I am not Miss Dale. I am married. I have two children. I am—I am Robert Granger's wife!

"Yes," she went on breathlessly, having been awed into silence for a second by the look on Temple's face, "Robert Granger's wife. Now you begin to see a little, don't you? I came here to discover some evidence that would clear his name. If spying, shadowing, tracking could do I meant to get it. I meant to vindicate him and to send you to prison in his place."

O God, why did he look at her like that? How could she go on? The pained amazement, the crushed suffering in his face, they were gnawing at her vitals.

"But it was idle," she went on, the sob in her breath cutting like a sword. "I've failed. I know now that Robert is guilty. I know that you are not. I have found that out."

"Ah, you needed to be told!" He was speaking more to himself than to her. It was the protest of his heart against the blindness of his heart's princess.

"No, nobody told me; I found it out myself. I—I read that letter you put there—in the safe. I thought it might be something that would clear my husband"—

"Poor little wife, poor little wife!" was Temple's only comment.

—"and it was just the opposite," she went on, struggling to finish her confession. "Sun and moon and stars and all the lights of heaven and earth they got frightened and left me in darkness somehow. Oh, it was dark, and I—I was groping! I heard my children calling, and I could not reach them because I had failed, because I had given them a father who was a thief. And then—then I saw the flames beckoning in the grate, and I burnt the proof of their father's guilt—burnt it to ashes."

"You burnt"— His sentence would not finish itself. The woman buried her face in her hands that she might not see the agony in his eyes.

Temple continued to stand before her, grappling slowly with the horror, which loomed larger and darker, as it closed in on him. He stared from her to the safe, then back again. He, too, drew his hands across his eyes to cut out the picture of the woman who sank now on her knees before him, sobbing bitterly, convulsively.

"I didn't think, you see. I couldn't think," she moaned. "I saw only my boys' names branded through life."

Still he did not speak.

"Oh, why—why don't you say something? Why don't you curse me?"

A vast, overwhelming pity surged up in Temple's heart. Suddenly he forgot himself, his own horrible future, in the picture of the woman he loved so abased.

"Ah, you poor, poor little mother!" he said at last very gently. He laid his hand on her bowed head. "Please get up," he said hoarsely.

Anna rose and stepped back, her hands clasped closely against her breast. A light, akin to worship, shone in her eyes as she looked at him.

"That's what you have to say to me," she breathed—"that? It is like the magnanimity of God. I came into your life, deceiving you, spying upon you, cheating you. I've destroyed the one priceless thing that stood between you and prison, and now your thought is for me—my suffering and shame!"

Impulsively she raised his hand to her lips and held it there for an instant. It was not a caress, but a benediction.

"Oh, you prince of princes among men," she said reverently, "I have no words in which to tell you how I honor you."

Temple smiled sadly, remotely.

"I—I think I can understand why you came, why you deceived me, why you did this terrible thing. You were fighting for your children and the man you believed in, and you fought to the bitter end. It was natural, I suppose. I think I understand."

"No!" Anna's voice was low, but steady now, and she spoke with a sort of introspective finality. "No, it was not wholly natural. I—I had to fight to do it all. It wasn't easy, this deceiving you, this spying upon you. I had to go against my instinct every time—give the lie to my impulses. From the moment I saw you I must have been believing in you, I think. And every day since I've been here I've been believing more and more. No, you see, it wasn't wholly natural. I was fighting against hope."

"But the hope fought, too, didn't it, dear?" he asked solemnly.

A light leaped into her eyes.

"Aye," said she, "it was a fighting hope. It fought, and it has won," she whispered half to herself with trembling lips, looking far, far past him. And it was a joy to the man to see the smile in her eyes. "I know now with every faculty what my heart must have known from the first. I know that I—yes, I know," she shuddered, "but I mustn't say it."

"You love me!" cried he. "No, don't say it." He swallowed painfully. "But it will be a comfort to think sometimes that a scrap of the very best that is in you is mine. That can do no harm, can it?"

She could not answer for fear that her heart might tear from its moorings.

TOURNAMENT AT GRANITE CITY CLUB

Ten tables competed Wednesday evening in the whist tournament of the Granite City club. Play as usual was keen and some close scores were made. The top score was made by John W. Bell with 44 points won and 18 lost, giving him 70.96 percent. The second best score was made by F. E. Wharton with 35 won and 15 lost or 70 percent. After the play, cold ham, baked potatoes, rolls, cocoa, apple pie and cheese was served.

Among the visitors to the club room was Senator Barnes. There were no speeches, however, as politics are tabooed in the club room. Senator Barnes came in with Eugene R. Stone and renewed acquaintances with a number of the members. Mayor Shea, who is a member of the club came in late and partook of the lunch.

FISH CLOG HER PUMPS

Steamship Has Odd Experience on Trip Across the Ocean

Halifax, Nov. 2.—A remarkable experience on the voyage from London to this port was reported by Captain Chambers of the Furness liner Durango.

While in midocean the big liner came to a full stop, the circulating pumps failed to work and for a time the crew were unable to account for the cause. When the interior of the circulating feed pipe was examined it was found to be filled with a mass of fish pulp, which blocked passage and prevented the pumps from working.

After the fish were removed the Durango was able to proceed at her usual rate of speed. The vessel had passed through a school of fish and many of them were drawn into the feed pipe by the suction of the pumps.

The fish taken from the passage are long and thin and of a kind unknown to Captain Chambers.

Since the death of the heroine her brother, Rudolph Lewis, who had been assistant keeper for the past quarter of a century, has been in charge. He asked to be relieved and yesterday his request was granted.

SICKLES IS BLACKBALLED

Not Allowed to Become Member of the Loyal Legion

New York, Nov. 2.—General Daniel E. Sickles, commander of the Third United States army corps at the battle of Gettysburg, has been rejected as a candidate for membership of the Loyal Legion, an organization of the officers of federal troops of the Civil war and their sons. It is a secret organization.

General Sickles is the chairman of the New York state commission for the erection of monuments on battlefields. It is hinted by his friends that one of the reasons for his exclusion by the Loyal Legion was his action in keeping the names of certain officers from other states from the inscriptions on New York state monuments at Gettysburg.

FOSS AND COUNCIL IN BITTER STRUGGLE

All of Governor's Appointments May Be Rejected

Boston, Nov. 2.—Governor Foss and the executive council engaged in a bitter struggle all day yesterday at the hearings over the governor's appointments. Foss was denounced to his face by one of the witnesses, who objected to the conduct of the hearing. Councillor Glidden attempted to secure a vote against Daniel J. Kiley to speak, and the governor refused to put the motion.

Kiley spoke in spite of the demand of the councillors to have a vote taken. Kiley denounced the councillors for having refused to confirm the governor's appointees.

The council again rejected the appointment of William L. Reed, the negro messenger of the council, who had been appointed clerk of the juvenile court, and refused to hear any testimony regarding him.

No action was taken in the matter of confirming the appointments, but it is stated that on Wednesday next at least two of them are to be rejected, that he would vote to place Quincy in another congressional district, a thing his opponent could not do because of the fact that he was a democrat.

He finished by saying that he would fight for a bill authorizig dredging at the Wollaston Yacht club and would also work in the interests of the Wollaston Boulevard.

He was followed by Mr. Barnes, who spoke at length on his record and urged the voters not to be misled by some statements which were being issued by his opponent. He spoke on the eight hour bill, and said that he would not vote for it at first because it was unconstitutional, but declared that he worked for its passage and voted for it when it was declared by the courts to be constitutional. He gave his reasons for voting against the 9 hour in 11 for street car men, and said that it was the will of numerous railway men themselves that he vote to defeat the bill. He said that out of seven bills advocated by the Federation of Labor, he voted for five and voted against two because he did not deem them right and just.

He urged all the voters to get out on election day and vote from a source of duty to themselves and their country.

—Even the wild animals of Massachusetts seem to feel the irresistible attractions of the cities. Scarcely a day passes but you read in the papers of deer visiting the crowded centres of population, plunging through plate glass windows, jumping off the wharves into the harbors and doing many other strange things. Whether they are getting civilized or are only the victims of their own curiosity remains to be seen.—Medford Mercury.

Surprise Sprung At Opening Of Papers For Democratic Nominees

DR. ASH CONTESTANT

It was at first thought in Democratic circles last evening that James E. Wall would be the only candidate on that ticket to contest for mayoralty honors, but at the last moment, about a minute before the time for filing papers expired, Alfred J. Lacroix came forth and presented a nomination paper in the interest of Dr. John H. Ash of Copeland street, West Quincy. Both papers were filed in legal form and the names of both men will appear on the Democratic ballot at the municipal caucuses.

Dr. John H. Ash is a well known figure in local circles and has always taken an active part in Democratic politics. He is a long time resident of the West Quincy district

Dr. John H. Ash of West Quincy, whose papers were filed as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Mayor, notified the Democratic City Committee this noon that he desired to withdraw his papers.

The withdrawal of Dr. Ash, leaves a clear field for the nomination to James E. Wall of Houghs Neck.

REV. MR. HORST SPEAKS AT ALLIANCE

Rev. Carl G. Horst was the speaker at the meeting of the Alliance of the Wollaston Unitarian church, Thursday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Horst topic was "Our church and its needs." He congratulated all on the beautiful church in which they had to meet. Also on the fact that it was all paid for, as well as the adjoining lot.

One of the greatest needs of the church was a parish house so that the vestry might be kept solely for the use of Sunday school purposes only for moral and educational purposes.

Another need was the developing of our church ideals and missionary work in Wollaston.

Mr. Chandler W. Smith made a report of the recent general conference at Washington and Mrs. N. S. Hunting sang a group of songs.

—Now you can rest your weary brain for no more will the umpire's play ball be of interest to you until the spring of 1912.

RECOVERED DAMAGES

Young Woman Injured In Train Wreck Wins Suit

$5,000 THE VERDICT

Miss Susan Holloran daughter of Officer John Holloran of Atlantic, has recovered the sum of $5,000 from the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad in her suit for personal injuries. Miss Holloran was a passenger in the rear car of a Granite branch train which was telescoped by a train following at the South Boston station on the evening of Nov. 28, 1908. She was severely injured and for a time her life was despaired of. Her injuries consisted of a broken collar bone in addition to internal injuries.

The train upon which Miss Holloran was coming home had stopped at the South Boston station and had just left the depot when a train following crashed into it. The latter train owing to an obstruction in the yard had been sent out over a circuit rail and before the engineer could bring his train to a stop it had taken the rail in use by the Granite branch train.

A large number of persons were injured, including several from West Quincy, some of whom lost their lives.

ECHO OF AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Patrick J. Flynn In Court This Morning For Reckless Driving Of Machine

MIX-UP LAST AUGUST

An echo of the automobile accident on Washington street near the corner of Elm street, Aug. 24, was heard in court this morning when Patrick J. Flynn was arraigned for reckless driving of an automobile at Quincy. Flynn was driving the car of Ernest G. Howes of Boston and was coming up Washington street. The smaller car was owned and was being driven by Walter B. Chase. In the Chase car were two women and a man. This car was climbing the hill, when the other car came around the corner and the two came together with a crash that could be heard for a long distance. At the time, each driver blamed the other for being on the wrong side of the street. Both cars were quite badly wrecked and all of the parties more or less shaken up. In the Flynn car was Daniel J. Daley of Boston who was severely cut on the head and was treated by Dr. Hardwick.

A large number of witnesses were sworn for the complainant Chase, and the hearing will take the greater part of the day.

LOWER PHONE RATES.

Brockton is to have lower telephone rates. Manager Starbard says this is possible by reason of the increase in business in the past year. Approximately 33,000 calls are handled daily, 6000 more than a year ago. A new schedule of rates, which will lessen the cost to subscribers, went into effect Nov. 1, and a further increase in business is anticipated on this account. Mr. Starbard promises that with the new rates and consequent change in system better 'phone service will be given.

AS each day of our progress upward shows itself, the worth of the suits we are selling becomes more and more in evidence. (This is not an opinion arrived at in our own conceit, that might be biased.) It's the verdict of the men—men who know value—who know quality—who can tell perfect fitting garments as apart from the merely fair.

Therefore today we offer unapproachable suits for the nobby dressing young man or the more conservative fellow further along in years—and every suit will beget your confidence and hold it.

The mother with a growing boy, a boy that is full of life-doesn't want to pay all "out doors" for a suit, but every mother wants her boy to dress well. Here we protect her purse. Low rent and small expenses gives us an advantage in making low prices.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Mr. Taft says the courts are too slow, but he utterly ignores the fact that the lawyers have to make a living.

If Harvard could only defeat Yale at foot ball as easily as it did Brown, former President Eliot could feel that his life work was not in vain.

A tribe of Alaska Indians has been saved from starvation by chocolates but the chronic condition of chocolate famine among our girl friends is not yet appeased.

Capt. Larsen has sailed through the Niagara rapids, but if the young men take their best girls out canoeing there, it will not be safe for both of them to occupy the rear seat.

Although you can get $18 a week as an automobile chauffeur and a lot of fun riding up and down the country, yet quite a number of our young men are still willing to get headaches studying in our colleges.

Many newspapers have always made fun of Mr. Pulitzer's college of Journalism. After being called to tell off hand the exact number of killed and wounded in the battle of Majuba Hill in the Boer war, we have decided that a newspaper man can not know too much.

Senator Barnes was a visitor in Quincy this morning, calling on friends and attending to affairs incident to his campaign. He made a pleasant call at the Ledger office and when asked regarding that much discussed 8 hour bill, exhibited a certified copy of the way he voted on that momentous question. There is no room for a doubt that he voted for it.

Now that the papers of the various candidates for office have been opened, the sky clears somewhat, and an effort may be concentrated by both parties for the selection of suitable nominees for the important positions to be filled at the coming municipal election. It may truly be said that it has been a long time since such a large number of really good men were in the field seeking honors. Safe to say that in any event the affairs of the city will be well looked after.

Of course it is well for the average voters to hear both sides of a question before coming to a decision. With this end in view, the Ledger, each day, is devoting considerable space to communications from the various candidates and reporting the different meetings and rallies in as impartial a manner as possible. Speeches, however, at these affairs are printed as items of news and must not be taken as voicing the opinion or sentment of this publication.

Mayor Shea reiterated his statement last night, made some time ago, that he will not be a candidate for re-election. With the passing of His Honor as well as President Bryant of City Council two mighty good executives retire, temporarily at least, from public service. The Mayor has made many friends who speak in the highest terms of his tenure of office sometimes under trying conditions. Those whose pleasure it has been to come in contact with Mr. Bryant in an official way, will second the motion that public service, so well done, will be hard to be replaced.

Many do not take seriously the move of Houghs Neck residents to cut loose from Quincy and become a separate township, while others think it would be a good thing for Quincy. Houghs Neck has only recently become an all-the-year round residential district and in the short time has had a good many bouquets thrown its way, so many in fact that some of its residents are reaching out for the moon. It has as good a school building as Centre, has electric lights, gas, sewer, water, garbage collection, postal delivery, etc., and for the matter of that, just as good streets and sidewalks as will be found in most parts of Ward One.

They seem to expect more improvements than is meted out to the business heart of the city. In proportion to what residents of the Centre are paying in taxes and what the Houghs Neckers are paying, Houghs Neck gets more of the plums. Some of the more conservative residents there know it and do not favor the present move.

Another thing for Quincy residents to consider is the temperance question. If Houghs Neck should become a separate township and exercise its right to local option it would be apt to go for license, which would be a bad thing for Quincy as its residents would be bottled up, the only way out of the town being by way of Quincy or the "joy" line.

State and County politics seem to be crowding out local politics just now but after next week they will warm up again. Although little is said about the various candidates for mayor there are those who are doing considerable thinking and the contest promises to be a lively one before it is finally fought out at the polls.

Staunch old Republicans say that the city is, and always has been Republican at the core and there has been a long enough term of the Democratic-Citizen reign, that it is time now to swing back into line. Others say the present administration has been a good one and the party should be continued.

Everyone admits that if the Republicans are again to gain control, there must be unity in its ranks, personal prejudice and ambitions must give way and a strong man put up to win. If the Republicans select the best timber in the party and then all pull together, their chances are unsually good this year, as the trend in state and city politics seems to favor the Republicans. The outcome of the State election for this reason is being eagerly looked forward to, for it will undoubtedly influence local politics.

A strong Democrat and an equally strong Republican up for Mayor, will give Quincy the most exciting contest it has had for several years, and may the best man win.

SOMETHINGS JOSEPH PULITZER DID.

The great editor of the New York World who has just passed away was an innovator whose influence has been felt even to the cross roads newspaper, whose publisher gets his pay in cabbages and apples.

In the early days of his career, the editor who built a head line running across two or more columns was considered as bad form as if he had paraded the streets minus any collar or necktie.

The editor seemed to have a curiously shame faced attitude toward his headings. He made them of a few lines of finely cut type that scarcely stood out from the body of the page. This method had a certain beauty and regularity that appealed to the typographical craftsman, much as some art printers now set up book pages without any indentations, feeling that the type as a whole has in that way a greater symmetry.

Mr. Pulitzer's shrieking head lines that startled the journalistic world had the same relation to the reading matter of a newspaper that the voice of the "barker" has to a public entertainment.

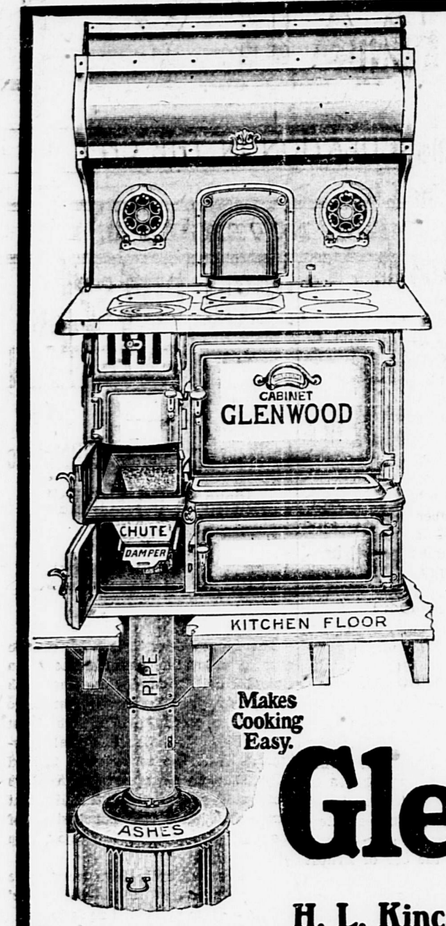

A theatrical performance having real human interest needs no barker to stand outside the door and shovel out adjectives at the populace. And a newspaper having real human interest will be read without borrowing the type from the job office in which one sets auction bills.

At the same time the head lines of the old fashioned newspapers were too small for public convenience, in these days of hurried reading. A heading of moderate size and blackness helps the reader find what he wants.

The great objection to the poster heading is that there is no reserve of emphasis left for great events. After you have put letters four inches long on the flirtations of Miss Gotrox and her coachman, there is nothing left to indicate that a presidential election looks like big news to you.

The most enduring features of Mr. Pulitzer's work were the example he set of courageous sincerity in the editorial column, and his foundation for a school of journalism.

In the latter he tried to do something to offset the tendencies of the "yellow" mehods in which he was a pioneer. These methods, by compelling the newspaper man to intrude needlessly into the sanctities of private life, tend to destroy the standing of the newspaper man in the community. If Mr. Pulitzer's school of journalism is a permanent success, it will work the other way, will help give the reporter a higher standing, by creating higher standards of education for the men who are to be the historians of the day's work of the people.

Here's Something New

No more ashes to lug. No clumsy pan to spill dust and dirt on the kitchen floor.

The Glenwood Ash Chute

solves the problem. It is located just beneath the grate and connected by a sheet iron pipe straight down through the kitchen floor to ash barrel in cellar. No part is in sight. Not a particle of dust can escape. Just slide the damper once each day and drop the ashes directly into the ash barrel.

The Dust Tight Cover

to barrel is another entirely new Glenwood Idea and is very ingenious. The Ash Chute is sold complete with barrel and all connections, as illustrated, at a moderate price to fit any cabinet style Glenwood. This is only one of the splendid improvements of the Plain Cabinet Glenwood the Range without ornamentation or fancy nickel, "The Mission Style" Glenwood. Every essential refined and improved upon.

Up-To-Date Gas Attachments

This Range can be had with the latest and most improved Elevated or End Gas Range attachments. It has a powerful hot water front or for country use a Large Copper Reservoir on the end opposite fire box. It can be furnished with fire box at either right or left of oven as ordered. DO COLLEGE GIRLS MARRY?

A recent discussion as to the extent to which college girls marry, has led to the collection and publication of the number of marriages among the graduates of Smith college, the largest woman's college in the world.

Out of 4,899 graduates of this college, 1,647 have already married. Of these graduates 2,744 left the college during the past 10 years, and many of these will yet marry.

The closest estimate of the proportion of the college girls that marry is perhaps found by figuring on the number of marriages among girls that have been out of college from 10 to 20 years. There are 1,610 girls who graduated from Smith 10 to 20 years ago, and out of these 794 are already married, or about 49 per cent.

These girls must now be of ages running mostly from about 30 to about 40. It would be a fair guess to say that of the 1,610 still unmarried, at least one in four will yet enter the wedded state.

That would indicate that about 62 per cent of the graduates of Smith college are getting married.

The size of this percentage will surprise many persons who have regarded the college girl as a thing of spectacles and Greek roots who repels men by her offish position on the pinnacle of educational culture.

Furthermore, the figures show that the percentage of college girls who marry is rapidly increasing.

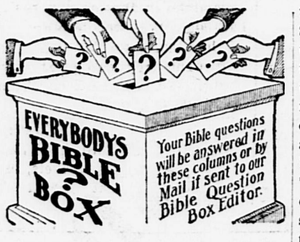

Let us go back still further in the Smith statistics, and take the girls that left college from 20 to 30 years ago. There were 498 of these, and only 225 have married, or only 45 per cent.

That is, although these graduates from 1882 to 1891 had had ten years longer in which to find husbands, actually the number of marriages was four per cent less than with the girls that graduated from 1892 to 1901.

No doubt the earlier type of college girl was more of a book worm than the student of today. At that time women attended college more to prepare for some scholastic work or to gratify strongly bookish tastes. Now it is fashionable to go to college. The fluffy and frilly offspring of the Smart Set feels that she commands a higher price in the marriage market if she can sling around a little French and Latin into the ranks of her awestruck suitors.

It is not at all surprising that there are 38 per cent that do not marry. Most of them no doubt have found happiness and usefulness in professional life.

—The day has gone by when a fire or two, a boy or two blinded and a few broken windows or legs will be forgotten with : "Oh, boys will be boys, and it was Hallowe'en after all." The damage done in the vicinity of Boston appears to have been greater than usual this year, and the same sort of regulation which has been found necessary on June 17 and July 4 may yet be necessary to check boyish damage in October.—Boston Herald.

Q.—Is there such a place as purgatory and if so where is it taught in the Scriptures?

Answer.—The word "purgatory" is from the Latin tongue and signifies primarily, a place of purification or making clean. The thought usually involved in the consideration of the term is that an intermediate state of condition exists for those who die and who at the time of death, while professing Christianity, were not sufficiently cleansed from their sins to justify an immediate entrance into heaven, the abode of the pure and saintly ones. Hence they must expiate their sins by enduring intense suffering in flames and sorrow for a period of time in proportion to the amount of sin to be eradicated. We are not aware that this view is set forth in the Bible. There is, however, a condition of purgatory presented in the teachings of the Scriptures. It is becoming very clear to all enlightened Bible scholars that the period of Christ's reign on earth for the space of a thousand years, when Satan is bound and the knowledge of the Lord is filling the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep, that then the nations of earth will learn righteousness and gradually be purged of all iniquity and unrighteousness and in this way be prepared to enter into the conditions of eternal life. This, of course, will be after the second advent. The world is not to be scorched and blistered in a vain attempt to make it pure and upright, but the Lord will rule in righteousness and love and win the race by His kindness and tender mercies.

AMERICAN POTASH FIND

German Producers Believe They Will Still Hold Our Market

Berlin, Nov. 3.—The report of the discovery of extensive deposits of potash in America has attracted general attention here and been commented upon by all the papers.

There is a general acceptance of the published views of members of the German syndicate that the report is not of first importance if true, as high freight rates would prevent competition on the eastern seaboard.

The Tageblatt says that the discovery is the first fruits of Germany's short sighted policy toward America, and says it will be equally easy for the United States to manipulate its tariff so as to exclude German fertilizers now that a home supply is available.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

"THE BLUE BIRD."

This world-wide success, is creating a furore in Boston at te Shhubert Treatre. Greater Boston's prospect of enjoying "The Blue Bird" at the Shubert Theatre was seriously threatened last week by difficulties between the theatre management of the authorities over the employment of the many children is the cast. Despite the worry and uncertainty the great theatre-going public showed its eager interest by packing the playhouse at all of the performances of the first week of the run. Now the difficulties have been smoothed away, a compromise being reached by which boys and girls of the required youth are employed. The ever delightful Tyltyl still remains in the hands of the peerless boy-actor, Burford Hampden, while his sister Mytyl is played by the cunning Janet Parker. The Dog, the Cat, the Fairy, the Fire, Water, Milk, Light, etc., are the same as ever. Cold-in-the-Head is played by Julia Rosenbloom. Happiness-of-Being-Well, Night and Time, and all the rest, are still on the job. No completer, more delightfully impersonated fairy tale was ever put on the boards than this wonderful Blue Bird of Maurice Maeterlinck in which the Belgian poet ,mmortalizes the children's quest of Happiness. Everybody is Bostos is attending, so far as the capacity of the theatre allows, and is taking along the little folks too, to enjoy the fun and the poetry of it all. The third week begins Monday evening.

FRANK McINTIRE IN "SNOBS."

Monday evening will bring a new star to the Hollis in Jolly Frank McIntyre in "Snobs," the satirical farce by George Bronson-Howard in which Mr. McIntyre has scored tremendously at the Hudson Theatre, New York coming to Boston direct from his successful engagement there. He is no stranger to the play going contingent for he has been a featured player for many years. In "Snobs" which is the story of a dream come true, he is first revealed as a milkman of low degree but with ambitions, and shortly after the curtain goes up he falls in love with an heiress so that for a time he is a very disconsolate milkman. But here is where tre playwright steps in and sends an attorney to the milkman's hall bedroom with the astounding information that he need never more deposit milk bottles at the back door of Harlem flats for he is really the Duke of Walshire, possessor of the greatest title in England and many times a millionaire. This of course alters matters but the milkman has a vein of shrewd common sense and wants to win the girl he loves without the aid of position and wealth. Se he induced his best friend, a janitor to pose as Duke of Walshire while he acts as the private secretary. Thus the two descend upon society at a fashionable country club the next day and needless to say the deception works, for the janitor receives all the attention while the milkman who has attired himself like a bowery sport and speaks English of the Chuck Connors variety is almost thrown from the club forcibly. From this time on the fun is fast and furious and Mr. McIntyre as the Milkman Duke is a joy from the start to finish.

"THE OUTSIDERS."

An event of unusual interest in the dramatic chronicles of Boston will be the first performance on any stage of Charles Klein's latest play, "The Outsiders," a comedy of social life, which the author has completed during the present engagement of "The Gamblers." It is scheduled for production Monday night at the Majestic Treatre. Not only was Mr. Klein keenly desirous of launching his new play in Boston, where his notable successes, "The Lion and the Mouse" and "The Third Degree," were originally produced, but he is insistent upon availing himself of the same excellent cast which is now appearing in "The Gamblers." The new play is a departure for Mr. Klein as it is his first comedy in years. The Outsiders constitute the family of "Jim" Blakeley a rich westerner. The play tells the story of conflict with the Talbot-Berrimans of New York in an attempt to enter Manhattan society. It is a struggle of plutocracy with aristocracy. The families are first brought in contact by a letter that young Phyllis Talbot-Berriman writes to a girl chum in her college sorority, urging her to break off her engagement to Roylston Blakeley, the son of the western family, and giving reasons that offer sufficient grounds for a suit for libel. The first act is set in the house of the Blakeleys—the Fifth Avenue mansion which "Jim" calls "the million dollar barn," and described as twenty-eight rooms, eleven servants and two people. There we learn of the libel suit and meet the principals. They are "Jim" Blakeley, the rough, thundering plutocrat; his college-bred son, Roylston; Mr. and Mrs. Talbot-Berriman, and Phyllis their daughter. The comedy interest depends largely on the contrast of types—"Jim" Blakeley, with his threats to kick down the doors of the Metropolitan Club if they will not admit him as a member, and the Talbot-Berrimans, with the veneer of English manners.

CORONATION PICTURES.

An entirely new program of views is being given at Tremont Temple, thus attracting many people who have already seen these Coronation pictures and who are loud in their praises of them. The Crowning of the Prince of Wales, is one of the new scenes shown and among others is a stunning representation of the London Horse show, one of the great events of the English social year. Processions and ceremonies are still shown with all their glittering color and array of men of all nations, and the entire entertainment gives a series of motion pictures such as were never before exhibited. Many scientists, moreover, are loud in their approval of this marvellous development in photography, and school teachers and parents are making it a point to take parties of the young to see them for their educational value. Eugene Farnsworth delivers a descriptive lecture, and the entertainment is given every afternoon at 2.30 and every evening at 8.15.

"POMANDER WALK."

"Pomander Walk," Louis N. Parker's exquisite comedy of happiness, drew to the Plymouth Theatre Monday night one of the largest and most fashionable audiences that ever attended a Boston theatrical event. The play was interpreted by the original cast from Wallack's Theatre, New York, the same players who were brought from London to America by Leibler & Co., to portray correctly its quaint and delightful English atmosphere. The unexpected beauty of "Pomander Walk's" stage setting brought a hearty round of spontaneous applause, the six little houses on the bank of the Thames and the bit of old-fashioned street looking as if one could walk right into them past the footlights. Lenox Pawle and George Giddens quickly established themselves in the hearts of the audience as funmakers of the first rank, while in the sweetheart roles of Jack and Marjolaine Edgar Kent and Dorothy Parker became prime favorities. Others who scored individual hits were Messrs. Percyval, Craske and Dance asd the Misses Cynthia Brooke, Maud Milton, Winifred Fraser and Kate Phillips. Without a note of tragic gloom or melodramatic complications, the play ripples merrily along with mirthful incidents and delightful love scenes interspersed. At the close of the second act there were no less than fourteen curtain calls, and finally the entire company were obliged to come forward and acknowledge their appreciative thanks for the unprecedested warmth of their reception. Owing to the big success and the heavy advance sale of seats, no limit has been set to the engagement of "Pomander Walk" at the Plymouth. There are matinees on Wednesday and Saturdays.

SUNDAY EVENING CONCERT.

The Sunday evening concerts at the Castle Square are providing the very best high class refined entertainment, and they are being largely patronized. The one to be given this coming Sunday will have on its program a list of musicians and other artists, and in addition 5000 feet of the very latest motion pictures will be shown. Seats are on sale at the box office throughout the week. The overture starts promptly at 8 o'clock, and the entertainment continues for two hours and a half.

B. F. KEITH'S.

After an absence of several seasons, during which time he has been the bright particular star of F. Ziegfeld's "Follies," Billie Reeves has returned to vaudeville, and he will be seen at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week in the part that first made him famous in this country. England never sent a funnier knockabout comedian to these shores than Billie Reeves, and as the tipsy swell in "A Night in an English Music Hall," who breaks up the show with his antics, he keeps the audiences in a whirlwind of merriment. For this vaudeville tour Mr. Reeves has had an entirly new production built, and among the acts that appear in the burlesque vaudeville show are Professor Bunkem, the German magician; that Awful Quartette; the coy little soubrette; and the Terrible Turk, whose challenge is accepted by Reeves and with whom he indulges in an uproariously funny wrestling match. Charlotte Parry, the famous protem actress, will appear in her remarkable playlet for which she recently paid a prize of $1,000. This piece is called "Into the Light," and represents the various witnesses called to the stand in a murder trial. Miss Parry plays each character, making the changes with amazing rapidity, and the piece has a tremendously strong surprise finish. There are other big features.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

At the Castle Square next week, Mr. Craig will revive "The Last Word," a brilliaint comedy of Washington social and political life. Some seasons ago Mary Young made a tremendous success as the Barosess Vera in this play, and it is being given again in response to request of many who saw her acting. It is an adaptation from the German, and it was one of the leading plays iin the repertory of Augustin Daly's famous stock company, of whiuh Mr. Craig himself was once leading man. Plot of "The Last Word" is simple and effective, and the interest of the audience sustains trrough a succession of striking scenes and emotional incidents. The plot revolves about the separation of a father and daughter, the latter refusing the man selected for her husband and defying him by clinging to the man she loves. The result is that the father turns his child from home, only to cause both himself ond her great suffering. The work of reopening the heart of the father and of teaching him the lesson that there is such a thing as genuine love in this world, and that a father may be mistaken is his ideas regarding the control of his children, forms the motive of the play, and gives the strongest of dramatic effects. A minor love affair furnishes plenty of comedy in the midst of the emotional scenes, and there is also a persistent note of humor in the Baroness Vera's struggles with the Engliish language, while the brilliant costumes of Washington social life add not a little to the splendor of the production. With Miss Young as the Baroness, Mr. Craig as Harry Rutherell, and all players of the company in the cast a strong presentation of "The Last Word" is promised.

SUPT. BARBOUR SPEAKS

wants it to do and for this reason the scope of the public school system is constantly widening. It is taking on new duties and assuming new responsibilities.

Mr. Barbour gave a resume of educational history telling how at first vocational education was only given in the professional pursuits. Then commercial courses had crept in and in recent years domestic science has been added to the curriculum.

At the present time opportunity for vocational education in the public schools is poorly balanced. The boy with mechanical tendencies has not the same chance as the boy with a commercial or professional bent.

Because of this lack we find many boys leaving school at theages of 14, 15 or 16 years. In Massachusetts alone there are over 25,000 boys and girls in employment between the ages of 14 and 16. These generally fall into what are termed the blind alleys of business and trade. That is, those positions with little or no opportunity for advancement.

Nowadays there is no opportunity to learn a general trade. One must become for instance a one-sided machinist, specializing on one machine. The apprenticeship system of this country has been practically broken down and we must have something to take its place. He told of the special committees recently appointed to look into the situation both for boys and girls and some of the solutions they will consider.

The future vocation of the average girl will be that of housewife and manager of a home. We should train her well for this. The present courses of cooking, hygiene, sewing, dressmaking and millinery in the. High school appeal fairly well to a small per cent. The future solution will be to provide household arts in grades lower than the High school.

On the boys' side we must have some training to precede the apprenticeship school. We should have course in carpentry, metal work and the like instead of spending the entire time in simply geography, history and other studies of a similar nature.

A boy with a mechanical bent should devote half his time in school to that occupation and the other half in studies allied to the work that he is doing. Then should follow the trade school for the boy of 16 which should be more of a workshop than school.

Such have been established in Fitchburg and Beverly in which a boy may spend one week in school and one week in the shop receiving pay for the same. Mr. Barbour instanced the splendid system in force at the Fore River yard regarding apprentices.

The speaker spoke of vocational guidance as practised in some cities and expressed the hope that the appointment of committees in Quincy would lead to positive and progressive work.

SCIENTIFIC SHOPS FOR GOVERNMENT

Stimson Says They Will Work No Hardships to Labor

Washington, Nov. 3.—"Scientific shop management" has received the indorsement of the United States government. Secretary of War Stimson is convinced of its desirability and advantages, basing his conviction on a report made by Brigadier General Crozier, chief of ordnance. The secretary is satisfied that its introduction into government workshops would work no hardships to labor.

"It means a betterment and in no wise an impairment of the conditions of labor," he declared, in a statement.

The report has been awaited by organized labor and the employers of labor with much interest. It is generally believed that the question will figure largely in the coming national political campaign.

Boston, Nov. 3.—Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson formally resigned from his pastorate of the Immanuel church of Cambridge yesterday. He made his announcement through a letter to Charles F. Cummings, clerk of the church.

Mr. Cummings said last night that at tonight's meeting, to be held immediately after the regular weekly prayer meeting, the question as to whether or not to accept the resignation would be discussed.

Then, in the event of there being thirty members of the church in good standing present, the question will be finally decided.

ANOTHER CANDIDATE

and has an extensive practice. A peculiar coincidence in the nomination of the two men, is that both are intimate friends, for Dr. Ash, during the summer months, resides with his family within a stone's throw from the home of his Democratic opponent. William J. Sullivan filed the nomination papers for Mr. Wall, shortly after 6.30 P. M.

James E. Wall has been a resident of Quincy for twelve years and for thirty years has been connected with the firm of Wall & Brackett, on Cornhill, one of the leading wall paper supply houses in the country. He has always been a staunch Democrat and though he has never held any political office, he has frequently been urged by his friends to become a candidate, but up to this year all efforts to get him to do so proved fruitless. He has planned an active campaign and claims that he has the support of many influential voters.

For the first time in a number of years, the Democratic party will have a full list of candidates for Councilmen-at-large. In this way the advocates of Democracy hope to put up a hard fight and thereby prevent any election from going by default. Following is the list of those who were drawn up to contest for Councilman-at-large: Leo P. Noonan, Ward One; Thomas Griffin, Ward Two; John D. Smith, Ward Four; Charles C. McCue, Ward Four; Edward M. Bryan, Ward Four.

Of this number, John D. Smith is a present Councilman from Ward Four, and has made an enviable record in his short experience of three years, especially so in regard to his interest in the half holiday bill.

In Ward One Thomas J. McGrath who last year made such a remarkable showing as a candidate for Councilman-at-large, will bear the standard of the Democratic party. Mr. McGrath is a well known figure in the initial Ward and besides being a bright man, is a brilliant talker and an exceptionally fine debater.

Edward P. Histen and Frank J. Duffy will be candidates for re-election in Ward Two, while Michael F. Corbett will make the third candidate from this section.

In Ward Three the candidates on the Democratic side will be William J. Bryon, William J. Hogan and David M. Warner, all of whom are well and favorably known in their ward.

In Ward Four Harry T. Boyd and Daniel F. Forde will strive for re-election and John J. Mahoney will also be a candidate on the Democratic ticket. There is, up to date, no Republican candidate, and at present it looks as if the three mentioned will be sent to the Council as the representatives from the fourth Ward.

In Ward Five there were no nominations, while in Ward Six, Patrick J. Duggan, the well known baseball player, will be the only candidate on the Democratic ticket. He is widely known in the Atlantic section and his many friends predict that he could readily land a victory.

Joseph H. McPherson will try for school committee from Ward Four, a place made vacant by the expiration of the term of James F. Burke. As there is no other candidate in the field it looks as if McPherson is a sure winner.

OCTOBER AT BLUE HILLS.

Excess of Cloudiness, Frequent Rains and Light Winds

October weather as recorded at the Blue Hill Observatory, averaged cooler than usual, with an excess of cloudiness and frequent rains. The mean temperature of the month was 49.6 degrees, which is 0.6 degrees below normal and 3.4 degrees lower than the mean temperature for October, 1910. There were no extereme temperatures during the month, the highest reached being 69 degrees on the twelfth, and the lowest 29 degrees on the twenty-eighth. Rain fell on fourteen days, and the total fall of 3.03 inches was 1.14 inches less than the average amount. In 1910 the total for October was 1.64 inches and in 1909, 1.46 inches. The largest fall in a single day was .64 inch on the second.

There was rather more relative humidity than is customary, and much more than the average cloudiness. The period from the seveteenth to the twenty-second, inclusive, was notable for being continuously cloudy and without sunshine. The total amount of sunshine, 154 hours, was less than half the normal.

There was decidedly less wind than usual, the mean hourly velocity of 16.3 miles per hour being 2.9 miles per hour below the average and the least for October since 1908. There were no gales, and the highest velocity attained was forty-six miles per hour from the northwest on the twelfth. The prevailing wind direction was northwest. A brilliant aurora occurred on the evening of the tenth.

Militant Republicans Hope to Regain Congress

OLD WAR HORSES ENRAGED

Will Seek Satisfaction For Drubbing Given Them In Last Congressional Elections—Taft's Doubts Not Shared by Aggressive Fighters—Leaders In National and Congressional Committees to Consider Campaign Plans

Washington, Nov. 3.—Immediately after the return of President Taft to the capital there will be a conference of men presently and prospectively active in the management of the national and congressional campaign committees over the preliminary political work to be done this winter.

The note of despair sounded in the president's speech before the Hamilton club the other day is not echoed by the aggressive fighters in the party, and is far from being accepted as the keynote of the approaching campaign. On the contrary, a militant spirit is being aroused, especially in the congressional section of politicians, who are preparing to make a struggle to capture the next house of representatives.

The drubbing given the Republicans in the last congressional elections has enraged rather than subdued the old warriors in the party and they are girding up for another round.

Chairman McKinley of the Republican congressional committee returns from Europe this week and will be in Washington to participate in the conference which is to be a joint meeting of leaders in the national and congressional committees.

The committee to manage the congressional campaign will probably not be reorganized until February, when McKinley will be re-elected, whether he wants the office or not, and a secretary chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Loudenslager. Henry Casson, former sergeant-at-arms of the house and an experienced campaigner, is serving now.

Vice President Sherman is taking keen interest in the congressional outlook. Even after his elevation to the vice presidency he kept in touch with the congressional committee, of which he was once chairman, and gave his advice and assistance in every campaign. His latest effort was in behalf of William J. Browning, the Republican candidate in the Loudenslager district, whose election Sherman advocated in a big meeting in Camden. The election will be held next Tuesday and the Republicans are doing their utmost to carry the district.

Close team work is expected to prevail between the national and congressional committees in the next campaign and to arrange for this is one of the objects of the coming conference of politicians here.

The remaining religious sects and the number of men they embrace are: Methodists, twenty; Presbyterians, fifteen; Lutherans, eight; Universalists, seven, and Christian Scientists, three.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL
ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size
Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.
First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.
Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.
Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.
Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.
Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.
Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

SYNOPSIS

Anna Granger, devoted mother of two small children, discovers that her husband is a weak character and that he has lied to her about a woman.

Posing as Miss Dale, she becomes stenographer to Burton Temple, through whose evidence her husband has been imprisoned. She thinks Temple is the guilty man and is acting the spy to clear her husband's name for his sake and that of her children.

Anna discovers that Temple was one of her girlhood's ideals. Thinking her a single woman, he tells her her husband was a liar and perjurer.

Temple has detectives on the trail of Brady, an accomplice of Granger, looking for evidence. Anna is searching for evidence against Temple, who becomes interested in her.

Despite herself, Anna becomes fond of Temple, although determined to convict him for the honor of her boys. Temple's detectives discover Rose Fanchon, the woman for whom Granger was a thief.

Temple desires to marry Anna. She rebuffs him, questioning his honor. Temple is indicted for the crime for which Granger is suffering imprisonment.

When she spoke it was an eminently practical thing she had to say:

"There's some way at least, thank God, in which I can repair a little the injury I have done you. When your case comes up for trial I can give my testimony. I can tell what became of that letter. I can repeat it, word for word, the foul thing. My testimony would have weight, would it not? It would have weight because it would be against my interest."

"It would have weight with the jury, yes," Temple nodded. A pause, "But"—he hesitated, then went on bravely—"no one knows of your having burned this letter?"

"Mrs. Mason knows. She's an old friend of my mother's. I found her here by chance. She knows, but she won't speak. She's on Robert's side. Oh, but she must speak! She must!" cried Anna, with sudden resolve. "She must help in this. She must help undo the wrong I have done. Ring for her, please. I want her.

"Mrs. Mason," said she when the housekeeper entered, taking in the situation at a glance, "I've got to go to court and tell what I've done. I've got to tell the truth. My testimony means Mr. Temple's liberty—and more."

The old New Englander had been almost prepared for this. Nevertheless she turned toward Burton Temple in indignant protest.

"Surely you won't ask her to do this?"

He shook his head gravely.

"I shall ask nothing," he said.

"You see, Anna. He'll not require it of you."

"I know," returned Anna dully. But Mrs. Mason didn't like the gleam that shone in her eyes. She attacked it first by cunning.

"You wouldn't have the heart to send your husband back to prison just as he's about to be pardoned or acquitted?"

"But he's guilty, you see, guilty as hell!" She leaned back in her chair with half closed eyes.

"Well, it's one thing to send a guilty husband to jail," continued Mrs. Mason, "and it's another thing to send your children's father there, branded a felon by their mother!"

She saw by the spasmodic clutch of Anna's hand on the arm of the chair how directly her shaft had gone home.

"You told me awhile ago that you'd failed in helping them," she pursued. "You needn't fail. Why, I'd let every man on earth go to prison and stay there before I'd forget that I was a mother and had two boys with two names to carry through life!"

"I'll teach them to make their names over. I'll look out for my boys." Anna stirred on her chair tiredly.

"You'll teach them to make their names over? Why, Anna Granger, you told me only a half hour ago sobbingly in your room how their father's disgrace would be thrown in their faces all the days of their life"—

"Oh, I know, I know," moaned the woman on the chair.

"Well," concluded Mrs. Mason, "that's the thing for a mother in your place to remember, right or wrong. Learn it by rote if it isn't already born in you. Your duty is to your boys, to give your boys an honorable name."

"Ah, if I could! If I only could!" cried Anna bitterly. "But I can't give them that, you see."

"You can give them at least the appearance of an honest name whether their father is honorable or not. I'm not pleading any longer for Robert, the scamp. Let the men out of it, both your husband and—Mr. Temple."

She of the Puritan conscience nodded coldly to one side to where the big financier stood silently, taking no part in the discussion. "After all," she added, "I suppose Robert's no worse than a good many other men in the world of finance. You shouldn't judge him so harshly, Anna."

Anna's delicate brows twitched. When she spoke it was in an odd, faint voice. Mrs. Mason and the whole room seemed to be moving out of her vision.

"I don't know many men," she said measuredly. "I never did judge Robert by a general standard. I judged him by the standard I held out to him before I married him. It was a pretty big one, but he knew it, and, God forgive him, he knelt beside me and swore it was his own.

"And now"—again that spasmodic twitching of the brows, while the low, measured voice went on—"and now it's not only against my standard that I balance him. I weigh him against one who is my standard's standard."

CHAPTER IX.

BACK FROM PRISON.

TO Mrs. Mason's narrow, unbending, shortsighted code everything in life was prepared in advance—a man's political convictions, a woman's religious convictions, a child's nursery stories, the babies' prayers. Her puritanic soul was outraged wholly now, and, flushing angrily, with an instinctive shrinking back of her whole person, she attacked the woman before her.

"May the Lord have mercy on such women as you, Anna Granger! You're wicked, flagrantly, deliberately wicked, to utter such thoughts. Isn't it enough to have the unlawful feeling?" She wheeled suddenly to Temple. "Oh, I've seen for a long time that you loved her. Every one has seen it. But I thought her sense of decency"—

Temple stepped forward at that, his eyes blazing.

"Mrs. Mason," he said forbiddingly, "don't you think you have gone quite far enough? Have you no pity, no sense of womanliness?"

The housekeeper winced at the man's tones. The words escaped her.

Anna had risen. Very white and still, she stood for a second. Then:

"Mr. Temple, I must leave this house, leave it at once. But you may count upon me. When your case comes up for trial I shall be there. I am going to clear you. Mrs. Mason thinks"—her eyes traveling slowly to the elder woman—"that it's not because you're innocent that I insist upon giving my testimony. She thinks it's because I love you. I do. But you at least know I've nothing further to hope from this. I am Robert Granger's wife till death!"

Temple bowed.

"Yes, I know," he said simply. "I want you—in my soul I want you—to be always as you are now—right and loyal."

"That is what I longed to hear you say, just those words," said she, with a little, quick, sobbing breath.

Mrs. Mason was forgotten. For a brief moment they two were alone, removed from the rest of the world. The silence was eloquent, yet never had Burton Temple felt farther from the woman he loved than now after she had made her heart's confession. He adored her inaccessibility, her code of honor as wife and mother.

It was she who broke the silence, and when she spoke the great motherliness of her voice sank into his troubled soul and quieted him.

"It had to come some day—the awakening. Will you try to believe me when I say it is not all a loss, because we will not allow it to be a loss? Because we are going to do right, you and I."

She smiled up at him with trembling lips and eyes running over. Then she lifted one hand and placed it upon his dark head, even as he a little while ago had placed his upon her own. And in this case again it was not a caress, but a benediction, and he understood.

"OF ABNORMAL TYPE"

Police Now Inclined to Think Dr. Knabe Killed Herself

Indianapolis, Nov. 3.—Detectives assigned to investigate the mystery of the death of Dr. Helene Knabe, who was found with her throat cut, in her apartment a week ago, extended their inquiry along the line of an opinion, supplied by a prominent physician, that Dr. Knabe was of a peculiarly abnormal type, scientifically classified. He had known the dead woman well, he said, and found in her tendencies that might cause suicidal mania.

Miss Katherine McPherson, who was Dr. Knabe's associate, and another woman friend, both denied they ever had seen in her anything abnormal. Police officials now regard that the suicide theory is growing more plausible.

PLAN TO CUT COST OF FOOD

Lynn City Council Is Petitioned to Consider Question

Lynn, Mass., Nov. 3.—In an effort to reduce the cost of living in Lynn, the East Side Improvement association has petitioned the city council of this city to adopt a plan recently inaugurated by Mayor Shank of Indianapolis, who has food supplies bought by the city and sold to the people at cost. The petition is signed by two members of the committee in charge of the movement.

President Mixer of the association says that the cost of living is too much for the ordinary wage-earner, and that not only are rents high, but unreasonable prices are asked by dealers for their goods. The city council will appoint a day for a public hearing.

HANKOW MASSACRE BY MANCHU TROOPS

Atrocities Will Have Serious Bearing on Chinese Situation

London, Nov. 3.—Atrocious massacres have been perpetrated by the Manchu troops at Hankow. Angered by the brave defense of the city by the Chinese revolutionists the imperial soldiers began indiscriminate killing, sparing neither men, women nor children, and capped the climax by burning the native town.

It is not understood that the foreign settlement was harmed, as there is a fleet of foreign warships before Hankow able to defend their nationals.

There is no question that this affair, if it has not been exaggerated, will have a serious effect on the situation. Reformers will not be led thereby to trust their fate in the hands of a throne which is incapable of keeping its army within bounds.

The reports say that Yuan Shi-Kai arrived too late to stem the tide of slaughter. Chinese history reeks with incidents like this and it is not beyond belief that such an affair might be ordered by high authority.

Notable Array of Warships Reviewed by the President

A GREAT DOUBLE SPECTACLE

Attracts to New York the Military and Naval Attaches of Most of Powers of Europe—Fleet Passes Out to Sea After Mayflower Steams Through Columns—Thousands of Salutes In Honor of Chief Executive

New York, Nov. 3.—From the bridge of the Mayflower, where Roosevelt had stood to bid Godspeed to the departing and a joyous welcome to the homecoming battle fleet that circled the globe three years ago, President Taft reviewed the most notable assemblage of warships in the history of the American navy.

In three long columns, stretching as far as the eye could see up the Hudson river, the grim, gray ships—ninety-nine in all—had awaited the president's coming. In his honor they were dressed from stem to stern in fluttering flags, as if attempting for this gala occasion to conceal the muzzles of their death-dealing guns. The gay bunting lent color to the scene, but the meaning of the dull gray hulls and the polished rifles that protruded from the turret mouths could not be masked.

There were twenty-four battleships in the line, representing every type of that class of fighting vessels in the navy, from the Indiana, Massachusetts and Iowa, of Spanish war fame, down to the last word in completed super-dreadnaughts, the majestic Florida, which lifted the voice of her guns in their first salute.

From the Indiana to the Florida it was a far cry, the big super-dreadnaught with her high free board and five big turrets looking as though she could gobble up the little veterans of the line in just one gulp. Armed cruisers, scout cruisers, destroyers, torpedo boats and auxiliaries made up the grand total.

New York, which has been "navy mad" for nearly a week, turned out by hundreds of thousands to witness the review. The day was favored by perfect weather, an almost unclouded sun and a brisk wind that added to the picturesqueness of the scene by roughening the harbor with white caps and whipping flags that made the ships above decks a riot of color.

The significance of the mobilization and review of the fleet at this time was simply to demonstrate the preparedness of the Amerlacn navy for any emergency. To further impress this fact upon the president and the nation, to say nothing of the world at large, the naval authorities were not content with the usual plan of holding a review of the fleet at anchor.

This part of the program was gone through with, following the custom of years, but in addition the orders provided that after the Mayflower had steamed through the several columns, the fleet should get under way and pass out to sea. This double spectacle made the review unique in the annals of naval displays throughout the world and attracted to New York the military and naval attaches of most of the powers of Europe.

The thunder of tons of powder, fired in the salutes of 5000 gun charges in honor of the presence of the president, set a new record for New York. The magnificent pageant was so staged as to give it all the impressiveness of actual war—together with all the noise of an actual cannonade.

It was a proud day for Admiral Osterhaus, in command of the Atlantic fleet, but he was saved from a delicate situation by the kindheartedness of Admiral Dewey, retired, who refused an invitation to be present because he outranks Admiral Osterhaus, and his presence would have caused an embarrassing situation.

The dispatch boat Dolphin was placed at the disposal of the naval attaches of foreign powers who were invited to witness the pageant.

The great guns, belching forth the twenty-one-gun salutes to the president, shook both shores of the Hudson and the reverberations rolled up and down the river from the the upper bay to the Palisades.

As the batteries on board a warship would let go with a thunder of noise, vast clouds of smoke poured up through the superstructure and rigging, completely enveloping the vessel.

Residents along the Hudson were warned beforehand that there would be a liberal burning of gunpowder.

Accompanying President Taft was Secretary Meyer, who reviewed the fleet Wednesday. President Taft showed his pride in the great armada, and he had good cause to be proud, for it was the biggest fleet ever reviewed by a President of the United States,

The president indicated in all of his speeches in advocacy of the treaties of peace that he entertained no fond delusion that by convention war could immedfately be made a thing of the past.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Powder Point High plays the local High school eleven at Merrymount park this afternoon and judging from the records made by both teams, the game should resolve into a warm contest. The work of the Quincy boys seems to be better in every game and the recent victory over Brockton High has inspired them with a confidence that they can now try conclusions with the best of them.

Quincy High recently secured a 6 to 0 victory over the strong Boston College High eleven. The Boston boys, only a week previous, played Powder Point High to a 0 to 0 standstill. Of course a comparison of scores is often times misleading but from the results both teams have met with thus far this season, it is safe to say that Quincy High should be able to annex another victory.

In the Orients of East Boston, the Quincy A. A. eleven will encounter its toughest proposition of the year. It will be remembered that last year both teams engaged in a gruelling contest and that the same resulted in a 6 to 6 score. This year the contest will be still warmer, and the visitors claim that they will have even a better team tomorrow at Merrymount Park than they did last year when they encountered the team then known as the Wollaston A. A.

The game surely will be one well worth witnessing and any one desirous of seeing a real struggle, should make an effort to be present.

WILL PLAY OFF TIE.

Football enthusiasts have a treat in store for tomorrow, when Fore River Eagles play the Paterson True Blues, from New Jersey. The game takes place in Fore River Park, and starts at 2.45 P. M. sharp. Never before in the history of association football in Quincy has Fore River been so successful in securing a team of such high fame to play with them at home. But credit is due the Eagles after last week's game when they played the True Blues and held them to a pointless draw on their ground at Paterson. The game is in connection with the All American Cup. The Eagle's record as cup and shield winners is too well known to be written, sufficient it is to say that since the club was organized in 1903 they have been successful in securing six champion cups and twice the Dewar Shield, while against that stands the credit of many notable victories to the True Blues, besides being twice winners of the All American Cup. The game should prove to be an interesting one, and while we expect the True Blues to put up a desperate fight for victory, still we think that the Eagles shall have a goal to spare at the close of the game. The Eagles team is as follows:—Goal, Sharples backs—Hendry, right; Melville left; half backs—Elliot, right; Campbell centre, Boyd left. Forwards—Moran, McDonald, right, Harison Centre, left Rennie, Carruthers.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL NOTES.

(By Teri Bus.)

The Eagles played a fine game at Paterson, New Jersey last week.

The True Blues found out that the Quincy ironworkers were a tough lot to shake off, and a draw was the best they could do.

During the second period two penalty kicks were given the Blues, one went wide; but the other—what a dandy shot it was—made Sharples a hero. He saved a goal.

The Eagles traveled with the financial help of one of their honorary members. We thank him.

Follow the crowd, The same teams play in Fore River park Saturday.

Beg, borrow, or otherwise obtain a quarter of a dollar, but—See this game.

A stranger visited the Eagles park on Tuesday and after taking several measurements, and otherwise closely examining the grounds, he departed.

It is up to Fore River officials to see that the field is properly marked off Saturday. We see the reason for the strangers visit from Paterson. Do not give them any cause for protest.

The Eagles got a splendid offer financially to return and play the tie in Paterson. They refused this offer.

They want to let their supporters see the class of football they can serve when up against a hard proposition.

The McGregors take a day off, their game with Fore River in greater Boston League has been posponed. The Clan will turn out strong and root hard for the Eagles.

All depends on the weather for a big crowd. Those who attend will witness a fine game. Reader do not miss it.

The playing ability of the True Blues can not be over estimated. The Eagles have a hard game to play before they win. They have broken some hard nuts before now.

Teri Bus.

BROCKTON MAY LOSE FAIR.

Despite the assertion made recently that there was no truth to the report that the Brockton Fair was to be moved to Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., the rumor would not down, and citizens in general fear the city is to lose its greatest attraction.

For 38 years Brockton people have conducted the fair. The enterprise has been a paying one from a business standpoint, yet no dividends have ever been paid and on this account the property has been exempt from taxation.

Aldermanic Candidate Hurries Away When He Hears It's a Girl

New York, Nov. 3.—Louis Zeitner, fusion nominee for alderman in the Fourth district, was launching a campaign speech from the tail end of a cart in Columbia street when a young man rushed up and pulled at his coat.

The look of wrath gave way to a broad smile as the nominee asked: 'Is it a boy or girl?"

"Girl," said the informant, and Zeitner left the cart without completing the attack on Tammany.

Said a thinking man: "You see men have so much other business to attend to that they just go and vote and forget all about it, but it would be just like those good women to want to know what they were voting for. Oh, no! the woman must not vote!

Vol. 26 No. 255 QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 4, 1911 PRICE TWO CENTS

LAUD SEN. BARNES AND REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES AT LAST NIGHT'S RALLY

John L. Miller Makes Important Remarks Regarding Tariff Question

Thomas, Merrill And Piper Well Received

In a clear straightforward statement, without attempt at oratory, Senator George L. Barnes repudiated some of the statements that have been made by his opponent in regard to his votes on measures before the legislature the past session, to the voters of Ward Three at a rally in Hibernian hall, last evening.

John C. Murray presided and before the arrival of Senator Barnes, who was attending a large rally at Milton, there were several local speakers.

The first speaker was Representative William R. Thomas who told of some of the important measures that had been enacted on Beacon hill during the last session. His acquaintance with Senator Barnes dated from the time they were both attending the law school, where for three years they were close friends. His word was as good as law. A close student and thoroughly honest. In the legislature he had never called upon him to do a good turn for Quincy but he found him ready and willing. His record is before you, and each and every act and vote of his was characterized by common sense. He need not be ashamed of any stand that he made. As an incident of his thoughtfulness for Quincy, Representative Thomas spoke of the visit of Senator Barnes to Washington, at his own expense to intercede with the Massachusetts senators in relation to the Weymouth Back River bridge and as a result of his visit a bill had been passed whereby the government was to pay $50,000 of the cost of the bridge Through the influence of the war department, however, the bill became pigeon-holed and never reached the President.

Representative Thomas then took up the record of Gov. Foss and told of his hedging on the different bills, He also spoke of the pamphlet recently issued by Gov. Foss and taking up several statements and claims made by the Governor in that pamphlet, showed where the Governor had taken credit for much that he had not done. Many of the bills that the Governor took credit for instigating and having carried through, were not his and the only credit due him was that he had signed, the bills, many of them under pressure. He took up in detail the 54 hour and 8 hour bills also the improvement of Boston harbor bill and the Ellis Milk bill and told in a forcible manner just where the Governor had stood on these important measures.

Referring to Candidate Frothingham he said he was a fearless, honest and sincere man. One who will keep his word. In closing he urged the young men to start right at the coming election and vote the Republican ticket from top to bottom.

County Commissioner John F. Merrill said that his assumption was that his office was a working and not a talking office. It was always a pleasure to meet Quincy men and Republicans. This campaign resembled somewhat that of 1892 when Cleveland was running for his second term on the free trade platform. Granite during those times could be cut in Scotland and shipped and delivered in Quincy cheaper than it could be cut here, simply because the tariff had been removed. All remember those hard times.

There were two parties that had got to be responsible for the industrial standing of the country. We, as Republicans, do not claim to monopolize all the intelligence, but simply that the Democrats are mistaken and will not give as good legislation as the Republican party. Some of you will remember what followed that administration of Cleveland and free trade and of the long lines of the soup brigade in the large cities. When men go into the booths to vote they ought to think of these things. Think which are the men that will do the best for you and your families. To a great extent personality of candidates should be sunk in the party, and that every Republican on the ticket represents a good cause.

Speaking of Senator Barnes he said that he was a self made man. Mr. Piper, your candidate for Representative, had also made good wherever he had been put. As for himself, modesty prevented him from saying much. When he had taken the office he had made up his mind that no private business should take precedence to the duties of his office and he had kept to that resolve. He had tried to do the best in his power and had been sincere in his duty. In closing, he hoped that Quincy would get out a good vote next Tuesday, a vote that would be an eye opener.

Chairman Murray spoke briefly on

PROMINENT REPUBLICANS ENDORSEMENT

Issue Statement Regarding Candidacy of Senator Barnes

WORK FOR BRIDGE

To the Republican Voters of Quincy:

Believing that something should be said to the voters of Quincy concerning the contest for senator in this district, in order that no one may be misled or deceived, the following statement is submitted for the consideration of the people of Quincy.

Senator George L. Barnes of Weymouth served one term in the Massachusetts Senate. By all precedents of the past, he ought to be entitled to a reelection for a second term There are however, special reasons particularly applying to Quincy, why he should be returned.

CONGRESSIONAL REDISTRICTING

1. Quincy and Milton are now situated in the Tenth Congressional District, being connected thereby with Dorchester and South Boston. Quincy has long desired to be returned into the district with the rest of Norfolk County. Senator Barnes is now sitting as one of the four Republican senatorial members of the Special Recess Committee who are redistricting the state into congressional districts. It is decidedly to the advantage of Quincy that he be returned in order that he may accomplish the purpose which all Republicans of Quincy desire, namely, to get Quincy out of the Tenth Congressional District. If his opponent is elected, the exact opposite is true as it is of course obvious that his purpose would be to keep Quincy in the Democratic district. It means too much to Quincy to fail to return Senator Barnes.

BACK-RIVER BRIDGE.

2. Last year Senator Barnes, by his efforts and continuous persistence on the matter of the reconstruction of the Weymouth Back River bridge, saved the city of Quincy approximately thirty to thirty-five thousand dollars. This bridge was ordered rebuilt by the War Department and Quincy, Weymouth and Hingham would have had to build it. Mr. Barnes went to Washington at his own expense and secured there, passage, by the House and Senate, of a bill providing for the relief of these local municipalities by the National government, but the president, on the advice of the War Department, declined to sign the bill. He then took hold of the matter in the Massachusetts Legislature and succeeded in having a bill put through the legislature in which the state of Massachusetts assumed the expense of building the bridge, the Attorney General being authorized to appeal to the National government for reimbursement.

The estimated cost of the bridge was $100,000. It is therefore apparent that he has saved the city of Quincy, by the work that he put into this matter, a very considerable amount of money.

PRESIDENCY OF THE SENATE.

3. We are informed that there is a very fair opportunity of Senator Barnes securing for this district the honor of the presidency of the Senate. If this district can secure that honor, it ought to be desirous and glad to receive it. If there is an opportunity for him to secure the presidency, everything ought to be done that is possible to afford him that chance so that the district may have the prominence that would be brought to it by his election as president.

Two Quincy people were among the passengers on the Seaboard Air line passenger train, from New York to Jacksonville, Fla., which was derailed Thursday night at Merry Oaks, 20 miles west of Raleigh, N. C. They were Miss C. S. Hubbard, of Atlantic, who for many years was the proprietor of one of Quincy's well known business houses and her travelling companion Miss Nellie Doyle.

Miss Hubbard and Miss Doyle left Quincy Wednesday for Mt. Dora, Fla., where they were to spend the winter months. Eighteen of the passengers on the train were injured, among them being Miss Doyle. It is not thought that she was seriously injured however.

NORFOLK TEACHERS HONOR QUINCY

James D. Howlett Elected President of Association

FINANCIAL REPORT

Quincy was yesterday honored at the meeting of the Norfolk Co. Teachers' Association by the election of James D. Howlet as president. Other officers are J. S. Richardson of Brookline and John C. Davis of Canton, vice presidents, Stella L. Tirrell of Weymouth, secretary; Emerson Rice of Hyde Park, treasurer; F. W. Kingman, George W. Earle, Jennie Whitman and Eva Perkins, councillors.

At the business meeting resolutions were daopted approving the efforts of the United States Commissioner of Education to secure an appropriation from Congress to meet the needs of the Bureau of Education as liberally as needs of the Bureau of Animal Industry are met; that schoolhouses in smaller towns be opened in the evening for social and educational purposes; that a protest should be made against the meager salaries given teachers and that the State should bear the added expense if the towns cannot.

The treasurer's report showed the receipts to be $581.96, balance $338.66.

Miss Katherine D. Blake, principal of Public School No. 6 of New York city, spoke on "The Teacher as Toiler. Miss Blake said: "Education in America is wiping out class distinction. The pupil now looks upon his teacher with love and esteem instead of with fear and trembling. Find out the home surroundings of a pupil who you think is dull and inattentive to lessons; investigate his or her environment before you scold or punish or give the pupil up as a hopeless case. Believe in the doctrine of original goodness and your pupil will live up to your expectations, to the standard which you have set for him."

Seamus McManus, the Irish story teller, described his own experience as a teacher in the mountains of Donegal and then told the story of "How Daniel O'Connell saved the honor of Maynooth College."

Francis G. Blair of Illinois and Henry Turner Bailey, editor of the school arts book, spoke at the morning session. There were illustrative folk dances by Brookline school children under the direction of Miss Enid Morrill and music by a quartet.

Largely Attended Funeral This Morning At Parents' Home

MANY FLORAL OFFERINGS

The funeral of Charles J. Martin was held this morning from the home of his parents at 11 Walnut street and was followed by a High Mass of requiem at the church of the Sacred Heart at Atlantic. Mass was celebrated by Rev. John P. Cuffe and the Gregorian mass was sung by the regular choir under the direction of Miss Louise Costello, organist. At the offertory Miss Catherine Dolan and Miss Clara Duggan sang the "Pie Jesu" and after the Mass Miss Duggan sang "Libera."

There was a wealth of beautiful flowers testifying to the high regard in which the young man was held.

The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery, the bearers being Patrick Duggan, Timothy Keohane, John McGourty, Joseph Duggan, Henry Golden and James Dolan.

The young man leaves a mother, two brothers and three sisters. One of his brothers, an employee of the Globe is seriously ill.

The other brother is a member of the Boston fire department. He was a son of the late James Martin, for many years superintendent of the Sunday school of the Sacred Heart church and sexton of the church.

SCORE 5-2

A cleverly executed field goal, kicked in the last two minutes of play from the 40 yard line by Woodlock, the plucky right end of the visiting aggregation, tells the story of the 5 to 2 defeat administered to the Quincy High football warriors at Merrymount Park yesterday afternoon by the exceptionally heavy Powder Point High team of Duxbury. HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The post office department has raised the ban on Santa Claus mail after all. Upon reconsidering the matter, Postmaster Gen. Hitchock has directed that any letters addressed to "Sana Claus" may be delivered to charity organizations or benevolent persons that ask for them. This ruling means a happy Christmas for hundreds who otherwise would be without the usual holiday cheer.

Seems to be "easy picking" for our friend Mr. Wall of Houghs Neck, for with the withdrawal of Dr. Ash, the Democratic nomination for the City's chief executive position goes to him without opposition. Mr. Wall is a fighter and will take advantage of every opportunity offering itself. Extreme care, therefor, will be necessary on the part of the Republican managers that the fight within their ranks does not open a loophole for the entrance of that wary tactician.

Charitable organizations and relief societies have surely not reached a state of perfection in unearthing needy cases when two women, one of them extremely ill, can be evicted from their home for the sake of a dollar's rent, as happened on the East side of New York recently. In this case the dead body of the sick woman was found by the officers in the midst of their heartless work. With all the money in hand for just such purposes the affair seems too extraordinary to believe. It is a fact, however, that in many cases too much red tape exists and the really worthy are handicapped in their efforts for prompt assistance.

Superintendent Barbour of our public schools made some mighty good suggestions in his informal talk recently on "Industrial and vocational education, which he said was the next step forward for this community to take in educational progress. In a word it is this, for the girl—courses in the household arts, starting in grades lower than the High school, presuming, of course, that the future vocation of the average girl will be that of the housewife and manager of the home. For the boy, mechanically inclined, his time should be divided—half his time in school to that occupation and the other to allied studies.

It is a fact that many boys are out of school when too young. Training along the lines mentioned would seem to remedy matters and is worthy of earnest consideration.

The voters of Massachusetts will have an opportunity on election day to put into force a most important public improvement on which lies, to a large extent, the future success of any measures for comprehensive city planning.

This year's ballot will contain a proposition for amending the constitution so that cities and towns of the Commonwealth may be permitted to take by eminent domain, more land than is actually needed for street construction or improvement, in order to insure adequate building lots on each side of a thoroughfare. As the constitution now reads, a municipality can condemn only as much private property as is actually needed in any public improvement. The result is that when a new street is opened, the adjoining lots are usually cut up into small sections owned by numerous individuals who, often unwittingly, present serious obstacles to uniform and proper building development. It follows also that the abutting property quickly rises in value, following the opening of a new street, and the city in which the improvement is being made, benefits from the increased valuation only through the betterment tax. After the city has appropriaed enough land for suitable building lots on each side of the street, it may authorize the sale, with or without restrictions.

The proposed amendment originated with the Boston Society of Architects and has the backing of the leading civic and social organizations. Adequate protection is provided in the amendment for the rights of abutting property owners.

Towards the successful fulfilment of the principles of comprehensive city planning, whereby the cities of Massachusetts may lay out their streets and highways with an eye to future needs, the passage of the amendment would make a most important step.

Quincy's interest in the State election is much more real and vital than in the usual State election. Outside of the importance of backing up our Congress in Washington in their endeavors to protect the New England industries from the virulent attacks of their competitors in other parts of the country we have a chance this year of getting out of the tenth Congressional District and into a Congressional District in which we will have at least a possibility of a Congressman of our own as well as having interest in common with the rest of the district. Our senator, Mr. Barnes of Weymouth is a member of the re-districting committee having this matter in charge. Milton, which is in a similar position in this respect to Quincy has its representative, Roger Wolcott as House Chairman of this committee. If Mr. Barnes is returned together with two Republican Representatives from the Quincy districts this city will not only have a good chance of securing favorable action due to Mr. Barnes' position, but it will have demonstrated that Quincy is still a Republican city, which it is difficult to make a majority party in the Legislature believe. It would seem to the non-partisan observer that to protect the city's interests the representatives in both branches of the Legislature this year should be Republicans.

ORGANIZED LABOR IS FOR MILLER

It has been said that organized labor might be opposed to John L. Miller in his campaign for the Republican nomination for Mayor, but Mr. Miller holds the best proof that such is not a fact, when James Duncan, the treasurer and secretary, and Mr. Russell and Mr. Brooks his assistants in the Granite Cutters' International office also fourteen granite cutters committee men signed his nomination papers. These committee men have sat at joint committee meetings between the Granit Manufacturers' Association and their Union, where Mr. Miller was the joint Chairman. In making new Bills of Prices, Mr. Miller held that position for some twenty years, and these men say they have always found him eminently fair, always conceding to others the same rights he claimed for himself.

It was Mr. Miller who was the first on the manufacturers' side to advocate the non-discrimination clause from the Bill of Prices. This was a clause which read as follows:—"There shall be no discrimination between Union and Non-union men, either on or off the works." This was very objectionable to the cutters, as they could not control their members, and as the Granite Manufacturers Association had devised methods to control their own members, Mr. Miller thought it only fair that the cutters should have the same privilege, so he left the chair and advocated the concession and pushed it through to adoption. These men do not forget the incident.

CHAS. E. DECKER FILES PAPERS

Well Known Resident and Journalist Seeks Nomination

FOR COUNCILMAN

Although most of the Republican candidates for the council from ward one had filed nomination papers several days before the closing hours, it was not until 6.11 P. M. Thursday that papers for Charles E. Decker and Charles A. Ericson were placed in the hands of the committee. Mr. Ericson comes back for re-election while Mr. Decker is entering local politics. Mr. Decker is opposed to a Houghs Neck township and told them so at a rally in Pandora hotel Sept. 29, and that he would endeavor to do for them all possible injustice to other parts of the city. He further says,—if elected he will do all he can as a citizen and councilman and will try to give ward one an attractive City Square, a street that will be mudless on rainy days.

Mr. Decker came to this city from Dorchester 6 years ago and became a resident 3 years ago. He issued a publication in this city for a short time, has been with W. G. Shaw, ad. manager for Berry Brothers, and is now associated with the J. A. Keating Co., Inc., as piano and ad. manager. He is a member of the Quincy Yacht club, Quincy Loyal Moose, and Subordinate and Encampment I. O. O. F.

Mrs. C .M. Chase and Miss Gertrude Jones have been selected as delegates from Christ Church Sunday school to attend the annual meeting of the Sunday School Union in Emmanuel Church chapel, Boston, on Wednesday.

PLAY SQUARE CLUB GIVES DANCE

Colonial hall was the scene of a very pretty dancing party last evening, given under the auspices of the Play Square club of the Universalist church. About 75 couples were in attendance and dancing was enjoyed till midnight.

The matrons for the occasion were Mrs. G. E. Sprague and Mrs. Thomas Smith. The committee in charge included Lester Sprague (chairman) Bartlett Spooner and J. Freeman Hyland.

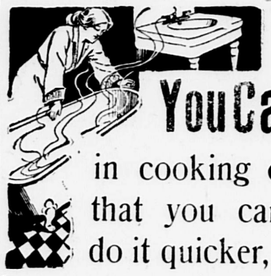

Y. M. C. A. MEETING.

Saturday morning meetings for boys were auspiciously stated this morning when about 100 assembled at the Y. M. C. A. to listen to the interesting talk of Don S. Gates, Boy's Work Director at the Boston headquarters.

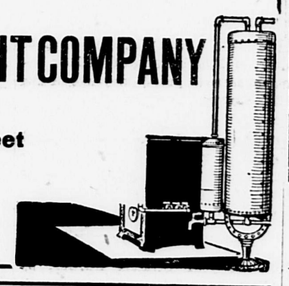

Mr. Gates' talk dealt with his "Trip abroad on a cattle steamer and experiences on the other side." His remarks were well received. Among other points was his advice to the boys not to attempt an ocean voyage on a cattle steamer.

The meetings will be continued on Saturday through the season.

SUNDAY 12 TO 1—SHARP

Bethany Church, City Square

If YOU are a young man, and not associated with any other Quincy church, YOU are most cordially invited to come to our meeting.

A warm welcome—Hearty singing—A helpful hour together.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE SIXTH DISTRICT.

As I failed to receive the regular Republican nomination for representative in the District. I supposed that the incident was closed and am very much surprised to find that owing to some technicalities at the Secretary of State's office, my name appears on the official ballot as Progressive Democrat and I desire to state that I am not a candidate for office, and trust that the voters of the District will govern themselves accordingly.

Very truly yours,
NATHAN G. NICKERSON.

Nathan G. Nickerson, Esq.,
79 Milk Street,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:—I regret exceedingly that the technicality regarding exactly what is necessary to do in order to get your name off the ballot has resulted in your name appearing on the ballot as the candidate of the Democratic Progressive party, when, as I understand, you emphatically desired not to be on that ballot. Unfortunately it is too late now to take the legal steps to have your name removed. Your letter of October 23 makes it clear that you had no intention to run as the candidate of the Democratic Progressive party.

Very truly yours,
(sgd.) Albert P. Langtry
Secretary.

D. A. R. HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

The Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter, D. A. R. of Wollaston were delightfully entertained with a Hallowe'en party at the residence of Mrs. Seth S. Crocker 240 Beach street, Tuesday afternoon from 2.30 to 5. The charming hostess dressed in white and crowned with a witches cap welcomed the guests at the door of her home, which was transformed for the time being into a veritable witches, abode with its darkened windows, weird lighting and fantastic decorations of cornstalks and pumpkins.

The program was appropriate for the Hallowe'en season. Glad hands concealed in paper wrappings: Conundrum salad, mathematical entree and fortune telling salmagundi in which the prize a most unique and valuable fan was won by Mrs. William S. Sayward. Sand-witches and other dainty Hallowe'en confections were served by the hostess and her sister Mrs. Edwin Keith of Bridgewater.

About forty Daughters and guests were present and the whole affair which was arranged by Mrs. Crocker was one of the most brilliant social events of the season.

A CAMPAIGN FOR MASSACHUSETTS HONOR AND PROSPERITY

LOUIS A. FROTHINGHAM stands before the people of Massachusetts as a candidate without reproach for an office he is splendidly equipped by native ability and long public experience. His election will assure two great results:

(1) That Massachusetts resents the effort to cripple the great industries of the State, embodied in the tariff bills passed at the recent session of Congress and vetoed by President Taft. The animus of those bills was revealed in the speech of Congressman Kitchin of North Carolina, April 15, 1911, when he said, "We of the South mean to make New England manufacturers move their factories to the South or go out of business." Mr. Frothingham stands against that project and for tariff reduction on information furnished by an expert tariff commission. Mr. Foss has declared he helped secure the passage of the bills Mr. Kitchin describes.

(2) That the great office of Governor will be returned to the methods, honorable and unsensational, which have made the people of Massachusetts proud of the Commonwealth and proud of her governors.

LOUIS A. FROTHINGHAM

The unworthiness of the present Governor for re-election is to be judged by the recklessness of his misrepresentation as to the management of the public institutions, the unsupported claims for credit for legislation passed by a Republican legislature, the appeal to the support of the workingmen when his treatment of labor in his employ has been conspicuously oppressive, and by the untruths as to his opponent to which he has lent countenance.

The candidacy of LOUIS A. FROTHINGHAM for Governor and ROBERT LUCE for Lieutenant-Governor makes the way clear for the voters who seek their State's welfare and honor. They will vote for renewed activity with which the local boys went back into the game in the last two periods, it seemed to the four hundred or more spectators who were present, that the game would be played to a standstill.

ROBERT LUCE.

The visitors outweighed the local eleven considerably and the experience which some of its members have had on the gridiron, was alone, sufficient to prove a serious drawback to Captain Johnson's team. Clare, the right guard for Powder Point overbalanced the two hundred mark to a great degree, and he himself seemed to be a whole eleven, for at times he was seen to break though the Quincy line and seize upon the opposing runner in the same manner as a lion would upon his prey.

Caples, who formerly played on the Rindge Manual team for about four years, and who later captained it was in the left half of the backfield, and made himself highly conspicuous by his sensational rushes on three or four occasions. He was only one of the many others on the visiting team who has been playing football for a number of years. So it can readily be seen that the team which encountered Quincy High yesterday could be more fittingly termed a varsity eleven instead of a high school contingency.

As it was, the visitors were exceedingly lucky in emerging with a victory and their own coach, Lawrence Duffy, the former well known English High and Dartmouth player, considered himself very fortunate in that his team had not been scored upon, at a time when Quincy High was in a splendid position to do so. The defense work of the local eleven was as conspicuous as ever, but their aggressiveness failed to show up to advantage against their heavier and more experienced opponents.

Powder Point also lost an opportunity to score touch down in the very first period. Within a short space of time after the game had started, the Duxbury team had rushed the local eleven cleanly off its feet. The ball was placed into Quincy's territory and successive rushes by the visitors placed it within striking distance of the goal. It was now within five yards of the goal line and on fast downs. Here Quincy High strengthened to its utmost and by a remarkable display of nerve power, determination and prowess, held their heavy opponents from crossing their goal, on the two yard line.

The ball here went to Quincy and Blackmur decided to leave Page punt it out immediately. Page fell behind the goal five yards and prepared for the punt. The ball was poorly passed, however, and went over his head. He regained it and thereby prevented a touchdown, at the same time attributing a safety to the opposing side.

A strange coincidence in the game was the fact that two safeties were made. Quincy made its safety in the third period. Powder Point punted when within 45 yards of the goal. The ball went to one side and bounced over the heads of Larkin and Chapman, both of whom made great efforts to secure it in order to run over for a touchdown. The ball went behind the goal and Caples, being alert to the occasion, fell on it, thereby crediting a safety, to the local boys, the only score they succeeded in making during the entire game. Eddy, the left tackle on the Powder Point eleven sustained a serious injury to his ankle in the last period and had to be removed from the field. The work of the Quincy ends, Larkin and Chapman is worthy of commendation and the tackling and rush work on the tackle play by Johnson, was also an interesting feature of the game. Finlay and Holmes did some great grounding at times, and their attacks through the right side of the Powder Point line were productive of much benefit.

Eddy was the one star of the game, for his tackling was a most noticeable feature. Burke, the great quarter mile runner, was in the right half back position for the visitors, and was prevented by tearing off some great runs, only by some sensational tackling by one of the local players.

Penalties were imposed upon both sides, and on one occasion Quincy High was penalized five yards, when the visitors had the ball within ten yards from the goal. Rough tackling was resorted to at times by the Powder Point team; but the size of the players in tackling their smaller opponents, had a tendency to make some of the work of the visitors appear even rougher than it really was.

The first period was a most exciting one, for it was feared that the visitors were about to make a touchdown in the first few minutes of play after Quincy had kicked off the ball was interchanged and was in the centre of the field when he first penalty, five yards on Quincy, was imposed.

Caples reaped gains of from 10 to 15 yards on two or three rushes and when the visitors punted, Holmes fumbled the ball on the 25 yard line. He regained it, however, and Quincy was forced to punt the ball back. Page placed it out of danger, but the visitors succeeded in making first down on Quincy's 25 yard line.

Powder Point kept gaining, but Caples was finally thrown for a loss on the 15 yard line. Caples gained 3 yards. The ball reached the 10 yard line and Quincy was here penalized 5 yards for offside play. The visitors made three yards but were held on downs within two yards from the goal.

The occurrence related above was then in order and Quincy had given a safety to its opponent.

The remainder of the first period was void of any spectacular work, save the interception of a forward pass by Holmes, it being one of the three forward passes tried in the whole game. Page kept in some fine punting in this period and on each occasion kicked the ball for distances of between 40 and 50 yards.

In the second period, both teams played to a standstill. A series of punts took place and the Quincy kicker seemed to fare much better than the player who booted the ball for Powder Point High. The ball changed hands three times, and the gains on either side were about equal. Johnson's tackle play was worked to advantage and twice he reaped gains of ten yards. The ball was fumbled by Quincy a couple of times, and this prevented gains, for when the ball was recovered, two or three of the opposing players would be there to tackle the runner.

Punting also played an important part in the third period, although the visitors twice made first downs. A punt by the Powder Point team when the ball was on the 35 yard line went to one side, and a safety, as described above, was given to Quincy High by Caples.

The local boys went back with greater strength in the last period and they certainly used every effort to keep the game at a tie. The visitors were fortunate in rushing the ball, however, and when it was within 40 yards of the goal, Woodlock, a member of the well known family of Woodlock athletes, was called back for a drop kick. On the first try the ball was blocked and was fumbled by Blackmur. He tried the goal a second time and was successful. The kick went high into the air, and landed directly between the two cross bars. There were only two more minutes to play and it was easily seen, on this spectacular play, that Quincy High had gone down for its third defeat of the season.

The local boys played well throughout, and they lost the game, mainly because they were not strong enough to cope with their heavier opponents and because they have not as yet attained that efficiency by experience which is necessary in order to oppose a team which in justice to its opponents cannot very well be called an interscholastic aggregation. Crane was the only substitute used for the local eleven, while three changes were made in the visitors' lineup.

White accredited himself in fine style and opened up large holes for Finlay on several occasions. Woodlock, Caples and Clar were the conspicuous stars for the winners, while Holmes, Johnson and Page showed up exceptionally well for Quincy High.

Next Tuesday, Melrose High will come as the attraction and this contest will be a keen and exciting one, judging from the showing of both teams this season.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently, the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

Anty Drudge Tells How to Avoid Sunday Soaking.

Mrs. Hurryup—"I always put my clothes to soak on Sunday night. Then I get an early start on Monday and get through washing by noon. I don't consider it breaking the Sabbath, for cleanliness is next to godliness, you know."

Anty Drudge—"Yes, but godliness comes first, my dear. And you should keep the Commandments. Get a cake of Fels-Naptha and you won't have to soak your clothes over night, and your washing will be all done by noon; without boiling, without hard work and with more satisfaction than any other way."

Rough, red hands are the trial of most housewives. "I don't mind the work if I could only keep my hands nice," sighs the young woman.

You will have less work and nice hands at the same time if you use Fels-Naptha soap in washing clothes. Hot water chaps the hands; hard-rubbing on the washboard swells the knuckles. Using Fels-Naptha in cold or lukewarm water, you have neither hot water, hard-rubbing nor nauseous steam. But Fels-Naptha must be used the Fels-Naptha way—no boiling.

Follow directions on the red and green wrapper.

REPUBLICAN RALLY

the duty of the young voters who should consider what a dollar would buy. It was better that the price of goods should be up and wages good than to have a low price with not a dollar in the pocket to buy with.

John L. Miller said that the tariff issue in Quincy was a very live issue. When there was a fifteen per cent duty on granite, $575,000 worth arrived in Boston from other countries yet it did not contribute anything to the Quincy granite men. Under the McKinley bill the importations of granite dropped to less than $100,000. Just as much granite was used but it was purchased at home, and the money was expended in better wages for the workmen and better living. In the last session of congress the tariff was simply slashed and the president only saved us here in New England. It was plain that the southern states had stolen a march to build up their cotton mills. When you see the shacks mill operators in the south lived in you would be surprised. You would not keep pigs in them yet men earning 75 cents a day live in them. It means something to New England to have her industries protected. Down south they do not have Jack Frost as we do here. They have no use for heavy coats and other clothing. Houses for workingmen never cost over $200. So that they can easily compete with the world. Georgia is one of our greatest competitors in the granite industry, so he could not understand how New England could vote for free trade. Our only salvation is a tariff duty and it is our duty to vote for men who will uphold that duty. He believed that there would be a glorious victory next Tuesday.

Foss, he said, was a second Ben Butler, although Mr. Miller did not mention the name of Butler. He hoped the voters of Ward Three would put up a big vote, that everyone would get their neighbors out to vote.

Speaking of Senator Barnes, Mr. Miller said that he was of the salt of the earth. He was always on the right side. He referred briefly to Senator Barnes' work on the Ellis and other bills. Our friend Piper is also all right and should receive our hearty support.

Councilman Bolster was glad to have an opportunity to tell the people where he stood. He wanted the people to know that he was with Piper, heart and soul, and he hoped that the ward would rally to his support and give him a rousing vote. Barnes was also a good fellow and he would do all in his power to give them a rousing good vote.

Walter E. Piper, candidate for Representative, after thanking the voters for their reception, said if the Democrats are successful in this campaign it will say to the world that New England believes in the bills passed in the last Senate. Our ticket is not machine made but was made by the people themselves. Good men had been nominated from Frothingham down. He could indorse all that had been said about Senator Barnes. Personally he had been asked to pledge himself on several matters but he had not answered any of these requests. Now he wished to say in answer that he desired to go to the legislature unhampered, although in full sympathy with many of the matters. If elected, he would try to do his duty. Anything that he could do to further or benefit the city he would gladly do. He was much interested in the development of Quincy's water front and he would say that anything that he could do towards its development he would certainly do. In closing, he urged the voters to vote early on election day and to get their neighbors out early, as it would be a great help to the committees.

The last speaker was Senator Barnes. In opening the Senator said that he was going to say something that he had not spoken of before. There have been some things said that hurt. Mr. Miller said that I was honest and he hoped that he was. It has not always been easy to do my duty and go straight.

There had been many times when he had an opportunity to help himself by voting certain ways but declined. There had been many times when friends and clients had come to him in the interest of some bill and wanted him to let up, but he could not and it was not easy to refuse. Yet it was the only course he could persue. The self satisfaction of having done his duty as he saw it, was worth more than dollars and cents to him.

It had not been pleasant to have some of the things said which his opponent has said. He felt that in the long run truth would prevail and that he would have the respect of the people of this district.

He then spoke on some matters upon which he had been misrepresented and the methods that had been adopted to misrepresent matters.

Speaking of the 54 hour bill, the 8 hour bill and the direct nomination of U. S. Senator bill, which he had voted for he said: On the first vote of the 8 hour bill I had voted against it because the supreme court said that the fifth section was unconstitutional in that it meant that a man was guilty before he was tried. I said that if that clause was stricken out I would vote for the bill and after the ruling of the supreme court and the clause was stricken out, I did vote for it. Does my opponent want the voters to believe that he would have voted for a bill knowing it to be unconstitutional? Should I have voted for the bill in that form or against it? Yet my opponent says I ought to be defeated for this reason.

I see by the Ledger today that he says he challenged me to a debate at South Braintree. I never heard of it until I read it, I never received any challenge for debate in any manner or form. I think he is a good fellow but is being surrounded by men who think that is the method of conducting a campaign.

The 9 in 11 hour bill for street railway men he also explained. This bill meant that if a crew of a street car happened to be in the woods or anywhere else when the nine hours were up, they would have to leave their cars. It meant that if a long run took them five minutes over their nine hours, they would have to give it up, and loose an hour or two labor each day. All I know is that men employed on the street cars came to me at my home and said the passage of the bill would mean dollars loss to them as they were working by the hour.

He had been accused of being a street railway corporation man yet he had opposed the street railway corporations when he had supported the bill which placed trolley freights under a limited franchise of twenty years. Some of the men who had asked him to vote for the 9 hour bill, had also asked him to vote for 20 year franchise bill.

As for being a trust man it was a fact that no interest would like better to see him defeated than the trust companies, for he had championed the bill which provided that funds in trust companies should be taxed.

Cities and towns lost thousands of dollars in taxes for the reason that funds would be placed in the Trust companies as savings deposits in March, so that they would be free from taxation when the assessors came around. Then in June the funds would be withdrawn. He tried to have the bill go into effect this year but did not succeed, but it will go into effect next year. Another instance to show that he was not a corporation man was in his opposing the merger of the New Haven and Boston & Maine, which he opposed and the Lynn track depression bill.

Of the eleven labor measures in the last legislature he had voted for five and against two. He did so because he thought he was right. He had no apology to make for any of his votes. He then briefly referred to the redistricting of the state of which committee he was a member. Quincy wanted to be in another district and he thought that it should be. He believed that Norfolk county should be one district. Quincy is now in a favorable position to get the results it desires in this matter.

Speaking of Gov. Foss he said that he claimed credit for everything. If he got it, he should be entitled to the credit but if he did not he should be defeated for false statements. Eleven out of the 21 matters which he claims were in his inaugural were not there at all.

In closing he spoke a good word for the conscientious work of Representatives Thomas and Langelier and he was sure that no mistake would be made in electing Mr. Piper. He was absolutely honest, and he hoped that he would be elected next Tuesday.

13-15 GRANITE STREET, QUINCY

AS each day of our progress upward shows itself, the worth of the suits we are selling becomes more and more in evidence. (This is not an opinion arrived at in our own conceit, that might be biased.) It's the verdict of the men—men who know value—who know quality—who can tell perfect fitting garments as apart from the merely fair.

Therefore today we offer unapproachable suits for the nobby dressing young man or the more conservative fellow further along in years—and every suit will beget your confidence and hold it.

The mother with a growing boy, a boy that is full of life-doesn't want to pay all "out doors" for a suit, but every mother wants her boy to dress well. Here we protect her purse. Low rent and small expenses gives us an advantage in making low prices.

NANCY WATERHOUSE.

Quincy has lost another of its venerable women in the passing on of Mrs. Nancy Waterhouse, widow of Cyrus Waterhouse, at her home in Newbury avenue, Atlantic, on October the 24th at the age of eighty-eight years, five months.

Mrs. Waterhouse was a resident of Atlantic for nearly forty years, and saw North Quincy grow from a region known as "The Farms," to its present status as a thickly-settled portion of Greater Boston.

She survived her husband twenty years, and during all that time made a home for an unmarried son. She was justly proud of this domestic accomplishment at the age of nearly four-score years and ten.

Her sterling character, together with her simplicity and sincerity of manner, and above all, her gentle sweetness, won for her many friends and have rendered mourners indeed, her son, Seth Waterhouse, a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ida Waterhouse, widow of Gilbert Austin Waterhouse, and a grand-daughter, Miss Lillian Waterhouse, all of Quincy.

Funeral services, conducted by the Rev. Clarence Lathbury, of Elmwood Mass., were held Thursday afternoon at her late residence. Interment was in the family lot at Mount Wollaston.

Mrs. Waterhouse had lived to be the "last leaf on the tree" of her own generation, but of her many friends of a later generation, "none knew her but to love her."

MRS. MARCUS E. WIGHT.

Mrs. Emma Frances, wife of Mr. Marcus E. Wight of Quincy Point died very suddenly on Thursday evening Nov. 2, from heart disease.

Mrs. Wight, together with members of the Ladies Aid society of the Washington street Congregational church attended the "all day sew" held at the home of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Marcus S. Wight of Stewart street, on that day. She remained to take dinner with her son and his wife, who afterwards accompanied her home. When near the house she commenced to feel ill, but thought it only a momentary distress. She expired in about twenty minutes after her arrival medical aid proving unavailing.

HAS HOUGHS NECK SEPARATION SCHEME "FIZZLED OUT?"

Usual Ardor Not Shown At Saturday Night's Meeting In Pandora Hall

Will Meet Again When Thought Advisable

The third weekly meeting for the purpose of devising means to be adopted in order to have Houghs Neck separated from Quincy, was held last Saturday evening in Pandora hall, and was attended by just thirty male residents of the popular beach resort. Oliver G. Fosdick presided and in the absence of secretary Walter H. Buchan, John P. Moses was chosen to act in that capacity.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read and approved, a discussion on the matter was then in order. The first speaker was John P. Moses, one of the prime movers of the idea. He produced a number of figures, data and statistics regarding the matter and cited instances of 15 towns, which were not greater in area than Houghs Neck, and which were at the present in a most flourishing condition.

Mr. Moses said that in each one of the towns he named the same relative amount of taxes was accumulated as was forthcoming to the city of Quincy from the Houghs Neck residents. He concluded by stating that a township could be supported on a yearly disbursement of $26,000. He cited the town of Dover, Mass., which he claimed was no larger than Houghs Neck and which was enjoying a tax rate of but $4 per thousand.

Matthew J. Connors spoke in advocacy of the movement and related the progress which was being met with the petitions that were in circulation. He said that a number were enrolling themselves in the cause each day and that he expected to be able to have a petition asking for separation ready for the incoming legislature at an early date.

Harry Pennington, a candidate for council from Ward One was asked to give his opinion on the matter, but as before, he declined to have anything to say until he had given the matter due consideration. Olof Blomquist also desired further time to consider the matter before rendering an opinion. Edward B. Warren was the last speaker and he dwelt at length on the benefits that could be derived in the event of the people of Houghs Neck establishing themselves into a separate township.

The meeting adjourned early on the suggestion of the chairman and it was decided not to hold any further meetings until such were deemed suitable.

MAN IS OVERCOME IN MANHOLE

Escaping Gas Causes Mishap Near City Square

SOON REVIVED

Stephen Hollis, an employe of the Telephone Co., was overcome by gas this noon while at work in a telephone manhole near Shaw's furniture store. The man had just entered hole when he fell over. Fellow workmen took him into the residence of City Physician, Dr. Hallowell, near by, where he was revived and then sent to his home in Cambridge.

It is not known whether it was sewer or illuminating gas that was the cause of the mishap.

INSPECTOR BACK WITH PRISONER

Inspector A. W. Goodhue arrived from Niagara Falls, Sunday, having in custody Domenico DiRamo who was wanted by the Quincy police for the larceny of $100 from Amaldo DiNicola, a Canal street banker. DiNicola who runs a small bank for the accommodation of some of the Italian residents, sent DiRamo to Boston last September with $100 to deposit in a Boston Italian bank. He failed to deposit the money and did not come back. He was traced to Buffalo, N. Y., and then to Niagara Falls where he was arrested last week. He was arraigned in court this morning.

MERELY A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

FAINT HEARTS IN QUINCY SAYS MACKAY

Replying to a letter sent to this city by Charles S. Baxter of the Republican State Committee asking for confidential information regarding the probable outcome of the vote here Tuesday, John D. Mackay sent back word today that the general sentiment in Quincy is against Foss and that the regular Republicans will vote for Frothingham, but will not exert themselves greatly to make converts. Mr. Mackay is a Republican and he says in his letter that Quincy will go for Frothingham by a substantial plurality. Continuing, he says:

"I read with interest your assertion that all his committees' are working for the election of Mr. Frothingham. There is at least one exception—the City Committee of Quincy. This organization is in bad shape, physically and mentally.

It has been suffering from hypochondria and general debility for taree years or more and hasn't yet sufficiently recovered to make much of a fight for anybody. Last year it came near letting the Mayoralty go to the Democrats by default. This year, beyond bringing about a so-called rally, it has done virtually nothing. The members are not actively at work. It is alleged the committee contains trimmers and self-seekers. As to that I don't know, but I do know it contains faint hearts in plenty. The foregoing are facts, Mr. Baxter. I care not what others may tell you."

WILL CONSIDER WIDENING OF HANCOCK ST.

A number of important matters are to come up before the City Council meeting at the session tonight. Among the matters is a public hearing on the widening of Hancock street near the Stetson property, adjoining the Ledger office. At the recent hearing held on the widening of Hancock street this small section was not included. The committee after reviewing the street believed that this piece should be included and for this reason a hearing will be held.

In addition to this there will be a number of committee reports. There are also several matters of importance on the table which may be taken up. One of these is the order appropriating $2,500 for the replanking of Neponset bridge.

ASSUMES CHARGE.

Rev. Paul Hallin of the Iowa Missionary field, who has recently accepted a call to become the pastor of the Swedish Baptist church, succeeding Rev. A. P. Hanson, who resigned, assumed his new charge Sunday. His sermon for the morning was "Working together."

LANGELIER REPLIES TO MACKAY

"My attention, just having been called to Mr. Mackay's statement criticizing the Republican city committee for its lack of effort in the present campaign, I would merely say that so far as I have any knowledge, Mr. Mackay has offered neither his time nor his financial assistance. He evidently has not kept in close touch with the work of the committee and does not know the large number of neighborhood rallies that have been held and other effective work that has been done in the interest of all the Republican candidates, from the top to the bottom of the ticket. I am afraid that Mr. Mackay is afflicted with a weakness that troubles most of our reformers, who feel that their responsibilities for the better citizenship in a community, end with newspaper criticism over their own signatures. I am usually somewhat averse to rushing into print, to reply to such articles, but I feel that in justice to the members of the committee who have put in time and energy and given what financial assistance they could to the work of the committee the last four or five weeks, I should accede to your request for an interview in reply to his letter."

BRIEFS

G. F. Whitcomb has severed his connection with the Hancock market.

The City Messenger is busy today getting the polling booths ready for the election tomorrow.

The second lot of official ballots arrived at the City Clerk's office this morning.

Sunday was an ideal fall day and we will indeed be fortunate if we get many more of them before snow flies.

Miss Isabella G. Steenstra of Cambridge was the week end guest of her brother Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra and Mrs. Steenstra at the rectory.

There is an unusual large amount of building in progress on Edgmere road and in that section bounded by Butler road, Putnam street and Park lane.

Robert T. Johnson of Maple street has purchased a seven seated touring car and with a party of friends has gone on a gunning trip to New Hampshire.

Several members of Maple lodge, K. and L. of H. will accompany D. D. G. P. Mrs. Rose A. Reed on a visit to Equity lodge, Malta hall, Cambridge this evening.

There seems to be a general opinion that after the municipal caucuses Nov. 14, an independent Democratic candidate will appear in the field. Just who he will be has not been mentioned.

A meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association will be held in the Cranch school on Tuesday evening, November 7, at eight o'clock. The Young Women's club of Quincy will present a play—"Love and a Way."

WHICH WAY WILL THE WIND BLOW?

WALTER E. PIPER.

Republican candidate for Representative from the Fifth district says everything looks very flattering for a Republican victory in Quincy tomorrow. Although the city went for Foss last year there has been a great change of feeling and this year the city will give a plurality for Frothingham. He also believes that the city will overturn its vote of last year and give Barnes a majority for Senator. Speaking of the representative contest Mr. Piper said that he did not have any doubt of the outcome and that both of the Republican candidates would be elected.

REDNOR P. COOMBS.

Democratic candidate for senator when asked for his opinion on the outcome of the local contest tomorrow, said that he did not care to give an opinion, as he thought that it would be better forthose not candidates to give their views.

L. F. R. LANGELIER.

The Republicans have worked hard this fall to arouse latent enthusiasm and we have attended to registration with these local fights in mind, so that I think Quincy's vote will be fully up to last year's figures.

JOHN D. SMITH.

The Democratic plurality of last year in this city will be bettered next Tuesday and Gov. Foss will go out of the city with 2,600 votes to 2,450 for Mr. Frothingham. In the state at large Foss will win by 40,000 votes.

JOHN J. McDEVITT.

"Judging from the assurances I have received and the many unbiased voters who have enrolled themselves in my cause, I feel confident that I will be adjudged the next representative of the sixth Norfolk district, when the ballots are counted tomorrow evening. I have presented my case to the voters of the district fairly and honestly and I am of the opinion that they will reciprocate in a fitting manner."

MICHAEL T. SULLIVAN.

"My third attempt, I feel, is going to be a successful one and I expect to be pronounced a winner."

S. & H. HUSTLERS' CONTEST.

Owing to the large number of votes registered since Friday up to the close at 8.30 o'clock this morning, in the Hustler's contest, we are unable to publish the winners in today's Ledger. To make sure of the standing and date of awards we have been authorized to state that a full report will appear in the Ledger next Thursday.

SUCCESSFUL OPENING.

Madam C. Louise Tyler, opened her modiste parlors, in the Johnson building Saturday evening, with a large response to the invitations sent out through the columns of the Ledger. Madam Tyler told a Ledger reporter that over 75 people called, among whom were many of Quincy's leading ladies.

Several McDowell models were shown and orders taken for December delivery. The parlors were tastefully arranged to attract the feminine eyes, and during the evening, coffee and cakes were served.

—Seventy million dollar improvements in contemplation for Greater Boston. Whew! that sounds big, but Boston has got the harbor, and all it needs is development to make it the most famous port on the Atlantic coast. It is coming, too, if the farsighted policy of those who look into the future with a prophetic eye can prevail. We are already a suburb of Boston, who knows but that we may be a part of the real thing in the next generation.—Rockland Standard.

DEMOCRATS ENTHUSE AT SATURDAY NIGHT'S RALLY

Candidate McDevitt Says That He Would Be Guided By His Constituents In Voting For Redistricting

Big Crowd Listens Intently To All Speakers

The last local rally, in the interest of the entire Democratic state ticket, for the present year, was held in the open air last Saturday evening at the corner of Chestnut and Hancock streets and was attended by hundreds of voters. It was at first thought that Governor Foss and others who are seeking the higher state offices, would be present, but they were prevented from being in attendance because of the fact that they were detained in other sections of the state and the rally was brought to a close shortly after ten o'clock.

The places of the well known speakers, were filled by the local candidates and members of the Democratic party who spoke in their welfare. Councilman John D. Smith, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, called the meeting to order shortly after eight o'clock. He made his remarks very brief outlining the policies that had been adopted on the Democratic side in the campaign and finally predicting the election of Foss by a substantial majority. He then went on to say a few words in behalf of the local candidates and concluded by introducing William Kelly, the labor agitator, as chairman of the evening.

Mr. Kelly is one of the most prominent labor leaders in local circles and has frequently played an important part in campaigns that have shown the welfare of the laboring class to be at stake.

He began his few introductory remarks by stating the position occupied by the laboring man in this campaign. He produced evidences whereby he was enabled to prove that Governor Foss has been one of the best upholders of labor measures, who ever occupied the position of chief executive of this Commonwealth. He then went on to score Senator Barnes for his hostile attitude towards the different matters of labor legislation that came up before the senate during the past year.

Chairman Kelly gave the reasons why the local labor organizations had denounced Senator Barnes and was strenuously opposed to his re-election. He praised the record of Rednor P. Coombs, while he was a member of the legislature from the sixth Norfolk district and said that the present senatorial incumbent, during the short space of one year, had without doubt established the worst record of any member in either branch of the legislature.

He cited the bills that Senator Barnes had opposed and gave the instance where he had registered his protest against the eight hour bill.

He then went on to say a few words for the representative candidates and said that the election of Mr. Sullivan and Mr. McDevitt would be only fitting tributes to men who have well shown themselves to be worthy of the honor. He said that Mr. Sullivan was born and reared here in Quincy and had always confined his business to local confines, even though he could have bettered himself by accepting positions in other parts of the state. In commenting upon the McDevitt-Leslie struggle, he showed where the former had always worked in the interest of the workingmen and where the latter had retarded the progress of the same call by voting against a certain measure that had received the hearty indorsement of the citizens of Quincy. He said that Mr. Leslie in his speeches was posing as a friend of the working people and the members of organized labor, and fallen short in this respect by failing to have the union label placed upon his circulars upon his campaign literature and upon his rally advertisements.

He drew his remarks to a close by introducing Rednor P. Coombs, who was heralded as the next Senator from the first Norfolk district. Mr. Coombs seemed to be alert to the situation as never before and lost no time in launching forth in a strenuous tone against his opponent.

Mr. Coombs not only criticized the record of Senator Barnes during the past year, but he also read from a copy of the House Journal, the record of the present senatorial incumbent as a member of the House from Weymouth. He named the day and date upon which Senator Barnes had voted against the eight hour bill, and he urged all who desired to be assured of the truth of that statement to look up the record and see for themselves. He also took senator Barnes to task for voting against the bill to have street railway cars equipped with lifting jacks, and told of the occasions where a couple of lives, right here in Quincy, could have been saved had this bill been in effect. He said that Senator Barnes had voted against the 9 hour in 11 for street railway men. He gave Senator Barnes' own reason for voting against this bill, namely that he had been asked by a number of railway men, whose petitions he now has in his possession, to vote against the bill. Mr. Coombs said that he had challenged Senator Barnes to produce those petitions and asserted that the people will have to be shown them in order to be convinced without a doubt. He said that he doubted very much if those petitions had come from the working men themselves.

Mr. Coombs said that Senator Barnes was placing great confidence in his re-election on the strength of an endorsement in the Ledger, signed by the two present representatives, William R. Thomas and Louis F. R. Langelier. In commenting upon this action, Mr. Coombs asked the people to look over teh records of the men who had issued the indorsement and challenged any one present to show where they could be commended for their actions while in the legislature.

ANNUAL DANCE OF ATLANTIC BASEBALL TEAM

Will Be Held This Evening In Alpha Hall

McDEVITT TO SPEAK

Alpha Hall bids fair to be the scene of a very large and happy gathering this evening on the occasion of the annual dance of the Atlantic baseball team. The affair this year is to be all the more prominent because of the fact that the Atlantics won the championship of the city and on that account scores of fans who frequented the game this season will be in attendance.

Many novel features will be introduced, one of which is termed the championship glide. Music will be furnished by a five piece orchestra and dancing will be enjoyed until midnight. Many city officials and others prominent in public life, have accepted invitations to be present and of these the principal guest will be John J. McDevitt, who expects to conclude his speechmaking for representative honors from the sixth Norfolk district at this evening's event.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

While the Educational committee of the Young Men's Christian association has seemingly been slow in accomplishing their work, still they feel the conditions confronting them made it necessary to consider the matter very carefully. At a meeting held Friday evening they decided to offer, at the start, two courses, mechanical drawing and a course for monumental workers.

The matter of securing a teacher is always the difficult part of the task. In this they feel they have been fortunate. For the class in mechanical drawing they have secured John Winslow of the Fore River Company, who is a graduate of Cornell. He has had experience in teaching as well as the practical experience of drawing. From present indications this will be a large class. For this reason anyone desiring to get into the class will do well to make application at once.

Owing to the fact Quincy is an important center of the stone work of the country, it is important that the needs of the men in this industry be considered. The committee has given much time to this need. It is of course true that a class has been conducted for a number of years in studies that applied to this branch. For a number of years however it has been difficult to secure the man to teach the class that was desired. To this task the committee set themselves this year. It is a well known fact in the granite industry that the best workmen come from Italy for the reason they get a thorough training here. With a hope of beginning to supply this lack they have secured Hugh Cairns, the noted sculptor of Boston to instruct the class. In 1903 Mr. Cairns began the first class of the kind that had ever been organized in this country. Previous to this Mr. Cairns taught a class in Glasgow. Mr. Cairns has executed some noted commissions in this part of the country as well as in the West. He was the sculptor of the Trinity church statuary, of the State House annex together with a number of other important commissions. The same is true of this class as in the mechanical drawing class that is that those who desire to take the course must speak quickly as the number of pupils that can be taken is limited. Already there are prospects of students from Boston who know of Mr. Cairns' work and want to study with him. Printed matter regarding both classes can be had at the office of the Association, within a few days. This will give details regarding course, conditions and the like.

Friday evening Nov. 10, there will be a meeting of all students of both classes together with the teachers. At this time it is hoped that every student will be present to learn just what tools and the like will be required. The regular study will be begun the week of the 13th.

FLIES ACROSS THE COUNTRY

Rodgers Completes Trip From Atlantic to the Pacific

DELAYED BY THREE WRECKS

Aviator Is Undaunted, However, and Continues Flight After Time Limit on Prize Expires—Actual Flying Time For Distance of 4231 Miles Is Eighty-Two Hours and Four Minutes, Establishing New Record

Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 6.—Aviator Calbraith P. Rodgers, who started on a prize trans-continental flight from New York Sept. 17, virtually finished his journey here Sunday, soaring into Pasadena at 4:04 p. m., an in so doing broke all records for distance. He made the twenty-mile trip to Long Beach, ending on the ocean's edge, today.

Although the flight consumed forty-nine days, Rodgers' flying time was only 82 hours 4 minutes, the distance being 4231 miles.

The plucky aviator was delayed by three wrecks, necessitating practically the rebuilding of his machine each time, before he reached Chicago, and when he arrived at Kansas City it was announced that the time limit on the prize had expired.

Undismayed, he determined to finish the flight, and kept to his schedule with remarkable regularity, crossing the continental divide in Arizona with ease and reaching Pasadena a short time later.

Rodgers' performance is one of the greatest achievements ever accomplished by any aviator, irrespective of the fact that a new world's record was established.

He demonstrated that cross country flights of practically any length are possible, that the strain on the aviator is not as great as in exhibition work and that weather is of but small importance in aeroplane travel.

In the last three weeks Rodgers flew every day but five, on three of which he was held up for repairs, one for a Texas norther and one that was devoted to rest. Stormy weather was responsible for the loss of only two day throughout the entire trip.

Rodgers was twenty-one days in reaching Chicago, less than one-third of the entire distance, the remainder being covered in twenty-seven days.

When Rodgers arrived at Kansas City he was informed that the time limit on the prize had expired. This, together with the many mishaps which had befallen him, would have discouraged an ordinary man, but Rodgers signified his intention of finishing the trip.

His actual flying time was much better than that of the fastest New York to Los Angeles limited train, which consumes over four days in the trip.

SUICIDE BY STARVATION

Family of Three Carry Out Pact of Own Religious Creed

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Details of a ghastly agreement involving the suicide of a whole family were brought out by the police upon the discovery of the emaciated forms of Herman Letsch, his wife, Anna, and their 12-year-old son. All had been dead several days.

Being followers of a religious creed, self-promulgated, the parents forced themselves and their son to do without food to "purge their sinful souls of lust" until starvation wiped out the family. From physicians' examinations it was evident that the boy was the first to die.

A long and rambling letter criticised the churches and church people and named a Chicago church and pastor.

Washington, Nov. 6.—Unless President Taft commutes the death sentence hanging over Mattie Lomax, who killed her husband, she will be executed on Nov. 20, the court of appeals having affirmed the judgment of the lower court and dismissed the appeal filed in behalf of the condemned woman.

Attorneys for Mattie Lomax say they will at once prepare an appeal to President Taft to commute the death sentence. Physicians at the jail say the woman is dying of tuberculosis.

Navy Embezzlers Convicted

MINISTER STANDS PAT

Preaches Sermon From Bed In Church Where Trouble Exists

Denver, Nov. 6.—Rev. Walter Rudolph, pastor of the United Presbyterian church here, severely injured in a factional fight in his church a few nights ago, delivered a sermon from the bed on which he is confined, while members of his flock, representing his following from the congregation, knelt or stood about his bedside.

Mr. Rudolph occupies a living room in the rear part of the church and refuses to leave the place to go to a hospital, fearing that should he give up possession of the church the opposing faction would immediately take charge.

The trouble is the culmination of a long fight between one faction opposed to the pastor and the pastor's followers, the climax coming when a movement to evict the pastor and take possession of the church was made.

WANTS TO BE GUEST OF COUNTY SHERIFF

Bank Cashier Thinks He Is Much Safer In Jail

Rochester Ind., Nov. 6.—After state bank examiners had closed the Citizens' bank at Akron and had announced that its funds were short about $35,000, Howard Harter, the bank's cashier, came here and obtained the sheriff's permission to stay in the county jail until inquiry into the institution's affairs has proceeded further.

Harter, who is a son of the president of the bank, is 28 years old. He refused to make a statement other than to say that he knew public sentiment in Akron would be against him, and that he wished to be a guest of the sheriff for a time.

The younger Harter had been cashier of the bank since its organization seven years ago.

Mrs. Vermilya Fails In Attempt at Suicide by Poison

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Mrs. Louise Vermilya, accused of the murder by poison of Arthur Bissonette and under investigation concerning the successive deaths of eight other persons, is pronounced as probably recovering from her attempt to end her life by poison.

Energetic methods to counteract the effects of arsenic, which Mrs. Vermilya contrived to mingle with her food in the presence of her guards, will probably be successful, her physicians say.

Though in a condition bordering on nervous collapse the accused woman is pronounced in fair physical condition.

British Railway Employee's Side of Their Troubles.

UNDERPAID AND OVERWORKED

While Roads Declare Enormous Dividends—Pension Fund Really a Source of Income to Employers and of Little Benefit to Men.

A few thousand shareholders in the railroads of Great Britain divide among themselves each year the enormous sum of $215,000,000. There are fifty-one highly paid managers, who receive salaries of $1,155 per week. One general manager who directs a small Scottish line gets $25,000 a year.

Now, as an offset to these high priced people there are 150,000 employees whose average wage is less than $5 per week, while another 350,000 average $5.60 per week. Altogether there are about 534,000 employees in these low earning positions.

When a previous strike was threatened evidence was given before the labor commission that many employees worked seventy hours per week for $3.36. The railway workers get less wages per man than any other trade in England.

The following statement was made by an employee of a British railway and throws considerable light on the recent strike situation and recites in part the grievances behind the present industrial upheaval in the United Kingdom:

At the Beginning.

"I began life in a signal box as a lad, earning $1.50 per week. Every other Sunday I had to work for nothing. I suppose it was because I was only a boy and couldn't help myself. At the same time if my time was worth anything it ought to have been paid for.

"When I was old enough to handle baggage and do the work of a porter around the stations I got 50 cents more a week for two years and then I was raised to $2.50 per week. Though doing a grown man's work, I only got $2.50 per week for two years, because there is a rule by which one cannot get more than this sum until one is eighteen years old, no matter what work he does.

"Besides doing portering, I had to do 'fogging,' or putting fog signals on the track when required. This work is very dangerous, but we get no extra pay for it whatever. Sometimes after a full ten hour day portering, or pulling about heavy baggage, I have to go on 'fog duty' nearly all night, especially in December, when we have those heavy fogs. The railway gives us no extra pay for this, but allows us 12 cents' worth of 'grub.' They would not have allowed us the 12 cents' worth of 'grub' only the men used to get so hungry they would quit work to get food, and that endangered the lives of passengers. So the company gave us the allowance of actual food, but no increase of money.

"For our first twelve hours' work of 'fogging' we get, as I said, 12 cents' worth of 'grub.' If our work lasts longer than twelve hours we get another 18 cents—in 'grub,' not money. Working all day as a parcel porter and then working all night at 'fogging' is pretty rough. It is a wonder more trains don't go to smash, the men are often so exhausted and sleepy. Some of the men meet with accidents at times because they get too tired to look sharp every instant.

Wages $5.28 a Week.

"My wages are now 22 shillings ($5.28) per week, out of which the company each week takes 18 cents for what it calls 'provident and pension.' That is to give us a pension after we get to sixty-five years. But, let me tell you, mighty few of us live that long. If you leave the company after paying into this fund for ten years you don't get a cent back. It is all velvet to them. Every single man—married ones, too—must pay into this fund. The company must get a snug little sum, considering that so few reach the pension age.

"As a mere porter and without fogging I work ten full hours a day and often have extra work at night. For the night work all the extra pay I get is 44 cents. I have often worked from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. and then right on to 3 a. m. next morning, just getting this 44 cents and no more.

"The company allows us no time for food, so we have to snatch it when we get a chance. This means doing heavy work often on insufficient food and sometimes without any at all. Some of this work is very dangerous, as we often have to get down on the tracks and shift parcels from one platform to another. Men are often killed by passing 'specials.' The parcels often weigh 150 to 200 pounds.

"I am married and support as best I can a wife and one child on $5.28 per week. Less 18 cents for 'provident and pension,' less $1.80 per week for two rooms for rent in a slum quarter, less, say, 32 cents for coal, leaves $2.98 for self, wife and baby."

French Workmen's Pension Law.

The French workmen's pension law calls for a contribution of about $1.60 a year by each beneficiary, an equal sum by his employer, and the state adds a third.

BODY EXHUMED.

The body of Nicholas Cassetto was exhumed Saturday from its resting place in potter's field at Weymouth Centre and the head removed to be prepared as an exhibit at the trial of his brother, Peter Cassetto on the charge of murder.

Peter is held in Dedham jail without bail, awaiting a hearing at Quincy, Nov. 18. His father is also held in the same jail as a witness. The charge is that Peter killed his younger brother on Oct. 1, in an altercation, by thrusting a fork through his right nostril.

The body of Nicholas was exhumed Friday by order of Dist. Atty Charles S. Barker of Brockton. In the afternoon an autopsy was performed by Medical Examiner George B. Magrath of Suffolk County and Medical Examiner John C. Fraser of Norfolk County.

Present at the autopsy were Dr. Joseph Chase of East Weymouth, State Detective John H. Scott, Chief of Police Thomas Fitzgerald, Inspector Patrick Butler and patrolman Arthur H. Pratt of the Weymouth Police.

VALUE OF LAUGHTER.

A famous doctor once said, "Encourage your child to be merry and to laugh aloud; a good, hearty laugh expands the chest and makes the blood bound merrily along. Commend me to a good laugh—not to a little sniggling laugh, but to one that will sound right through the house; it will not only do your child good, but will be a benefit to all who hear and be an important means of driving the blues away from a dwelling. Merriment is very catching and spreads in a remarkable manner, few being able to resist the contagion. A hearty laugh is delightful harmony; indeed, it is the best of all music."

—Georgia now has a "Bird day" for observance in the public schools. Like Arbor day, it is not a holiday, but is to be devoted to instruction on the life and usefulness of our common birds. Too much teaching of the wise providence of nature cannot be given. —Somerville Journal.

SAYS HE WILL WIN BY 50,000

Foss Expects to Be Re-elected to the Governorship

FROTHINGHAM IS CONFIDENT

Managers of Republican Candidate's Campaign Look For Plurality of 35,000—Say Democratic Vote In Boston Will Be Cut Down—Careful Bettors Not Waging Large Sums on Result of Election

Boston, Nov. 6.—On the last day of campaigning before the state election, candidates and their managers have given out figures on the result. That both sides are confident is shown by estimates given in figured statements.

Governor Foss declares that he will win by 50,000 and carry Boston by 30,000. Lieutenant Governor Frothingham says he will win by an overwhelming vote, carrying every county in the state except Suffolk.

Chairman McDonald of the Democratic state committee is sure that it is going to be another Democratic tidal wave. Foss' plurality, in his opinion, will be rising 50,000, and he is confident that the Democrats will make big gains in the legislature.

Alvin E. Bliss of Malden, chairman of the Republican legislative assistance committee, claims that the Republicans are sure of 162 house seats and that they have a good chance to win twenty-five more. Senator Pearson, chairman of the senate assistance committee, says that the Republicans will reduce the Democratic senatorial representation from twelve to ten and maybe to eight.

Chairman Hatfield of the Republican state committee predicts Frothingham will win by 35,000 plurality. Campaign Manager Baxter's figures outside Boston are 45,500, and he looks for at least 35,000 plurality in the state.

President Maynard of the Democratic city committee gave it out that Foss would be elected by a larger plurality than he had last year, claimed gains in the legislature and placed the governor's plurality in Boston at from 28,000 to 30,000.

President Hormel of the Republican city committee looks for a Frothingham landslide, and says that Foss' Boston plurality will be kept down to 10,000.

There is apparently so much uncertainty as to the outcome of the state election that no considerable amounts have been wagered up to date.

The betting in the downtown hotels and sporting resorts, where the careful bettors are wont to gather and discuss the sporting events of the day and to back their opinions with money, is at even money.

In fact, since the campaign began a month ago the betting has fluctuated in a most remarkable degree. Even such keen judges and close students as the professional betting men admit that they are at sea.

Three weeks ago, or a week after the campaign got under way, the casual observer of things political chose Frothingham as the next governor.

Since then Foss has "come strongly," to use his own expression. The men who like to gamble have slowly switched their allegiance to the present governor.

IN RHODE ISLAND

Republican Camp Appears More Sanguine Than Does Democratic

Providence, Nov. 6.—There is confidence in the camps of both Republicans and Democrats. The Republicans claim an overwhelming victory for the entire state ticket, headed by Governor Pothier, as well as the re-election of Mayor Fletcher and the election of a senator and an increased majority of the twenty-five representatives from this city.

A "very handsome plurality" is claimed by the Democrats for Lewis A. Waterman, candidate for governor, but they are not so optimistic regarding the success of the other candidates.

ASK WRIT OF ERROR

Beattie's Lawyers Make a Move For a Stay of Execution

Richmond, Nov. 6.—Lawyers for Henry C. Beattie, Jr., under death sentence for the murder of his young wife, filed with the supreme court of appeals a petition for a writ of error.

This constitutes an appeal from the judgment of the court at Chesterfield, which sentenced Beattie to be electrocuted on Nov. 24. Unless the court gives a decision before the day set for Beattie's execution, this move will act as a stay.

Hub Hotels Refuse Bibles

Boston, Nov. 6.—Three of Boston's most prominent hotels have refused to allow the Gideon Bibles to be placed in the rooms of their buildings. Yesterday, at the mass meeting of the Gideons—the organization of traveling men—in Tremont Temple, prayers were offered for the managers of the institutions, although the organization did not name them.

PRINCETON, 8 TO 6

Defeat of Harvard at Football Comes as Big Surprise

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 6.—Princeton defeated Harvard in the first real football battle of the year, 8 to 6. It proved to be a battle royal from start to finish.

The defeat came as a great blow to Harvard supporters. Harvard came to Princeton the big favorite and during part of the game showed a better knowledge of football than their rivals.

Captain Hart was a bullwark of defense and he seemed to be all over the field. It was chiefly because of him that the Harvard offense failed to work the way it had in previous games of this season.

The game was clean and peculiarly free from penalties, although both sides lost some ground because of illegal playing.

FATHER SHERMAN IN A SANATORIUM

Noted Jesuit Is Committed at Request of Relative

Boston, Nov. 6.—Rev. Thomas E. Sherman, S. J., son of the late General William T. Sherman, was committed to Dr. Stedman's sanatorium, the commitment papers being signed by Judge Charles F. Perkins of the Brookline municipal court. The commitment was requested by a relative and two physicians.

Fr. Sherman was born in San Francisco, Oct. 12, 1856. He received his A. B. at Georgetown university in 1874. Two years later he won the degree of B. S. at Yale, and received an LL. B. at Washington university at St. Louis, in 1878. He studied theology at Woodstock college in Maryland for six years and was ordained in 1889. He conducted the burial service at General Sherman's funeral.

TO VOTE ON ARBITRATION

Lynn Shoe Cutters Will Decide Whether It Is Acceptable

Lynn, Mass., Nov. 6.—A mass meeting will be held tonight by the cutters in the shoe shops to decide if it is the wish of the majority to promise to abide by the decision of the arbitration board to be selected by Mayor Connery.

Since last Tuesday the cutters have been back at work under a temporary scale.

The men went back to work pending Connery's choice of an arbitration board to settle the differences between workmen and employers. Connery, on account of the announced mass meeting, will reserve his selection until Wednesday night.

TRAINING IN STONE INDUSTRY.

A new effort in industrial education is to be attempted along lines that make it particularly interesting to those in the great stone industry. The Wentworth institute is ready to begin work in Boston, furnishing practical education in mechanic arts, with a specialty in carpentry and building. Arnoch Wentworth, former owner of one of the largest marble industries in the United States, became interested in practical education and at his death bequeathed the sum of $3,500,000 to build an institution that should carry out his ideas.

A corporation was formed in 1904 and the purpose to which this school was to be put is found in Mr. Wentworth's own words, "education in mechanic arts." Wishing to leave the principal of the endowment unimpaired, the trustees waited until last last October before breaking ground for the erection of the buildings, and in this way have utilized only the income from Mr. Wentworth's legacy. The site is on Huntington avenue, opposite the Boston museum of fine arts, and near several large factories which will be open to the student for practical observation.

The prospectus of the institution announces that courses will be given in architectural drafting and the reading of blue prints and plans. It is most sincerely to be hoped that close study will be given to plans for stone construction and to elementary practice in the laying out of stonework. We are constantly receiving evidences of a demand for instruction in these lines Hardly a week goes by that we do not receive inquiries as to where information can be had on stone construction from some stone cutter who wishes to rise above the banker and chisel. All we can do is to refer these people to the various handbooks, which are very confusing to beginners and cannot at all replace verbal instruction. A well equipped institution that would provide a complete course in stone working without too great expense would be of great advantage to the stone industry. In view of the founder's long connection with the marble trade, it would seem particularly fitting that Wentworth institute should be the first to take this matter up. We commend this to the earnest consideration of the directors.—From "Stone."

FORESTS PAY CITY'S TAJES.

San Diego, in the extreme southwestern corner of Uncle Sam's dominions, is the first of American cities to inaugurate a great forestry enterprise, in the expectation of speedily lessening the burden of taxation borne by its citizens, and, possibly, of ultimately relieving them of all tax levies for the support of the city government.

As a heritage from the days when San Diego was a Mexican pueblo, the city owns 7,000 acres of land, which, up to the present time, has been unproductive.

On account of the rapid growth for which the various species of eucalypti are remarkable, and the great value of the timber as a substitute for oak, hickory, and the other common hardwoods, these are the trees that are being most largely planted. Forty thousand seedlings of "cugar gum" —Eucalyptus corynocalyx—were purchased from nurserymen and set out in the spring of the present year. The Federal Bureau of Forestry, in official publications, discourages the expectation of extraordinary profits from Eucalyptus culture; but, on the other hand, the pioneers in Eucalyptus culture, who have been growing timber for profit for a quarter of a century or longer, exhibit statements of their business that seem of more practical value than any amount of theorizing. One conservative statement is given by the owner of a large Eucalyptus grove planted more than twenty-five years ago. He says that he harvests annually timber to the value of $350 from each acre, and that the timber remaining becomes of greater value each year, the natural growth of what is left more than compensating for what is cut. Groves of this kind will continue productive forever, with no diminution of the annual harvest, young trees springing up from the old stumps, or being replanted, so that the stand of timber is kept as heavy as the land is capable of supporting to the best advantage.

Let us grant the contention—although advocates of Eucalyptus culture will never do so—that San Diego can never approach the record referred to. Suppose that the city forest, 25 years old, can do only half as well, and can yield only $175 worth of timber to the acre. That means that the annual harvest from its 7,000 acres of pueblo lands—if all is devoted to forestry—will be $1,225,000. Allowing for all expenses, there will be left a profit that should go far towards reducing the burden of taxation now imposed upon the people of San Diego.—Technical World Magazine.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Politician and Suffragist Exchange Courtesies and Caramels—Courageous Woman Challenges Dr. Eliot's Opinion on "Votes for Women"—"Dental Research Society" Another One at Hub—It Was Made Possible through Harriett Lowell's Munificence—Should All Milk Be Pasteurized, Asks Expert—Alice Stone Blackwell Endows Convalescent's Home.

Alice Stone Blackwell again proves herself not only a suffragist but a philanthropist. Miss Blackwell, as was brought to light at the forty-ninth annual meeting of the New England Hospital for Women and Children, held on October 31st, has presented her home on Boutwell avenue, Dorchester, to the hospital for use as a convalescents' home. This gift is in the nature of a memorial to her parents, Henry B. and Lucy Stone Blackwell, and adds another to the already notable list of public benefactions and good works of this trio of suffrage leaders.

That even the milk from the "model" farms, subject to rigorous inspection and regulation, should be pasteurized, as well as all milk from miscellaneous sources, is a conclusion reached by Professor C. E. A. Winslow of New York in his investigation of the tonsilitis epidemic which occurred in Eastern Massachusetts last May. Professor Winslow's report has just been delivered before the Suffolk County Medical Association, and contains evidences of very thorough research. While the source of infection was traced directly to one large milk producing farm, there is no evidence that the infection of the milk was due to carelessness of management or to diseased cows, and Professor Winslow declares emphatically that the best care that is humanly possible is liable to failure in the long run unless pasteurization is made universal. The question as to what stand the state should take in regulating the production of milk was brought up at the meeting of the medical association. In this connection Professor Winslow maintained that if all milk were pasteurized much of the regulation and inspection now deemed necessary could be done away with, thus reducing the cost of this necessity to the ultimate consumer.

Simultaneously with the project of the Forsyth Dental Infirmary, now in process of construction in the Fenway, comes the formation of what is probably the first large society for dental laboratory research in this country—the Harriett N. Lowell society for Dental Research, whose membership is open to the faculty and students of the Harvard Dental School. Harriett Lowell was a level-headed business woman of the Hub who some years ago bequeathed a sum of money, the interest from which was to be divided between the medical and dental departments of Harvard for the purpose of research work. Under this bequest dental research has been going on for some time, the fundamental object being to render dentistry a preventive rather than curative profession. The formation of the Society for Dental Research has aroused much interest among professional circles, and it is expected to place the profession upon a higher plane in the mind of the layman while affording opportunities for investigation which will be of untold benefit to present and future generations. Every member is expected to devote a given time during his college course to research work on a given subject, thus bringing many branches of the profession under more careful study than has ever been possible. The first meeting of the Society is scheduled for early next month, it having been organized at the opening of the present school year, and it is expected that interesting results will be evident in even this short time.

What with preparation for the coming election activities, numerous current meetings at suffrage quarters and the interesting developments of the "heckling" campaign, the Boston newspapers have recently had plenty of subject matter of interest to suffragists and their friends. Miss Foley and her companions of the big automobile and yellow flag are reported to have completely won over the Democratic candidate for the Lieutenant-Governorship, David Walsh, with the result that exchanges of courtesies and caramels have been in order, to say nothing of the genial candidate having been given a lift by the "Votes for Women" auto when his own went wrong. The suffrage study class which holds frequent meetings at the headquarters in Boylston street is attracting both sympathizers and "antis," and at the most recent meeting a paper by Miss Alice Stone Blackwell was read, in which she took up every argument in the anti-suffrage platform. Mrs. Florence Kelley, secretary of the National Consumer's League courageously took the bull by the horns and within the sacred precincts of Harvard University itself declared to the assembled Harvard under-graduates and to Dr. Ernest Bernbaum that President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot is too distinctly of the old school to be open to conviction on the suffrage question—in other words she declared that he is miles behind the times. The annual convention of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association was opened on October 27 at the Boylston street headquarters, at which several interesting announcements were made and spirited speeches given. Mrs. Susan Fitzgerald, recently made recording secretary of the national suffrage association, presided at this convention, and told a number of amusing incidents connected with the convention at Louisville. It is the intention of the suffragists to have two members present at each polling booth in Boston on election day, to hand suffrage leaflets to the voters. In this way they expect to reach about 50,000 people. Other features of the annual convention in Boston were an address by Dr. Anna Shaw, re-elected president of the National Association, at Huntington Hall on October 28, a conference at the New England Women's club for the discussion of new types of work, a suffrage luncheon and an entertainment including a play and an illustrated lecture in the evening. Altogether the suffragists are a very busy aggregation of women these days.

A jury before whom the case was tried, disallowed that item of the bill. Possibly the jury may have been influenced by a desire to discourage the enterprising physician and preacher from adding the undertaking business to his other callings.—Milford Gazette.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

As they are having women's juries in California now, the defendant should beware how he appears in court without a biled shirt and well brushed hair.

The fact that so few of the states have elections this fall shows a condition of callous indifference toward the needs of our politicians' families for winter clothing.

The big trust magnates accept subpoena service much more meekly than of yore. It used to be the fashionable game to dodge Uncle Sam's men just as you would a book agent.

The elevation of Archbishop O'Connell to be a Cardinal is not only a high and well deserved honor to the gentleman himself but must be considered a compliment to the whole Boston diocese.

After seeing the butcher chop up his meat into the small pieces you can now buy for a quarter, we feel sure that he is the Greatest Common Divisor we used to study about in school.

As it will be for the benefit of all concerned to get a verdict in the Steel trust suit as quickly as possible, we hope the case is not postponed for a year every time one of the lawyers wants to take a vacation.

Mr. Taft is opposed to barbaric yells by college boys, but if they weren't allowed to rend holes in the air they'd probably tear down the college buildings, which would be more expensive.

Mr. Taft talked about "Peace and arbitration" to the Chicago Sunday Evening club, spite of the heart-felt desire of the audience to hear him discuss the reasons for the downfall of the New York Giants.

Wall street paid down its good money for Mr. Taft on representation that he would stand without hitching and was safe for any lady to drive. But here he goes tearing down the street, head in air, and colliding with the oil and steel and other wagons that own the highway.

The fight is nearly over. Some good work is being put forth today and there will be more tonight by Republicans and Democrats but practically it is over. Each party claims victory at the polls tomorrow but not until the votes are actually counted will either feel sure, so hot has been the contest this year.

POLITICAL SINCERITY.

President Taft has distressed his political allies and set a snicker going among his political enemies by remarks on this trip, which have been commonly construed as an admission that he and his party may encounter defeat.

In the state of New York, for instance, where the game of politics has been brought down to the technique of scholastic science, when the heelers bring in the sad news of party desertions on every hand, when darkness, doubt, and depression hang like a pall over the headquarters, the chieftains hand out the predictions of the usual 100,000 majority without batting an eyelash.

Of course sincerity has a value that the practical politician does not recognize. A representative to our legislature was once pushing a certain bill to get additional state aid for country schools. He was told that to get votes for his meritorious bill he must agree to support various jobs that other representatives were pushing. The politicians snickered when he told them that if that was the case, his bill was going to fail, because he should do no such thing.

The politicians were so amused at this ignorance of first principles of practical politics that they told the laughable story all over the House. The narration attracted the interest of some of the better men in the Legislature, and as a result they unexpectedly offered their help to push the bill, and it became a law, purely from their liking for the sincerity of the man who was pushing it.

But Mr. Taft's warmest friends will have to admit that he carries this principle too far. If a theatrical manager should say "We have an almighty good show tonight, but it looks as if there would be a poor house" the lines of his players would echo dismally over long rows of empty seats.

If the manager of an industrial enterprise told his workmen that a process ought to be performed in such and such a manner, but that he doubted if the men could do it, it would never be done. The man of leadership needs a supreme faith in the prevailing power of his leadership.

The school of practical politics has given this country a great deal of inefficient administration. But the practical politician learns some methods of dealing with human nature wherein Mr. Taft needs good advice.

TO COMPETE OR TO COMBINE?

The sensation in the business world, the government suit against the Steel trust, brings us squarely to confront an issue that goes to the bottom of all social organization. The tariff is comparatively a side show.

However one may look at competition, it is a principle that has brought the human race to its present state of evolution. Humanity arose from the lower orders of creation because there was a struggle for life. The survival of the fittest made each generation a little better than the one that preceded it.

The same principle is seen from infancy. A class of school boys will drone along half asleep at their books, until a prize is offered or some personal rivalry arises. Then they begin to dig.

A farmer once had no end of trouble to get his boys to work at clearing a field of stones. Then he set up a target at one end of the field, and offered prizes to the boy that would hit it the most times. The spirit of competition removed large areas of rocks with celerity.

The trouble with competition is that it so often works illogically. A manufacturer of stationery published an article in the Independent a few years ago, giving an intimate personal view of the way it often works.

He showed how a certain brand of ink, which costs 15 cents to the retailer, and usually sells for 25 cents, was sold by a certain New York department store for five cents.

Then he told how one day wanting a rug he went to that particular department store, and afterward to a rug store supposed to sell at high prices. The department store charged 25 per cent more for a certain grade of rugs than did the high priced rug store. The clever department store man was simply using his loss on ink to advertise his high priced rugs, and the Consumer may have been worse off.

On account of these conditions, so frequently discouraging to retail merchants, this manufacturer sent out circulars to the retailers using his goods, asking them if they would like to buy all their goods on a contract price cutting out all competition. Eighty seven per cent replied that they would like to do so.

But again, under such elimination of competition, retail business tends to dry rot. There is no incentive to improve methods.

Combinations and consolidations save waste. The essential question for the public, going down far into the selfishness of human nature, is this: Will the man who makes these saving give the public its fair share?

23,000 LIBRARIES.

When Andrew Carnegie stepped off the boat from Europe at a New York dock the other day, he made a remark to the reporters that will surprise many of us. It was to the effect that he had already given away from 22,000 to 23,000 libraries.

The old-fashioned library was such a book-wormy sort of an affair, that many of us have never realized what a tremendous influence Mr. Carnegie's favorite form of philanthropy may exercise over American life.

The old time library satisfied principally two classes of people. First, bookish persons of literary culture. Every village, no matter how many miles from a railroad, no matter how deeply submerged under the seas of bad grammar and illiteracy, has always had some persons whose minds drift naturally to the great classics, and who were forever delving among the dusty shelves.

After you have excluded volumes purchased for ornament that are never used, we have always believed you would find as many copies of Shakespeare that are actually read in the Kentucky mountains as on Fifth avenue.

From time immemorial, too, the library has catered to the demand for a "love story." The paler and more languishing the young person, the less likely the heart to stir the red tides of passion in the opposite sex, the keener the longing to sit in the theatre of love and see the part played by the heroes of fiction.

There we see the great fault of the old time library. It catered too much to passive bookishness. People were tempted away from the normal activities of life to sit languidly in the world of bookland, and watch the heroes of history and fiction play their parts.

Probably the majority of Mr. Carnegie's 23,000 collections represent a more modern aim. The present day library is more closely related to real life. It should cut out fully half of its fiction, and fill the shelves with the best technical literature of the industries of the town and surrounding country. It should make systematic plans to interest the farmer of every cross roads, the mechanic of every factory, and should never rest content until it has placed in their hands the best scientific information about their callings.

In so far as Mr. Carnegie's libraries are working along such lines, they are an educational force often more effective than the public schools.

COOMBS AT RALLY.

Rednor P. Coombs, the Democratic candidate for Senator addressed an open air rally in City Square Saturday night and took up the record of Senator Barnes and the claims made on his behalf by Thomas and Langelier. He said in part:

"In answer to the statement issued by Messrs. Thomas and Langelier, statesmen emeritus, and the claims of Mr. Barnes himself I want to call your attention to the fact that Senator Barnes received his salary for work done in the Senate. He also received additional compensation for his work on the "Redistricting Committee." Isn't it his sworn duty therefore to do the square thing by Quincy regardless of whether you vote for him again or not? Why does he try to hold the "redistricting" club over your heads to induce you to vote for him again? Isn't it really a bit of intimidation?

As to Mr. Barnes' chances of being elected President of the Senate, the proposition is simply silly, and Thomas and Langelier ought to be ashamed of themselves for holding out such an absolutely forlorn hope to the people of Quincy. Barnes is not the man who is being slated by the Republican machine for that job, and they know it. Why don't they confine themselves to sensible talk instead of that kind of bluff?

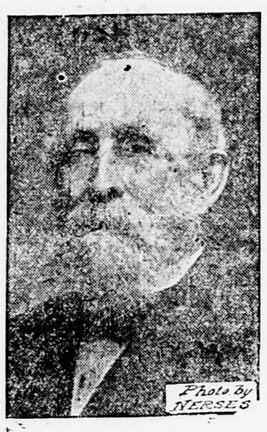

As for the record of Mr. Barnes it is such that he didn't dare publish it in this campaign. He was consistently against the passage of every progressive measure,—voting always for the special interests and against the interests of the masses.

He claims that he saved the city of Quincy thousands of dollars on the Back River bridge. Through the press of Weymouth he says he saved Weymouth thousands of dollars on the same deal. All things to all people! Whom did he soak? Did Thomas and Langelier do anything at all? If so, why do they ascribe all the honor and glory to Barnes on this bill?

If you elect me, I shall not have an eye to the Main Chance but my ambition will be to serve you fairly and without discrimination, and I assure you I shall court the fullest investigation of my attitude and vote on each and every measure."

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!

One of Quincy's widely known, and highly respected citizens is James T. Penniman, who has passed the four score and ten and is now nearing the century mark. Mr. Penniman was born in Braintree, of which Quincy was then a part in 1819. He is a son of Stephen and Relief Thayer Penniman, and is a direct descendant of James Penniman, the ancestor of the Penniman family in America, who was born in England, and who married Lydia Eliot, a sister of John Eliot, known as the Indian apostle who came over in the ship Lyon, in the sixteenth century and settled in Braintree. His grandfather was Major Stephen Penniman of Braintree who won destinction in the Revolutionary war.

At the age of 16 years, Mr. Penniman attended school, in the old stone building on School street, now occupied as police headquarters. Leaving scrool he learned the boot maker's business which he has directly or indirectly followed ever since. In 1844 he commenced business for himself, later forming a partnership with Ozias Pope under the firm name of Pope && Penniman. Four years later he withdrew from the firm and started business in Boston. Here he remained for 22 years, two years of this time being in business with Henry Anderson. In 1870 he returned to Quincy and entered business with John R. Graham now of Bangor, Me. This firm continued four years when Mr. Penniman withdrew from the firm and entered business with his son under the firm name of James H. Penniman & Son. This firm continues today.

During his younger days Mr. Penniman was a member of the fire department and at one time served as a district engineer. He is now one of its oldest living representatives having been connected with it for seventy years. He is one of the honored members of the Washington M. French Hose Association and of the Granite City club. As a token of the high regard in which his fellow members of the Granite City club hold him, he was presented with a gold headed cane on the ninetieth anniversary of his birth, in 1909.

Although he has reached a ripe old age, one to see him at his place of business, every day, would never for a moment realize it, for he is apparently as young and spry as a man of half his age. His eyesight is also remarkably good, it being seldom that he is obliged to resort to the use of glasses. He is of a type of business men of which Quincy can well feel proud.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor Ledger:

The enclosed two answers to the question sent by the Referendum Union of Quincy to candidates have just arrived. If you will kindly print them, as you did those previously handed to you, our organization and the reading public will appreciate the favor.

Levi H. Turner, Sec'y.

Mr. Levi H. Turner,
463 Hancock st., Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir—Replying to your letter concerning the initiative and referendum matter, I would say without going into the matter extensively, that I favor the referendum on all matters of public policy, such, for instance as questions involving a change in the government policy in the state, also on all questions imposing on the people any new form or system of government and also any new form or system of elections.

On business questions requiring the necessity of investigation or discussion in order to determine the right thing to do to meet the situation, I believe in a representative form of government, because by the interchanging of ideas and views, and debates concerning any particular question, I believe better results are obtained than by the use of the referendum.

Respectfully,

Quincy, Nov. 2, 1911.

Levi H. Turner,

Dear Sir:—You can rest assured that I will favor your petitions both by service and vote. Would have answered sooner, but was busy. I trust you will believe me to be,

Sincerely yours,

Q.—How could the repentant thief on the cross go to Paradise THAT DAY, with Jesus, when Jesus did not ascend to Heaven until forty days after his resurrection on the third day?

Answer.—The word "Paradise" signifies, "a delightful garden, park, or pleasure ground." The garden of Eden was the original Paradise, where man dwelt before disobeying the Divine command. Because of disobedience he lost this Paradise. (Genesis iii, 22-24.) When the race of mankind comes again into harmony with the Creator by becoming obedient to the Lord, the "earth will become as the Garden of Eden," and mankind will be restored to that Edenic condition. (Acts iii, 19-21; Ezekiel xxxvi, 35.) "The desert shall bloom and blossom as the rose and springs shall break forth in the wilderness, and the solitary place shall be glad for them—the happy world of mankind. (Isaiah xxxv.) Such conditions will take place when our Lord "comes into His kingdom." The thief asked to be remembered "when Thou comest into Thy kingdom," and our Lord will come into his Kingdom at his second coming. Our Lord did not go to Paradise that day, but went to the tomb, as the Scriptures declare, from which he was raised the third day. The passage with the punctuation properly made, placing the comma after the word "today," clears the matter up. "Verily I say unto thee today (now), thou shalt be with Me in Paradise"—at My second coming, when the Kingdom of heaven shall be established in the earth. Punctuation is a modern invention, dating from the year 1515 A. D. The comma was placed in the text by the translators under King James, and it is evident that they made the mistake of placing it before instead of after "today."

CALENDAR.

Publishers of The Youth's Companion as is their custom presents a beautiful calendar for 1912 to their subscribers this season. The cover picture reproduces a water-color painting of a bit of New England coast, giving a glimpse of breeze-swept ocean, of smiling sky, of warm, sunny rocks, which will come like a breath of salt air to those who have once lived near the sea and to those whose whole life has been passed inland. The picture being in eight colors, the tones of the original are faithfully reproduced.

HOW TOMMY HELPED.

Mr. Hinnery fixed up his new gramaphone, but nothing save a few heart-rending squeaks and passionate groans issued from the great brass instruments.

Mr. Hinnery looked foolish, but he poked away at the thing, and fumed and wondered whatever could have gone wrong with it.

"Perhaps, papa," ventured Thomas, "the old man down there hasn't digested his tea, yet."

"His tea, Thomas!" said Mr. Hinnery, "I don't understand you."

"Yes, dad," explained Thomas, "his tea. I thought the funny little man in that box must be geeting hungry, so I put some tea and cake down the trumpet for him to get on with, so's to be in good order for tonight."—Galveston News.

OLD WOMAN'S FANCY.

Lurana W. Sheldon.

Just a quaint, old-fashioned teapot
With a figure on its side
Of a quaint, old-fashioned woman, garbed, I fancy as a bride!

Just a quaint, old-fashioned fancy of a woman's thoughtful mind—
Was she really very happy or just patient and resigned?
Just a quaint, old-fashioned woman gazing at her teapot there
With time's shadows on her features and time's silver in her hair.

Was she truly, truly happy, this quaint bride of long ago?
Strange, indeed, that I should ask it—
trat I even wish to know!
Ah, my quiat, old-fashioned teapot little do you dream, my friend,
Of the solemn thoughts and fancies that your fading pictures lend!

Was she truly very happy, this quaint woman that I know?
Was she happy to be wedded on the day one gave her—you?

Howell—"Didn't you think it was a pretty glum crowd when you came into the room?"

Powell—"Yes; I imagined you had been telling one of your funny stories."

Howell—"I had just told them that you were coming."—Brooklyn Life.

HERMIT DEAD.

James W. Churchill, a famous hermit of Plymouth, Mass., died recently at the home where he had lived the life of a recluse for forty years. He was born in Plymouth eighty-three years ago and during his early life followed the sea. At the outbreak of the civil war he enlisted in the Ninety-ninth New York regiment, Company K, and besides serving in the army was for some time on board a man-of-war.

After coming home from the war he retired to the old homestead, where his hermit's life began. With his advancing years came a positive distrust of mankind. The old man died wealthy, although the exact amount of his fortune cannot be determined.

Across the road from his home is a small pond which contains goldfish, and the old man has always been a self constituted guardian of the pool.

Once he was found on the streets with his pockets stuffed with money and bills sticking from his belt, from the tops of his boots and various other parts of his clothing. He always carried a large roll with him, which he guarded with a loaded revolver.

—A young Harvard student gave up his sleeping car berth a few years ago while traveling from New York to Washington to an elderly lady, who otherwise would have had to ride in an ordinary passenger coach. It proved a good investment, for the lady paid for his education and now has left him heir to a fortune of $111,000.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Annouucemens For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

CHRIST CHURCH.

The regular services were held in Christ church yesterday as follows: 10.30 Holy Communion and sermon. 12.05 Sunday school and Galahad Brotherhood. 7.30 Choral evensong and address.

In the evening the fourth in a series of sermons on Confirmation was delivered by the rector, Rev. Richard E. Armstrong. The topic for discussion was "Prayer." He said in part as follows:

"In time of need we turn for help, first to our friends and then to God. The fulfillment of duty toward God and man is obtained by seeking in Prayer. Prayer is a necessity and an art. It may be likened to a weapon which we wield, or an instrument with which we struggle for goodness.

The highest form of prayer is converse with God, reverently and faithfully. In order to converse well we should have diligent thought. All prayers should be uttered reverently, God loves to hear our first prayers, even as our parents love to hear the first lispings of their children. We are all God's children. As we grow older, we ought to be able to present our prayers in language that is better and clearer. Very few are able to pray well. Even in adult life we use child-like prayers. We change in all other expressions but prayer, because we have not paid attention to the cultivation of this divine art.

How do we learn to pray? First, we learn out of books, because there are those who have lived their lives so perfectly that they have mastered the art of prayer and have set them down for us. There is danger in using written prayers, because our services become lisped and our prayers hurried.

We should use our own words and frame our own petitions, even though they seem unworthy in our eyes. Written prayers are best in public but the extemporary prayer should be used in private.

How often should we pray? We should pray at least twice a day, morning and evening, but better at morning, at evening and at noonday. The habit of prayer should be regular and it should be a daily practice, not only in time of distress or need.

What should we pray for? We should pray for everything, except what we know we should not have. That desire is wrong as we all know. We should go to God with all our needs, both of body and soul. The more we go to him the more pleased He is. He watches over us always. He never sleeps nor takes His life away from us. He is with us always, follows us everywhere, in joy or sorrow, life or death, even to eternity.

We should have prayer without ceasing, not only should we pray for ourselves but for our friends, pastor, missions, etc. The best form of prayer is for others without their knowledge.

There can be no spirituality without prayer. We should relate ourselves to our spiritual environments. Prayer is the key to the treasure house of God, by means of which we enter into his riches. We should open the windows of the soul and let the breath of the Holy Spirit play within them. In this way we are made strong."

The services for the week are as follows: Monday, 8.00 P. M. Men's club. Speaker James A. Burns. Tuesday, 3.45 P. M., Junior Auxiliary; 8.00 P. M., Galahad Brotherhood. Wednesday, 2.30 P. Rev. Carl G. Horst Sunday morning preached a stirring ante-election sermon from the text: "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's." He said: Every citizen should take a hearty interest in politics. No man can be a good Christian who is not a good citizen. The Christian is to be in the world, though not of the world. Politics means the relation of the citizen to the government. The duty of every citizen is (1) to vote; (2) to vote intelligently; (3) to vote not as a Protestant or a Catholic, an Irishman or a German, but as an American. What we want is Americans for America; (4) to obey the law of the state.

A time like our demands:
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and willing hands;
Men whom the lust for office does not Fill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor, men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking.

Misses Dorothy Atwood, Elizabeth Couch, Helen DeNormandie and Lorna Weston were the four young ladies who received the annual offering for the National Unitarian Sunday School society.

Services were held in the church on Sunday at the usual hours, a meeting of the Altar Guild being held in the rectory at 6.30 P. M.

There will be a meeting of the vestry on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock As business of importance is to be considered a full attendance is desired.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Woman's Guild will be held in the Parish rooms on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30. A regular meeting of the men's club will be held tonight at 8.

Success pronounced and satisfying describes the recent fair and every feature of it. Everything about it was a success and the best thing of all was the fine spirit of good-will exhibited everywhere. Everyone who helped did so in this spirit. President Fulton in behalf of the Woman's GGuild thanks all who assisted either by contributions, service, or patronage. As to proceeds a detailed statement will be made later. Something in the neighborhood of three hundred dollars was cleared however. The Autograph Quilt with nearly two hundred signatures worked upon it, which Mrs. F. A. Northrop has been at work upon all the fall, was presented by the Guild to Mrs. Stuenstra who desires to express her thanks and gratitude. The fact that many who worked hard for the fair are already speaking of future undertakings of like nature to be held at some future time is the best possible proof of the success of the undertaking just over.

Rev. Geo. F. Weld of Hingham led the conference of the Sunday school teachers held in the Rectory on Saturday evening. An interesting and suggestive evening was profitably passed. Some of the idors of the diocesan Board of Education were effectively brought out.

She—I would never marry a man who was a coward.

He—How brave would it be necessary for him to be in order to win your approval?

She—Well, he'd have to have courage enough to—er—propose.

GALAHAD DISCUSS DOCK QUESTION

Interesting Debate Takes Place At Yesterday's Meeting

AN OUTLINE

The discussion "That there should be a public dock established and maintained in Quincy," was taken up by the Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church Sunday. Roy Prout eloquently presenting argument in the affirmative while William Walker took the negative. The discussion that followed was quite animated. With an undeveloped water front we are in no position to transact business with coastwise steamers running to and from seaport towns, and South America. If a public dock was established it would bring about an unbroken chain of business from the Panama canal to the Dominion of Canada. Boston has failed in many instances by not working along these lines and we should benefit by her mistakes. Our products could be placed on the various markets better thereby proving our efficiency in competing with outsiders. It would prove an incentive to bring in outside manufactures of different commodities and also bring better facilities for transportation in competing with the railroads. It would be a great help to the granite industry. It should be a public dock and not a private one. Quincy would grow more rapidly, increase in population, developing a great field for the church to work in.

The negative was in sympathy with project but thought we would abuse its usefulness instead of reaping a benefit. We could not make it pay when we are convinced in our own minds that no private concern could. Our present tax rate is exceedingly high and a public dock would make it higher. Our system of municipal ownership is a failure and always will be as long as the State legislature has the power to pass upon any project that a city wants to develop. This is plainly seen after twenty-three years of city government, in which, at times we have had to humble ourselves before this august body before we could make various improvements. Our best practical places along the water front are now occupied by private concerns. It would have a tendency to bring to our city a foreign granite at a cheap cost, lowering the value of Quincy granite and perhaps close some of our quarries. The cost of dredging would be prodigious and the danger of freezing in excessive cold weather should be taken into consideration.

MRS. MARCUS E. WIGHT.

Mrs. Emma Frances, wife of Marcus E. Wight of Quincy Point, who died suddenly on Thursday was buried Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Wight will be greatly missed from Quincy Point, where she has been a life long resident. She was active in church work and could always be depended upon to do her part in any undertaking of the few organizations of which she was a member.

Visiting the sick, helping any who needed aid, in a quite unostentious manner, and doing a world of good with her pleasant smile and her cheerful words, to every one who came in contact with her, endeared her to a host of friends.

Mrs. Wight greatest joy was in her home and nothing was left undone to make it attractive, to every member and to a large circle of relatives and friends. Every one was sure of a warm welcom and her hospitality was unbounded. In all this she took the keenest pleasure, and her happiness was assured in making others happy.

As a wife and mother she had few equals and the loss is irreparable. She leaves a husband, a son, Mr. Marcus S. Wight and a daughter, Miss Minnie F. Wight who are having much sympathy extended to them at this time.

WORD RECEIVED FROM DEVANEY

Letter Received Today Says He Is In New York On Business

MISTAKE ADJUSTED

Some alarm was felt by the family of Michael J. Devaney, of Dysart street, when he did not come home Friday evening as was expected, but a letter received from him this morning states that he is all right.

He left Quincy, Friday, to go to Malden to arrange for the putting in of some foundations in the Holy Cross cemetery. He had considerable money with him at the time and it was learned that he paid $40 for foundations.

At 4.30 that evening he telephoned to his home. This message was misunderstood and it was because of this misunderstanding that all the trouble arose. It appears that he telephoned that he was going to New York on business on the 5.45 train. As the message was received it was understood that he would be at home at 5.45. When he did not come and nothing was heard from him Saturday his family became alarmed and the police was notified.

This morning everything was set aright, by the receipt of a letter from him in which he stated that he was in New York on a business trip, having gone to that city Friday night.

LEG BROKEN AT NEW COURT HOUSE

Joseph Levangie aged 17 years, of 69 Common street, and employed by Peter J. Williams had his left leg fractured at the new court house building on Coddington street this morning. The young man stood on a team loaded with steam radiators, holding them as the team was hauled over the sidewalk curbing. Suddenly the team gave a lurch and Levangie fell off wita one of the radiators, which fell upon him, breaking his left leg above the knee. Dr. Burke was called and the young man was taken to the City Hospital in the police ambulance.

ARREST MAN FOR LARCENY OF AUTO

Fred Oliver, who was wanted by the police for the larceny of an automobile from Charles H. Snow, was arrested in Boston Saturday afternoon by Officer Avery. The officer was walking on Tremont street when he came across the young man, whom he placed under arrest and took him to Station 4. This morning in court, he was first arraigned for breaking and entering. Later the complaint was changed to operating an automobile without the permission of the owner and fined $50. The sentence was suspended until July ., 1912.

LAW SATISFIED.

The old-timer looked up from his rickey and asked:

"You think that story on Bill Sims is a good one, eh?"

"Good or bad, it's true."

Well, so is this," said the old-timer, "and it happened down in Texas by the Rio Grande. I used to live down that way for a while, and in the village which I graced with my presence a certain old horse doctor was elected justice of the peace. What he didn't know about the law was sufficient. He knew nothing; he should have made an ideal justice of the peace.

"His first case, however, was that of a man arrested for stealing a horse.

" 'Guilty or not guilty?' asked the justice.

" 'Not guilty,' answered the prisoner.

" 'Then what the deuce are you doing here?' demanded the justice of the peace. 'Get out!' "—San Francisco Chronicle.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY

He said that Senator Barnes claimed that he had been making misstatements about him, but Mr. Coombs added that Senator Barnes was misrepresenting facts, not only in Quincy but throughout the entire district. He said that Mr. Barnes was at one time a state house lobbyist and that upon all measures affecting the corporations, he has been affiliated with them against the welfare of the working class. He said that the people were going to retaliate against such tactics and concluded by saying that he would defeat Barnes by a large number of votes next Tuesday.

John J. McDevitt, candidate for the House from the sixth Norfolk, was next introduced. Before confining his remarks to his own candidacy, he dwelt at length upon the candidacy for re-election of Senator Barnes. Mr. McDevitt said that Senator Barnes had claimed a misrepresentation of facts on the part of Mr. McDevitt concerning his position in the campaign. The gentleman from Ward Four said that Mr. Barnes had claimed that both he and Mr. Coombs were making statements that were not true, and in answer to the same, said that both he and Mr. Coombs would withdraw from the contests and support their opponents if the latter would only meet them face to face and show where the issues were not presented in a true light. Mr. McDevitt said that the week previous Mr. Barnes spoke at a Scandinavian rally in Protection hall. He said that the following Monday, a lengthy speech purporting to come from Senator Barnes, was printed in a local newspaper, that three thousand copies of this paper were bought and distributed among the voters of the district. Mr. McDevitt said that he had learned from reliable authority, that the greater part of the speech was not delivered at the rally and offered to place his integrity beside that of Senator Barnes at any moment.

Confining his remaks to his own campaign he took his opponent to task for voting against the half holiday bill, and also for the Hancock street widening, a proposition that has already met with the hearty approval of all who have had a chance to see the much added improvement. He asked the voters to weigh his record in the balance with that of his opponent and would be willing to abide by their decision. He said, if elected he would work for 80 cent gas, for a five cent fare to Quincy on street cars, for the extension of Wollaston Boulevard, for equalization of taxation, for depression of grade crossings, for dredging in Quincy Bay and for all measures desired and advocated by his constituents. He said that eleventh hour circulars would be issued against him, but asked the people to ignore them because of the fact that unfair advantage was to be taken of his chance to answer the same. He said that he would at Atlantic tonight, ready to answer any questions that Senator Barnes or Mr. Leslie might desire to ask of him and to answer any charges that might be brought forth against him.

In speaking on the redistricting bill, Mr. McDevitt said, that if elected, he would send a postal card to every voter in his district, asking him his opinion on the bill, and that he would be willing to vote according to the decision arrived at by the majority of his constituents. He said that he had not the money to expend that his opponent was putting out and urged all to go to the polls to perform the most important duty that devolves upon them.

The next speaker was Leo P. Noonan. He advocated the election of the entire Democratic ticket, and urged that Messrs. Sullivan, McDevitt and Coombs be sent to the legislature in order to help Governor Foss enact those laws which have ever been uppermost in his mind. He descried the tariff question which was being made an issue of by the various Republicans, and said that when a man goes to the polls he goes to vote for a Governor, not of other states in the Union, but of Massachusetts, and that there was no tariff on any other such caption written besides the name of the candidate on the ballot.

He urged the election of Mr. Sullivan, who was making his third attempt, and said that he had always lived in Quincy and was held in great esteem by all who knew him. He scored Mr. Leslie for voting against the half holiday bill and the Hancock street widening and praised McDevitt for the fairness with which he intends to handle the redistricting proposition if elected. He said that it was an imperative duty that every man should go to the polls and vote on election day.

The closing speaker was Michael T. Sullivan representative candidate from the Fifth Norfolk District. He said that the failure of Foss and others to appear evidently meant that Quincy was safe and that Foss would easily carry it. He advocated the charges in the caucus laws so ably presented by David I. Walsh and also dwelt at length on the inefficiency of the naturalization laws as they now exist. He also talked on the Boston harbor appropriation and said that if elected he would work to have Quincy developed from a water standpoint in this respect.

He claimed that a man who desires to represent part of this city should be a resident here in the day time, and not merely a man, like Mr. Piper, who only sleeps in Quincy. He outlined the platform which he had adopted and when he had finished speaking, the greatest open air rally of the present year, in local circles, had drawn to a close.

STROKE OF FORTUNE.

It was a murky day in August, and the old sea captains were talking of a schooner which had been struck by lightning. "How about the Emma S. Capt. Eli?" asked the privileged listener at last. "Wasn't she struck once?"

"She was, sir."

"I'd like to hear the particulars," said the young man, and all the captains moved in their seats and fixed their eyes on the crack which held the gaze of Capt. Eli.

" 'Tisn't much to tell, only what might happen to any vessel under similar circumstances," said Capt. Eli. "A bolt struck the deck amidships and bored a hole right down through the bottom of the schooner big as a man's leg.

"The water came rushing in, and o' course the Emma S., would have foundered if a second bolt hadn't come and struck my foreto'galla'mast, cut it off near the top, turned it end for end, and drove it right into the hole, plugging it up an' making it water tight.

" 'Twas a clear case o' what folks call the ravages an' repairs o' nature," said Capt. Eli, as he removed his gaze from the crack and let it rest thoughtfully on the ingenuous face of the only landsman in the company.—Youth's Companion.

There is talk of a $3,000,000 shortage in the Washington navy yard, but the valuable time of the clerks should not be taken hunting for a little item like that.

BRIEFS

John Graham has moved to East Milton where he is occupying a new house on Pierce street.

James T. Pease of the Fore River shipyard police force is enjoying a vacation and is on a gunning trip on the Cape.

It was Charles E. Barker and not Charles T. Baker who filed nomination papers as Councilman from Ward Five. The similarity of names led to the confusion.

An entertaining evening is being planned by the Quincy Day Nursery association for Friday, Nov. 17, when Emery L. Crane will lecture at Colonial hall on "American Wit and Humor."

Mr. and Mrs. John Queeny and sons of Weymouth have moved to Quincy and are now settled at 25 Spear street. Mr. Queeny for years has been foreman of the large Kendall farm which has recently been cut up into house lots.

BAIL COMMISSIONER.

Fernald Hutchins of Dedham was appointed bail Commissioner for Norfolk County Friday by the Superior Court. He is the first commissioner appointed for Dedham and lives in that town. He was admitted to the bar four years ago and became counsel for the State Board of Lunacy and Charity. He resigned that position in October.

NATURAL HISTORY EXCURSION.

The excursion to the trilobite quarry in Braintree under the auspices of the Natural History committee of the Education society of Milton will take place Saturday afternoon, Nov. 11, W. L. W. Field and Dr. Harris Kennedy will be in charge. The party will assemble in Quincy square at 1.50 o'clock. The street car leaving East Milton at 1.25, and the train leaving South Station for Quincy at 1.17 will arrive in time. A car will be taken from Quincy square to the quarry. The party will return to Milton about 5 o'clock.

—The Fore river bridge will be closed for several months. This means that everybody who rides in carriages and automobiles must make a wide detour in order to reach the South Shore, while those who travel in street cars must use a narrow, steep-stepped footbridge, a portion of which will be submerged, probably, part of the time. If Boston should show such slight regard for the comfort of the people, a howl would go up that could be heard all over the Commonwealth.—Boston Journal.

BEAUTIFUL EXHIBITION

Of Chrysanthemums Shown By James Nicol

EXHIBIT IN BOSTON

James Nicol, who makes a specialty of raising chrysanthemums, opened his greenhouses Sunday for public inspection and many took advantage of the opportunity to visiti them on Coddington street and admire the truly handsome display of these beautiful fall flowers. Mr. Nicol is to exhibit this week at the annual chrysanthemum show in Horticultural hall, Boston, and as the blossoms do not go in until Thursday morning, Sunday was an exceptionaly good opportunity to see them at their best.

The raising of chrysanthemums is the one hobby of Mr. Nicol and it is doubtful, if considering the size of his greenhouses, there is a more beautiful display in the state.

Sunday, upwards of three hundred blossoms were seen, in pinks, whites and yellows, some of the blossoms being almost as large as one's head.

While he always has a fine exhibit, this year is, if anything, a little the best of any, and to one who loves flowers, was well worth seeing. It was not publicly announced that the flowers were to be on exhibition, but had become noised about, with the result that there was a constant stream of visitors all day, one automobile party offering $20 for a dozen of the blossoms which offer however was not accepted.

Mr. Nicol is a member of the Horticultural society and competes every year with some of the wealthy chrisanthemum growers of the state and the fact that he always carries off prizes shows only too well the excellence of the flowers which he raises. As noted above it is his one hobby and even should he not be awarded prizes he would still continue to raise the flowers.

LEARNING TO USE LIGHT.

In these days when every one has so much to say about efficiency, illuminating engineering is of the first importance. In order that employes may work rapidly and well they should be protected from needless fatigue. About the quickest and surest way to tire out a roomful of people is to flood the room with a uniform light at high intensity. Where work is to be done by artificial light the general illumination should be moderately low with local lights of higher intensity above the work bench or desk. And, by the way, the average desk light or reading lamp is too low.

The color of the light, too, plays an important part in tiring people out. Fatigue occurs far more quickly with yellow rays at high intensities than from green and bluish green light like that from the mercury vapor lamp. Nothing equals the bluish white of diffused daylight.

Shadows also have an important part to play. In fact one of the principal aids in distinguishing objects is the differences in brightness. If there were no shadows but only a perfectly diffused illumination of high intensity it would be hard to see clearly. In order to have shadows there must be directed light from one or a number of sources and not merely diffused light coming from all directions. There must be enough directed light to mark the edges of objects by shadows and also enough diffused light to enable one to see clearly in the shadows. The directed light should come from above at a considerable angle with the horizontal so as to limit the length of the shadows. There are cases, however, when a combination of directed and diffused light will not answer. In a flour mill or a foundry, for example, where every thing is of the same color diffused light would be practically useless; but in a draughting room where all the objects requiring distinction are in one plane a directed light casting shadows would be equally objectionable.

To light the home with comfort and economy requires a combination of concentrated illumination of fairly high intensity at the dining or reading table with a general illumination of low intensity. The lighter the walls and ceiling are the more light they reflect to give the required diffused general illumination and so less direct light will be needed. As artificial light is deficient in blue and green rays, walls and ceilings of a bluish or greenish shade give them greater reflecting power for daylight than for artificial light, which is generally desirable.—Technical World Magazine.

CHAOS REIGNS IN PEKIN

Government Makes Urgent but Vain Appeal For Funds

Pekin, Nov. 6.—Yuan Shi-Kai still declines to accept the premiership, although assured of the support of the national assembly and General Chang, in command of the Manchu troops. Both the assembly and Chang insist, however, that when the parliament is elected the premier shall be chosen by that body.

According to late reports, 50,000 persons have been killed at Hankow, by bullets, fire and sword.

In the meantime affairs here are in a state of chaos. No tangible head of the government is visible. The government urgently needs funds and hopes that the Franco-Belgian loan will be forthcoming, to enable the military operations and the administration to be carried on. The international group refuses to supply war funds.

The government is urging the group to advance money to allay the threatened financial and public deadlock in Pekin, because it is feared that the non-circulation of money will cause the coolies and the lower classes serious hardships, which possibly might lead to local disturbances.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Police Think Chase Deliberately Killed His Boy Chum

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 6.—Charged with the murder of a boy chum, Lester Chase, 21, of North Swansea was arrested Sunday. Chase shot and killed Paul Belanger, 15, claiming it was an accident, but the police, after an investigation, decided to charge him with murder.

Belanger, who was the son of Mrs. Mary Belanger of this city, went to the Chase farm Thursday, and the two boys were alone in the barn when the shooting took place. Chase said that he had the gun in his hand fooling while Belanger was armed with a pitchfork, and that the latter struck the gun accidentally, discharging it. The weapon was so near the Belanger boy that one side of his head was practically blown off and he was almost instantly killed.

TURKEY APPEALS TO THE UNITED STATES

Italians Said to Be Committing Atrocities in Tripoli

Washington, Nov. 6.—The so-called "Italian barbarities" in Tripoli have been brought officially to the attention of the American government in such form that some declaration of the position of the state department in the matter is now expected.

The subject was first broached in a verbal statement by the Turkish ambassador to Acting Secretary Adee, and later in the day it came up in a letter. In each case the ambassador, who said he was acting by express instructions cabled by his government, described the acts attributed to the Italian troops and protested in the name of humanity against the atrocities committed by them against helpless women and children and noncombatants.

By order of his government the ambassador appealed to the United States to exert itself to put a stop to the practices which, he declared, were in plain violation of the rules of warfare and in contravention of The Hague convention to which the United States and Italy are parties. Adee promised to submit the protest to Secretary Knox, who at present is absent from Washington.

REWEDS TO GET $10,000

Civil Ceremony Performed After Twelve Years of Married Life

Des Moines, Nov. 6.—In order that he might inherit $10,000, Franklin J. Reilley, formerly of Iowa, but now resident of Lewiston, Ida., remarried his wife, Cora B. Reilley, here.

Reilley's marriage twelve years ago estranged him from his family. His father refused to recognize the marriage as a legal one, and shortly before his death a few months ago bequeathed the son $10,000 on condition that he marry again according to the civil law.

ABANDONS LECTURE TOUR

Explorer Cook Is on His Way Back to This Country

Southampton, Eng., Nov. 6.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the explorer, was a passenger on the North German Lloyd steamer George Washington, which sailed from here for New York.

Dr. Cook came abroad ostensibly for the purpose of making a lecture tour, but after speaking at Copenhagen, where he met with a bad reception, he abandoned his original idea.

Priest Closes Thirty Saloons

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Rev. Maurice J. Dorney, pastor of St. Gabriel's Catholic church, known as the "mayor" of the district "Back O' the Yards," ordered the proprietors of thirty saloons in the district to close every evening for a week, so that men could attend his mission, and they obeyed.

SLAYS LITTLE ONES AND SELF

Jaeger Had Been Divorced From Wife Two Years Ago

COMES EAST FROM CHICAGO

Hires Room Near Home of Former Wife, Who Had Married Again, and Lures His Two Children From Their Mother, Finally Ending Their Lives With Revolver—Wants His Ashes Cast Over the Seas

Boston, Nov. 6.—Insane jealousy, due to his wife's divorce and her legal custody of his children, caused Ludwig E. Jaeger of Chicago to murder his two daughters—Olive, aged 4, and Anita, aged 5—and to kill himself on the beach at the foot of Cutler street, Winthrop. He was divorced two years ago after threatening the lives of his wife and her mother.

Mrs. Jaeger went to Germany to visit her mother and returned last June. She was married to Frank J. Strasburger, Jr., in this city, June 17, and they went to live in Winthrop immediately after the ceremony.

About a week ago Jaeger, who is said to have been at attache in the office of the Spanish consul in Chicago, went to Winthrop and hired a room in the house of Mrs. Nellie A. Moore, directly in the rear of the house in which his former wife and children lived. Almost immediately he called at Mrs. Strasburger's house and told her, through the speaking tube, that he merely desired to be near and see his children.

Mrs. Strasburger's husband thought it a reasonable thing to let the father see his children. Several days thereafter Jaeger called at the house and, speaking through the tube, informed his former wife that he had toys or candy for the children, and they were permitted to go out for strolls in his company.

What proved to be the last time he requested permission to see the children their mother dressed them prettily and sent them out to him. He took them down to the beach and opposite the foot of Cutler street drew a 38-calibre automatic revolver and shot the two children and himself, death quickly resulting in each case.

Chief of Police Burirll, in searching the man's clothing, found two letters. They were dated Nov. 1, but neither was addressed to anyone. They were signed with the name of Jaeger. One of the letters was in English and the other in German.

In the letter written in English Jaeger bewailed his divorce and the loss of his wife and the children. He intimated that he was going to do a desperate act and would kill himself afterward. He asked that after his death his body should be cremated and that some one, who might be friendly to him, would take the ashes out on a steamer of the German-American line and cast them over the seas.

Pinned to the margin of the letter were three money orders. One was for $20, the other two were for $100 each. He had purchased them at the postoffice and made them all payable to himself.

In the letter also he said that the watch and chain that he wore were worth $150 and he stated that if the amount named in the money orders was not sufficient for the carrying out of his wishes the money that could be obtained by the sale of the watch would suffice for any extra charge.

MANNING IS UNCERTAIN

Was Supposed to Be Only "Sure" Juror In McNamara Case

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 6.—The only tales menwho had been considered assured of acceptance by both sides in the McNamara murder trial has been virtually removed from consideration, and at the end of four weeks it can not be learned that any juror is even fairly certain to remain in the box.

Seaborn Manning, a farmer, who seemed agreeable to both sides, is physically unsuited for service in a long trial, according to four of his fellow talesmen. Judge Bordwell took the matter under advisement.

SYNOPSIS

Anna Granger, devoted mother of two small children, discovers that her husband is a weak character and that he has lied to her about a woman.

Posing as Miss Dale, she becomes stenographer to Burton Temple, through whose evidence her husband has been imprisoned. She thinks Temple is the guilty man and is acting the spy to clear her husband's name for his sake and that of her children.

Anna discovers that Temple was one of her girlhood's ideals. Thinking her a single woman, he tells her her husband was a liar and perjurer.

Temple has detectives on the trail of Brady, an accomplice of Granger, looking for evidence. Anna is searching for evidence against Temple, who becomes interested in her.

Despite herself, Anna becomes fond of Temple, although determined to convict him for the honor of her boys. Temple's detectives discover Rose Fanchon, the woman for whom Granger was a thief.

Temple desires to marry Anna. She rebuffs him, questioning his honor. Temple is indicted for the crime for which Granger is suffering imprisonment.

She turned and moved evenly toward the door. There came a sharp rap, a feverish, insistent, wild sort of rap, and she paused. Cato looked up alertly from his nap and threw back his ears.

Temple stepped quickly to the door and threw it open. Then, in amazement, he stepped back.

"Granger!" he exclaimed. "What are you doing here?"

A little white faced man, wearing a fur ulster and carrying his hat in his hand, entered. It was not his close cropped hair and subservient hangdog manner alone which witnessed to the late prison life and discipline; the timid, interval spaced movement of the lockstep bore its witness as well.

He cast but one sickly glance of confusion at Parton Temple. Then he turned to the woman who stood stone still at one side of the door staring at him piteously.

"Anna, I've been pardoned," he said, coming to her quickly. "I came here at once, you see. I want to speak with you for a moment alone." His words were hurried, furtive, like the jailbird accustomed to sneaking whispers in the prison line to his pal. Involuntarily the wife shivered.

"There's no need, Robert," she answered dully. "There's nothing to conceal now; they know who I am." Wearily she turned to Temple. "The pardon has been granted," said she.

Temple bowed, without speaking.

"Yes," broke in Granger with nervous haste. "They've been working for a pardon for some time, you know. You've seen it in the papers, haven't you? You see, the public felt that I was innocent, unjustly condemned, so"—

He paused, seeing a slight, beseeching gesture of his wife to Temple. The big financier understood and, turning, quit the room quietly, leaving man and wife together. Mrs. Mason, whose curiosity was quite as alive as her conscience, stayed. It wouldn't do to miss this meeting. Maybe it was her duty to stay!

"I want you to leave this house, to come away with me at once. There's no longer any need for proofs of vindication, you see," Granger said to Anna, hastily kissing her.

She submitted, battling down the shudder of disgust which the touch of his lips fetched her. After all, he was her husband.

"Yes, I'll go with you," she said lifelessly. She wondered how she could live with this thief all the rest of her days.

"You see, Anna, every one knew I was innocent; every one believed in me. Now I must get away to some place where I can rest, where no one will ask me questions or harry me, for I'm tired to death—to death. Oh," still catching no responsive light on the immobile face before him, "it was your belief in me, Anna, that gave me courage all along."

She looked at him, shuddering.

"But I don't believe in you, Robert," she said. "I know."

Under the man's prison pallor rose a sort of grayish fright.

"Know! Know what?" he asked sharply.

"I know that you are not innocent, Robert!"

At those words all the bravado went out of Granger, as a tiny spark suddenly goes out touched by a block of ice.

"Sh-h-h! What do you mean anyhow? I am innocent; I am." He did not whisper now; he almost shrieked, even as he had in court that day when the jury pronounced him guilty. And now, as then, he fancied he saw over his head the cruel Roman symbol of vengeance, the faces and the ax—saw, too, the calm women who spin the thread of life, crouching on the shadowy frescoed wall of the courtroom, a naked skull at their feet.

Something seemed to grip his throat. He strangled an instant, then he coughed and spat. He drew his hands across his eyes and pulled himself together.

"I am innocent, innocent!" he insisted.

"Don't! Don't, Robert!" cried Anna, pity at the shameful sight of her perjured husband rising in her heart. "I know the whole of it. I've read the letter you wrote to Cornelius Brady, you see."

He shook as a man seized suddenly by some deadly disease. Then instinctively, fearfully, he looked toward Mrs. Mason.

"She knows all," said Anna quietly.

"Who has that letter? Where is it? Has Temple got it? My God, why don't you tell me?"

"There is no letter now, Robert. I read it, and I burned it without thinking."

"You destroyed it? Then it can't be used against me! Oh, Anna, you're a trump!" He seized both her hands and kissed them in a frenzy of relief. Even in that pivotal moment, though, when the weight of months had fallen from him and left him light, a suspicion came to him, a jailbird suspicion.

"But you said 'without thinking.' Without thinking what, Anna?"

"Without thinking that as well as convicting you that letter was the only evidence to vindicate Mr. Temple," answered she calmly.

Then Mrs. Mason, with a sneer, made it plain.

"Maybe your wife feels that an innocent man mustn't be sent to prison. Mr. Granger, or maybe she feels some stronger motive. I remember that you were adverse to her staying on here the day that I saw you. Now, I believe, she thinks of giving evidence about the destruction of that letter."

At the last sentence the ugly, condemning, vindictive expression which had come into Granger's face at her incriminating words vanished.

"Anna, it's not true! It couldn't be true that you would expose me!" he gasped in a sort of terror. "You are not going to tell about that letter? Why, I am your husband, Anna—your husband! I did certify that check. Yes, I did. But, good God, why should you want to ruin me?"

He sank at her feet in pitiful, abject appeal.

"Anna, as your husband, as a man who loves you and whom you once loved, I say, forgive me. Great heavens! I've repented. I've paid thrice over again for my folly. What can I do now? I can't undo what's been done. It's you who must wipe out the stain; help me to begin over again. Your forgiveness would be absolution. Anna, you will forgive me?"

Curiously the woman touched his shoulder. Instinctively she wanted to feel just a little bit alive. But she might as well have touched a post of wood. It seemed as though the very faculty of feeling had been obliterated within her.

"Forgive you? I suppose I must, Robert," she said lifelessly. "All women forgive. They were put into the world like priests or governors. I think Only we are not supposed to give pennances or sentences"— Her voice trailed off wearily.

"You see, Anna," Granger went on, trying to excuse himself, "I knew I hadn't made the success of my life that you'd expected. It touched my pride to the quick to see you living in that narrow way—you, who might have been a queen among women." A look of cunning came into his face. "And then, the boys"—

"But, Robert, didn't you know that I would sooner have worked my fingers to the bone and my brain to a little white spot than have you do this awful thing? Didn't you know I would sooner have worn rags than have you steal?" She made a pitiful little gesture and ended with a half sob.

"I know, I know," said he. "It's easy now to see what a mad idea it all was. But I had that chance to get a fresh start in life. With money I could do big things; I could make myself all that you wanted me to be. The boys were growing up. We needed more for them for college and to give them a fair start.

"And listen, Anna"—he moistened his lips—"I've invested the money. I put it in stocks that would pay well; I was going to use the interest for you and the boys, a little at a time. You see, it was for you and them I did it. I was a fool, perhaps—I was worse. Yes, I know. But you'll help me now, won't you? I need you!"

The appeal had gone home; he had aroused the maternal instinct, always dominant in Anna's breast. (The "Largo of Motherhood" in the "Symphony of Womanhood" was playing again.) She put out her hand toward him again with a quick, unconscious gesture, such as she used in the nursery when the children were tired or naughty.

"Yes, Robert," she admitted, "you do need some one. You need me, yes."

Craven's voice, speaking to the butler in the hall, broke in upon them.

"Not in the library? Well, find him and tell him his car's ready now. Just saw the chauffeur drive up. Tell him I'll be with him in a minute. Have a letter to rattle off first."

"It's Craven, the attorney," explained Anna, following Robert's frightened look toward the door.

"I don't want to see any one," shivered Granger. "Can't we go in there?" He motioned to a door on the opposite side of the room. Realizing how sensitive he must feel, Anna nodded.

"Yes, go. I'll call you when he's left."

WHY HE KEPT ON FARMING.

Farmer Carson looked up from his hunt for potatoe bugs into the face of a former neighbor who was visiting his old friend after an absence of ten years.

"How's your son Dick getting on?" he asked, after a few preliminaries.

"Dick? Oh, he's getting on first rate; he's a sort of a doctor," said the father.

"How about Arthur?"

"Arthur? Oh, he's getting on all right, too. He's a sort of a lawyer."

"What's Jim doing?" he demanded.

"Oh, Jim he's doing fine; he's a sort of a preacher," said Mr. Carson, cheerfully.

"And you keep right on here," said the old neighbor, with evident regret.

"Well, er, for the present," said Mr. Carson, apologetically. "You see, it seems kind of advisable for some one to be sort of a farmer, and kind of feed Dick and Arthur and Jim for another ten years or so, till they get a sort of an income."—Youth's Companion.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choices small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

In this column we publish from day to day recipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

FAMOUS RECIPES.

Dolly Madison's Formulas In Use at White House.

When you are invited to an afternoon tea at the White House, whatever else may be served you will invariably be offered a cup of the most delicious bouilion you have ever tasted in any quarter of the globe. And with your cup of tea there will be handed on one of the small gold rimmed plates a slice of the famous White House layer cake, says Good Housekeeping.

This bouillon and cake will have been made from the manuscript recipes, which, exclusively the White House property, have literally been handed down from one mistress of the executive mansion to another. Who first introduced and made them a distinctive feature of even the most informal gatherings is not known.

That Dolly Madison used these two recipes and dispensed the bouillon at her stately gatherings is a matter of tradition which each succeeding first lady of the land hears with fluttering pride in her own immediate possession. The recipes are as follows:

Dolly Madison Bouillon. — Four pound of juicy beef, one knuckle of veal, two small turnips, two small carrots, one soup bunch, one small pod of red pepper, two small white onions, salt, six quarts of water. Simmer for six hours. Then strain through a fine sieve. Let stand overnight and congeal. Skim off all the grease. Put into a kettle to heat and just before serving add sherry to taste.

Dolly Madison Layer Cake. — The whites of eight eggs beaten stiff, two and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one small cup of butter, one cup of milk, three-quarters of a cup of cornstarch, three cups of flour, two and one-half teaspoonfuls of vanilla. Follow general directions for making. This amount makes four layers.

Caramel For Between the Layers.—Three cups of brown sugar, one cup of sweet cream, butter the size of an egg, one teaspoonful of vanilla just before removing from fire. Cook on double boiler for twenty minutes. If not as much as desired, add sugar.

HOW TO CURE A SOFT CORN.

Nitric Acid if Used With Care Is Usually Effective.

A painful thickening of the skin sometimes occurs on one of the several surfaces of the interdigital regions of the toes. This is ordinarily known as the soft corn.

The development of the lesion explains the resistance which it offers to topical medicaments. In fact, the epidermis, being in an irritated condition all round the small tumor, gradually encircles it with enlarged horny layers until it is completely covered. The first thing to be done, therefore, is to remove this circular epithelial barrier.

For this purpose the parts must be carefully washed with soap and water and then with alcohol. This suffices to render visible a little hollow covering on the top of the conical thickening, forming a kind of hood over the tumor. It may be gently removed by means of the point of fine scissors without drawing blood. In this way the small corn, the source of all the trouble, is laid bare.

All that is now required is to place a drop of nitric acid on the tumor by means of a small wooden rod and to leave it to penetrate the corn. The natural moisture of the parts favors the infiltration of the acid.

After a few minutes the tumor is carefully washed with diluted water, which quickly soothes the smarting resulting from the chemical cauterization. A moist dressing of aseptic cotton wool is then placed over it. This should be removed the same evening. On the following days the part should be washed with soap and water and a small roll of cotton applied. Toward the third or fourth day the brownish crust caused by the cauterization is cut out with fine scissors, and then a small wound is laid bare. This is soon healed when dressed with boiled water.

In case the first operation has not been sufficient, a fact which may be easily determined by touching the parts to find whether there is still any painful hardening, a new cauterization by nitric acid is practiced, followed by a similar series of dressings.

It is rare that a soft corn of average dimensions—that is, of the size of a millet seed or a lentil—resists a third cauterization.—New York Herald.

Cigar Stumps.

Gather the cigar stumps about the house and place them in a can until enough are accumulated. Soak them in tepid water a day, sprinkle this on plants. It prevents worms and bugs infesting them. Take the wet tobacco and sprinkle over the carpet and sweep well. This takes up dust and keeps away moths. Also crumble stumps fine and put them in hen nests to keep away chicken lice instead of buying tobacco stems for the same purpose.

A New Clubhouse For Girls.

Mrs. Medill McCormick has just fitted up a clubhouse for working girls in Washington. The house is in one of the best residential districts of the city. It has thirty-five rooms and is arranged to accommodate just that number of girls. Mrs. McCormick has had it done over and entirely equipped with all the latest conveniences.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Cup Cakes. Rub a half pound of butter and three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a cream. Then stir in five beaten eggs, one cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of baking powder, and a pound of flour. When well mixed put in small moulds or pattypans, filling them about half full, and bake in a brisk oven.

Left-Over Soup. Take about one and one-half cupfuls of any kind of vegetables left over from yesterday's dinner, either all one kind or several kinds, as there happens to be, beat until hot, rub them through a sieve mix smooth with one and one-half pints of thin cream sauce, let simmer for a few minutes, seasoning to taste, and serve hot.

Vegetable Roast. Take cooked beans or peas, pass through a colander to remove the skins, and mix with an equal quantity of finely chopped nut meats. Season to taste. Put one-half the mixture into a buttered baking dish, spread over it a dressing made as follows: Pour boiling water on four slices of zweiback, cover, let stand for a few minutes, then break them up with a fork and pour over one-half cup of sweet cream, season with salt and sage. Cover the dressing with the remainder of the nut mixture, pour over all one-half cup of cream and bake for 1 1-2 hours. Serve in slices, with cranberry sauce.

Beef en Casserole. Have a steak cut two inches thick and broil two minutes on each side. Lay in a casserole and pour round two cups of rich brown sauce, add three onions cut in halves and two tablespoons of melted butter and a teaspoon of lemon juice. Put on the cover and set in a moderate oven for two and a half hours. Serve in the same dish. The sauce must be well seasoned with salt, pepper and bay leaf.

Potatoes Nouveau. Slice large cold boiled potatoes in strips the long way. Salt and pepper a little, dip in beaten egg and then in flour. Fry in hot butter, to which a little minced onion and chopped parsley have been added. Serve spread out on a large plate.

Sweet Potato Pudding. Mix one pound of raw sweet potatoes, grated, one-half cupful of molasses, two well beaten eggs, one tablespoonful of butter, two of sugar and enough milk to make a thin mixture. Add one teaspoonful of ginger, and spice to taste. Bake for one and one-half hours.

Mock Cream Pie. Bake two crusts, making one flat for an upper crust. Make a mock cream with two cups of milk heated, one-quarter cup of cornstarch mixed with a little cold milk, a pinch of salt, one egg and two rounding tablespoons of sugar. Cook five minutes, then add flavoring and when cold fill the under crust. Lay the top crust over carefully, as it cannot be moved readily after it has touched the cream—Gene Weld.

Nut Squares. Beat three eggs well, add one and one-half cups of sugar, two cups of nut meats ground or chopped coarsely, and three-quarters cup of flour sifted with one-half level teaspoon of salt and two level teaspoons of baking powder. Butter a shallow pan and spread the batter as thinly as possible, then bake in a quick oven and when partly cool cut in squares or oblong strips.

TO WASH A SWEATER.

To wash a sweater shake the garment about in warm suds, squeezing and pressing with the hands until clean; then rinse thoroughly in the same way, using clear warm water. Do not hang the sweater up, but lay it on a perfectly clean, flat surface—a little slanting if possible, to drain the water off; turn the garment frequently as it dries, or fasten a cloth by the four corners to some supports and swing the sweater in that, leaving it to drop and dry with plenty of air. Washed and dried in this manner it will keep its shape. The same method may be pursued with other knit or crocheted goods.

A Chicago man, 61 years old, who had been searching in vain for work for three weeks, was at the end of his resources when he decided that if he couldn't get work he might get himself into a jail. So he took up a brick and hurled it through the window of a clothing store. When his case came up in court people promised to see that he had three meals a day and the work for which he had been searching. The method of securing employment, however, is not recommended for general adoption, as the good Samaritans may not always be so conveniently at hand when needed.—Milford Gazette.

EXPLAINS MIX-UP IN PAPERS

Those Filed In Name Of Mr. Baird Should Have Been H. C. Pennington

MATTERS ADJUSTED

The mixup in the filing of papers for Archie F. Baird for the Republican nomination at large, about which there has been some question, has been cleared up. Mr. Baird was on a train coming from Providence to Boston, Friday night, when he saw in the papers that he had filed nomination papers for the office of Councilman at large. He was very much wrought up over the affair and declared to the Ledger, Saturday, that he had not filed papers and what was more he would not take the nomination if it was handed to him on a gold platter. He could not understand why such a paper had been filed and was prepared to make it warm for some one.

This caused the secretary of the City Committee to go over the papers carefully, when it appeared that in taking up the paper of Harry C. Pennington who had filed papers as a ward councilman, that the secretary had in his hurry read the first signer of the paper, instead of the name of the candidate. As Mr. Baird happened to be the first signed his name was read off as the candidate.

BEES DIED FROM OVERWORK.

The beeman, as he gently removed a tawny cluster of bees from his beard, said:

"Above all things, never set a beehive near an arc light. If you do your bees will die of overwork within a week.

"An arc light emitting a powerful illumination was put up last spring near my beehive. The night it was put up my bees, mistaking its light for daylight, worked like beavers, though dead tired.

"When the dawn came and the light was extinguished the bees, quite worn out, turned in; but lo, in a few minutes the sun was shining and out the poor, bedraggled little creatures hurried again, for no bees will consent to spend daylight hours in idleness.

"They got through the day somehow and at dusk, after 36 hours of unceasing toil, they once more turned in. Alas, the arc light began to hiss and glow again, and the poor bees, worn to shadows, bent, pallid, staggered forth for another round of labor.

"They were all dead by the end of the week—victims of overwork, every mother's son of them."

"Have you ever loved another, George?"

"No, Maud, no. I swear by all—"

"Never mind that. If you say it, I believe it, but I cannot be yours. A man who has lived as long as you have without ever loving, must be innately a woman-hater, and I shall never marry a woman-hater. Good evening, Mr. Jones. Maria (calling to the maid) you may send Mr. Wilkins up. I am disengaged."

QUINCY A. A. TRIMS ORIENT

Won Third Straight Victory On Saturday At Merrymount

SCORE 9-6

The Quincy A. A. football team annexed its third straight victory last Saturday afternoon at Merrymount Park, by defeating the strong Orient A. A. of East Boston to the tune of 9 to 6. The game had been awaited with great anxiety for some time; and as every local fan realized that the contest would resolve into a struggle for blood, a large crowd was on hand to witness the battle.

It will be remembered that last year both teams played on the local field. There was some dispute at that time concerning the result of the game. The Noddle Islanders claimed the victory was theirs by a 6 to 0 score, yet it was decided by the officials that the game had resulted in a 6 to 6 tie. This little coincidence made the rivalry still more intense and all doubts as to the honors of superiority were dispelled on the signal triumph of the local eleven last Saturday.

Both teams were about evenly matched and in the early part of the contest it looked as if neither side would score. Line plunging was resorted to in great measure, and fine work was displayed in this department.

The visitors tried the forward pass twice and it worked successfully on each occasion, netting the losers 25 yards on each pass. Captain McDonald's team played the open game throughout and showed considerable improvement over the first two performances.

The one feature of the game occurred in the first period, when McDonald, the star quarterback for the local contingency, booted the ball between the goal posts, from the 40 yard line, thereby making about the best field goal ever executed on the local grounds.

In the second period, when the ball was within 40 yards of the visitor's goal line, McDonald attempted to punt, but the kick was blocked as the ball bounded in back of the goal posts, where McLaughlin fell on it for a touchdown. Benson kicked the goal.

The score now stood 6 to 3 in favor of the visitors, and the many present began to root hard in the interest of the local warriors as they made their way on to the field in tre third period. Their hopes were realized, however, for within a short time, the local players had advanced the ball within striking distance of the goal, and Boyle, the clever left half back, was sent over for a touchdown.

The work of Hunter, McDonald, Cummings and Bennett featured for the winners, while Benson, McLaughlin and Maloney excelled for the losers.

FORE RIVER WINS FROM TRUE BLUES

The Fore Rivers and the True Blues met on the ground of Fore River last Saturday and played off their undecided game before 1000 spectators. The ground was in perfect condition for good foot ball.

Play commenced close to advertised time. True Blue started, and play wentt o Eagles' goal. E. Garside shot too strong and ball went out of play. Harrison got possession and led play to opponents goal, and a foul gave the Eagles a fine chance.

Free kicks to both sides were numerous at the opening stages of the game. The Blues rushed the ball to half field where Cairns missed. Hendry for the Eagles placed a well directed shot in front of goal, and a corner kick was given. G. Murray sent the ball well down the field, but McDonald returned and Moran sent in a shot, but missed by inches.

The ball found, it was to G. Murray and after a fine run sent to Conton who shot wild. The Eagles, playing with great force, took the ball well up field. Eagles pressed and were unlucky in not scoring. A foul close to twelve yard line was given, and Carruthers sent in a great shot, amidst great cheering.

MORAN HEADED THE BALL.

into the net, for the first goal of the game. The Blues started play in determined style and the ball found Eagle's territory. Hill sent in a shot. Sharples, in getting possession of the ball fell—but recovered in clever style. Elliot took play to center field where a free kick was given the Eagles. Hendry pas playing a steady game and Melville at this time showed up well, and do as they wished, the True Blue could make no progress. Play remained in front of the visitor's goal, and Carruther's kick was sent out of play by a garside.

Play of a stubborn nature took place at centre field, but Hendry sent in to Harrison, who shot to Strong. Carruthers took up the running, and passed to McDonald to finish, with Elliot having a try for goal. He missed, for Barrie saved, with a long kick. A corner was given the Eagles and a smart piece of play by Murray took play to half field. Boyd was prominent, and in a splendid run sent the ball in with great speed, but it missed. Canton started the best run o fthe day for the visitors, then passed to Lawrie, who shot across to Mills, but the ball rolled out of play.

Moran was cheered for a fine piece of play, finishing with a kick that sent the leather in front of goal. Barry saved. The backs of the True Blue werep laying brilliant football. They were called upon to save again and again but Harrison by tricky play scored the second goal. Half time sounded soon after with play near mid field.

On resuming, play went to the visitor's goal, and a corner kick was given. The Blues forward, led by Lawrie had a fine run, and Sharples was called upon. After being beaten back the True Blues, seemed to be outplayed, and Carruthers and Boyd made attempts to add points, but the ball went over. McDonald started on a fine run and passed to Carruthers, who in turn passed to "Dan" to score the third and last goal of the game. Montogomery of the visitors sent the ball to Lawrie who had a try for goal. The ball struck the upright and rolled along the bar, but Boyd saved and took play to half field. Rennie had a fine run for the Eagles, but Montgomery stopped a nice try. Conton had a fine run passed to Lawrie who shot to Strong. Playing a fine class of ball the True Blues were not able to score and the Fore River Eagles retired victors in a warmly contested game by 3 goals to none.

BOWLING.

The Y. M. C. A. bowling team will try conclusions with the strong Clapp Memorial team Tuesday night. This is the second match in the Y. M. C. A. League and the local boys hope to be able to repeat their victory of last week when they took four points from Brockton.

"GRAB ALL" PUG KILLING SPORT

Ad Wolgast and Other Stars Do Too Much Dictating.

WANT EVERYTHING IN SIGHT.

They Think Promoters Are Not Giving Them Best of It Unless Given 90 Per Cent of All the Money—Public Becoming Tired of Game.

Is there any real sportsmanship among many of the so called champions or near champions of the various classes of boxers?

A real sportsman believes in being fair to all concerned in any kind of game, to give his opponent or opponents an even chance. Then, last of all, a true sportsman wants the public, which is usually considered after all other points have been settled upon, to have a little say in the matter, but boxers of today seem to think that the public should be ignored entirely.

What right has a champion to sit upon his throne and dictate to all the world what his opponent shall receive in a contest for the supremacy of his class? He has absolutely no such right, but he usurps that power because the sporting press of the country permits him to do so, and the promoters fall in line and permit him to dictate all the terms, and they take all the chances.

Ad Wolgast claims to be champion lightweight of the world, and the public recognizes him as such, although he is champion only of America, for he has never defeated the champion of Great Britain, Matt Wells, but that matters little, for in England the public there feels just the same no doubt about Wells as we feel about Wolgast. As champion Wolgast has a right to dictate terms to a certain extent, such as weighing, referee, etc., but he has no right to tell a challenger, and one who is considered a worthy challenger, that he must box for whatever Mr. Wolgast is willing to permit him to have.

A club in New York recently offered a purse of $12,000 for a bout between Wolgast and K. O. Brown and another offered $17,000 for a battle between the champion and Matt Wells, the champion of England, but Wolgast says he must have two-thirds of the purse and his opponent can have what is left. He asserts that as champion he can dictate whatever terms he sees fit to name. Probably he can while the public and promoters stand for it, but it is not sportsmanlike, and bona fide clubs should put a stop to such unreasonable terms. Because Tommy Burns and other big boxers set an example of that kind is no reason why the present day boxers should do likewise. Jack Johnson is following in Burns' footsteps, and it is just such acts that are doing so much to hurt the game.

When John L. Sullivan and James J. Corbett fought for the world's championship at New Orleans they battled for a winner's and loser's end of a purse, besides a side wager of $10,000. John L. Sullivan was champion, but he did not say to Corbett: "Here, young fellow, I am champion. You get $1,000 and I take $19,000." No; John L. fought Corbett on even terms and lost his title, but he always retained the respect of the sporting public of the United States for the fair manner in which he always acted, and the public gave evidence of its faith in the grand old champion the past few years by turning out in big numbers every time he appeared at any theater to do his monologue. It was the same with men like Jack Dempsey, Jack McAuliffe, Joe Gans, Peter Jackson, Frank Erne; Bob Fitzsimmons, Dan Creedon and others.

It is too bad that the boxing promoters cannot get together and act on the square with one another and put a stop to such practices and have some real sport. Do away with the all commercial side of the sport, for it does much harm, the same as it has been doing in baseball—that is, when it has crept into the game too strong.

HOW GEORGE JACKSON BECAME A BALL PLAYER.

George Jackson, the Boston outfielder, one of the batting sensations of the National league, learned to hit by using a log for a bat and to catch by throwing a ball against a barn and catching it on the rebound. That was in Blum, Tex., his home.

None of the kids Jackson knew played ball. He made a ball of string, got a log and had the kids pitch to him.

Jackson went to town one day and learned two teams played there every Saturday. He asked for a chance to play and was offered carfare from his home to Blum. He hit and ran the bases so well his salary was raised to $3 in several weeks and then to $5.

Billy Hamilton, Boston scout, went to Memphis to look over Harry Crandall, brother of Otis Crandall of the Giants. Hamilton didn't think much of Crandall, but liked Jackson and signed him.

GOTCH MAY MEET ZBYSCO.

Wrestling Champion Will Grapple Giant Pole if He Gets Enough Money.

Stanislaus Zbysco, the giant Pole, will be the next man to grapple with Champion Frank Gotch for the heavyweight championship of the world. The conqueror of Hackenschmidt has practically assured Herman, manager of the Pole, of a date in the near future.

Two years ago Zbysco met the peer of catch-as-catch-can head spinners in Buffalo, N. Y., and gave Gotch one of the merriest arguments of his career for one hour. Later Gotch disposed of his rival twice in 27 minutes. Gotch won the first fall in 6 seconds, but the Pole was taken unawares as the men were shaking hands.

Zbysco, who is in Europe at present, will come to America in November for a tour similar to that of last season. On his first visit to this country the big Pole was practically new to the catch-as-catch-can style of wrestling. Up to that time his strong forte was the Greco-Roman style, in which he was practically invincible. For the past year Zbysco has been practicing the catch-as-catch-can game. He has the weight and the strength, he believes, to give the present champion a run for the honors.

It's a matter of dollars and cents with Gotch. If the purse is forthcoming and Herman has the necessary backing the farmer will give action to the Pole. Gotch had intended to retire after his match with Hackenschmidt, but the easy manner in which he put away his most formidable rival has stirred his sporting instinct, and now he declares that he will throw all the aspirants to his crown before he goes into seclusion.

PACKY AFRAID OF WOLGAST?

It Is Questionable Whether Pair Will Ever Clash In Ring.

It would be interesting to know who stirred up the Wisconsin officials to prevent the proposed bout between McFarland and Champion Ad Wolgast recently. It was not the title holder. It is certain that McFarland drew a long breath when he realized he would not have to meet the Michigan wildcat. In spite of all talk of another match, it is questionable that McFarland will ever again be drawn into arranging another contest with the champion.

"JOKE" (?) AT FORE RIVER CONTINUES

Residents Of Weymouth Put To Additional Trouble This Morning By Wrecking Of Draw

AUTH RITIES SHOULD ACT

People coming from Weymouth to Quincy, via. the Fore River bridge, will be very much discommoded today, owing to an accident this morning shortly after 9 o'clock. During the widening of the draw and repairs to the bridge, a temporary one has been built, with a draw to be used by foot passengers. This morning, one of the large colliers in passing through, hooked onto the temporary structure ripping it from its foundation. When last seen the draw was floating down stream.

Immediately all passage over the bridge was suspended and the crowds that had gathered on the Weymouth side, while the draw was open, were very much wrought up when it was found passage was impossible. There were but few boats obtainable and the only thing to do apparently was, to swim across, or go back to Weymouth Heights and take one of the semi-occasional trains.

At last accounts, efforts were being made to secure small boats to ferry passengers across. It was said that it would take at least five hours in which to repair the draw so that it could be used.

RECEIVED PRIZES.

Mrs. T. L. Williams of Newcomb place was one of the successful contestants in suggestions for the New Filene Building of Boston, having been awarded four prizes.

—Five portraits by Stuart of the first five presidents. Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe, are on exhibition at the Boston Art club. They are owned by T. Jefferson Coolidge, and it is said that this is the first time that they have ever been loaned for any exhibition.

A mild spring like day makes it an ideal day for the election. The weather man promised showers but they evidently arrived ahead of time. It rained hard during Monday evening and during the night, but the morning dawned bright and clear and gave promise of being pleasant.

That the voters are taking a deep interest in the election is evident by the large vote that is being polled all over the city. Returns from the several voting precincts of the city show that the early morning vote was an unusual large one. This was true in regard to all wards of the city. In Ward Five the Republican stronghold of the city, the early vote was exceptionally large and the report is that they are voting the straight ticket from top to bottom. Those on duty at the polls watching the vote claim that there is but little cutting andt rat there will be but few split votes on the Republican ballots.

In Ward One the contest is also keen and City Hall where both precincts are located presented a busy scene all the morning. Both candidates Piper and Sullivan spent the greater part of the morning in this ward and are getting out every vote possible.

Candidate Piper has several automobiles in use so that he who wants may ride. The Democratic candidate also has automobiles in use.

THE ONE O'CLOCK VOTE.

The following table gives the one o'clock vote by wards in comparison with the vote at the same hour a year ago.

	1910	1911
Ward One,	840	795
Ward Two,	607	595
Ward Three,	721	712
Ward Four,	664	656
Ward Five,	805	875
Ward Six,	625	620
	4,262	4,253

WARD ONE.

A number of voters took advantage of casting their ballots before going to work, and of these the greater majority were residents of Houghs Neck. At nine o'clock this morning 502 votes had been cast, greatly to the pleasure of both candidates Piper and Sullivan, who put in the best part of the work in the morning here. A strong vote is being awaited and it is expected that over 1000 votes will be cast before four o'clock this afternoon.

Last year there was some little trouble with the ballot boxes but this year everything seems to be running very smoothly. Several workers in the interests of both men are about and a number of automobiles and carriages are at the disposal of those voters who desire to ride to the polls.

The early vote was quite heavy and at 10 o'clock 593 votes had been cast in both precincts, as against 665 for the same period a year ago. At 1 o'clock the total vote of the ward was 795 as against 840 for the same period a year ago which shows that while the vote seemed to be larger than a year ago it was really not so.

The election officers in both precincts are a nobby looking set of men today, for each of them is sporting a rosebud the gift of Walter M. Packard the Warden of precinct two.

One of the voters that arrived about noon was Fred H. French who was warmly greeted by his many friends. Mr. French underwent a surgical operation last fall and has not been seen in Quincy much since that time.

Two motions tending toward the admission of women at certain meetings of the club were unanimously voted down. A committee was appointed to adopt ways and means for procuring a temporary structure to be placed near the church and used by the club and others for social occasions.

Following a further controversy on other matters, adjournment was had for refreshments.

PRES. ELIOT SAILS FOR ORIENT

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, with his wife and daughter Ruth, and his secretary Roger Pierce, sails today from New York, to investigate the peace sentiment in the Orient at the request of the executive committee of the Carnegie Foundation, of which h eis a trustee.

The trip is notable from the fact that the noted scholar, aged 77, is going as a pilgrim to the mysterious East, bearing the latest manifestation of the lofty spirit of the modern West.

The Harvard club of New York city yesterday gave Dr. Eliot a farewell reception. The sailing today will be made at 10 o'clock on the Kron Prinz Wilhelm for Cherbourg. From there Dr. Eliot will go to Genoa, whence he will sail via the North German Lloyd line to Ceylon, arriving at Colombo in December. The following six weeks will be spent in India, and will include a wto weeks' trip into the interior. In January the party will leave Calcutta for Singapore, where a side trip will be taken to Java, whence Dr. Eliot will sail for Hong Kong, where he will spend a week. Manila will next be a starting place for a trip through the Philippine Islands, when the party will return to China, leaving the first of April for Japan. Returning, a trip will be made to the Hawaiian Islands.

The party will arrive in San Francisco on July 4 or 5 and proceed to New York, whence they will go immediately to the scholar's summer home at Mount Desert, Me.

DREDGE NEW ORLEANS LAUNCHED AT FORE RIVER YARDS TODAY

Unique Craft Is Successfully Christened By Miss Gertrude W. Towne From City In Whose Honor Vessel Is Named

Built For Service On Mississippi River

The Fruhling suction dredge New Orleans, building for the United States War Department was successfully launched this morning at the Fore River Ship Building yard, in the presence of an interesting gathering of government officials, officials of the Fore River Co., and friends of Miss Gertrude W. Towne, of New Orleans, La., who came east to become the sponser of the vessel.

The launch was scheduled for 11 o'clock and it was not many minutes from that hour when President Bowles gave the signal to saw away the soul pieces. The next instance the vessel was on her trip down the greased ways toward Weymouth Fore river.

As the New Orleans began to move, Miss Towne struck her steel bow a blow with a bottle of Mumm's Extra Dry and as the sparkling wine ran down the steel sides of the bow, gave her the name by which she will be known.

Miss Towne carried a handsome bouquet which was presented to her when she arrived at the yards by President Bowles. While the launch-

BALLOT BATTLE IS ON TODAY

Voters In Many States Are Exercising Their Franchise

CONTEST IN MASSACHUSETTS

Indications That Successful Candidate For Governor Will Not Have Very Large Margin—Foss' Adherents Claim His Election by Over 50,000, While 35,000 For Frothingham Is Claimed by Republicans—Candidates Nominated by Five Parties In Rhode Island

Boston, Nov. 7.—Keen interest is focused on elections throughout the United States today because of their being indicative of the trend of opinion toward the national campaign in 1912.

State officers will be elected in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland, Kentucky, Mississippi, Louisiana and New Mexico. The greatest national interest centres in Massachusetts.

Five parties in Rhode Island, where a full state ticket is to be elected, have nominated candidates. Governor Pothier, Republican nominee for re-election, is threatened with defeat by Lewis A. Waterman, Democrat, who has made a whirlwind campaign. A legislature will also be chosen.

Enfranchised residents of New Mexico will vote for the first time on a full state ticket, members of congress and for the members of a state supreme court.

In Georgia a primary election will be held to nominate a candidate to succeed Governor Smith, who will soon resign to take his seat as United Statets senator.

Maryland, besides electing a governor, will elect a legislature. Arthur P. Gorman, Jr., is the Democratic nominee for governor, while the Republicans have named Philip L. Goldsborough.

In New York state the fight has been most bitter in New York city, where the fusionists, including Republicans and Independents, are waging war against Tammany. A hard fight has been made to secure control of the assembly.

A full legislative ticket will be voted on in New Jersey, with possible results on the presidential aspirations of Governor Wilson.

Ohio will vote on municipal offices. Particular attention is drawn there because of the presence of President Taft, who will cast his ballot in Cincinnati.

In Kentucky a successor will be chosen to Governor Wilson, and Virginia will vote for legislative and county offices.

The Bay State Fight

Massachusetts will elect a governor, a lieutenant governor, a secretary of the commonwealth, a treasurer and receiver general, an auditor, an attorney general, eight members of the executive council, and 280 members of the legislature today. She will also pass on fifteen referendums, thirteen of which will deal with local questions, only two on all the state ballots.

The general concensus of opinion is that it is anybody's fight in Massachusetts and that whoever is elected governor today will win by a small margin. The betting favors Frothingham, the odds being 10 to 8.

Chairman McDonald of the Democratic state committee claims the election of Foss by over 50,000, while Charles S. Baxter, campaign manager for Frothingham, asserts that his man will win by 35,000.

There is much talk on the street of the election of Frothingham and Walsh, and there is no question but a decided effort is being made to that end by those who are opposed to what they call the narrowness of Robert Luce on the liquor and Sunday issues.

Fitzgerald Gets Busy

Following the declination of Governor Foss to make any more contributions in addition to the $5000 given to the state committete for work in Boston, Mayor Fitzgerald raised $3000 among the officeholders of the city for use at the polls. The mayor contributed $1000, Martin M. Lomasney and Chairman McDonald of the state committee $500 each, and Clerks Manning and Campbell of the superior court substantial amounts. In explanation, the mayor says that he feels that the governor should not be called upon to finance the Boston campaign.

The largest amount of political mail ever deposited in the central postoffice and sixty-eight stations in the Boston postal district was delivered to thousands of voters during the past week, and at noon yesterday there was not a piece of campaign material left. Postmaster Mansfield is elated over the excellent showing.

The postmaster early in the campaign mailed to each candidate and the various committees a circular requesting them to mail their campaign material early.

The mail this year weighed many tons. From the Republican state committee 51,000 letters were deposited. Half a hundred pouches of campaign material were sent out by the Republican party.

The Democrats sent out more campaign material this year than for several seasons. Tons of booklets, circulars and the like were deposited by them.

Cut In Foss Vote

Although Governor Foss received over 27,000 plurality in Boston last year, Mayor Fitzgerald will only concede a plurality of 20,000. There are evidences of a cut in the Foss vote. On the Republican end it is declared by Chairman Herman Hormel of the Republican city committee that the governor will only carry Boston by a vote between 10,000 and 15,000.

There is considerable sentiment, not alone in Boston, but throughout the state, for the ticket of Frothingham and Walsh. On the Republican end it is generally conceded that Robert Luce, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, will be badly cut.

Walsh has been a powerful figure on the stump. His personality has attracted thousands of votes and there is no question but that he will get a big Republican vote.

The Democratic candidates for state officers, Frank J. Donahue for secretary of state, Augustus L. Thorndike for state treasurer, Charles B. Strecker for state auditor and George W. Anderson for attorney general, have waged the strongest campaign ever made on the Democratic end for these offices.

Democrats on the Outside

It is doubtful, however, if they will be counted in unless the unexpected happens—a Democratic landslide. The most the Democrats can hope for is the election of the governor and lieutenant governor.

In the last days of the campaign Senator Lodge has loomed up as a prominent factor. He has been made the subject of attack in the fight but has succeeded in keeping out of the limelight, not having appeared on the stump. His hand was in evidence yesterday at the Republican state committee rooms, and the "old boss" received reports from every section of the state.

Senator Crane was also in close touch with the campaign and yesterday he sent out word to his personal lieutenants in every section of the state to do their best to bring out the vote for Frothingham.

Tariff Issue In Rhode Island

Providence, Nov. 7.—The largest registration in the history of the state—90,600—has been taken to presage a heavy vote today, when the franchised citizens will decide whether Aram J. Pothier will be the Republican governor for a fourth term or whether Lewis A. Waterman, the Democratic candidate, may assume the office.

The tariff has been made the predominating issue by the Republicans and the vote today will be considered an indirect opinion of the people on that subject.

In addition to the election of state officers, the voters will decide whether the biennial election amendment shall become a law and whether the state shall expend $600,000 for state roads.

Each city and town will exercise its privilege of local option by voting on the license question. All the cities in the state except Newport elect municipal officials.

STRANGE MARINE UPHEAVAL

It Is Followed by Three-Acre Island Rising From the Sea

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Nov. 7.—A new island has appeared near the Serpent's Mouth, the southern entrance to the Gulf of Paria, between the island of Trinidad and Venezuela.

A strange upheaval occurred in the sea a short distance off the village of Chatham. Huge columns of smoke first were observed. They were accompanied by a tremendous report and followed by flames, which were visible for miles.

The new island is about three acres in extent, and rises out of the water to a height of from eight to ten feet. Before the upheaval, the depth of water at this spot averaged about twenty feet.

MANY WERE TRESPASSERS

Our Railroads Killed 10,396 and Injured 150,159 In a Year

Washington, Nov. 7.—The chances are one to 458 that a railroad man will be killed on his job and one to thirteen that he will be injured. The interstate commerce commission's report of railroad accidents during the twelve months ended on June 30 shows that ratio.

During that period 10,396 persons were killed and 150,159 were injured on the railroads of the United States. However, of the number killed only 386 were passengers, and more than half of the total number killed were trespassing upon railroads or stealing rides on trains.

Twenty-Two Seamen Lost

London, Nov. 7.—The Greek steamer Lordos Byron foundered in the English channel during a gale. Twenty-two of the crew of twenty-five were lost.

Sugar Price Drops

New York, Nov. 7.—The price of refined sugar was marked down another ten points in the local market, making the third decline recently reported.

CITY COUNCIL

Commission. Referred to the Committee on Streets.

Later on motion of Councilman Sandberg the communication was taken from the committee and he offered an order abandoning that part of the street as requested.

Councilman Cherrington thought that the matter should go to a committee as the people of Atlantic were interested in this street. As he understood it, when the park commission took a street, the use of the street for traffic teams was prohibited. If this were done here, it would be a great injustice to the people of Atlantic, as coal and other teams would have to go to the village by a round about way.

In reply to questions, the City Solicitor read a letter from the Commission in which it was stated that they intended to maintain a part of the street as a traffic road.

The City Solicitor further said that if the city refused to concur in the taking, an appeal could be made to the Governor and Council, who would concur in it.

Councilman Leslie wanted something definite that the street would be open to traffic teams.

The letter of the Commission was then read in full after which the order concurring in the abandonment of the street was adopted.

A communication was received from Samuel G. Beale asking that the soldiers' relief paid to his wife be paid to him.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL
ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size
Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.
First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.
Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.
Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.
Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.
Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.
Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

MUSICAL FAMILY.

A little colored girl appeared on one of the city playgrounds the other day, accompanied by two pickaninnies, who she explained, were cousins of hers, visitors in Newark.

"What are their names?" asked the young woman in charge of the playground.

"Aida Overture Johnson and Rigoletto Sextetta Johnson," the girl answered 'You see, their papa used to work for an opera man."—Newark News.

"It may seem incredible, but it's true. Twenty years ago he was a burglar. Now he's a preacher of the gospel and a useful man."

"It doesn't seem incredible to me. I know a most excellent preacher on the West Side who was once a ward politician."—Chicago Tribune.

FRANCISCO I. MADERO

Formally Takes Office as President of Mexico

MADERO IS INAUGURATED

Simple Ceremony as He Assumes Presidency of Mexico

Mexico City, Nov. 7.—Formalities connected with Francisco I. Madero's inauguration as president were simple and brief.

Madero took the oath, or as it is prescribed by Mexican law, "protested" in the chamber of deputies before a joint meeting of both houses of congress, the oath being administered by the president of the chamber. He made no inaugural address, but left immediately for the national palace, where Francisco Leon de la Barra, who has been the provisional president since the departure of General Diaz, awaited.

De la Barra removed from his breast the tri-colored band, insignia of the presidency, and Madero donned it. Short speeches were exchanged and the retiring executive left a few hours later for Vera Cruz, whence he will sail for Europe.

REPEAL IS DEFEATED IN PINE TREE STATE

Vote Corrections Accepted by Governor and Council

Augusta, Me., Nov. 7.—The governor and council last night announced their decision to accept the corrections on the vote of Limestone, Westfield, Athens and Matinicus, which defeats the repeal of constitutional prohibition in Maine by 758 votes.

Governor Plaisted announced that at an early date he will call a special session of the legislature, to be held probably in February.

One of the reasons given by Plaisted for calling the legislature together was to "submit an amendment to the constitution which will permit the enactment of laws concerning the liquor traffic which are capable of honest enforcement because sustained by the sentiment of the several communities to which they will be applied."

HOLDS COURT IN BATHTUB

Judge Conducts Unconventional Trial and Fines Auto Speeders

Porterville, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Police Judge Lumley established a precedent when he held court in his home while seated in his bathtub.

W. W. Sargent, an automobile salesman, and F. E. De Valon were arrested for speeding. As court was not in session, the two men drove to the Lumley home, and when a voice answered the bell they walked into the house. Finding the judge in his bathtub, they explained the necessity, in their minds, for the unconventional trial.

They were fined $10, which they paid by leaving a check on the table in the judge's sittingrcom.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 7.—Allison McFarland was arraigned before Chief Justice Gummere and pleaded not guilty to an indictment charging him with the murder of his wife with cyanide of potassium. Gummere set Jan. 8 as the date of the trial.

The state will seek to show that McFarland sought to get rid of his wife that he might marry Florence Bromley of Philadelphia.

RESIGNATION IS TURNED DOWN

Richeson Still Pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church

WOMEN HIS CHIEF DEFENDERS

Two-Thirds of Members Stand by Man Accused of Murder of Avis Linnell Despite Bitter Denunciation of Him by Those Who Think He Should Be Dropped—Losers Succeed In Laying Question on Table Until Nov. 24

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 7.—The resignation of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson as pastor of Immanuel church was refused last night. The man indicted for the murder of Avis Linnell, though he has resigned from the pastorate of the church, still is its ministerial head, and will be so until Nov. 24, when it is more than probable that the resignation again will be refused.

There were forty-five members of the church present at the special session last night, and the final vote was 30 to 15 against accepting the resignation.

The meeting was the stormiest in the history of the Immanuel Baptist church. Though all present were pledged to secrecy before they were allowed to vote on the question or take any part in the meeting, the war in the church grew so hot that the remarks of the combatants were plainly audible to those without.

There were bitter denunciations of the minister by those who favored a prompt acceptance of the resignation. There were eulogies of Richeson from those who opposed the acceptance of the resignation. Throughout, the sobbing, crying, and at times even the screaming of women, lent a note of tragedy to the meeting.

The women, especially, were against accepting the resignation of the pastor, though there were several men who sided with them. The party for the acceptance advanced the arguments that the minister's arrest and the necessary notoriety that attached to his name reacted upon the church and brought it into disrepute. They argued that enough had been found that was not good in the minister's character to warrant the acceptance of his resignation, even though he was not proven guilty of murder.

Immediately three-quarters of the congregation were on their feet in protest. A score clamored for an opportunity to speak in favor of the minister.

Finally one of the party against accepting gained the floor. She said the moment that his church repudiated Richeson it would be an acknowledgement to the general public that they considered him guilty and it would count heavily against the minister in his coming trial. She said that it was the part of loyalty to the minister for the church to stand by him until the very end.

She argued that in the event of Richeson's innocence of the crime being established, his church, if it accepted his resignation, would be placed in the light of believing ill of its pastor before he had a chance to speak for himself.

A vote was taken, when it was found that the resignation was not accepted. Then the losers urged that it should not be made final, so it was agreed to lay the question on the table until Nov. 24.

At the request of the meeting Clerk Cummings drew up a letter to the minister. The letter reads:

"Your communication of Nov. 1 was received by me and read to the church. After due consideration we have decided to lay the matter of your resignation on the table until the next meeting of the church, to be held Friday, Nov. 24."

EXCUSED FROM JURY DUTY

Court Appreciates Farmer's Love For His Mother-In-Law

Kansas City, Nov. 7.—When Judge Thomas asked the 150 jurors he was examining in the circuit court if any of them had good excuses for not serving, Carl Schroeder, a farmer near Independence, stepped forward.

"Yes, your honor, my mother-in-law is sick and I don't like to leave her."

The judge questioned him no further.

"A man who thinks that much of his mother-in-law ought not to be discouraged," he said, and released the man from jury duty.

ONE MILLION PATENTS ISSUED

Ohio Inventor Gets Distinction Sought by Many.

AMERICA LEADS THE WORLD.

Thirty Per Cent of All Patents Have Been Issued In This Country—Nearly 10,000 Granted Before Serial Plan of Numbering Was Adopted.

Announcement of the issue of the millionth patent (since they have been serially numbered) was announced recently by Commissioner Edward B. Moore. It was issued to an Akron (O.) man for a puncture proof tire for automobile and other vehicles, depending upon rubber springs for its resiliency.

Commissioner Moore said the application came up in the regular order of business, was numbered and carried through the regular channels and was signed without ceremony. Numerous requests were received from various inventors for this distinction, but they were not heeded.

Englisnman Got First Patent.

This patent, although numbered 1,000,000, is in reality not the millionth for the reason that prior to July 28, 1836, there were granted 9,957 patents without numbers, so that counting from the first patent granted, July 31, 1790, and including the 9,957 unnumbered patents, the millionth patent would be the one numbered 990,043, issued April 18, 1911. The first one was granted to Clarence Thorvald Hasen of Lancaster, England, for a machine to make tubes from fibrous materials.

The American patent system was founded by an act of congress April 10, 1790. Thomas Jefferson, then secretary of state, inspired it and may be said to have been its father. He took great pride in it, it is said, and gave personal consideration to every application that was made for a patent during the years between 1790 and 1793.

Under this act applications for patents were examined by a board of commissioners consisting of the secretary of state, the secretary of war and the attorney general, and after having been passed upon by this tribunal they still required the certificate of the attorney general and the signature of the president. The first board consisted of Thomas Jefferson, secretary of state; Henry Knox, secretary of war, and Edmund Randolph of Virginia, attorney general. The first patent was granted to Samuel Hopkins on July 31, 1790, for manufacturing potash and pearlash.

Fees Then and Now.

The act of 1790 prescribed the following fees for the granting of patents, which are in striking contrast with those exacted today: "For receiving and filing the petition, 50 cents; for filing specifications, per copy sheet containing 100 words, 10 cents; for making out the patent, $2; for affixing the great seal, $1; for indorsing the day of delivering the same to the patentee, including all intermediate services, 10 cents." Today the government fees amount to $35.

In 1793 the patent laws were revised, and from that time until 1836 no system was maintained and every application that was made was granted. In 1836 congress passed new laws that are the foundation of the present patent laws. It was in this year that patents were first numbered, July 28, 1836. Patent No. 1 was granted to John Ruggles of Thomaston, Me., for a locomotive steam engine for inclined planes. Since that time 1,825,000 applications have been made, of which 1,000,000 have been granted. There are 90,000 pending; the rest are abandoned. These represent an approximate expenditure of $47,000,000 in government fees from the inventors alone.

Under these laws (act of 1793) the board of commissioners was abolished, and the power to grant patents was vested in the secretary of state. It was not until 1836 that the office of commissioner of patents was established. Henry L. Ellsworth was the incumbent.

Grinding Out 35,000 a Year.

America leads the world as an inventive nation, France coming next, with 445,000 patents; then Great Britain, with 430,000; Garmany, with 250,000; Belgium, 240,000; Canada, 135,000. The Bahamas and Liberia share the "booby" prize, with two patents each. The total number of patents granted by all nations of the world is 3,150,000, of which 30 per cent have been granted by the United States.

The patent office is now granting patents at the rate of 35,000 a year, applications being received at the rate of 65,000 per annum, the examinations of which requires 375 examiners.

Owing to the enormous increase in the business of the patent office in the last few years its building has become very much overcrowded, and Commissioner Moore hopes that congress will appropriate the $7,000,000 now in the treasury to the credit of the patent office for a new building.

More Railroad Employes.

Nearly 200,000 new employees were added to the pay rolls of the railroad companies of the United States between June 30, 1909, and June 30, 1910, according to the annual report of the interstate commerce commission.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Some people seem to think the courts could jail J. P. Morgan, but it is much more likely that J. P. Morgan could jail the courts.

Few deer have been killed in the Adirondacks this fall, and guides are so shy and wild that not many of them have been bagged.

Richard LeGallienne, the poet, was married for only the third time the other day. This is ultra conservatism for a literary man.

As goes Quincy so goes the state, therefore as the whole country is eagerly watching the outcome of the election in Massachusetts, Quincy is right to the front.

President Taft went down in a gold mine the other day. Were this 1896, he would now have to go down in a silver mine or be lined up with the money power.

The Printers Cost Congress has met in Boston, but as printers all work purely out of their passionate love of the human race, no one said anything about higher prices.

The Wrights think they have a device that can be balanced in the air at any time, but a teterboard over the barn yard fence is as far as we care to go in that direction.

The fact that one Cambridge minister is charged with killing a girl convinces some logical minded people that all the other 100,000 clergymen in this country are no better than they should be.

Col. Roosevelt and Consul Escobar are arguing as to how the United States acquired the right to build the Panama canal, but the question as to who struck the Hon. William Patterson would be more timely.

Mr. Taft has travelled 298,728 miles since entering government service in 1900, but if they figured in the distance he has travelled in hunting for lost golf balls, the total would be much larger.

John R. Walsh's relatives say Taft killed him. We are acquainted with a number of bankers who pay no attention to the ticker, but continue to sit tight on the lid of their depositors' money and somehow they keep out of jail.

As a New York lawyer gets an aged woman's estate of $110,000 for giving her his sleeping car berth, it would seem as if, when women have street car seats offered them, they should exert themselves to the extent of saying "Thank-you."

Apparently very little interest is shown in the further widening and improvement of Hancock street. No one appeared at the public hearing on the subject Monday evening at City Council and the affair went over on that account. Probably the feeling is that the matter can wait for many others of a vastly important nature.

And after the battle of the ballots which will soon be over, another very important question will be in order for discussion. Elevation or depression of the railroad tracks in the elimination of the grade crossings. The affair comes up spasmodically, a few are heard and the matter apparently forgotten. The affair is surely a problem for the engineers to decide, but after all, the whole general scheme is largely a matter of engineering that must ultimately be settled in a way to obtain the best results from an engineering as fell as civic point of view.

The most successful business men agree with Nat B. Fowler who addressed the Get Together club of the Jordan, Marsh Co., the other night at their fifth annual dinner. He complimented the firm because it confined its publicity to newspapers instead of advertising billboard fashion. No advertiser," he said, "has a right to place advertisements in places where a person who doesn't want to see them is virtually compelled to see and read such ads. They should only be placed in newspapers and periodicals so that purchasers who wish may see and read. The newspapers and periodicals, are the only natural and legitimate advertising mediums, and i hope to see the day when all will advertise exclusively in them. The advertising industry has increased more rapidly than any other line of business and gets best results through the newspapers."

SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM.

The death of Joseph Pulitzer has set the newspaper world to questioning as to what success may be expected from the school of journalism which he so generously endowed. It will be recalled that he gave $1,000,000 to Columbia university for this purpose. Difficulties about securing a head for the institution and other matters postponed the opening of the school, but active steps will soon be taken to start it.

A school of journalism will never be a success when the student merely sits in class rooms, recites lessons learned from text books, and takes notes from lecturers, no matter how subtle or how experienced the faculty may be. No one ever learned to swim by sitting on the bank and taking notes from a lecturer.

Such a school will find it absolutely necessary to conduct a newspaper of its own serving some public constituency so well that it will at least meet expenses, on which students could get actual practice.

At the same time there is a real need for such a school. The path to the higher newspaper success under present conditions is needlessly thorny.

The many young men trained on metropolitan papers, who in the course of time buy small city papers, are now completely bewildered when they set foot in the mysterious realm of ink and presses. They scarcely know the difference between seven point type and a column rule.

A real school of journalism needs to teach its young men the technique of the printing office, also to prepare them to estimate job work and produce craftsmanlike printing, without devoting years to the routine tasks of the printer's devil.

On the other hand, if a fellow has it in him to write editorials for a great national newspaper, it may be very helpful to him to report fires and weddings for a few months to acquire accuracy of detail and color in description. But it is unfortunate if he has to spend years to learn lessons that under proper guidance could be acquired in a few months.

OLD FRIEND RETIRES.

The retirement of Col. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) from his life as a showman to his Wyoming ranch will cause regrets to millions of pale faces of the Effete East.

With his passing a last link with the old plains life drops out. Having probably killed more redskins than any living man, he did his best to give a faithful picture of the life that was.

But even then the taint of civilization cast its pale blur over the scene. The painted and yelling Indian who you might think was almost ready to throw his tomahawk at you in the grand stand, would be smoking cigarettes when off duty, and his pony's tail would be tied up with baby ribbon. If you tried to win his favor with a hunting knife, he would express a preference for a five dollar fancy pipe.

When Buffalo Bill swept up to the grand stand at the head of his troop, white haired at his age of sixty-five but as erect as a boy of twenty, so straight on his kinky horse that a line from his neck would scarcely swerve from the perpendicular, you saw in person the kind of knight errantry that the plains life produced. There was less heraldry and trappings than old world chivalry displayed, but manhood never reached a more virile type.

—Every now and then a savage attack is made upon the universities and colleges on account of the immorality which is said to be rampant in college life. Now let it be admitted once for all that there are young men in college, and now and then a man in the teaching force of the universities, who are dissolute in all the relations of life and unworthy to be received into any decent society. But these men are just as rare in the university as they are in any business organization. When at any one of our universities Commencement Week brings together hundreds of graduates, an exhibition is made of a decent and self-respecting manhood which cannot be surpassed in any of the associations which bring men together. Most of the aspersions to which we refer are the result of ignorance, folly and fanaticism.—Christian Register.

Q.—Where did evil originate? Is God the Author of evil? (Isaiah xlv. 7; Amos iii, 6.)

Answer.—The word evil in the texts cited has the meaning in the Hebrew language of adversity or calamity. These evils or calamities were sent upon the Jews as chastisements for their violation of the terms of the Covenant which they had made with the Lord. The evil here referred to was not evil in the sense of its being a wrong or a sin. Right and wrong, good and evil as principles have always existed and always will. Principles are eternal. Sin was produced by the evil principle becoming active, and began with Satan who permitted evil to control and dominate his course of action. Sin and evil were introduced into the world by Satan when he induced our first parents to disobey the Divine command. Thus the race has come under the dominion of sin and death supervised by Satan, the god (ruler) of this "present evil world." (II Corinthians iv, 4.) At the appointed time when the Lord shall again control earth's affairs, establishing His own Kingdom in the earth, Satan is to be bound and eventually will be destroyed, while evil will gradually cease to be active until at the close of Christ's reign, when sin and evil in their various forms, sorrow, suffering, and death, shall be no more. (Revelation xxi, 3-5.)

Q.—How and to what extent were the Apostles inspired?

Answer.—There are some at the present day who believe that modern authors, teachers and poets are as fully inspired as were the Apostles. Even some of our clergymen apparently have the thought that they themselves are as authentic and reliable authorities, and should be regarded as such. If this view is the right one, then inspiration is a cheap article, and wholly unreliable when we reflect upon the many conflicting theories and doctrines that have been promulgated by modern theological authorities. The Apostle Peter, in referring to the inspiration of the Sacred Writers, declares that "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." (II Peter i, 21.) That is to say, God's holy power or influence operating upon the minds of the Prophets caused them to speak and to write of future things in relationship to the Divine purposes, which even they themselves did not understand. (Daniel xii, 8, 9.) The Apostles likewise were caused to write of matters that would be necessary to the spiritual interests and welfare of the Lord's people in after times. (II Timothy iii, 16, 17.) Plenary inspiration has not existed since the days of our Lord and the Apostles, and is not needed, as the Scriptures are complete and sufficient of themselves.

LAUNCHING

ing was in the nature of a private one, there was quite a party of army officials in attendance headed by Col. Francis V. Abbott, of the war engineering department at Boston who had charge of the launch for the government. He, with a large party of friends, came out early this morning in automobiles.

There was the usual large gathering of interested persons outside the works on the shores of Weymouth Fore river to watch the launch and they added their cheers as the vessel slid gracefully down the ways.

Immediately after the launch a lunch was served to the official launching party.

Following is a description of the new boat.

This dredge which is being built for the United States Corps of Engineers, War Department, is to be named "New Orleans," and is of the "Fruhling" Suction Head type, so successfully used in Europe and Canada where dredging conditions are similar to those of the Mississippi Passes, and is of the following dimensions:

Length over all (not including dredge head) 315 feet.

Length between perpendiculars 300 feet.

Breadth moulded, 50 feet.

Depth moulded, 26 feet.

Length of hopper, 93 feet, 9 inches.

Capacity of hopper, 3000 cu. yards.

Maximum dredging depth, 50 feet, 0 inches.

Minimum dredging depth, 21 feet, 0 inches.

Draft loaded, 20 feet.

Coal bunker capacity, 300 tons.

Speed loaded, 10 knots.

The most novel feature of the Dredge is the type of head, which is practically a huge enclosed rake, some 18 feet wide by 5 feet fore and aft, separated along the edge with sharp cutting teeth through the incisors of which is ejected high pressure water to aid in disintegrating the spoil and make it of suitable consistency to be sucked through duplicate suction pipes into the pumps from which it is deposited in either of the ten hoppers. These hoppers have a combined capacity of 3,027 cubic yards, or approximately 3,000 tons, and can be filled under favorable conditions in the remarkably short space of 30 minutes. The dredged material may then be transported by the vessel to any convenient dumping ground at a speed of 10 knots per hour, when by the manipulation of four hydraulic ram mechanisms the hopper doors, twenty in number, and opening outwardly through the ship's bottom, may be operated either individually or simultaneously for discharging. Should it be desired to utilize the dredged material for reclamation work, a swivel deck discharging pipe has been installed, to which the necessary lengths of shore piping may be coupled, and through this pipe the dredge can discharge her own cargo by sucking it from the hoppers and ejecting it to any location desired or, as a third alternative, into scows or other hoppers alongside.

The machinery consists of four sets of triple e xpansion, inverted, marine type engines, arranged in pairs, tandem, and built on common bedplates. The two after sets of these main engines are coupled together to the propeller shafting and the two forward sets to the 26 inches centrifugal pumps used for dredging. By an ingenious arrangement of clutches, the propelling and pumping engines can be coupled together so that the full power of all four engines can be exerted on the twin propellers when desired, while when dredging, the after sets will be free to drive the propellers and the forward sets will drive the dredging pumps, steam being supplied by four Babcock and Wilcox Co's. boilers.

The "New Orleans" furnishes comfortable and commodious quarters for its crew. The captain, inspector and first mate are berthed in a large deck house, while the chief engineer and his assistants haveb een accommodated in the after deck house and adjoining the engine room. This after deck house is also arranged for stewards, cooks, etc., and provided with suitably furnished mess rooms for officers and petty officers, together with toilets, wash places, etc. On the lower deck aft on each side of the well are mess rooms for seamen and firemen, cold storage rooms and refrigerating machinery. The monkey forecastle is divided off into quarters for seamen, firemen, oilers, storerooms, wash places, carpenters' workshop, etc., while nearby are located the quartermaster and boatswain. As the "New Orleans" will operate mostly in semi-tropical waters, the greatest attention has been paid to the sanitary and ventilation arrangements, and all living quarters and machinery places are well supplied with both artificial and mechanical ventilation.

In addition the vessel is lighted throughout by electricity and is fitted with a very powerful electric searchlight and a steam heating system is installed with individually operated radiators in every living room on the vessel.

"Papa, I know what makes some people laugh in their sleeve," said little Harry.

"Well, my son, what makes them?" asked the father.

"Cause that's where their funny bone is," was the reply.—Troy Times.

HONORED AT SILVER ANNIVERSARY

Many Friends Of Mr. And Mrs. Carlson Tender Surprise Party In Celebration

MANY SUBSTANTIAL GIFTS

Monday was the twenty-fifth marriage anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Carlson of Saville avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Carlson had not planned to celebrate the event in any way, but their many friends thought different, believing it a good opportunity to testify in a way the high regard in which this most worthy couple are held by he Swedish residents of the city.

It was a little after 8 o'clock, when, in answering a summons to the door, Mrs. Carlson was surprised to see gathered about the door a large number of the parishioners of the Swedish Lutheran church and others, who quietly informed her that they had come to celebrate her silver wedding anniversary.

A messenger was dispatched to Mr. Carlson, who was at his restaurant and a few minutes later he joined his life companion in receiving congratulations and well wishes for the future.

The guests did not some empty handed, for Mr. and Mrs. Carlson were not only showered with remembrances of a substantial nature, but the younger people were not long in transferring the house into a floral bower with pinks and chrysanthemums.

During the hours that followed, good cheer prevailed. Several spoke of the high regard in which Mr. and Mrs. Carlson were held and in addition there was instrumental music. Refreshments were also served during the evening.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Carlson were born in Sweden, and both came to this country about the same time, although it was not until after their arrival that they met. Coming to America in 1881 Mr. Carlson went to Providence, R. I., where for a time he was employed in a printing office. He remained there about two years during which time he formed the acquaintance of Miss Johanna Anderson of Pontiac, R. I.

He came to Quincy in 1883, but although far away from his lady love, the mails brought them into frequent communication and on Nov. 6, 1886 Mr. Carlson went to Pontiac and claimed his sweetheart as his bride. They returned to Quincy where they have since resided.

Three children have been born to them, two sons and a daughter, the latter however has gone to her heavenly home. Mr. and Mrs. Carlson now reside on Saville avenue with their two sons Carl and Hilding.

Six months after Mr. Carlson's arrival in Quincy, he was the victim of a quarry accident by which he lost his leg. Recovering from the accident he opened a small store near the Quincy depot where he continued to prosper from the start. As the city grew, sod id his business and today he conducts an up-to-date store for the sale of newspapers and periodicals, and in connection conducts a restaurant.

It was in Mr. Carlson's home on Granite street that the first movement for the formation of a Swedish Lutheran church in Quincy took root. At first, meetings were held at his house, being conducted by clergymen from Boston and Campello. Later as the society grew larger quarters were secured and eventually the present church home on Granite street erected.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlson have always taken a deep interest in the affairs of the church and Mr. Carlson has served as one of its deacons and is at present one of the board of trustees.

—This year the American farmer has raised enough wheat to supply every family more than ten barrels of flour. There might also be an equal distribution of 150 bushels of corn to each family, with 50 bushels of oats, and 45 bushels of potatoes. Apportionment on this basis is out of the question, but supplies would be much more evenly distributed if the retail middleman contented himself with less profit. Year in and year out he takes heavy toll without attracting much attention. The public has been too busy pursuing manufacturers and wholesalers to realize that by another agent it is being heavily bled.—Boston Record.

SCOTCH NIGHT PROGRAM

At Regular Meeting Of The Quincy Catholic Club

READING BY MISS GAREY

The regular meeting of the Quincy Catholic club was held Monday evening in the Knights of Columbus rooms in the Savings Bank building. After a short business session, the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee who had prepared a Scotch night program. It opened with a piano selection of Scotch airs by Miss Rea Bizzozero. Then came a reading of "The lady of the lake" by Miss Mary Garey and a group of Scotch songs by Miss Angelina McCarthy.

Following this there was a social hour during which refreshments were served.

DWELLINGS TOO CLOSE.

It is a large and important issue which a real estate dealer raises when he says that houses should be built farther apart than they are being erected now. They should be, and for more reasons than protection from fire. Considerations of health, of suitable living conditions, and even of morality, combine to demand much more room than is allowed to residence building lots, not merely in tenement districts, but in other sections of the city. There are areas covered with single family dwellings of an attractive type, where three houses are placed on land which should not be made to hold more than two, and in the territory most occupied by the three-deckers, there are in some blocks double the number of houses that should be allowed. The condition is much worse in these tenement districts than in the localities where the first-mentioned houses are found, because the houses are high with the spaces between them merely passage ways in many of which little sunlight falls. With the smaller houses, there is at least some semblance of a yard, which can be made attractive in its little way. As a rule, there is little encouragement for this in the tenement blocks, so that the spaces are almost inevitably barren and forbidding. This condition is one of the by-products of the dangerous building—ugliness, disorderliness and unhealthfulness added to the fire menace.

Some attempt has been made to meet this condition by one of the provisions of the proposed new building code, in this section:

"No tenement, apartment or lodging house hereafter erected shall occupy more than ninety-five per cent. of a corner lot, or more than eighty per cent. of an inside lot, provided, that the space occupied by outside fire escapes or unincloscd stairs projecting not more than four feet shall not be deemed a part of the lot occupied."

From the point of view of the social reformer this provision would scarcely be considered drastic. The most that can be said for it, we think, is that it recognizes the necessity of light and air and room in tenement districts. This aspect of the building question is a large one, and in some ways quite as important as that of fire-preventive construction. —New Bedford Standard.

OYSTER ISLANDS.

Their Growth Is Exactly Analogous to That of Coral Reefs.

Oyster islands similar to those formed of coral are found in several parts of the world. The islands in Newport river and Beaufort harbor, North Carolina, says a writer in the Century Path Magazine, have been discovered to have as base a reef to which the spawn were attached and above this layer upon layer of oysters, vegetable growth and debris brought by the action of the waves and winds, all of which finally grows high enough to rise above the surface of the water. This growth is exactly analogous to that of the coral islands of the Pacific.

The islands near the mouth of the river Tagus, in Portugal, are said to have been built up in this way also. Here, where there is such a quantity of oysters that 150,000,000 a year would scarcely be missed if they were removed the expanse of water just beyond the river's mouth is dotted with oyster islands. As in the case of the coral reefs, which on the seaward side may be covered with living, growing coral, live oysters thrive in the same waters where the accumulation of dead generations has served to form the islands.

STEREOPTICON VIEWS AGAIN ENJOYED

Hospitality Of Mrs. Willard Gives Pleasure To Many At Quincy Mansion School

TALK BY MR. MacMANUS

Livermore hall of the Quincy Mansion school was filled Saturday evening with pupils and friends to again enjoy the hospitality of Mrs. Willard.

Mr. Seuman MacManus showed his beautiful stereopticon views and as most of the audience remembered his highly interesting talk of last April, he was greeted with applause. Mr. MacManus proved anewt hat he is a master in the art of story telling and a most admirable exponent of his peculiar genius, his splendid insight, his characters so real.

His collection of views so ably and interestingly shown, of "Rambles around Ireland," a lovely country by nature, and for each picture Mr. MacManus had a descriptive story, tale or poem of noteworthy excellence, mostly humorous, sometimes pathetic.

Over 100 pictures included the coasts of Ireland, the Irish lochs, castles, ruins of the 16th century, the Giants' causeway, the wishing seat, swinging bridge, waterfalls, cliff scenery, coast road, towers, exquisite moonlight views, thatched cottages, the Irish jaunting carts with their inimitable Jarvey's, pretty Irish colleens, fish women and donkeys harnessed to small carts.

Several views of Belfast and Dublin, the Cathedral, the building once used by Parliament ruins of abbeys of the 6th century.

The most beautiful book in the world hand illumined by a priest in the 7th century, with tracery so fine that a magnifying glass is necessary to see the beautiful work done with a pen, it is the wonder of modern students of ancient art. The thatched school building where the lecturer taught the boys and girls for seven years. The wonderful views of moor and mountain, vale and country, of Cork and Blarney castle, Killarney with her matchless lakes. A cottage near Limerick showing the old woman at her doorside carding wool, interiors of kitchen showing women spinning, weaving and making lace etc., the arts are being revived. A picture of the kitchen where the late ex-president McKinley's ancestors lived. The typical thatched cottage with its garden of roses. A picture of the old man who taught him the stories, old beliefs, Irish folk lore and fairy tales, and he showed the Patriots of Ireland. Things Gaelic are being revived, they are coming back to the Gaelic games, dances and bands and the Gaelic pipes are being taught the younger generation.

At the close, Mr. MacManus told of the wandering beggar man whose wonderful knowledge of folk lore and stories are listened to after prayers and the rosary have been said. Mr. MacManus' story of how "Daniel O'Connell saved the honor of Manuth College was enthusiastically received. Mrs. Willard requested him to tell about the post mistress Nancy Kelly, and her keen understanding of human nature. All the compulsive information which she acquired with the voluntary advice which she gave caused much laughter.

The evening was a pleasure that stays with you, to use a familiar phrase "The flavor lasts."

DONATION PARTY.

The annual donation party by Bethany circle for the benefit of the Quincy Bay Nursery is to be held tomorrow afternoon in Bethany chapel. The circle will entertain and serve tea. Donations of foods, such as cereals, rice, crackers, prunes, etc. will be very acceptable.

—Secretary Meyer is said to be insisting that naval officers in the bureaus of his department must choose between going to sea and ceasing to oppose his policies. This attitude on the part of the secretary will surely be regarded as a serious affront by that element of the navy which is always contemptuous of civilian control. To stick close to their desks and never go to sea is the ideal life for some representatives of this element, which will scorn any landlubber who happening for the moment to be secretary of the navy thinks he is entitled to have ideas of his own.—Salem News.

DANCE OF THE ATLANTICS

Prominent Baseball Team Plays Host At Alpha Hall

THOSE IN CHARGE

The Atlantic baseball club, the champion combination of the national pastime in this city, held forth in its seventh annual dance in Alpha hall last evening. Not only were the loyal rooters who have closely watched the team this season present but delegations of friends and representatives of organizations were on hand from Braintree, Weymouth, Brockton, Roxbury, Dorchester and Charlestown.

Wilson's orchestra furnished the music and dancing was enjoyed till midnight. The weather was rather unfavorable, yet fully 150 couples enjoyed the dance.

The main attraction of the evening was the splendid reception accorded John J. McDevitt and Rednor P. Coombs, the former a candidate for representative and the latter an aspirant for the senatorial toga. Both speakers were introduced by Councilman Harry T. Boyd, and the greeting that was forthcoming as each man started to speak was overwhelming.

Theodore Keohane, who managed the Atlantic, this past season, was floor director. James Fay was assistant floor director, while Frank M. Hoyt, was chief of aids. The following acted as aids:

Aids—Daniel F. Fitzgerald, Joseph J. Cunningham, Leo J. Fish, J. Putnam Kelly, Frank T. Murphy, Patrick J. Duggan, Frank M. Flynn, William F. Kelly, Stuart Armstrong, Frank J. Duffy, Joan Phinney, Charles Knight, Michael Penchy, Hugh McKinnon, Ray McDonald, Edward J. Clifford, James F. Keohane, John J. Gillon, Joseph J. Duggan, H. F. Dickinshire.

A SULTAN'S SEVEN BEDS.

Abdul Hamid Changed His Sleeping Place Every Night.

An interesting reminiscence of Abdul Hamid, the former sultan of Turkey, who was known as Abdul the Accursed and by several other more or less unpleasant titles, is given in the description of a visit to Yildiz Kiosk by Colonel (Count) Gleichen in the Household Brigade Magazine.

"The house was a perfect labyrinth of small rooms," he writes. "In no fewer than seven of these rooms were beds on which the sultan used to sleep—not ordinary beds, but large couches, sloping at a considerable angle from the head end downward, so that, covered with a quilt or two, his majesty could sleep in a semi-upright condition and spring up at a moment's notice to be ready for anything.

"No one knew in which of the seven rooms the sultan was going to sleep, for he changed his resting place every night for fear of hidden dangers. Along the main passage which led past many of these rooms a most ingenious arrangement existed for giving warning of the approach of any one. The floor was composed of loose planks under the carpet, so that merely to walk along it started a clanking sound which must invariably have waked a light and nervous sleeper."

During a heated political discussion between a number of men some one excitedly asked: "What is a boss, anyway?" Nobody seemed anxious to answer, but all turned somewhat expectant eyes towards Mr. Meekington, who had been taking a leading part in the discussion.

"You'll have to excuse me," said Mr. M., noting the expectant attitude of the crowd. "The only boss I know is the head of my modest household, and politeness to a lady prevents me from commenting upon her characteristics."—Ex.

SPEED OF A SHOT

Finding the Velocity of a Missile a Simple Matter.

MEASURED BY A PAPER DRUM.

The Whirling Cylinder Registers the Projectile's Flight With Minute Accuracy at Any Desired Distance. Wing Shots and Shot Charges.

Persons at all interested in gun firing of any kind, whether of the revolver or rifle or of heavy ordnance of any kind, occasionally come upon the term "muzzle velocity" and velocities of the missile at stated distances.

"How can anybody tell how fast a bullet is traveling when it leaves the muzzle of a weapon?" is a likely comment on the part of the layman.

As a matter of fact this approximate velocity of the missile may be one of the easiest of determinations to make.

In the first place, a drumlike cylinder is made of fixed diameter and of sufficiently stiff paper to allow of its revolving rapidly on a spindle. Using a cylinder of small circumference, it is necessary that the speed approach 2,000 revolutions a minute. These revolutions are produced by electric power, and the count is made by an exact mechanical register.

The gun is placed securely at the required distance from the drum and is sighted directly at the center of the cylinder, which is spinning at so many rods, even miles, a minute, as its circumference determines. With the drum's speed adjusted an electric current discharges the weapon, the bullet striking the center of the drum as measured from top to bottom.

The reader understands that with the drum stationary the bullet would pass directly through it on the line of its diameter, coming out on the other side with scarcely a shade of impediment. With the drum's periphery whirling at the rate of 2,000 revolutions a minute and its diameter only a fraction more than a foot this would mean a rate of 2,000 yards in sixty seconds. Thus in the fragment of a second necessary for the bullet to enter one side of the paper drum, cross it and out at the other side the opposite side of the drum would show considerable deviation from an exact diameter of line of passage.

It is this space of deflection shown inside the further rim of the drum that is used for the computation of velocity of the missile. The speed of the cylinder may be computed to the ten thousandth part of a second if necessary and the lineal distance run in that time be charted in perpendicular lines on the inner side of the paper. At whatever line the bullet penetrates outward it registers its time in crossing the diameter of the cylinder. If it has required the ten-thousandth part of a second for the bullet to fly one foot its muzzle velocity to the mile may be computed by any schoolboy. By the same process, too, the bullet's velocity at 100 yards or 500 yards may be determined.

Years ago before wing shooting had become an art the farmer with his muzzle loading shotgun and charge of black powder would shoot directly at a wild goose or duck in full flight. He evolved a theory of his own as to the oncoming bird, holding that the heavy breast feathers "turned" the shot. He waited until the bird had passed him when, firing directly at it, he could bring down his quarry.

But it was not because the bird was not vulnerable, coming breast on. The fact was that it flew over his charge of shot. Before he could pull the trigger and the hammer fell on the percussion cap and the comparatively slow black powder could be ignited and exploded, sending the shot twenty-five or thirty yards, the bird had flown yards perhaps beyond its position when the fowler first touched the trigger. But firing directly at the bird after it had passed the shot charge had a strong tendency to drop as it flew, and the bird flying on a level line "got in the way" of the charge.

Today the modern nitro powders are immensely quicker than was the old black gunpowder, yet it has been an engineering problem to determine just how fast and in what line a charge of shot will travel. In this determination the revolving drum device has shown several important facts which have been taken in connection with the speed of individual game birds and the effects of windage on a shot charge.

That most important fact as to the flight of shot from a modern shotgun is that at forty yards the shot are "strung out" for approximately fifteen feet. While the leading pellets in the string have greatest velocity and killing power, at this distance even the trailing pellets are of sufficient force to kill.

All this has led to the modern practice of the fowler to reckon with the speed of his shot, the speed of the bird, the influence of the wind in "drifting" the charge, and out of these established facts to "lead" the bird sufficiently to kill it rather than maim and cripple it.—Marvin Holton in Chicago Tribune.

FINDS A NEW RACE IN ARCTIC AMERICA.

Discovery Made by Explorer Stefansson—European In Features.

That there is a race of men resembling Scandinavians living in Victoria Land, in arctic America, who have never seen other white men and took the white man who discovered them for an Eskimo, is the remarkable statement contained in a letter from the explorer and anthropologist Vilhjamar Stefansson, who has been in the arctic region for the last three years or more on an expedition sent out by the American Museum of Natural History. The explorer states that these far northern Americans have the speech and habits of Eskimos, but are European in features.

In the finding of the new community Mr. Stefansson believes he has introduced among ethnologists a new problem of great scientific interest. He suggests three possibilities. One is that he has found a new branch of the human family. Another is that these beings may be the descendants of the 3,000 Scandinavians who suddenly and mysteriously disappeared from Greenland in the fifteenth century and of whom no trace has ever been found.

He also suggests that they may be descendants of a large party of Sir John Franklin's men who also mysteriously disappeared.

Mr. Stefansson left New York city in April, 1908. With him when he left was Dr. R. M. Anderson of Iowa, who was the naturalist of the expedition, which left here with the intention of learning something definite in relation to the ethnological puzzles of the land north of Hudson bay.

The expedition has done what it set out to do, Mr. Stefansson writes, and has also found there is no large river in the region, although one is designated on maps as the river La Riviere. He has learned that a certain cape is an island and that a certain island on the present map is a cape.

William H. Berry, recent democratic candidate for governor in Pennsylvania, told this story the other day to employees of the Baldwin locomotive works, illustrative of one of the points in a speech he sought to bring out with emphasis:

"Mary and Charley went down to Atlantic City together to spend the day. They went in bathing in the afternoon. Charley was first on the beach, and rolling in the sand, after his first dip, when Mary appeared from the bath house.

"Charley jumped up as Mary approached, dressed in pink, and said with all the ardor of his pent-up affection:

"'Gee, you're so sweet I could kiss you.'

"'Why don't you?' the girl retorted.

"'Well, because I have some sand in my mouth,' stammered the bashful youth.

"'Swallow that sand this minute and come kiss me,' the girl ordered. 'If I guess right you need some of that sand in your system.'"

A Speedy Cure for

Constipation, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Liver Complaints, Tired Feeling, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bad Complexion, Nervousness and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

"Bloodine Liver Pills"

act gently, yet thoroughly upon the bowels, liver, stomach and digestive organs. The pills in old and chronic cases of constipation and indigestion, act at once, without griping, nor do they leave any unpleasant after-effects, nor form a constant habit of purging, produced by other cathartic remedies.

"Bloodine Liver Pills"

restore the deranged and torpid liver to its normal condition and healthful action. Remove and prevent constipation by securing a natural and regular operation of the bowels, and relieve those unpleasant symptoms which attend a diseased or morbid condition of the liver, stomach and bowels. To assist in attaining this end, the following suggestions are offered.

REMARKS. Everyone who uses pills for their action on the liver, should know that large doses rarely prove as satisfactory as small ones. Large doses simply purge and pass out of the system, usually leaving the bowels constipated, and seldom removing the cause of the trouble, or improve the general health. On the other hand, small doses develop the alterative effect of the medicine, do not irritate or constipate the bowels, but gently stimulate the liver and prevent the accumulation of bile by directing its flow into the proper channels. Therefore it is advisable to commence by taking not over one or two pills at bedtime and increase does as necessary.

PORTLAND, Me.

GENTS:—I find your "Bloodine Liver Pills" the most effective pill I ever used. They cause no griping or constipative after effect as most liver pills do. Yours truly,

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Bent have moved from Barry street to their new house on Merrymount road.

Miss Edith Randall and niece Miss Florence Faxon enjoyed a week end visit with relatives in Newburyport.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Lawton of Presidents hill returned Monday night from Greenfield, Mass., where they enjoyed a few weeks' outing, and Mr. Lawton convalesced from his recent illness.

FLETCHER—SEEDS.

Wollaston friends will be interested to learn of the recent marriage in Springfield, Ohio, of Miss Marjorie Ellen Seeds, daughter of Mrs. Carrie Seeds and Matthews Fletcher of Bedford, Indiana. Miss Seeds attended the Quincy Mansion school and during her stay made many friends in Wollaston. The wedding was distinctly a society affair and was largely attended, Miss Dorothy Layman of Indianapolis, Indiana, also known in Wollaston, acted as maid of honor.

The Comma.

The point on which most writers are at odds with the compositor is the comma. He is too fond of this particular punctuation point. He takes a delight in breaking up the flow of a sentence with his artificial pauses. We all say, "Why then did you do it?" in one breath. It is the compositor who says, "Why, then, did you do it?" It is possible to be too hard on the comma. It has its undeniable uses. Edward Clodd in his memoir of Grant Allen tells the story of a compositor who dissented very strongly from that writer's moral philosophy and had to "set up" an interview with Allen in which the sentence occurred, "He is happily married." He salved his conscience by printing it "He is, happily, married."—London Chronicle.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Narrow Skirts More Graceful and Conducive to Comfort This Season.

Straight Lines in Skirts. Convention Allows Not Slightest Flare.

A woman clothed in one of the newest French costumes, consisting of a narrow draped skirt and a Directoire coat, was walking up the steps of a building. She was watched by a small child in rags and tatters who was drawing a red go-cart in which sat two small infants which she was mothering.

After a steady stare at the new costume she said. "Say, lady, there sure is some class to that hobble of yours."

One might say this of all the new skirts. They have become narrow in a very graceful way, and they are so dexterously cut and manipulated that the unpleasant effect of last Winter is entirely obviated. There is not that straight seam down the middle of the back; there is a fold, a tunic or an apron overskirt; always something to take away from the severity.

Even the plain ones do not gird the figure in gypsy fashion. They hang straight from the hips, and as the hips are now on a line with the waist the effect conceals the curves of the figure in a way that may be unfeminine, but is infinitely better than the way of last year.

It is an unpleasant fact, but a true one, that these new skirts push the plaited ones further back into oblivion. The women who continue to wear them look peculiarly old-fashioned. They are so definitely out of the picture of today that they make a woman conspicuous.

Who was it said that to be well dressed a woman should be so dressed that no one noticed how she was dressed? Whoever is was, he or she was referring to an elegance of costume that is really difficult to obtain in these days, but the truth of it applies as well o the woman who wears clothes that are conspicuously wrong as it does to women who wear otherwise gowns.

There was not the slightest attempt made in Paris this year to introduce the skirt that had width at the fottline, although there was a perceptible loosening up of the width around the hips and at the knees. In America this idea has been followed, although there is a tendency to give fullness by a flare at the back on each side of the box plait.

This isn't good; if individuals will not wear a tight skirt they should not have it widened in this manner; it should be slashed at the side or the front and plaits introduced, or better still, the material carried for 5 inches under the opening and loosely caught to the skirt.

Whatever else one may accept in a skirt, the slightest suggestion of a flare should be taboo. It does not go in with the scheme of things sartorial. It may be that fashions only differ in the bulges, as one satirist said, meaning that a woman's clothes fell in one place and bulged out in another, year after year, as a method of change, but, be that as it may, it is just as well to keep one's lines and curves, according to the map of fashion, even if each person does it in a way different from her neighbor.

So there is not only "class" to the hobble of today, but there is a universal acceptance of it that makes other skirts conspicuous. If hips are larger than fashion ordains them, if they have refused to grow smaller by wishing or dieting or banting, then one must have a certain amount of width at the hem of the skirt that is beyond the regulation measurement; but if hips are slender there is no reason to indulge in an old fashion because you have been prejudiced against the new one.

So many women, so many skirts, may be an adaptation of the old Latin proverb. Each woman can choose the exact measurement to suit her figure, her desires and her taste. She need not go to extremes even if she is ultrafashionable, for the skirt that is too tight for a graceful carriage should be barred; but there is no use in going in for a width that flies and flares and twists around her in a high wind merely because she wants to defy a present fashion.

The fact is that the narrow skirt is the correct one, and the accepted one. There were as many rumors this summer as there were hot days that the full skirt would replace the narrow one because women would not be the slaves of fashion designers. These rumors, like the hot weather, have fallen away with the approach of autumn, and we face a winter of what some women call a monstrosity in skirts, and what most women and many men call the most convenient and fitting skirt that has been invented for outdoor wear.

It really would be shocking if the fashionable women chose both of the extremes of fashion that are fighting for favor—that is, if they took up at one time the slashed short skirt and the low tulle bodice. The houses that show the transparent bodice over flesh pink tulle have skirts that are not divided and of conservative length; the houses that show the new skirt, which is shorter than ever and so tight that it is folded around the figure like a shawl, use only a moderate decolletage, and sometimes add shoulder straps to the tulle sleeves. That's a concession.

Women must take their choice; they cannot wear both at the same time. No one with a sane mind expects even the Frenchwomen, let alone the Americans, to wear the skirts that Callot has put upon the market. It is not only that they are short and slashed at the side, but there is something utterly impossible about them for a lady.

The way the material is wrapped around the figure, from left to right, smacks too much of the bazaars of Delhi to be admitted into conservative society anywhere. It is probably this method that is more at fault than the narrowness and the shortness.

Possibly, by actual measurement, these afternoon and evening skirts may not be shorter than the ones worn on the street by Americans, who now let their skirts clear the ground for four or five inches and wear the extra high topped boot with a white or gray cloth upper, or a tan laced boot with round toes. Many of these skirts are also divided at the side or the back in an invisible ay, yet they are modest and the other ones are not.

According to the traditions of other days, none of the evening skirts of today are exactly ladylike, with possible exception of those that are made by Worth. Even he does not object to a four-inch slash at the left side or in front, but all the other designers, while showing nothing as extreme as Callot, have taken up the idea of the lower part being transparent, are using excessively short underslips, and depending on silk frige to make up required length. Trere is always an uptilt of the drapery, to show the ankle in some way, and a few designers insist upon the skirt that is finished wiith a three-inch band of lace, unlined.

This age of critics, who are ready to cavil at every new fashion for women, should remember, when they talk so much about the modern license, that the hoop skirt of our ancestresses could not be called modest by the furthest stretch of the imagination, and that the light, short satin skirts of later days were worse than the ones we now wear.

There is something rather fetching about the new skirt that is brought out for young girls with its petticoat of lace, its long, draped tunic of thin satin and the two-inch flounce of bullion lace used as a finish and outlined at its top edge with a row of small pink satin roses.

Another new skirt that is introduced is gathered up, fold by fold, from the back to about six inches above the knees in front, and the folds are held from there to the ankles by an embroidered panel or one of heavy gold or silver lace. At the back the skirt touches the ground in a deep-rounded point.

This idea is used on skirts of all soft fabrics, but especially for the evening ones in satin and gauze. It is much newer than the skirt with the straight tunic. By the way, the skirt which has a drapery of chiffon cloth is quite out of it this year. Satin is draped on satin, and embroidered gauzes are used, but the plain chiffon cloth is now reserved for those fascinating long slim coats, which are covered with beading and are put over evening gowns.

Rather a good idea, don't you think, to work out on an evening gown that has seen better days? I notice many women getting these coats and ordering them in various colors, more or less barbaric, and they confidently explain that they are for the purpose of making last winter's gowns go through this winter.

It is hard to find a plain skirt. Diogenes, with his lantern, would find it as much of a job as he did in looking for an honest man. Possibly plain skirts will be worn, but they are not shown. The severe satin skirt with an elaborate bodice, that has been the mainstay of our wardrobe for so many seasons, must now be garnished up and turned into something else, as though it were Sunday's cold roast beef.

It makes little difference what you do to it, but do something to it you must. Slash it up the side and insert five ruffles of lace and twist an immense velvet cord into a motif and place it at the top of the slashing, or drape a wide band of white tulle around it which is covered with colored beads and edged with swansdowa or fur. Put two little aprons of lace, edged with fringe, at the front and the back from the waist down, and then open it for three inches in the front at the hem.

The moment one talks about tight skirts one's friends ask about petticoats. This is a useless subject to discuss, for there aren't any petticoats. There are thin linings to evening gowns, but the walking skirts are made of such heavy material, such as ratine and zibeline and corduroy, that a petticoat would be a nuisance.

The kind sold for those who must or will wear them are of silk jersey that clings like one's poor relations, and has a flat accordion plaited flounce of self-colored messaline edged with silk fringe.

You cannot get away from fringe this year. There is no use even crying for help. Accept it, wear it, and do find the most graceful way in which to use it! You can leave it off your shoes, but if you go according to present fashions you will put it on the sailor collar of your nightgown.

The discussion of furs goes on apace these days. It is nearly time to put them on and America is pre-eminently a fur country. Women of all classes and purses use fur in some way and at some price through our long winters. Unfortunately the pelts are not always well chosen or well made, but fortunately there is an immense production of semi-precious furs that come within the purse of many women and do not pretend to be what they are not.

After the discovery of the Russian pony came an onrush of common garden pelts. The Southern possum, the New England mink, the Siberian rat, the otter, and the underground mole were all sacrificed for the pleasure of women and the profit of manufacturers.

Almost every animal that runs now yields up its life in order that women may wear its hide, and it is made into a hat, a muff, a pair of revers, or a coat. It is rather interesting that the 'possum continues to hold a high place. The great French dressmakers use it lavishly although they are no longer able to get it from our Southern States.

All of these pelts will be worn this year. Sable, both the Russian and the Hudson Bay kind, is in demand, and wonderful coats and neckpieces are made of both.

Sealskin has returned to fashion and is used more in the form of trimming than for large garments. The day when a woman must have a sealskin sacque as an evidence of social power has passed into oblivion; but the acquisition of a set of sables confers the same prestige.

The difficulty with modern furs is the modren method of changing the styles every season. It was a happy day when the furriers were concerned about the quality of the pelts, and the dressmakers did not enter their field. Now the dressmakers dominate the cut and style of the furriers' garments, and the thing that will cost hundreds of dollars one season has to be recut at a great price for the next season if one wishes to keep withiin speaking distance of the fashions.

The shoulder pieces for this year are broader and longer than they have been for some time. They follow the Victorian style of reaching out over the shoulders and covering the chest like a fichu, and some of them are made quite ornamental to suit the tendency of the times.

The snappy little four-in-hand about three inches wide, which was placed about the neck and finished with a knot in front, has unhappily gone out of style, although women who care more for comfort than for the caprices of fashion will continue to wear them because they have just enough warmth for certain days. The main objection to them is that they are apt to make the throat tender and sensitive., but constant use of fur is detrimental to the health anyway, no matter how little women heed the warning.

The new shoulder piece is cut to a deep point at back and is finished off squarely in front like a sailor collar or has two pointed ends which cross at the bust and are cought in at the waist. One exceptionally quaint piece has ends long enough to go around the waist, fasten at the back, and hang in two sash ends to the knees.

There are many sailor collars finished with deep velvet or chenille fringe and lined with white or colored satin. These are especially desirable for coat suits that are worn on the street, but they are not juite appropriate for an afternoon gown worn in the house.

The muffs this year are not barrel shaped, as people prophesied they would be because of the return of the quaint fashions. We are wearing many of the things this Winter that went with the tiny little round muff, but we will remain true to the huge pillow of fur, with as much ornamentation as our taste and our purses will allow.

For ordinary use nothing is better than a moderately sized plain muff of good fur, wadded and lined with a satin that is not too light in tone.

The elaborate ones are trimmed with heavy satin cords, finished with plaited frills of lace either in thread or bullion, and are sometimes touched off with huge metal roses in silver and gold. It is not necessary to say that these are only fit for splendid costumes, and should only be purchased by women who have money and many social opportunities.—Anna Rittenhouse in New York Times.

ORIGIN OF "MARK TWAIN."

Samuel L. Clemens Quoted as Saying He Inherited the Name.

The familiar story of the origin of Samuel L. Clemens' use of the name Mark Twain is now declared to be incorrect. It pictures Clemens, Mississippi river pilot, listening to the men heaving the lead at the bow of a river boat and singing out, "By the mark, three; by the mark, twain." Tableau! Clemens smites his brow and soliloquizes, "There is my nom de plume."

It is true that the name originated with the picturesque cry of the man with the lead, but a man other than Mr. Clemens first discovered the picturesqueness. That man was Captain Isaiah Sellers, who furnished river news for the New Orleans Picayune. To Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale Mr. Clemens confessed that it was from Sellers he got the name. Professor Phelps' story is quoted in Professor Henderson's "Mark Twain."

According to this book, Mr. Clemens said to Professor Phelps: "Captain Sellers used to sign his articles in the Picayune 'Mark Twain.' He died in 1863. I liked the name—and stole it. I think I have done him no wrong, for I seem to have made this name somewhat generally known."

Professor Henderson records a number of interesting incidents connected with the use of this name. For awhile, when he was a miner in Nevada, Mr. Clemens sent to the Virginia City Enterprise humorous letters signed not "Mark Twain," but "Josh."

When he became a regular reporter on that paper and reported the legislature he signed his reports "Mark Twain." When questioned as to his use of this name Mr. Clemens declared: "I chose my pseudonym because to most persons it had no meaning and also because it was short. I was a reporter in the legislature and wished to save the legislature time. It was much shorter to say in their debates 'Mark Twain' than to say 'The unprincipled and lying parliamentary reporter of the Territorial Enterprise!'"

Mr. Clemens made the name known on the Pacific coast, but the world at large did not hear it for years after the "Jumping Frog," reprinted in hundreds of exchanges without credit, had jumped into such notoriety as is rarely accorded well mannered frogs. In fact, its first use in any eastern magazine was a fiasco.

Mr. Clemens made a great scoop on the Hornet disaster when he was writing up the Hawaiian Islands in 1866, says Professor Henderson. His account of the disaster Mark sent to Harper's Magazine, where it appeared in December, 1866. But, alas, it was not as "Mark Twain," not as a drawling, lovable river pilot sort of person that the world beheld the new author, for he had not written his pseudonym plainly on his copy, and Harper's cheerfully introduced him to fame as "Mike Swain."

SAVED FROM FORGERY.

"They who would deny woman the vote on the ground that it would unsex her," said Judge Ben B. Lindsey, at a garden party in Denver, "are exactly like Asa Ashton, a Florida cracker.

"Old Asa, seated, glass in hand, in a hammock-land saloon, was informed by the saloonkeeper that Jethro Sinnicson, a neighbor's son, had been sentenced to eight years for forging a check.

"Ash drained his glass, then slapped the table vigorously with his sunburnt hand.

" 'Thet thar,' he said, 'is wot comes er eddication. I got 16 kids, an' thar hain't one on 'em, thanks be ter goodness, wot knows how ter read or write.' "

They were seated side by side on the parlor sofa, and there wasn't room enough between them for an argument.

"George," murmured the maid, after a blissful silence extending over a period of several minutes, "I am afraid your arm must be very painful."

"Why do you think so, dearest?" he asked.

"Because," she coyly replied, 'it seems to be out of place."

"Oh, well, never mind," said George "It will come around all right."—Chicago News.

GOING OR COMING.

A train was reported 40 minutes late and after the time had elapsed a would-be passenger inquired:

"How late is that train?"

"Oh, about an hour late."

The hour passed and the query was repeated.

"Well, they'll be about 1 hour and 20 minutes late here."

Patience reigned until the query was justly renewed and the railroad man replied:

"Well, sir, I think that train will be near two hours late."

Whereupon the passenger said:

"Say, mister, will you kindly tell me which way that train is going?"—Portland Oregonian.

Hostess—Now, Mr. Spooner, won't you sing us something?

Spooner (modestly)—Oh, I shouldn't like to—after all those good singers.

Hostess (wishing to put him at his ease) —Ah, but we like a change sometimes, Mr. Spooner!

"Can't I sell you a painless corn cure, madam?" said the peddler.

"No, you can't!" snapped the woman of the house. "I have no painless corns."

Then the door was shut with a sudden slam.—Chicago Tribune.

SYNOPSIS

Anna Granger, devoted mother of two small children, discovers that her husband is a weak character and that he has lied to her about a woman.

Posing as Miss Dale, she becomes stenographer to Burton Temple, through whose evidence her husband has been imprisoned. She thinks Temple is the guilty man and is acting the spy to clear her husband's name for his sake and that of her children.

Anna discovers that Temple was one of her girlhood's ideals. Thinking her a single woman, he tells her her husband was a liar and perjurer.

Temple has detectives on the trail of Brady, an accomplice of Granger, looking for evidence. Anna is searching for evidence against Temple, who becomes interested in her.

Despite herself, Anna becomes fond of Temple, although determined to convict him for the honor of her boys. Temple's detectives discover Rose Fanchon, the woman for whom Granger was a thief.

Temple desires to marry Anna. She rebuffs him, questioning his honor. Temple is indicted for the crime for which Granger is suffering imprisonment.

Temple's detectives find a letter proving Granger's guilt. Temple reveals its nature to Anna, who burns it. Not knowing this, Temple proposes marriage to her.

Anna confesses that she burned the letter because of her mother love, and Temple forgives her. Granger arrives, announcing that he has been pardoned.

The door had barely closed upon his retreating figure when Craven blustered in. Evidently as yet he knew nothing either of Anna's confession or of her husband's presence.

"Miss Dale, please rattle off a letter for me," said he, settling down in a chair and pulling some notes hurriedly out of his pocket.

"But hasn't Mr. Temple told you?" Anna hesitated before taking the dictation.

"Eh? Told me? What?" snapped Craven, buried in his notes. "He'll tell me later, I suppose." Of course it was this matrimonial nonsense. "Meanwhile, Miss Dale, you'll just take this direct to the machine, won't you? It's not long. It's to call off a lot of unnecessary work in regard to the Granger woman."

"The Granger woman?"

"Oh, I mean, of course, the woman in the Granger case. Quite another thing, isn't it? None of that evidence is required now, you see," he went on, straightening out his notes. "We got it, though, all right, all right. Had it ready.

"'New York Detective bureau, 1429 Broadway, New York,'" Craven began to dictate.

Obediently the machine's keys tick ed off the address.

"'Gentlemen—Your letter of Oct. 7 received. I note you have evidence to the effect that Granger invested a large sum in New York Central stock and the dividends were made payable to the woman he was keeping, one Rose Fanchon'"—

The taut nerves of the secretary snapped at that. For one little second she half rose from the typewriter, then sat down, clinching her hands painfully together. Craven, at the slight pause, looked inquiringly over his glasses.

"Beg pardon, Mr. Craven," said she "You can go on. The heat or something—it was my head again."

"Sorry I had to trouble you again tonight, Miss Dale," said he, "but it'll only be a moment now."

"This Rose Fanchon is a high priced lady, I've learned, and Granger must have needed his one hundred thousand!" And he continued to dictate:

"'Mr. Temple appreciates the good work you have done. Kindly send bill to date, but do not carry work further, as such evidence is not now needed. Very truly.'"

Craven leaned back in his chair, comfortable and for the nonce communicative.

"You see, Miss Dale," said he as she addressed the envelope, "this little skunk of a Granger has kept this New York Central stock in his own name and only paid over the dividends to the woman. Pretty good joke on Rosie, eh? I tell you this, because I know you are interested in the case.

"The woman believes she has those gilt edged securities safely tucked away in a box, and he's fooled her neatly. Kept the stock himself, so he could buy another woman if he wanted her, I dare say. By George, that fellow did up everything brown! Well, Rosie wouldn't do a thing to him if she knew!"

He chuckled as he glanced over the letter Anna had just handed him.

"Much obliged, Miss Dale." Still chuckling, he hastily left the room.

CHAPTER X.

THAT FANCHON WOMAN.

"YOU heard, Mrs. Mason. You heard what he said." Anna sprang to her feet and whirled fiercely toward the elder woman. "Kept the securities in his own name to buy the woman he needed most: buy Rose Fanchon or buy his own wife! A moment ago you heard him practically offer them to me for my silence.

"Even then, knowing he had sold his honor for money, I was ready to believe he had done it for the best. I was ready to believe his excuse of me and the children. But he has betrayed me. His eyes smile lies; his lips speak lies; his lips"—

She rubbed her hands almost brutally over her mouth, as though trying to rub away the brand of some foul disgrace. With one last desperate effort for self mastery she walked to the door through which her husband had passed and commanded in a voice of deadly calm:

"Come out! Come here!"

"Yes, Anna, I'm here," answered he, appearing with a smile. Absorbed in his own thoughts, he had not noticed the tone of her words.

"Robert Granger, how did you dare tell me you needed me! I say, how did you dare! What kind of a—a thing are you? You thought you could buy your own wife. You'd take the money from—from Rose Fanchon—and hand it to me—to me! You don't need her just now; you need me! Rose Fanchon or me or another, it would be all the same. And that's the man I married!" She paused for a breath, spent with the fury of her scorn.

Granger stood staring whitely at her, the incarnation of shame and despair. Finally he tried weakly to set right the thing that never could be set right; tried to explain it away and bully or beg himself back into his wife's heart.

"Of course, I—er—well, Anna, I want to apologize about Rose—Rose—that Fanchon woman. It was all her fault anyhow. Men are up against an awful lot with some women. I"— With his practiced cunning he saw he was on the wrong rack. He changed his tactics, little venomous bully that he was.

"When I was up there," he nodded across the Hudson, "a man came to see me one day and he said—well, of course, I laughed him down—he said my wife was living here with Burton Temple, living here with an unmarried man. Well, as I say, I laughed him down; I wouldn't let him see"—

He paused for a second, arrested by Anna's instinctive recoiling. Two little steps she took, steadying herself by both hands on the table back of her. The pupils of her gray eyes were black and big with horror.

"Oh, you needn't take it like that," he went on magnanimously. "Why, I'm not going to ask you a single question, not one. I won't try to learn how far it's gone; I'll overlook—we're both of us—well, it'll be all right. Only, really, I must ask you to come along now; I've no time to spare."

"I have met Absurdity in my time and hobnobbed with him," said Anna at length, "but I never heard anything so absurd as that. Could you really fancy, Robert Granger, that I should go with you—now?"

If she had burst upon him with a storm of words, anger, injured virtue, reproach, he might have known what to do. But this! This haughty, fine disdain! It made even him realize his own depravity.

"For a moment just now," she said, "your weakness overcame me. I was going to—God knows what I was going to do. Then you offered to buy me, my sympathy, as though I were a thing to be bargained for, along with your Rose Fanchon. And as though that were not enough, you tried to barter your children's mother's honor. You knew that every drop of my blood, every throb of my heart, was in either your own or the children's keeping. You knew it. And yet, oh, what sort of a thing are you to be made in God's image?"

Granger sunk on his knees, catching at her hand. With the loss of his game went also the loss of his nerve.

"Forgive, Anna," he cried, "forgive, and come with me now."

But coldly, contemptuously, she bade him rise. "I've put you out of my life," she said.

LINCOLN'S AID DEAD.

Rathbone Was Wounded In Trying to Capture John Wilkes Booth.

Major Henry Reed Rathbone, who was a military aid to President Lincoln and who was stabbed by Booth when attempting to defend Mr. Lincoln when he was assassinated April 14, 1865, died recently in an asylum for the criminal insane at Hanover, Germany, where he was incarcerated for murdering his wife.

The major had been ill nearly a year. He was United States consul at Hanover when he killed his wife after his mind had become deranged. He was convicted and committed to the asylum. He made several attempts to obtain his freedom.

Henry Reed Rathbone was a cousin of the late General John Finley Rathbone, a widely known Albany (N. Y.) manufacturer, commander in the civil war and philantropist. He was born in Albany July 1, 1837, and served with distinction in the war. He was appointed major in the United States volunteers Nov. 29, 1862, and resigned in July, 1867.

Major Rathbone was in the box with President Lincoln at Ford's theater in Washington April 14, 1865, and it was he who seized the assassin, John Wilkes Booth, after he had fired the fatal bullet at the president. Booth was also armed with a dagger, and a thrust from that prevented Major Rathbone from making good his capture of the actor.

In 1887 he was appointed consul general at Hanover, Germany. Shortly afterward he lost his reason, and the tragedy followed which brought about the long incarceration which has just ended with the old soldier's death.

SUSPECTED OF MANY CRIMES

Murder of Bisonette Charged Against Mrs. Vermilya

ARRAIGNED IN "DEATH FLAT"

Lies Upon Her Bed Unmoved as Dramatic Scene Is Enacted After Forty-Eight Hours of Watching and Questioning, Following Her Attempt at Suicide—Police Claim to Have Conclusive Evidence Against Her

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Lying in her bed, unmoved by the strange procedure of a court convened in a flat-house, Mrs. Louise Vermilya, a comely widow, was arraigned formally on the charge that she murdered, by poison, Arthur Bisonette, with whom she was in love and who, it is believed, was about to leave her for another woman.

The demeanor of Mrs. Vermilya has baffled the most expert detectives of Chicago. In her arrest for the poisoning of her former boarder the police believe they have in hand one of the greatest wholesale murder mysteries of this city.

No less than ten deaths, sudden and suspicious, have occurred within striking distance of the widow. She protests her innocence. She says the numerous deaths were simply coincidences. But the police are far from satisfied, and they have begun a determined investigation that they firmly believe will bring to light a history that will outrival the train of murders attributed to Dr. Holmes in this city.

Even as the woman was arraigned for the shocking crime with which she is charged she smiled bitterly and quoted a stanza of verse to the police, in support of her declaration that she loved Bisonette, her suspected victim.

The staging of the police court scene of the "death flat" was a dramatic climax to forty-eight hours of constant watching and questioning, during which, by various methods, the police attempted in vain to obtain a confession from the woman.

As the charge of murder was read Mrs. Vermilya lay upon her bed unmoved, stolid, yet smiling cynically at times. She is recovering from an attempt late Saturday night to commit suicide when she poured into her boiled eggs an amount of arsenic from an innocent-looking shaker which was believed to have contained white pepper.

That she did not succeed in killing herself is due to the strenuous work of the nurse and two detectives who were guarding her and who had at her request handed her the "white pepper."

On a table near her bed during the arraignment stood the accusing can of poison. In this little tin shaker and its deadly contents the police believe they have the final link in the vast chain of circumstantial evidence which will send this woman to the gallows for one or more murders.

Evidence which the police say proves that Mrs. Vermilya lured men to her home with the purpose of killing them, either to obtain financial benefits or to satisfy a morbidness in her nature, which, according to evidence in the hands of the police, found its greatest delight in preparing corpses for burial and attending funerals.

Mrs. Vermilya has retained Joseph R. Rurres. He declares the woman would make no confession and that she would plead "not guilty" to the charge of murder.

RUSSIA THREATENS WAR

Persia Not Inclined to Comply With Muscovite Demands

Teheran, Nov. 7.—War with Russia faces Persia in consequence of an alleged insult to the Russian vice consul, M. Petroof, in Teheran, according to an ultimatum served upon the Persian government. The government was ordered to apologize to Russia, but has adopted a hostile policy toward the Muscovite empire.

Russia threatens to occupy the provinces of Ghilan and Mazanderan unless the apology is forthcoming. Russia also demands that the treasury gendarmes be removed and the Persian Cossacks be reinstated.

FOURTEEN ARE SLAIN

Christian Filipinos Become Victims of Mindanao Tribal Feud

Manila, P. I., Nov. 7.—Fourteen Christian Filipinos were murdered by natives on the island of Mindanao as a result of a tribal feud.

The murderers fled into the woods after the outrage, defying the constabulary. A campaign against them by United States troops is likely.

CENSORSHIP REMOVED

Report of the Fall of Pekin Is Discredited In London

London, Nov. 7.—A lengthy dispatch from Pekin received here this morning makes no mention of the capture of the city by the rebels or of the flight of the court.

The statement that the capital had fallen was sent out from San Francisco and is believed here to be pure fiction sent out to incite Chinese in America.

The removal of the rigorous censorship hitherto imposed on the Chinese press is a notable sign of the times. The native papers publish today with the greatest freedom long accounts of the Hankow massacres, giving the gory details and placing the blame upon the imperialist leaders for both the Hankow and Shanghai outbreaks. As a consequence of these publications there is increased animosity towards the Manchus.

CHACE HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Young Man Is Accused of Murdering Boy by Shooting

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 7.—Brought before Judge McDonough on a charge of murder for causing the death of Peter P. Belanger in North Swansea on Thursday last, Lester Chace, 21, was held without bail for a continued hearing on Nov. 13.

Chace, who maintains that he shot Belanger accidentally, broke down and cried in the courtroom. The shooting occurred at the farm of Chace's father. Young Chace and Belanger, who was 15, were in the barn.

Chace ran out and told his father that a gun he was holding was accidentally discharged while he was fooling with Belanger, who had a pitchfork in his hand.

GAVE WASHINGTON SEVERE POUNDING

Court Acquits Ulrich, Assailant of Negro Educator

New York, Nov. 7.—Booker T. Washington appeared in court here as the principal witness against Henry A. Ulrich, the white man who gave the negro educator a beating one night last March when he found him in the vestibule of an apartment house on West Sixty-Fourth street.

A policeman who came upon the combatants placed Washington under arrest on the white man's complaints; but when they reached the station house and the negro told his story positions were reversed. Ulrich was arrested on a charge of assault, and his trial, after many delays, was called yesterday.

By a vote of 2 to 1 the justices of the court of special sessions acquitted Ulrich of the charge of assaulting Washington. Ulrich, who is a white man, said Washington insulted his wife and peeped through the keyhole of his apartment at 113½ West Sixty-Third street.

HAS LIVED A CENTURY

Ohio Maiden Never Kissed by Any Person Except Her Parents

Adamsville, O., Nov. 7.—Miss Rachel Bell, who lives on the same plot of ground where she was born, has just celebrated her 100th birthday. She said:

"I must confess that for 100 years I have never been kissed by any person except my parents. I have lived a long life and have had plenty of enjoyment. When I was a young girl I went to many parties and dances. We always had a good time and it always went without any of what you call spooning in it. I had plenty of chances to marry, but could never find a man I loved, so have always remained single."

WHY THE TURKEY IS BALD.

Also Why the Indian Uses Its Wings to Fan a Fire Into Flame.

The Indians of our country have many legends connected with certain peculiar habits or customs prevalent among them. If one should chance to visit the home of an old Indian he would perhaps notice a turkey wing hanging near the fire.

This the Indian uses to fan his fire into a flame and make it burn brightly or perhaps in the sultry days of summer to fan himself. If asked why he uses the turkey wing instead of the wing of any other bird he would no doubt relate the following story:

Many years ago the fire of the world was nearly extinguished. This happened just at the beginning of the winter season. The birds of the air were filled with anxiety, for their intuition told them they would need heat to keep them warm through the winter.

A bird council was held, and it was decided that birds which could fly the highest should soar into the air and see if they could find a spark of fire anywhere. The efforts of the eagle, lark and raven were in vain. The honor was left to the little brown sparrow, who spied a spark of fire in the hollow of an old stump in the heart of a deep forest.

The birds flocked around the stump and tried to decide who should pick the spark out. But all their efforts were in vain. To their dismay they saw the spark growing smaller and fainter. The turkey then volunteered to try to keep the tiny coal alive by fanning it with his wings. Day after day the turkey kept fanning. The heat became greater each day until the feathers were singed off the turkey's head. If one notices carefully he will see lumps on the head of a turkey that appear as blisters.

It is believed that the turkey was so badly burned that all turkeys since have had bald heads and wear the blisters as a momento of the bravery of the turkey. The faithful turkey lost his beautiful feathers, but he gave back fire to the world, so in his honor and as a memorial of his faithfulness the Indian uses the turkey wing to make his fire burn.—Red Man.

Why are you so extravagant? asked a newly-wedded husband of his wife.

I am simply trying to live up to the diamond ring and things you gave me when we were sweethearts, was her unanswerable reply.—Ex.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

This afternoon, at Merry Mount Park, Quincy High encounters the strong Melrose High football team. Game is scheduled to take place at 3:30 and the local boys are especially anxious to win in order to make up for the unfortunate defeat suffered last week at the hands of the Powder Point aggregation. Coach Staff has been putting the boys through some stiff practice during the past few days.

A victory this afternoon will place the local eleven in a fine position to finish the season in a glorious manner. But two games now remain on the schedule, one with Worcester High at Worcester next Saturday and the last on the following Saturday with Waltham High at Waltham. The local boys have lost but three games this year, and upon only one occasion were they outclassed badly, and that was when they were defeated by the Medford High school to the tune of 23 to 0.

The Waltham game will be eagerly awaited and a large crowd of local fans have already signified their intensions of accompanying the team to Waltham, in the hope that they may be able to take a peg out of the high aspirations of the Watch city lads and they end their football season in a most fitting manner.

Muscles May Move Themselves.

Albert von Haller, a Swiss surgeon of the eighteenth century, was the first to point out that the muscles of our bodies have an automatic action. Before Haller's time it was believed that the muscles could not contract or swell up of themselves, but were drawn up by the nerves of volition. Haller discovered that this is not so, but that a muscle, if irritated, will draw itself together automatically, even when it is quite separated from the nerves, and this has since been proved to be true by a great number of experiments. So that, though it is true our nerves are the cause of our moving, because they excite the muscles and so cause them to contact, yet the real power of contraction is in the muscle itself. The body of man is full of wonders, not the least of which is this automatic power of contraction in all muscles. — Louisville Courier Journal.

MARCEAU FIRST AT HANOVER

Franz Marceau, a well known local boy, who acquired great honors as a runner while wearing the colors of the Quincy High School, finished first in the Dartmouth College cross country run, held at Hanover, N. H., last Saturday over a five mile course. He finished in the fast time of 27 minutes and 26 seconds. He started from the scratch mark. Marceau is a great favorite with the Dartmouth students and they expect him to bring home many laurels in the near future.

BASKET BALL RESULTS.

The "Big League" was opened and from now on until April 6th, the talk among the basket ball fans of the association will be about "Why we didn't win" and "Wait until our next game." Three exciting games were played on Saturday night and while the scores were not close, there were plenty of fine plays and enthusiasm was at a high pitch all evening.

The Army defeated Tech 33 to 12 in the opener and in this game, the shooting of Brooks and Price and the guarding and blocking of Rizzi were the features. The enthusiasm was great when Lundin scored a goal on "Chick" Holmes just before time was called.

In the second game Harvard and Michigan had a grand battle, for every point was bitterly contested, Harvard finally winning out by a grand spurt at the finish with a score of 28 to 10. C. Parker and Kemp were the high scorers in the game, getting 7 and 6 goals respectively.

The 3rd game was the small score game of the evening, Yale defeating Navy 18 to 4. The blocking in this contest was especially good, for the men covered their opponents so well that shots for baskets were very scarce. Dineen played best for the winners with a total of 4 baskets, while Melville and "Edgr" Parker played well for the losers.

A crowd of about 100 attended the games, which were finished at 9.50.

Vice President—Horace F. Spear.

Secretary—Mrs. Thomas A. Addison.

ELECTION

WARD THREE.

In Ward Three, precinct one, shortly before ten o'clock, 271 votes had been cast and it is expected that a larger vote than last year will be in evidence. Both of the representative candidates Piper and Sullivan were about at an early hour, and all the voters of the ward seemed keenly awakened to the situation. Both Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Piper have had a number of men working throughout the ward in their interest and Ward Three is being looked upon as the turning point in the representative contest. All the talk seemed to be on the representative fight and scarcely any discussion prevailed on the gubernatorial contest, although a few men were about talking for David I. Walsh very strongly for lieutenant governor.

Sullivan is expected to carry this precinct but Piper will no doubt make up for the loss in precinct two. At noontime 206 votes had been cast as against 237 of last year. The vote it not as heavy in this precinct as last year, yet the various lieutenants are looking forward to the afternoon when they hope to draw forth a large enough vote to make up for the deficiency.

WARD FOUR.

It is expected that the largest vote ever polled at any election will be cast in this Ward today. The great struggle seems to centre on the McDevitt-Leslie contest and the interest that has been aroused over the outcome in this ward has been of the intense variety. Mr. McDevitt has depended solely on his lieutenants to get out the vote while Councilman Leslie accompanied by Representative Langelier is looking after the Republican voters.

In precinct One of the Ward, at 10 o'clock 250 votes had been cast, against 210 at the State election of last year and 217 at the city election at the same time.

In precinct Two there had been cast 260 votes at the same hour and the heelers are predicting a record breaking vote all through the Ward as a consequence.

WARD FIVE.

The Wollaston ward is voting early today and the greater part of the vote of the ward was in at 8 o'clock. At that hour the total vote of the ward was 875 as against 805 for the same period a year ago. The contest in this ward is a keen one and while there was a hot contest at the caucuses, which led many to believe that the word would cut Leslie. At the polls this morning however, it was said that the Republicans were voting a straight ticket and that Leslie was getting the full party vote. It has been figured that Ward Five will more than offset Ward Four which it is generally admitted will give McDevitt a very large plurality. If this be true it remains for Ward Six to settle the question as to who shall be elected.

As usual the ballot box in precinct One went on a strike after 410 ballots had been recorded correctly. It is evident that it will be necessary to have a new box here. Next year perhaps it will be voting machines that will be in use.

WARD SIX.

There are several things that have a tendency to get out a large vote in the Atlantic ward. First, it is the home ward of Rednor P. Coombs, candidate for Senator and then again it is the home ward of L. F. R. Langelier the chairman of the Republican City Committee. Both of these gentlemen have used every effort to get out a large vote and the early voting showed the result of their labors. At nine o'clock precinct one had cast 256 votes and precinct two, 182. This is somewhat smaller than it was a year ago. It is doubtless true, as claimed, that the ward will give Coombs a plurality, but how it will go on the Representative question is a question. Both Leslie and McDevitt are claiming it. The ward gave Langelier 382 to 279 for McDevitt. While it is admitted that Leslie will not get the vote that Langelier did last year, Republicans figure it out that Leslie will have a plurality.

MR. J. A. BURNS LECTURES AT MEN'S CLUB

Of Christ Church On History Of Cunard Line

SOME FINE VIEWS

A lecture, illustrated with stereopticon views, for the benefit of the members of the Men's club was delivered by James A. Burns, travelling passenger agent for the Cunard Steamship Co., in Christ church parish house, last evening.

This lecture, which was presented in a very pleasing manner was well received. It consisted of the history of the Cunard Co., taking up the growth and development of the large steamers in the ship-building industry.

The lecture was made more interesting by the use of colored views of the steamships of the different countries. Mr. Burns was given a rising vote of thanks for his kindness in furnishing the entertainment of the evening.

A business meeting preceded the lecture. The president of the club appointed a committee consisting of M. A. Turner, C. N. Chase, and William L. Thomas to confer with Mrs. Hazen Ricker president Woman's Guild regarding the fair which is to be held Dec. 6 and 7.

ROUSING RALLY.

Monday evening a rousing Republican rally was held at Gurney's store in the interests of Barnes and Leslie, about 100 enthusiastic Republicans being present. Meeting was opened by Herbert Barker. The first speaker of the evening was Lyndon Gurney who outlined the reasons for which the meeting was held. Then Mr. Barnes was introduced. He spoke on state issues, particularly those matters affecting this district.

Louis F. R. Langelier was the next speaker. He spoke on state issues and answered McDevitt's card in a scathing manner and gave reasons why McDevitt's promises could not be fulfilled.

Mr. Leslie was the next speaker. He heartily thanked the voters of Ward Six for their support. He expressed views on several subjects and gave excellent reasons for his belief.

Frank L. Badger was the next speaker called. He urged the voters to go to the polls to vote:

The next speaker was Ralph W. Hobbs, who urged the support of the regular candidates and spoke in favor of the redistricting bill.

At a late hour Mr. Barker spoke in eulogy of Mr. Barnes and Mr. Leslie after which the meeting was adjourned.

ANNUAL BENCH SHOW.

The annual meeting of the Boston Terrier club will be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, Nov. 21, 22, 23. Frank A. Teeling will judge. There is a fine list of specials offered; some two hundred in number. The annual banquet will be given the members Wednesday Nov. 22 and the annual meeting will be Tuesday Nov. 21, at 5.30 P. M. at the Copley Square hotel.

An exasperated new woman:

"I'm sorry to hear that you and your husband have parted. What's the trouble?"

GRUMPELT FOR OLYMPIC TEAM

His Recent Jump of Six Feet Three Inches Cinches Place on Team.

Europe, particularly Germany, may brag about its jumpers and the manner in which they are going to trim our champions in that specialty at the Olympic games, but the prediction is made now that they had better beware.

Of three or four of the very best jumpers to be found in this country at present little doubt is entertained but that Harry Grumpelt, the national champion, will be one of those to be selected by the American committee to do battle with the foreigners in Sweden.

HARRY GRUMPELT MAKING HIS GREAT JUMP.

performance in New York recently, making the best jump of the year at 6 feet 3 inches, shows that he is back in his stride.

He tried thrice to smash Mike Sweeney's record of 6 feet 5⅝ inches, but on each occasion either his shoulder or body interfered with the stick. In form Grumpelt is certainly a hard man to tackle.

In two years' active competition Grumpelt has developed into a champion. He won the national title at Pittsburg. He beat Harry Porter, who had to compete for the Chicago Athletic association in the jump-off of a tie at 6 feet 3 inches. Grumpelt won the jump-off at 6 feet 1 inch.

GREAT YEAR FOR JOHNSON.

Washington's Crack Pitcher Has Had Most Successful Season.

Considering the fact that he is a member of a team which finished next to last in the race which is now closed, Walter Johnson's record of twenty-six victories and twelve defeats is a splendid one. Bender, Gregg and Coombs are the only pitchers that have worked regularly this season who have a better standing among the pitchers than Johnson, and it is easily seen that he would probably be leading them all if he were a member of a winning aggregation.

This has been the most successful year in Johnson's career notwithstanding the fact that he got a miserable start, and it was not until late in the season that he began to pitch winning ball. That Johnson has changed his style of pitching is best indicated by the great falling off in the number of strikeouts he scored. Where he established a record with 313 strikeouts last season he is scarcely over the 200 mark this year, and yet he has won more games this year than ever before.

BILLIARD STARS TO MEET.

Sutton and Hoppe First to Stir Up Action In Cue World.

George Sutton, the rotund Chicago billiard expert, may be held responsible for stimulating interest in billiards this fall. The ivory experts have been in a state bordering on lethargy for almost a year, or ever since the last championship tournament in New York.

Sutton brought billiard lovers out of their inactivity by challenging Willie Hoppe, the marvelous champion, for his title of 18.2 balkline billiards and posted a forfeit as evidence of good faith. Hoppe speedily accepted the defi, and the match will probably be played the latter part of October.

Swimmer Goessling Retires.

August Goessling, for several years one of the best athletes and swimmers in St. Louis and winner of the first ten mile swim ever held in the Mississippi river, has retired.

ONSIDE KICKS.

Lisle Johnson, captain of last year's Minnesota eleven, has been asked to enter Michigan, where he'll be eligible to play next season.

Bobby Burch says that the forward pass is one of the most important factors in present day football and that it will figure in many amazing victories this year.

Pennsylvania coaches think Marshall will develop into the most sensational right end in the east this season. He is as speedy as "Tex" Ramsdell and has more football instinct,

Value of Good Kickers Clearly Shown This Year

By TOMMY CLARK.

THE absolute necessity of having a consistently good punter imposed upon the modern football eleven by the revised code was never made more strikingly apparent than when in a recent game one eleven, hopelessly outclassed by a heavier, faster and better drilled opponent, escaped complete annihilation

Photos by American Press Association.

THREE KICKERS OF ABILITY.
[Dalton of Navy, Butler of Cornell and Dean of Army.]

by kicking almost immediately whenever it was fortunate enough to secure the ball.

The Value of a Kicker.

In approximately forty minutes of play the team in question tried only three times to advance the ball rushing. The net gain was less than a yard. The opposition on the other hand found it comparatively easy to make first downs. On the attack it cut and tore through the weaker team's line or around its flanks almost as readily as it staved off the other's puny attempts at offensive play.

Under the old rules the score would probably have run up into the sixties or seventies, yet the game was not an uninteresting one to the spectators, simply because there was one department in which the two contesting teams were of almost, if not quite, equal strength. The loser's punts averaged almost as long as the winner's, and his ends, though not a star pair by any manner of means, were yet fast enough and knew enough about tackling to prevent long runbacks.

Brilliant Plays to Come.

The really good teams, with the burden of having to play for a championship this month upon them, have not shown their best form yet. There are flashes, brilliant enough at times, of real form, but it will be in the big games that the real stuff will be shown. Then, unless everything, including the grandoldope, goes astray, there will be the prettiest duels between kickers and ends, on one side and backs on the other, that it has ever been the good fortune of the football rooter to witness.

The very rules make for such encounters. Perhaps the kicking side has an advantage, but it is of a sort that is bound to make the play all the more spectacular. There may be fewer of the sensational forty and fifty yard runs through broken fields, but the change will of itself create a faster, shiftier class of backs, which in turn will necessitate an increasingly open game.

Harder to Block Kicker.

Given two opposing lines of practically equal strength, it will be almost impossible to block kicks. Since the three inside men are now permitted to lock legs, one set of forwards must be immensely superior to the other to get through in time to "gum up" a kicking play. Add two good tackles and the chances of interfering with a punt are not one-tenth as good as they were in the old days.

Even after the ball is kicked the advantage is with the kicker. Unless the leather strikes the ground within the neutral zone a player on the kicking side may not be legitimately interfered with until he has gone twenty yards beyond the line of scrimmage. This rule in itself makes clean handling of kicked balls imperative, with the loss of it as the most probable alternative.

Good Kickers Numerous.

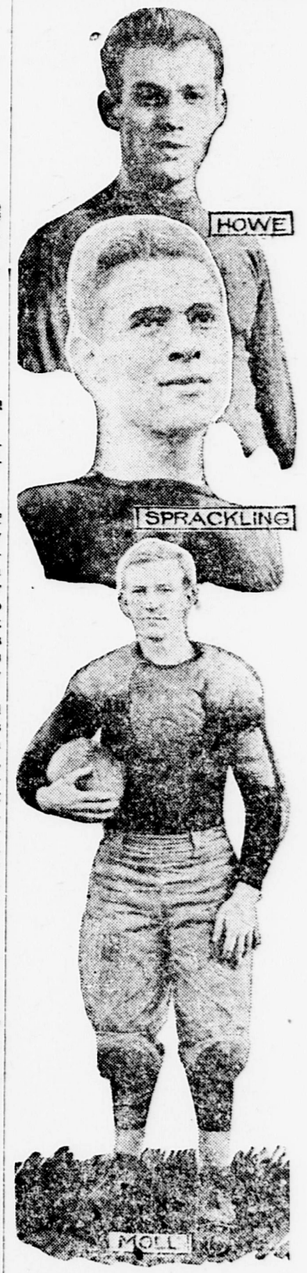

Every one of the eastern teams has two or more reliable toe artists. Pennsylvania has four handy men in Marshall, Minds, Thayer and Captain Mercer. Princeton has Pendleton, Andrews and Penfield. Harvard is well supplied with Potter, Felton and Wigglesworth. The latter was injured in the game with Holy Cross recently and will not be able to play until the real big game with Yale at New Haven. Yale has Anderson, the former Wisconsin halfback; Francis and Captain Howe. The latter has developed into one of the greatest kickers in the country this season.

The Army is well fixed with Arnold, Dean and Hyatt, while the Annapolis men have a dandy in Dalton. In Thorpe Coach Warner of the Carlisle Indians has a noted boot man.

Cornell seems to have the best of them all in "Little Eddie" Butler, the Red and White quarterback. Butler's educated toe has won several games for the Ithacans this season.

Nearly all the western conference teams have men of more or less ability in the kicking line this season. Captain Andy Gill of Indiana is probably the best in the west, his work being not only of the long distance variety, but extremely accurate. Minnesota has a man of great ability in Capron, who is said to be better than Johnny McGovern in the drop kicking line and far his superior in punts.

Illinois has Seller, who won three games for his team last year merely through his ability to kick goals and who was hailed as one of the stars of the west on this account, although his work in other departments of the game was no better than ordinary.

In Keckie Moll Wisconsin has a noted kicker. During practice his work is accurate and his punts very long.

Chicago has not a man of ability, and Coach Stagg has been working night and day trying to find a player who will be able to cope with the stars of his four great western adversaries.

Michigan has three reliable men in Captain Conklin, Harrington and Thompson. Coach "Harry Up" Yost thinks he has one of the finds of the season in Harrington.

*Re-elected.

Result Very Close.

Boston, Nov. 8.—Eugene N. Foss was re-elected governor of Massachusetts yesterday. His plurality over Lieutenant Governor Louis A. Frothingham is 7734 votes, according to the latest returns.

It was not until long after midnight that the defeat of Frothingham was conceded, so close was the result.

Up to midnight it was uncertain whether or not Robert Luce or David I. Walsh had been elected lieutenant governor. On the latest returns Luce wins by less than 5000. Walsh ran a close second to Foss in the state and the vote showed that Luce was cut by the Republicans.

The remainder of the Republican state ticket will in all probability be elected, although by a small margin. The Republicans will have a majority in the legislature and the indications point to a small decrease in the Democratic membership.

It was in many respect one of the most remarkable elections in the history of the state. The vote of Governor Foss fell off but slightly from last year. Although a light vote was expected, the total ran well over 400,000.

Probably never in the history of the state has an election been so much in doubt. The first returns showed a tremendous gain in the towns for Frothingham. His election was conceded by Chairman McDonald of the Democratic state committee.

BARNES MADE BIG GAIN

Over His Vote of Last Year And Carried Quincy By 174

COMPARISONS

Senator Barnes made a great fight Tuesday and this morning is congratulating himself that he increased his plurality in the district over last year. In the election of 1910, Barnes carried every town in the district except Quincy, Randolph and Canton. This year he lost Randolph and Canton but carried Quincy. His plurality last year was 532 as against 1,619. This year Coombs made a good run in Quincy but did not get the vote which he did last year.

On the other hand Barnes increased his plurality in nearly all of the towns which he carried. The following gives the vote for Barnes and Coombs in every town in the district:

	Barnes	Coombs
Quincy	2,366	2,192
Weymouth	1,225	841
Braintree	675	387
Holbrook	221	118
Milton	803	366
Randolph	296	357
Canton	351	381
Hyde Park	1,292	1,044
	7,229	5,686

Last year's vote in these same places for Barnes and Coombs was as follows:

	Barnes	Coombs
Quincy	2,130	2,410
Weymouth	1,203	911
Braintree	634	419
Holbrook	217	117
Milton	742	434
Randolph	228	375
Canton	337	411
	6,547	6,015

—Last year people allowed their exasperation over national affairs to lead them into a bit of a mess—and they're tired of that mess. They will probably elect Mr. Frothingham governor—not because of anything he thinks about the tariff, or anything Robert Luce thinks about it, or anything Eugene Noble Foss thinks about it—but just because they are tired and sick of what Eugene Noble Foss actually does as governor of the state.—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES ARE ELECTED IN QUINCY

Frothingham Carries the City By 289 Against Last Year's Vote of 136 For Foss. Exciting Contest Between Candidates For Senator and Representative

Merrill Carried Every Ward But One For County Commissioner

The old saying, as goes Quincy so goes the state, did not hold true Tuesday for while Frothingham carried the city by 289 over Foss, the latter carried the state. Last year, Foss carried the city by 136 and the vote this year shows that much hard work must have been done by the committees. While every citizen was interested in head of the ticket, they were more interested in the local contests, that for Senator and Representatives.

WALTER E. PIPER

The contest for Senator was a keen one, from the fact that Coombs, the Democratic candidate, is a resident of this city which would naturally give him a little advantage over Barnes. Last year Coombs carried the city 276 and his friends were equally as confident that he would repeat the victory this year. It was not so to be, however. Last year Barnes was but little acquainted with the voters of Quincy and this doubtless counted against him. This year Mr. Barnes made it his business to get acquainted and during the past few weeks has addressed rallies in every ward of the city. The result of this work is shown in the vote of Tuesday for he carried the city by 174. Barnes also carried the district and was reelected.

The most interesting contest of all however was that for representatives in both districts, and the result which was very close showed the efforts that had been made by the candidates. In the Fifth district, Piper won out by 62 votes, while in the Sixth district Leslie won by 63 votes. Nickerson got some votes in spite of the circular sent out, and the most of the votes cast for him were from Ward Five. It is evident that he took them from Leslie.

In the Fifth district Piper carried Ward One by 168 and Sullivan carried Ward Two by 198 which took Sullivan into Ward Three with a plurality of 30 votes. The first precinct of Ward Three to be heard from was precinct Two, the Republican precinct. This gave Piper a plurality of 101, or a lead of 71 without precinct one, the Democratic one. This last year gave Sullivan a plurality of 37 over Thomas and if he could hold his own this year it meant his election.

Ward Three, however, is Piper's own ward and when the official returns came in from there it was seen that Sullivan had only carried it by 9 votes which was not enough as it left Piper's plurality 62.

In the Sixth district the contest was equally as keen and for a time it looked as though McDevitt would surely win, as he came out of Ward Four his home and the banner Democratic ward of the city with a plurality of

COUNCILMAN WILLIAM J. LESLIE

575. Then it was announced that in Ward Five the banner Republican ward of city, as well as the home ward of Leslie, had given him a plurality of 573 or within two votes of being as large a plurality as Ward Four had given McDevitt.

This meant that it was up to Ward Six to settle the question of whether it should be Leslie or McDevitt. Leslie carried both precincts however, precinct One by 20 and precinct Two by 45, which gave him a net plurality over McDevitt of 63 votes.

It is interesting to note that in Ward Five, the home of Nickerson, the unwilling Democratic Progressive candidate, he received 45 votes which it fair to presume would have gone to Leslie had Mr. Nickerson's name not appeared on the ballot.

WERE ON HAND TO RECEIVE RETURNS

City Hall Had Usual Crowd Of Interested Citizens

LAST RECEIVED AT 9.27

The official returns of the city were, as usual, received at the City Clerks' office, where a large crowd of politicians gathered and waited until it was definitely known how the city had gone on the local contests. The unofficial returns came in early, but it was not until 7.19 that the first official were received. These came from Ward Five, Precinct Two, presided over by Warden Dunphy. The returns from this Precinct were followed a minute later by the official returns from Precinct Two of Ward Three. The other Precincts came in about as fast as they could be handled by the City Clerk and reporters that usually gather about the City Clerks desk. At 9.27, the first Precinct of Ward Three, the last to be heard from arrived. By this time the crowd that had gathered to get the returns had taken their departure and City Hall was still and quiet. The official time of receiving the official returns was as follows:

The total vote of each Precinct is also given.

Ward 1, Pre. 2	8.23	528

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

FOSS IS RE-ELECTED

tee. When the vote in the farming districts began to come in there was a big gain for Foss. He received a big vote in the farming districts and showed a net gain in the cities which proved disheartening to the Republicans.

Boston For Foss by 22,000

Governor Foss carried the city of Boston by 22,000 votes, winning in twenty-two out of the twenty-five wards. This was a loss of 5000 from his plurality of last year.

Mayor Fitzgerald claimed credit for the big vote for Foss in Boston. The mayor stated last night that Foss did not contribute a cent toward the election day expenses. All of the money which was spent was contributed to the campaign by Democratic leaders from whom the mayor solicited contributions. He gave $1000 himself to the campaign.

Every preparation had been made for a big Republican celebration at the American house, and it was not until 2 o'clock this morning that the crowd went away satisfied of the defeat of Frothingham.

Chelsea Votes For Change

One of the big features of the election was the defeat of the commission form of government in the city of Chelsea. The city will return to the old form of government by a mayor and a city council of nine members.

Every newspaper in the city boomed the form of government named "plain one," which consists of five men, all elected at large, and it was confidently expected that it would be carried by a majority of at least 300 votes.

Another surprise was the carrying of the city for Foss, as the canvass showed that Frothingham would win out by more than 3000.

The civil service act applying to the police was defeated, much to the surprise of the advocates of the bill who expected that it would go through easily.

In the city of Cambridge the new city charter plan was defeated.

Recall Loses

Advocates of the recall of Mayor Fitzgerald fell more than 20,000 votes short of the number required to compel him to wage a campaign for re-election at the city election on Jan. 9. More than 55,000 voters were necessary to make the recall effective. In 195 of the 206 precincts in the city, the vote was: Yes, 34,359; no, 29,674.

The large vote in favor, the advocates declare, is a blow at the administration, but the mayor and his friends say that it was due largely to the fact that the labor organizations, as well as the ward politicians, favor more frequent elections.

Mr. Fitzgerald expected 30,000 votes in favor of the recall. He said it might fall short of 25,000, and last night he did not express surprise when told that the vote exceeded 35,000. The result showed that an average of about 175 voters in each precinct favored the recall.

The advocates of recall claimed last night that they could have exceeded their figures by at least 15,000 votes by making a campaign, but Fitzgerald said if the opposition had made any campaign or attempted to concentrate the attention of the voters on that question, he would have taken the stump and fought against it in every ward in the city.

He said the result was in no wise a blow at his administration. His lieutenants in the city organization were of the same opinion. They said they realized that there was opposition in certain quarters, led by former Congressmen Keliher and O'Connell, whom the mayor succeeded in defeating a year ago.

Of Great Significance

The results of the election in Massachusetts are considered of the greatest significance. On the stump during the campaign the Republican leaders made the fight strictly on the tariff issue and the support of President Taft. It was predicted that the re-election of Foss would mean the defeat of President Taft. Foss accepted this issue.

Locally the result is of tremendous significance so far as it affects the Republican organization in this state. It means the complete downfall of Senator Lodge. Although the "Old Boss" was not conspicuous in the campaign on the stump, his hand was in evidence in every move that was made.

Senator Crane threw all his strength into the campaign. It was he who started the issue of disaster to the big industries of Massachusetts if Foss was re-elected. The vote in the big textile cities demonstrated conclusively, however, that the "calamity scare" did not prove effective.

Little Money Spent

Governor Foss vindicated his judgment that an election could be won in this state without the lavish expenditure of money. Almost frantic appeals were made at the last moment for at least the expenditure of what was considered the necessary amount of money to get out the vote on election day. The governor remained firm, however.

In the Fourth councillor district Alexander McGregor defeated ex-Alderman James of Cambridge by a two-to-one vote.

One of the interesting features of the result in the city of Boston was the election of former President of the Common Council Leo McCullough to the house from ward 13.

The late returns indicated the re-election of Senator Edward Grainger in the First Suffolk district.

The voting machine amendment was carried throughout the state.

John F. Cronin was elected clerk of the supreme court over Walter F. Frederick. He received a majority of nearly 10,000 votes.

Hyde Park and Hub to Join

Hyde Park advocates of the annexation scheme were jubilant early in the evening when it became known that the plan to have the historic town become a part of Boston had won by a vote in Hyde Park of 1434 against 1247.

David W. Murray, father of the annexation plan, was re-elected to the legislature over his opponent, James D. Grant, by a vote of 1481 against 1356.

Returns from the various Boston wards show that the plan to annex Hyde Park has been carried by a substantial plurality.

In the Boston Democratic wards the vote for annexation was a surprise, owing to its size. It appeared that the leaders in these wards had carefully planned that the voters should express an opinion upon the matter.

WHAT LEADERS SAY

Governor Thinks State Has Spoken For Revision of Tariff

Governor Foss—The people have won this second great victory over machine rule in spite of the most scandalous boodle campaign ever waged in Massachusetts.

I shall secure a law forbidding the employment of paid workers at the polls and compelling the pre-election statement of all expenses.

I am grateful to my party and to the thousands of loyal independents who have worked hard and honestly for this victory.

Massachusetts has spoken unmistakably for an honest revision of the tariff and for a business administration of the commonwealth.

The national significance of this election is inestimable; the rest of the country will follow the lead of Massachusetts.

President Maynard of the city committee—For weeks we have heard the question asked in all parts of the state: 'What is Boston going to do for Governor Foss and the ticket?' The active Democrats of Boston wondered at the anxiety in regard to their vote on election day, for Boston has always done its full duty by the Democratic state ticket, and today has once again manifested its loyalty to the cause, and, standing shoulder to shoulder, rolled up a plurality of more than 21,000 for the people's governor, Eugene N. Foss.

Mayor Fitzgerald—The election of Governor Foss is the best thing that could happen to industrial New England. The tariff must be reduced and Governor Foss, who is a manufacturer himself, and the Democratic members of congress from this state, who are not free traders, as well as myself and other influential Democrats who believe in a reasonable protection to New England, will have a voice in the framing of a tariff bill.

Charles E. Hatfield—Apparently Mr. Foss is re-elected by a very small margin and the Republican state ticket, aside from governor, elected. The thanks of the Republican state committee are due to the leading Boston newspapers and the press of the state for their hearty support and fair treatment of the Republican cause and to the local committees and volunteers for the work they have done.

David I. Walsh—I am delighted at the re-election of Governor Foss. Naturally I am pleased with the splendid vote given me for the high office of lieutenant governor.

I thank the Democrats for their loyal support, and no less do I thank the independent Republicans who voted for me for their generous assistance.

I also desire to accord my thanks to the press of the state, Democratic and Republican alike, which has given me such fair, impartial treatment throughout a strenuous and exciting campaign.

May I also express to my personal friends from all parts of the commonwealth who have been intimately and actively associated in my campaign, and who have given so freely and unstintedly of their time, their energy and ability, my heartfelt appreciation of their loyalty and friendship.

Robert Luce—I shall be very sorry if it turns out that Mr. Frothingham has not been elected, for he made a courageous fight and his success would have vindicated our position on the matters at issue. It was, however, a great achievement to cut down so materially the plurality that Mr. Foss received last year.

As for myself, I am very grateful for the confidence shown by a majority of the voters of the state and hope I may be able to repay it by adequate performance of duty.

Taft Takes Seven Minutes to Vote

Cincinnati, Nov. 8.—President Taft cast the ballot that he traveled several hundred miles and gave up a day's vacation at Hot Springs to cast here.

The president came to the polling place in an automobile from the home of his brother, C. P. Taft, accompanied by a detail of Cincinnati police.

The president had no trouble securing his ballots. He had to wait for several minutes after receiving them, however, for the camera battery to get ready, aim and fire. He was in the booth for seven minutes.

WORLD'S GREATEST AIRSHIP.

Japan's Will Be Ninety Feet Longer Than England's.

Japan is building the greatest dirigible balloon ever known. Details regarding the aerial structure are said to be zealously guarded, but nevertheless it is announced that the aerial monster will be 600 feet long, exceeding by ninety feet the length of the British dirigible launched a short time ago at Barrow.

It will be a little more than fifty feet in diameter and will be fitted with six motors, each of 120 horsepower, so that its total driving power will be equivalent to 720 horsepower, or about twice that of the motors on the British airship.

These engines are expected to be capable of driving an airship of its dimensions against a wind of forty miles velocity—that is, a storm wind—at the rate of thirty miles an hour. But if there should be no wind it could force its way through the air at a speed of seventy miles an hour.

The air vessel which Japan completed a few months ago was 400 feet long and of the semirigid type. The new one is being constructed on the rigid principle. It will have a lifting power of about forty-two tons—exactly double that of the British dirigible. It could take on board at least twenty tons of benzine for fuel, and any loss of gas would be compensated for by the consumption of the fuel. By this means it ought to be able to remain in the air a week and be under full control the whole time.

About ten men will form its crew, though the dirigible's carrying capacity will be sufficient for thirty more men. For ammunition and pneumatic cylinder bombs ample room is to be available.

Our Sleep.

As a race we sleep too little. An infant's life is nearly all sleep. Gradually as the child grows older the hours of sleep are shortened to half the day or about eight hours. Youth until the age of twenty is reached requires fully ten hours' sleep. Although nature demands fewer hours' sleep in summer than in winter, it has been proved that eight hours of sleep are required for the average adult in good health. By this, explains the Pittsburg Dispatch, is meant not simply eight hours in bed, but that amount of good, sound, restful sleep night after night. Our power to work is intimately related to our ability to sleep, and there is no more reliable indication of sound health than the capacity to sleep naturally, and the more active and energetic the waking life the deeper the sleep.

PANAMA OBSERVATIONS.

Senior Antonio Andrade of the plantation know as the Finca, Monte Cristo, a well known character upon the isthmus, was the proud owner, or thought himself to be, of 100 hectares (250 acres) of land in the canal zone. He had devoted a large part to the raising of cane, from which he distilled many thousand barrels of rum yearly for the delectation of the thirsty souls upon the isthmus, of whom some one has said, the more they drink the soberer they get. He was literally the monarch of all he surveyed from the porch of the mammoth shack furnishing a leafy roof to himself and his numerous colony, until one day a United States official arrived upon the scene with a message, which, after Andrade had read, made him forget for the time his English and Spanish and fall back upon his native Greek, apostrophizing the United States, its commissioners and attorneys with ancient and classical oaths whiih Jupiter may have originated, and sending every one to the place always put to service to dispose of one's enemies.

The notice ran that he was to vacate the premises whenever the canal commissioners desired it; that he held no title to the estate, but later would be allowed, as "landholder," whatever improvements the treaty between the United States and Panama had provided for.

Andrade found himself, as soon as the train would take him to Panama, at the office of the secretary of state, Don Ricardo Arias, and one of a clamorous crowd of claimants, shouting for his rights. And then began the wearisome chase after them. It is one of the fictions of law that whenever one's property is to be taken for public uses he shall be waited upon by the appropriator, the latter having in one hand an axe to make public changes, and a bag of money in the other to make good the loss. Our friend Andrade, as well as his fellow-sufferers, felt, as usual in such cases, the rigor of the axe at once, but was driven from pillar to post in the pursuit of the bag of money, until, after litigating the question whether he held the title to the land, to secure conclusions which gave him great discontent, and undergoing every other litigating peril, he found himself one of the claimants before the commission of which I was a member, charged with the duty of determining the governmental and personal rights of the lands in the thousand square miles within the zone. The proposition to be determined was whether the United States was the owner of these lands which were to be treated as such as public domain, or the occupants thereon held such title, or, if not, could only take for any enhancement in the value of the property which they had created by making improvements upon the same. One commission, organized as the treaty required, composed of two Americans and two Panamanians, had made the attempt before our later tribunal was put to service to determine how much the much delayed claimants were entitled to. War had been early declared between the two sections upon the first commission and the only thing derived from this effort was two reports made to the respective governments, one insisting the Panamanians wanted the earth, and the other that Uncle Sam was seeking to get the property of these poor people for nothing. Many of the claimants, finding themselves between the devil and the deep sea, had grudgingly accepted the amount our government chose to dole out, while others abided in the faith, though dubious, that four men from the two nationalities might be found to make fair awards.

It was perhaps the first time a mixed commission had been created under a treaty, and in this particular instance it was like a giant dealing with manikins. Fortunately the canal commission was composed of conservative men, who appreciated that it was better public policy, as well as humane, to give these people their rights, and not, by the exercise of brutal might, create a population hostile and inimical to the welfare of the canal, which was bound to be its next door neighbor. Whoever came into personal relations with the Governor of the Zone, known the world over as Joe Blackburn of Kentucky, would pronounce him one of the kindliest of souls in the world. I heard some one say he believed if the Governor ever caught a mosquito charged with the virus of yellow fever, instead of killing it, he would put it in a glass case, where it would do no harm, and that it might have the benefit of as long a life as possible. How many pleasant hours I spent with him in his household, one of the fine places the government has built for its officials at Ancon, and listened while he entertained us with one of his inimitable monolgues of his relations, while in the Senate and elsewhere, always, however, relating to some President or other public man, but never as to the helpless, and his face was turned toward the claimants because they could not help themselves.

What can one say of the man called to preside over the destiny of the canal, Col. Goethals, and his assistants, Gebhard and Hodges? They are digging the canal as it ought to be because they belong to our corps of regular engineers, the most efficient body of men for this purpose this country has yet produced. Under their supervision, also, they hold the life and well-being of the many thousand employes dependent upon their action. They knew what sacrifices the old occupants of the Zone were making in the loss of their property, and showed every consideration for their welfare.

The stage setting of our commission was decidedly dramatic. It held its sessions in one of the state departments in the new palace, a room adorned with the portraits of the noted men of Panama. Our Panamanian associates were intensely Spanish in blood and in speech, Senor Don Gil Ponce had held the highest judicial office when Panama was a part of Colombia, and in the simple, concise, modest way he treated the questions reminded me of that excellent judge of our supreme court, Seth Ames, of whom the older members of our bar have a loyal recollection, while Senor Don Julie Fabrego, a specialist in local matters, bubbled over with Spanish aphorisms, his wit being of so excellent a quality it still retained its flavor after the interpreter had translated it. The American commissioners had to deal for the most part with a people foreign to them in language, manners and modes of thinking, and with a question involving a tropical country, where, at one point, would be found the rich and valuable savannah lands, banana and other plantations, while elsewhere the primeval had not been disturbed but when cleared would bring forth in abundance.

The problem then, was how to establish mutual confidence. We put into service the Jeffersonian method of bringing together at the Panama restaurants and the central hotel down town the officials of both sections, and over these excellent dinners was brought about a better understanding, which soon ripened into intimate relations. Besides, opportunity was thus furnished to come in contact with all classes and conditions of people who gather at Panama for refuge. The ex-presidents and generals we met in this social pilgrimage, if compelled to return to their own countries, would have made a substantial reduction in the population.

One evening we were entertaining an ex-President, one of the latest arrivals, who explained his flight had been so rapid he had left even his dress suit in the hands of the victor, when all at once he started up, exclaiming, "Why there's General——, and is it possible he has demeaned himself so much as to become a waiter? The last time I saw him he was leading the forces of my country, in retreat let me add, and he has fallen back as far as this country." Meantime the aforesaid general appeared at the table with the entree and served it with due humility and grace until he discovered Mr. President, when his face lit up with an expression like that he must have worn when leading his cavalry charge, with his army perhaps of 15 men. His mustache, which had dropped in due submission to his humble task, took on a most warlike twist. Without ado, he and the president began a verbal and gesticulating bombardment of one another, running, the interpreter said, something like this:

"How dare you, sir, show your face to me when you are the cause of my present downfall?"

"Car-r-r-ambo, and you to say that?" quoth the belligerent waiter, striking a knife upon the table with the air of one about to do or die. "I ought to have your heart's blood!"

By this time the headwaiter intervened and marched his raging assistant off, while his old chief remarked with a shrug: "It is useless to kick a dead donkey."

In return, our friends called us to their Sunday dinners, that being the day devoted to social life, and we would find our way at midday to the upper story of the house where they lived to meet charming and cultured people, where the talk was of the country, its aspirations, literature and music, above all the last.

Meantime the hearings before the commission were growing more and more intense. The questions took the widest possible range, involving the history of the Spanish laws back into the dark abyss of time to the seventh century and from that down to 1908. A thousand years were but a day in this investigation. The seventh century compliation, it seems, was succeeded, through the industry of Alfonso the Wise, in the 13th century, by the law known as "Seven Partidas." This law the attorney triumphantly claimed was imported into this country, where it had escaped the perils of Colombian independence in 1819 and the many revolutions since, and finally had been adouted by the United States and incorporated in the canal code, so that its provisions, taken in connection with modern law that no crown land could be alienated, were still in force.

"There lies the truth of history," muttered Senor Fabrega through the interpreter.

The claimants insisted that these older laws were superseded by the law of Indias, or colonial laws, made specially for the Spanish colonies, approved even by Philip II. in 1595, and they formed one of the wisest and most humane codes ever sent out by any nation, dealing in a kindly spirit with the settlers and securing absolutely their rights after a brief tenure in the land. It was the descendants of these settlers wro were occupying the zone when Morgan the English freebooter, harried this country, ending with the destruction of old Panama in 1671 and the present claimants took title from them. Fnally, such a stage of confusion was reached, we heartily agreed with one citation made from some learned pundit:

"The jurisprudences are so voluminous, the laws so many, it might have been said, as of Rome of old, the literature which covered this field was centum camellorum onus—the burden of 100 camels."

The fog grew thicker and thicker until we concluded to put this all one side and fall back upon the fact that under the treaty e could assess damages to any bonafide landholder, and while the government took the title, we dealt very kindly with the claimants in damages for any improvements they had made upon the land.—Everett C. Bumpus in Boston Herald.

CAMELS IN A RAGE.

When Roused These Usually Patient Animals Fight Like Fury.

The usually patient and submissive camel, like the proverbial worm, will sometimes resent an overdose of abuse. Too dense to think of a way in which he can outwit his driver and so take him unawares, when roused to the pitch of fury he rushes at the tyrant open mouthed, and his formidable teeth and powerful jaws do serious damage.

Of this vindictiveness the camel driver is aware and of the certainty that sooner or later the camel will seek revenge. Accordingly it is customary for the person who fears his malice to throw his clothes before the camel, meanwhile hiding himself until the animal's fury has been expended in tossing and tramping on them, when the injury, real or supposed, is at once forgotten.

The camel will not identify himself with his driver or rider in the smallest way whatever. He steadily declines all advances. His eye never lights up with love or even interest at the approach of his master. Should you attempt to pat or caress him he will object in a very decided manner.

Good treatment or bad makes no difference to the camel. Life and its hard conditions are taken for granted. His view of things is far too serious He is so absorbed and preoccupied that he has no time to waste in the gambols indulged in by all other young animals.—Harper's Weekly.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The dome's so bright it shines at night.

Now let the redistricting plan go forward. With Barnes, Piper, Leslie and Wolcott it surely looks hopeful.

Not much progress can be made at reforming the world while some people on these pleasant autumn days will work when they ought to be out hunting.

J. P. Morgan says the country is without any avenue for the safe investment of surplus money. If J. P. is worrying about his own funds the postal savings bank will take $500 for him.

The German people are much stirred up about the high cost of living, but if they will only turn to the speeches of any of our candidates, they will learn how that little difficulty can be attended to.

A New Orleans woman says the women of that city are interested in their homes and flower gardens, not in suffrage. Now if they would be interested in vegetable gardens too, it would be a paradise for mankind.

George Fred Williams says Bryan could be nominated if he would but say the word. We never knew Mr. Bryan to be restrained by inability to say as many words as might be called for.

The tobacco trust is to be divided into three parts, and perhaps to comply with the law and avoid the appearance of constituting a combination, they all may kindly agree to raise their prices to various points above the present level.

Ambassador Leischman, who is beginning his service at the German court, will not stir the diplomatic world if he does happen to break all the Ten Commandments, but neither he nor his wife must ride down to market on his bicycle.

It is always gratifying to herald the advent of superior candidates in the field for public service and the Ledger takes great pleasure in printing in its news columns today, some qualifications of Mr. James L. Rand for the important position of School Committeeman. The calibre of a man necessary to successfully perform the arduous duties of a manager of the Associated Press is a sufficient recommendation that he would ably and satisfactorily fill any public office to which he might be elected. The thing found hardest is to get such men to run. Mr. Rand's candidacy deserves earnest consideration.

Through the smoke of battle one thing, at least, looms large and is worthy of much congratulation, viz. the endorsement of the voters to put the head of the Police Department under the ban of the Civil Service law. By the vote one municipal office, is removed from politics. The Ledger in a recent issue took the matter up in detail but summed up it means:

The rigor or laxity with which restrictive laws that affect the conduct of the individual citizen are enforced depends largely on the attitude of the head of the police force. It is, therefore, essential for the efficient administration of the department, not only that the chief shall be a man of strong character and intelligence, but also that he shall have all possible protection in carrying out his duties. Any police chief will testify that there are at times almost overwhelming obstacles in the way of those who wish honestly and impartially to enforce the law. The chief is often faced with the unpleasant choice of either losing his position or closing his eyes to flagrant infringements of law and order. Moreover he becomes of necessity involved in local politics, and is obliged to give much of his time to political work at the expense of his official duties.

THE ELECTION.

The election is over with a divided prize. Returns this morning show that Foss and Luce are winners by substantial majorities. The fight was a strenuous one and much credit goes to Mr. Frothingham for the nature of the one he waged.

Although impossible to go into detail a few facts are of an interesting nature.

In New York state the Democrats lose the Assembly, dealing a stinging blow to Boss Murphy of Tammany, but also crippling the power of Governor Dix.

New Jersey appears to stand by Governor Wilson with a Democratic Legislature. The Governor appears bigger than ever as a presidential candidate.

If reports from the newest state, New Mexico, are true a Republican legislature is elected, thereby assuring the Republicans of two more members in the United States senate.

Democratic tendencies exist in the election of Ohio, the home state of President Taft.

Taken altogether nothing has happened of a landslide nature and it would be impossible to use the day's results in the nature of a prophesy.

CREATING A GOOD-WILL.

Oftentimes the most valuable asset in any business is the so-called "good will." It is the most intangible kind of a thing. But when you see three people going into one man's store to one who enters the place next door, when both may have the same floor space and equally attractive show windows, you realize that this unsubstantial thing has big cash values.

If a man has $5000 in bonds, he may draw $250 yearly interest therefrom. If he has $5000 in a little business, and if he has attended diligently to the business and has average intelligence, he may be drawing $2000 therefrom annually, very likely more.

If he sold the store and went to work as a clerk for the new proprietor, he might perhaps get $750 to $1000 a year. After deducting the $250 interest which his capital could draw if invested in bonds, the balance of $7,500 to $1,000 annually might be said to constitute the return from his good will. This is five per cent on $15,000 to $20,000.

What is this intangible good will? Merely the public impression that he is still doing business, that he has an established reputation for fair dealing and alertness.

How is it acquired? In old days a man gained it by the time he got too old to enjoy life, by sitting in his store and waiting for the public to come to him. It was a sure process, but terribly slow.

It is next to impossible to acquire it in that way now, even in a life time. The world is too busy. There are too many hustling business men to compete with.

Modern business good will is very largely the creation of advertising. A year's consistent publicity in the home newspaper will do more to create the public impression of which we have spoken than ten years, silent existence without soliciting your share of trade.

To recur to our illustration, we have known men with $5,000 invested in business to think that they were advertising heavily if they put $300 a year into newspaper publicity work. Yet if that created a good will that added $750 to $1000 a year to their income, it would be a good trade.

A general impression that you are a wide awake, reliable business man is an asset of tremendous value. A merchant can afford to pay heavily to get it.

POWER OF THE PRESS.

At a recent meeting of the Sphinx club, an association of advertising men in New York, Hon. Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic national committee did not hesitate to express himself concerning what is, in his opinion the best means for presenting the claims of any party to the favor of the voters. Mr. Mack declared the newspaper the best reliance of the political manager. "I can tell you," said the national committeeman "that the only way to promote a campaign nowadays is to advertise in the newspapers. I would spend 50 per cent of all the campaign funds for newspaper advertising."

Such comment from one so admirably qualified to give an opinion on such a subject should be pretty nearly conclusive. As a matter of fact, it goes almost without saying now that, in the promotion of anything, from politics to religion or the sale of whatever the public may want or have an interest in, the newspaper is the one surpassing force. It is circulated everywhere and now reaches classes of people who, twenty years ago, acquired their views only from the expressions of others. Now they read and think for themselves. The newspapers are very nearly "running things."

WOLLASTON'S CANDIDATE

James L. Rand Candidate For School Committee-at-Large

ABLE AND POPULAR

With the new school house nearing completion in Wollaston, it can hardly be counted singular that the people of that ward should be taking considerable interest in school matters, and it occasioned little surprise when a candidate for school committee-at-large was announced from this section of our city.

The public-spirited-men who have this year brought to the front such strong men for service in the Council, have also given considerable time to finding a man adapted to the work of the school committee, and claim that in presenting Mr. James L. Rand for this position they are doing the city a service which will be better appreciated after Mr. Rand's first term in office.

Mr. Rand was born in West Lebanon, Maine, in 1866, but his early years and school life were passed in Dover, New Hampshire, where he graduated from High school in 1884, with the honor of class president. While a student at High school his spare time and evenings were spent at a local printing office, where he qualified as a journeyman printre, and caught the fever for a career in the journalistic field.

His public school education was supplemented by a three-years' special course at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for a certificate granted in 1887. The four years following were spent in Philadelphia where Mr. Rand was connected with one of the largest manufacturing establishments in the city; but the newspaper germ was at work, with the result that in addition to the demands of his vocation he undertook a two-years' course at Temple College, specializing for journalism.

Mr. Rand then spent two years as a reporter in Philadelphia and Boston, and was then promoted to an executive position. For twenty years he has steadily advanced in his profession, until now he is the manager of the New England district of the Associated Press.

Ten years' residence in Quincy has given Mr. Rand a wide circle of acquaintances. With children in our public schools, he naturally has pronounced ideas on what the schools should stand for. His statement to the gentlemen who sought him for this work was: "I believe the public school system exists for one purpose only—to provide for each child in the community, as far as conditions will permit, the training best calculated to give him the foundation for an intelligent, productive and contented citizenship!"

If elected to this office, Mr. Rand will surely give to the work pronounced ability, judgment an ddiscretion developed by experience, and an interest in the schools of our city that will make him a valuable acquisition to the school board.

CONVINCING.

"I see, Mr. Dobbson," said the professor of English at Pumpernickel college, "that in your essay you make use of the word 'gent.' Will you be good enough to explain to me the meaning of the word 'gent'? What is a 'gent'?"

"Why, professor," said Dobby, "a gent is a fellow that lacks about two-thirds of being a gentleman!"

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES

As for County Commissioner, it was a foregone conclusion that Merrill would carry the city, which he did by a plurality of 1783. He carried every ward in the city with the exception of Ward Four.

Quincy also voted yes on all of the proposed amendments and they are carried as far this city is concerned. Of the amendments submitted to the voters, that of particularly local interest was in relation to extending the provisions of the civil service law to the Chief of Police. By the city accepting the act, it means that one municipal office, at least is taken out of politirs. The office of Chief of Police has been one of those changed with almost every Mayor, with the exception perhaps of 2, ex-chief Hayden and chief Burrell. The latter was first appointed by Mayor Thompson and has been continued in office ever since.

As the Civil service law is generally understood, it means that when the city accepts the act, the protection of the civil service is extended to those in office at the time of its acceptance. This means that it will be Chief Frank E. Burrell from now on.

The full vote of the city by wards and precincts will be found elsewhere.

Y. P. R. U. FAIR.

With gifts from Unitarians on the Pacific coast and from many states between interest in the seventh biennial fair in Boston of the Young People's Religious Union is widespread. Hon. Louis A. Frothingham is one of the patrons, together with Mrs. Roger Wolcott, Dr. and Mrs. Charles W. Eliot, Miss Alice Longfellow, Miss Emma C. Low, national president of the Women's Alliance; Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Mrs. Robert D. Evans and many others who appreciate what this organization stands for.

The fair will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Hotel Vendome, Boston. There are to be art basket, fancy, doll and infants' tables, at which young women from the Unitarian churches in Greater Boston will preside. Preserves and pickles, candy and cake, with novelties and surprises, go to make up the list, which will also include a table filled with articles sent from California.

The refreshment room will be open from 11.30 to 10 P. M., each day and luncheon or supper may be obtained.

The Herford club of the Arlington Street church will furnish an entertainment of music on Thursday and Friday evenings, and on Saturday afternoon there will be a Punch and Judy show. On Saturday evening the fair will close with dancing from eight to ten.

Members of the Quincy and Wollaston Unions are interested not only in planning to attend but in assisting at the booths.

The navy needs 5000 men, says Secretary Meyer. A lack of partners for all the pretty girls has been complained of wherever the ships have been in port.

THE COWBOY'S ERROR.

The cowboy stepped up to a new clergyman, once a stroke oar at Yale, and said:

" 'Parson, you don't have enough fun. Take a drink.' The minister declined.

" 'Well,' he said, 'Parson, you must have some fun. Here's a faro layout. Take a hand in the game.' The minister declined. 'Parson,' said the cowboy, 'you'll die if you don't have some fun.'

"And he knocked the parson's hat off and hit him a whack on the ear. The old athletic spirit arose; the science of 25 years ago was aroused. A blow landed on the jaw of the cowboy that sent him to the street. The parson walked over, picked him up and dusted the side of the house with him. As the ambulance was carrying the cowboy off, he raised his head feebly and said:

" 'Parson, what did you fool me for? You are chock full of fun.' "

Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus gave a most scholarly and interesting art talk at the Worcester Art Museum on Thursday of last week. Her subject, "The Renaissance of Dutch and Flemish Art" was fully illustrated with slides from Dutch and Flemish masters. The Worcester Women's club is one of the most vital as well as one of the largest in the state and it was a fine tribute to Mrs. Bumpus that she should have been engaged last summer to thus open the club's winter campaign. She was entertained at luncheon before the talk and at tea afterwards when she met many more of the members of the club.

ADAMS CHAPTER, D. R.

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution held its November meeting on Monday afternoon at the birthplace of President John Adams. After the opening exercises and routine business a poem entitled "Seth Pomeroy's Ride" was read by Mrs. Mary A. Chapman which was heartily encored.

The call for the meeting announced that it would be the annual donation day and each member brought a gift for the faithful caretaker, Mrs. Alexander Smith. At the close of the meeting she was called in and presented with many mysterious packages in appreciation of faithful work and interest in caring for the historic old house and the comfort of the Daughters at their monthly meetings.

Mrs. Antoinette S. Paige of Davis street, Wollaston Park will open her house for the December meeting and also extends an invitation to members to stay in the evening and play whist.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

An interesting meeting of the Quincy Women's club is assured for Tuesday afternoon at the clubhouse. The Education committee has arranged for a lecture on "Echoes from the Balkans" by Rev. W. W. Sleeper and Miss May Sleeper Ruggles will sing Bulgarian folk songs.

The class in modern literature by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney under the auspices of the Literature committee met Nov. 1st with Mrs. W. H. Doble and was particularly interesting and enjoyable meeting, the subject being Maeterlinck. The next meeting on Nov. 15 will be with Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Presidents hill.

Under the auspices of this committee also the current events class began Nov. 3 and there was a large attendance to greet Mrs. May Alden Ward, the lecturer. She gave a very clear idea of the Congo states and trouble in Africa and the present war between Italy and Turkey, showing why most of Europe was interested.

The Civic committee has plans well underway for the annual assembly at Quincy hall, the date for which is Friday, Dec. 1st, the next night after Thanksgiving.

FEDERATION NOTES.

Members of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's clubs, who will be delegates from their individual clubs to the autumn meeting, in Haverhill Nov. 16, by invitation of the Hannah Dustin club of that city, will be interested to recall that the federation of 1896 assembled there on Dec. 9 of that year by invitation of the Women's Literary Union. The federation was then only three years old, and Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, its first president, still held that office as she did until 1898, when she was made honorary president.

It is worthy of notice, perhaps that the subject discussed at that first meeting in Haverhill was "Some Problems in Civics," and the subject of one of the addresses at the coming meeting is "Civics," by the Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Perkins of Lynn. The other subjects are akin to it. They are "City Planning" by John Nolan of Cambridge and, in the afternoon, "Our Future Citizen" by President William De Witt Hyde of Bowdoin College.

The morning session begins at 10.15 and the afternoon at 2. The luncheon will be a box-luncheon. Tea and coffee will be served at a nominal price. Trains leave North station, Boston, at 8.55 A. M. and 9.24 A. M., arriving at Haverhill at 9.45 A. M. and 10.46 A. M. Returning, leave Haverhill at 4.03 P. M. and 4.20 P. M., arriving at Boston at 4.55 P. M. and 5.08 P. M.

PROBATION WORK.

Judge Baker of the juvenile court, speaking at the Unitarian church, at Stoneham, Sunday afternoon, of the good work done by his court, gives most of the credit to his probation officers. He terms them missionaries. He told of one boy, a particularly stubborn lad, who caused much trouble to the court, but finally came out on the right side and got a good position. A younger brother caused some trouble in the family, and the older boy told his mother. "He'll never be any good until he takes a course in the juvenile court," showing the respect boys have for the court.

A TEMPERANCE SERMON.

The most pathetic story comes from a Boston hospital where a little lad was operated on. When he was recuperating, the boy's father came to visit him. The boy was clearly ashamed of his father. The man was unshaved, had not been letting drink alone, and, as he, himself, told his son, was out of work. After the father had left, the nurse said to her patient, "Now Jim, can't I read you a nice, short story?" Jim brushed away a tear, choked down a sob and said: "Yes, and please read me one about a little boy whose papa doesn't drink, and who has a steady job."

WHAT HE THOUGHT.

A Boston social service worker tells a good story of a little boy who came under her charge. He was very dirty indeed. After he had been bathed, or rather, scrubbed, scrubbed and then scrubbed some more, she said enthusiastically: "Now wasn't that a fine bath! I am going to have a talk with your mother and tell her to bathe you like that at home. Won't that be splendid?" The youngster looked at her for a minute steadily and then said: "Say, ma'am, if my old lady comes after me to work any of your washin' games I run like —— and hide under the bed."

PLANS FOR SOCIAL OF GALAHAD

The spirit of animation manifested itself strongly at the Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church business meeting Tuesday night. Final plans for the social to be held Nov. 21 were arranged. The nominations of officers proved a lively issue. One of the most important transactions of the evening was the forming of a dramatic society in connection with the organization. This is an entirely new move for the Brotherhood and it is hoped that it will culminate in success. A committee was also elected to secure a speaker for the annual laymen's supper. The speakers for Sunday's discussion held a meeting at the close of the business session from which it is expected will come some surprises when they come together in real action. Some enjoyed a game of bowling while others cultivated their vocal organs, indulging in operatic and popular music until a late hour.

KNEW WHAT WAS COMING.

Prof. Hugh W. Ransom of Harvard was describing, at a dinner, his experiences undergone in the cause of science.

"One thing that impressed me," he said, "was the happy home life of these hard working men. It is a far happier home life than that of the idle rich. And yet, the way people talk, you'd think it was a wretched and squalid home life.

"The way people talk, you'd think Jim Jackson's was a typical poor man's home.

"Jim, very pale and shaky, stopped at the butcher's one morning and said.

" 'Give me a small piece of raw beef for a black eye, please.'

" 'Who's got a black eye, Jim?' asked the butcher, curiously.

" 'Nobody ain't yet,' Jim answered, 'but I've been on a bust for the last three days, and now I'm on my way home to the old woman.' "—Philadelphia Bulletin.

PLAIN WATER.

Just by way of changing the program, two sailors, recently returned from a voyage, decided to have dinner in a fashionable cafe. They scanned the menu carefully.

"Le' stow some o' this consommy," said the leader of the adventure to the waiter.

"What is consommy?" asked the other sailor.

"It's a Dago word for soup," his experienced shipmate assured him. A few minutes later the consomme arrived.

"Huh," sneered the ignorant one, "We been sailin' on soup all our lives an didnt know it."—Everybody's.

PLAY WAS DELIGHTFUL

At Parents And Teachers Association of Cranch School

THE COMMITTEES

A feature that added greatly to the meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association, of the Cranch school held Tuesday evening in the school hall, was the presentation, by the Young Women's club, of a play entitled "Love and a Way." Previous to the play, a business meeting was held, and the minutes of the previous assembly were read and accepted.

A few minor matters were discussed. President George T. Pfaffmann, was in the chair.

The occasion was graced by the presence of Mrs. Joseph Evans of the Boston Conservatory of Music, who enraptured those present by numerous piano selections, previous to the starting of the play. Her performance was a source of pleasure to all in attendance and at the conclusion she was tendered a rising vote of thanks.

Two Committees, one on music, and the other on Philantaropic work were appointed by the chair. The first is comprised of Albert F. Scheakelberger (chairman) Redfield Allen, Mrs. Charles Sampson, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Frank Crane, Mrs. Edwin Bennett and Miss Olive Allen and Clarence Lundin, the last two being graduates of the Cranch school.

The philanthropic committee is composed of Mrs. Andrew Dean, Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., Mrs. Redfield Allen, Mrs. Victor Miller, Mrs. J. O'Donnell, Clarence Burgin, Arthur Hall Edward Johnson and Daniel H. Doran.

The play, entitled "Love and a Way," was next presented and was made up as follows:

Phyllis Merrill, a wilful young lady, Mabel E. Lovjoy

Amelia Porter, aunt to Phyllis, Edith H. Fox

Agnes Porter, aunt to Phyllis, Marie Bass

Beatrice Vane, a young friend of Phyllis, Ruth Kemp

The scene of the play was the sitting room of Phyllis, which was shown in the first act. In the second act, the scene was the same, only the time was put as a week later. The third act, showed the same scene in evidence on the following evening.

The rendition of the play was splendid and the 200 people present were very enthused by it. A rising vote was given to the members of the cast, and the meeting was admitted by all to have been about the best ever entertained.

At the close of the evening refreshments were served by the hospitality committee.

The following is the selections rendered on the piano by Mrs. Evans:

1—Erme Ballsine—(a ball scene) by Nicode.

2—Three dance—From music of Shakespeare's Henry VIII by German.

3—A Spanish Dance by Moszkowski.

While the serving of refreshments was in order, Miss Clara Lundin and William Roach, both graduates of the Cranch school officiated on the piano and violin respectively and played for the dancing, which was enjoyed up to a late hour. A wide abundance of chrysanthemums adorned the hall, and caused it to present a very enticing appearance.

DOG CAUSES $1,000,000 SUIT.

Chicago Families Quarrel Over Barking Spitz and Go to Court.

A suit for $1,000,000 was filed in the superior court at Chicago because a Spitz dog ran through the halls of the old Medill mansion, barked and played other doggish pranks at all hours of the day and night.

Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Morrison are the owners of the dog. They assert that Cornelius R. Clark and his wife should pay at least that sum for the damage to their feelings and those of the pet dog as a result of disputes which have arisen during the past few months at the Medill house.

The Morrison and Clark families occupied flats in the old Medill property, while the dog had the freedom of the halls and stairways.

The Clarks complained, asking that the animal be barred from the premises. When Dr. Morrison arrived home on the evening of Aug. 2 he was confronted by six men, who refused to let him into his flat. Prior to this Mrs. Morrison, who became ill because of the excitement attending the trouble between the two families, was forcibly taken from the house by the six men and sent to a hospital.

LINEN SHOWER WAS SURPRISE

To Miss Alice Cobleigh At Home of Mrs. Fred S. Jacobs

DAINTY COLLATION SERVED

Friends of Miss Alice Cobleigh of Wollaston tendered her a surprise linen shower at the home of Mrs. Fred S. Jacobs, Farrington street, Saturday evening. The evening was pleasantly spent with games, a huge cobweb, to which were attached favors for the guests and many useful gifts for Miss Cobleigh afforded much amusement. A dainty collation was served by Mrs. Richard Jacobs and Mrs. Fred Jacobs. Guests were present from Boston and Vicinity.

COMING EVENTS.

At the request of several of our readers the Ledger will again publish a column of "coming events" and ask the co-operation of societies, clubs and organizations in having the list full and accurate. There are so many entertainments nightly in our city the list is published as a guide and help to those getting up entertainments, that the conflicting of dates may be avoided. One line will be devoted to this publicity but if any society desires to announce fuller detail as to place, hour, etc., it will be inserted in this column at 25 cents per line each insertion. The list will be published twice a week, Wednesdays and Saturdays, the first insertion appearing in tomorrow's Ledger. Look the list over for dates and if your entertainment is not there send it in to the Events Editor.

Anty Drudge's Monday Morning Song.

Fels-Naptha does my washing,
And I have time to spare,
For while the clothes are soaking,
I'm free from work and care.

For scrubbing, house-cleaning and dish-washing Fels-Naptha soap is just as superior as it is for washing clothes. It does all any soap will do—besides lots of things impossible with other soaps.

For instance, it whitens floors in addition to cleaning them; takes dirt off varnished surfaces of hard wood without dulling the varnish; brightens dingy paint work and brings out the colors in oil-cloth and linoleum;—and in doing this cleaning you use a cloth instead of a scrubbing brush. Easier, isn't it? It will remove grease and stains from carpets and rugs as thoroughly as can be done by a professional cleaner. It will even take out blood stains—the severest test a soap can be put to.

Full directions for doing all these things the Fels-Naptha way are printed in the wrapper—the red and green wrapper.

Q—Is there any difference between death and annihilation?

Answer.—In the Scriptures we find that there are two kinds of death mentioned; the Adamic condition of death, and the "Second Death." The first could not properly be termed annihilation, as the Lord has arranged that all who have died because of Adam's sin (the whole world of mankind) are to be released from this sentence of death and awakened at the time of Christ's second coming. These, from the Bible standpoint have merely been "asleep." "Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man," and therefore the entire race will be awakened from the tomb. (John v.:28, 29. During the reign of Christ and His Bride, the Church who then will judge or try the world, if any continue in opposition to God's law of righteousness, and love, and justice, they will go into the "Second Death." This condition of death is annihilation. "They shall be as though they had not been." "They shall suffer everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord." "But these, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, * * * shall utterly perish in their own corruption."—Obadiah xvi; II Thessalonians i, 9; II Peter ii, 12.

BUYING A VASE.

Worthheimer's Clever Coup by Which He Secured the Prize.

The late Charles Worthheimer when asked on one occasion what he considered to be his astutest business coup thought for awhile and then told how once when he was walking through a Brighton square he espied through an open window what he knew to be a priceless Chinese vase. He went to the nearest postoffice, examined a local directory and found the name of the resident. Then he called and asked for the gentleman and was shown into the study under the name of "Hamilton." He briefly explained that he was looking for a modest house in Brighton and had taken a fancy to this one. Would the gentleman entertain an offer for the place as it stood—"lock, stock and barrel?"

The owner, a little nonplused, hesitated.

"If your offer is reasonable," interrupted Hamilton, "I will give you an extra thousand."

"Call tomorrow at 10:30, then," replied the owner.

Hamilton did and found him prepared to accept £18,000 for the twenty-two years' unexpired term and the contents of the residence.

Although this was well over market value, Hamilton at once closed, adding the extra thousand, according to promise. As, however, he afterward sold the vase for £35,000, his coup was unmistakable.—London Telegraph.

SERIAL STORY.

The Fighting Hope which has been running serially in the Ledger comes to an end today. The story has proved of absorbing interest and the paper has been eagerly awaited each day by thousands of readers. The new serial promises to create a sensation among lovers of a good story. The Ledger has secured the sole right to publish it in this vicinity, it being copyrighted. The story is entitled "Adventure" and is by Jack London. It is his latest and greatest novel and deals with South Sea life, the land of Robert Louis Stevenson and combines the charm and mystery of Stevenson with the power and dash of Jack London.

The Hourglass.

Instead of being obsolete and simply an interesting relic the hourglass in various forms is a twentieth century necessity. For such purposes as timing, hardening and tempering beats in twist drill manufacture, where seconds or minutes must be gauged accurately, nothing serves like the hourglass with the right amount of sand. Accuracy to fractions of a second can be obtained much more easily by an hourglass than by watching the hands of a watch.—London Graphic.

Wife—"Have you noticed that my husband missed me very much while I was away, Liese?"

Maid—"Well I didn't notice it so much at first, but yesterday he seemed to be in despair."—Fliegende Blaetter.

The beautiful girl waded into the yeasty surf.

Presently she uttered a shriek of terror.

"Save me!" she cried.

There were seven men on the hotel piazza. They conferred hastily. Then the one with the clearest voice called to the struggling maiden.

"Awfully sorry," he shouted, "but there isn't an unmarried man among us."

Then the lovely girl ceased her struggles and presently waded ashore. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

POTHIER GETS FOURTH TERM

Republican Plurality in Rhode Island is Reduced

KENTUCKY GOES DEMOCRATIC

State Long In the Balance Between the Two Parties Elects McCreary Governor—New Jersey Returns Indicate Democratic Gain—Democrats Win In New York City, but by Greatly Reduced Pluralities

Providence, Nov. 8.—Returns indicate that Governor Aram J. Pothier, the Republican candidate for a fourth term, has been elected in the state election over Lewis A. Waterman, his Democratic opponent. Zenas W. Bliss was elected lieutenant governor.

ARAM J. POTHIER

Governor Pothier's plurality of 11,400 last year, it is believed, will be reduced to 6000 or 7000. The remainder of the Republican state ticket is also elected.

The voting was very heavy, especially in the cities where there were hot municipal contests.

The constitutional amendment for biennial elections is assured of victory.

With one district in the city of Cranston missing, the returns for governor gave:

Pothier, Rep. 37,633
Waterman, Dem. 30,377

The election also gives the Republicans a large increase in members of the next legislature, especially in the senate.

ZENAS W. BLISS

The proposition to have biennial elections was carried by a substantial majority over the necessary three-fifths vote.

The only change in the liquor question was in West Greenwich, which swung from the wet column to dry.

Mayor Fletcher, Republican, was re-elected mayor of Providence for the fourth term over Alderman Gainor, Democrat, by a plurality of about 300.

KENTUCKY SWINGS OVER

Landslide Sends State Back Into the Democratic Column

Louisville, Nov. 8.—Kentucky, for years considered in the balance between the Democrats and Republicans, went back to the former party by a victory of landslide proportions. Returns indicate that James B. McCreary, Democratic candidate for governor, has been elected by from 20,000 to 40,000 majority. His opponent was Edward C. O'Rear.

The returns have surprised even the most optimistic Democrats. Most of them had said the election would be close. As it is, the Republican majority of 7000 by which the present administration went into office was shattered, and the Democratic state ticket will go into office more strongly indorsed than any ticket in years.

JAMES B. McCREAVY

Kentucky's Governor Thirty-Two Years Ago Is Again Elected

TAMMANY IS SHAKEN

Old Strongholds Carried by Greatly Reduced Pluralities

New York, Nov. 8.—Tammany Hall's hold on New York city was shaken in an election in which local officers were mainly at stake. The Democrats successfully defended their old strongholds, the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, but by greatly reduced pluralities. Queens county also stood by the Democrats, but the Republican-fusion candidates made nearly a clean sweep in Brooklyn and probably divided honors in the borough of Richmond.

A year ago Manhattan and the Bronx boroughs gave Governor Dix a plurality of 68,389 and elected a Democratic supreme court justice by about 22,000. Yesterday Robert L. Fowler, the Democratic candidate for surrogate, carried New York county by a maximum plurality of about 17,000.

The Democrats elected their candidates for sheriffs by about 8000, and the three Democratic candidates for supreme court justices in the First judicial district by a bare 5000. Francis M. Scott, the fourth justice elected, was indorsed by both parties.

The Republicans gained eight assemblymen in New York county and will send fifteen members of that body out of the total delegation of thirty-five.

James C. Cropsey, former police commissioner, who was the centre of the liveliest fight in Kings county, was elected district attorney by about 5000.

The Republicans elected a sheriff in Kings county by about 14,000. In nineteen of twenty-three districts in Brooklyn, the fusionists gained six assemblymen.

IN NEW JERSEY

Democrats May Have a Majority In the Upper House

Trenton, Nov. 8.—Returns of the election in New Jersey are coming in slowly, but they indicate that the Democats have made a gain in the state senate and may control that body.

Democratic senators have been elected in Warren, Salem and Monmouth counties, and Democratic State Chairman Grosscup claims that the Democrats have elected their candidate for senator in Gloucester county. The Republicans do not concede this, but admit that the result is close.

With a senator elected from Gloucester county the Democrats would have at least eleven state senators, which would be a majority of the upper house, there being seven hold-over Democratic state senators.

Last year's senate was composed of twelve Republicans and nine Democrats. The returns as to the assembly are meagre, but the control of that body will depend upon the result in Essex county.

New York Mayors

Cornelius F. Burns, Dem., defeated Elias P. Mann, Rep., candidate for a fourth term for mayor of Troy, by 1500 majority.

Mayor Edgarton, Rep., was re-elected at Rochester.

Dr. Lyons was elected mayor of Schenectady on the Socialist ticket.

Stewart N. Townsend, Rep., was elected mayor of Rome.

Mayor James B. McEwan, Rep., was re-elected at Albany by a substantial majority.

Mayor Sheehan, Dem., was re-elected at Elmira.

Thomas H. O'Neil, Rep., was re-elected mayor of Auburn.

ANOTHER DANGER.

Berlin Scientist Says Germs Lurk In Innocent Envelopes.

THE WARY LITTLE MOUSE.

Wear a Monocle In Your Left Eye to Be Modish—Bits of Crewel Work Trim Blouses—A Profitable Occupation For Women.

Dear Elsa—Don't you love to open your letters at the breakfast table? I do, and we always, as you know, have the morning mail laid at the plate of each member of the family. Dick, though, this morning read a horrid editorial or something about its being dangerous to open mail at the breakfast table. Did you ever hear of anything so absurd? It seems some Berlin scientist has succeeded in tracing several cases of contagion to this "comfy" custom. He says that the average man or woman goes down to breakfast with hands and face scrupulously clean, teeth scrubbed and throat gargled. In that condition he is prepared to eat without danger of swallowing more disease germs than may have escaped the watchful attentions of the cook.

And in this sanitary state we handle letters and papers which have passed through many hands before reaching our own. Between bites we open envelopes and wrappers and in so doing unthinkingly pave the way for all kinds of germs. So now Dick says that letters shall be opened and read before or after breakfast, and in this decision the maid agrees with him, but not the members of his family.

I do wish you could have seen Dorothy D. just now as she passed our window. She was wearing one of those awfully English monocles and looking the Anglomaniac all right. One week in London has upset all her eyesight outlook on this very crude side of the water, and she's quite the swaggerest thing in town—according to her own lights—with her monocle screwed into her eye and a long half inch ribbon of black moire attached to it.

Now I'll stop knocking my neighbors and begin on the mice. We have them—mice, I mean—and we have them in the cooling closet next to the kitchen. Of course, traps would have caught them, but I do hate to think of the cute little things, which are simply following a law of nature in seeking food, caught in this way. But they have become so numerous that something had to be done. And this is what I did do. I spread newspaper over the lower shelf of the closet and between its leaves I placed pepper—strong and black. So now when the little beasties begin to gnaw through to the upper world of tempting food they get a mouthful of pepper and probably take the hint, for they have not returned for another dose. As black pepper and newspapers are not prohibitive in price I am delighted with my scheme and can renew preparation whenever it is necessary.

Suppose, before I forget it, I sandwich in a little, as they say in the trade, "style talk." Dame Rumor has it that yarn embroideries are going to be very fashionable. These trimmings take the form of bandings and cross stitch patternings of coarse yarn for blouses or any garment on which yarn embroidery shows to advantage. Now if you have any odd bits of crewel work or worsted embroidery you can combine them into fascinating trimmings for your new clothes. For your blue chiffon blouse to wear with your new blue fall suit nothing could be a quarter note.

I have just heard such an interesting story of a young girl who persuaded the manager of a summer hotel to allow her business card to be placed in his rooms, announcing that she would mend lingerie gowns, blouses and would also clean gloves and shoes at reasonable rates.

The guests who required her services left their cards in the hotel office. Every morning the pretty girl applied to the clerk for them. Before long, every morning saw her depart from the office, armed with a collection of things to be mended. Later on business grew so brisk that the services of a boy were obtained to go from room to room collecting the goods. The young woman found the homely occupation a paying one, and the landlord has reason to be glad he permitted her to place her card in the rooms, for his guests have found her a great addition to their comfort. Now I'm simply going to add MABEL.

SYNOPSIS

Anna Granger, devoted mother of two small children, discovers that her husband is a weak character and that he has lied to her about a woman.

Posing as Miss Dale, she becomes stenographer to Burton Temple, through whose evidence her husband has been imprisoned. She thinks Temple is the guilty man and is acting the spy to clear her husband's name for his sake and that of her children.

Anna discovers that Temple was one of her girlhood's ideals. Thinking her a single woman, he tells her her husband was a liar and perjurer.

Temple has detectives on the trail of Brady, an accomplice of Granger, looking for evidence. Anna is searching for evidence against Temple, who becomes interested in her.

Despite herself, Anna becomes fond of Temple, although determined to convict him for the honor of her boys. Temple's detectives discover Rose Fanchon, the woman for whom Granger was a thief.

Temple desires to marry Anna. She rebuffs him, questioning his honor. Temple is indicted for the crime for which Granger is suffering imprisonment.

Temple's detectives find a letter proving Granger's guilt. Temple reveals its nature to Anna, who burns it. Not knowing this, Temple proposes marriage to her.

Anna confesses that she burned the letter because of her mother love, and Temple forgives her. Granger arrives, announcing that he has been pardoned.

Driven into a corner like a rat, all his despicable cruelty came out. He started as though to spring upon his wife, and Mrs. Mason screamed.

"You'll testify against me, will you?" he sneered. "Testify against your husband for a stranger? No magnifying glass needed on that; it's pretty plain. I was safely tucked away in prison. You thought you could"—

In answer to Mrs. Mason's scream Temple had appeared, followed by Craven. Granger looked at them sneeringly for a second, then went on in his tirade against his wife.

"You think of your children's honor, do you? Well, can you afford to let them have your name soiled with this scandal? Go to court; testify all you like in Temple's behalf, and I'll swear you've been living here with him. D'ye think the jury will accept your word in his favor without proof, mind you, when it's your husband who is accusing him and you?"

"You scoundrel!" cried Temple, making a rush upon him. "You skulking, dirty little scoundrel!"

Half choking, Granger fought but he was as nothing in the hands of the enraged giant who held him. Then Craven touched his friend firmly on the arm.

"I HAVEN'T BEEN PARDONED, ANNA; I ESCAPED!"

"Let him go, Temple. Don't kill him. He isn't worth it."

Granger, released, still choking, managed to stammer: "I'll say it. I'll publish it. What'll you two look like then? I can block any testimony she can give. Pretty good story for the papers, eh? And they're on my side anyhow."

"He's right, Temple," whispered Craven aside. But Granger overheard and with a flash of triumph turned to his wife.

"Come along, I say. Come along—now, or I'll telephone my pretty story immediately. Once out, you know, it'll go like wildfire"—

And then, just outside the window, there sounded a low, shrill whistle.

That whistle caused Granger, the momentary cruel dictator, to collapse suddenly into Granger, the cringing thief.

"They're following me; they're on my track; they'll get me! Save me! Oh, save me! I haven't been pardoned, Anna; I escaped! Don't you understand? I was a trusty"—

But the woman only stared at him dully. Mrs. Mason furtively left the room at last.

"When Mrs. Mason told me what you were doing here I knew I must get you away; I feared you would discover my guilt. That's why I came; that's why I risked getting the pardon. I thought you'd help me to get away. Oh, for God's sake, hide me, Anna!"

"They're asking for him," said Craven, returning from the hall. "They are downstairs asking for him."

"Tell them he is here," replied Anna sternly. She was adamant now.

In desperation Granger rushed to the door through which Craven had passed out and again locked it. Temple stood passively by, letting Anna work her own will. The knob of the locked door turned twice, then rattled.

The convict crept, shuddering, to his wife's feet. Then from the deep springs of her woman's tenderness there came one last drop of pity. She walked to the window and opened it. He should have his last chance.

He comprehended and, with one last grateful look at her, darted through the window into the blackness of the night.

Anna dropped tremblingly into a chair and peered fixedly, strainedly, out into the darkness.

The sharp report of a pistol rang out, followed by a second and a third. The woman in the chair moaned.

In a few minutes Craven came to the door and rattled again. Temple unlocked it and met him on the threshold.

"It's all over with Granger," said Craven. "He's dead." Then at a look from Temple he retreated, leaving the two alone.

"You heard?" asked the man gravely. The woman bowed her head a little lower in a sort of requiem prayer. Then:

"Poor, poor Robert!" murmured she, the pity of her heart surging to her lips.

For an indefinite space there was silence, she praying, he, standing by the mantel, reverently guarding her.

But presently as she began to sob "My boys, oh, I want my boys," he crossed over to her. He laid his hand protectingly on the bent, shining head.

"We'll get them, dear," he said simply.

She looked up, dazed for a second, pushing her way back to him through a blur of tears.

He knelt beside her; he took her little cold hands in his and tried to warm them against his cheek, wet like her own. She seemed so frail now, so slight a thing, so helpless to battle against such great odds. He yearned to comfort her and gather her to him as he would a child.

But gently she fended him off.

"Not yet, not quite yet, not tonight. But, oh, if you knew how the heavens were opening to me, beloved!" Her eyes shone upon him like stars. "I don't think that anything, anything, anything in the whole wide world can ever make me feel tired again. My fighting hope is at rest, and my boys will learn from a man how they shall be men."

THE END.

He Was No Shirk

In an Illinois town you can find on the map the fire department has an excellent record for conscientiousness and devotion to duty. One night the church bell rang out clearly an alarm with the code taps that indicated "fire north of square."

In an instant response the fire department jumped on his horse and galloped to the rescue. He had not gone far when a second alarm announced a second fire, this time to the south. An anxious citizen speeding toward his south side property called out to the passing marshal:

"Hi, Jake! You're headed the wrong way! There's a big blaze at Grenfig's."

The fireman was no shirk. "Keep it a-goin', Ed!" he shouted. "I'll be over in less 'en ten minutes!"—Everybody's Magazine.

School Becky Sharp Attended.

If one had to select a single Thackeray shrine in London for a pilgrimage it might well be Walpole House, or Chiswick hall. This was not only the house where Thackeray as a nervous, shortsighted boy was placed at school with Dr. Turner and was so miserable that he tried to run away. It possesses that other interest which makes the scenes of Mr. Pickwick's imaginary adventures more historic than those of Dickens' real life, for Walpole House is certainly Miss Pinkerton's academy, and here is the spot where Becky Sharp scandalously hurled back the dictionary. Lloyd Sanders, studying Old Chiswick, admits indeed that Thackeray borrowed some details for Miss Pinkerton from other houses. But Walpole House is the basis. Here, too, when it was a boarding house Daniel O'Connell ate his dinners, and here Charles II.'s Duchess of Cleveland probably ended her days.—London Chronicle.

A Cheerful Prospect.

Will R. MacDonald of Washington rented a farm a few miles outside of the city to escape the din and noise of town. But he soon tired of the trouble of looking after the place.

"I'm going to hire a manager to look after this farm," he told his family at breakfast one morning. "Then I won't have any more trouble. He can occupy a room on the top floor, and we will all have a quiet, easy time."

MacDonald leaned back and smiled serenely in anticipation of the coming rest and peace.

That night as the new manager passed through the hall on his way upstairs MacDonald stepped out and asked him if he cared to have the afternoon paper.

"No, thank you," replied the fount of rest and quiet. "I have a flute on which I always practice two hours before going to bed."—Popular Magazine.

The Famous River Ganges.

The river Ganges, in India, is famous for two things—its alleged purifying influence on all who bathe in it and its muddiness. For ages there has been a belief among the Hindus that a dip in the Ganges, particularly at Benares, where the water is full of impurities, is a safeguard against the cholera, typhoid fever and other infectious diseases. An analytical examination of the river water at Benares has revealed the interesting fact that the Ganges is fairly alive with bacteria antagonistic to the bacilli of cholera and typhoid. The plague ridden Hindu who plunges into the river to bathe in it and even to swallow a few mouthfuls of the muddy water provides himself with a vast army of useful microbes which will quickly sweep out of existence and out of his system the deadly microbes of disease. So there must be some merit in the reputed medicinal virtues of the Ganges after all.

His Light Diet.

The actor's sense of humor is always uppermost. He will jest about his hard luck, his ill luck or almost anything that offers an opportunity for a joke. Generally, too, he has courage—the courage to smile when his heart is heavy. A comedian, who was known to be in desperate straits, was invited to a social gathering one evening. When the poor actor arrived he was seen to be thinly clad, although the weather was bitter cold. He looked also as if he had not had any too much nourishment for some time. The hostess greeted him cordially.

"I am so glad to see you," she said. "How well you are looking!"

"Yes," replied the comedian; "the wind has been very nutritious of late."—Saturday Evening Post.

A Kicking Deferred.

Aunt Clara (to her young nephew, who has just brought a bucket into the parlor where she is sitting)—Good gracious, Tommy! What are you doing with that bucket? Take it down to the kitchen at once. Tommy—I want you to kick it, Aunt Clara, 'cause I heard papa saying when you kick the bucket we'd get at the very least $25,000.

Keeping Tab on Dad.

"What does your father do when you ask him any questions?" asked one small boy.

"He generally says, 'I'm busy just now; don't bother me,'" replied the other. "Then when I go out of the room he looks in the encyclopedia."—Washington Star.

THE JOKE PROVED FATAL.

It Was a Gray Bearded Old One That Got In Its Deadly Work.

"What became of Bill Richardson?" I asked of a quaint character I met in one of my travels on a western railroad.

"It came about in this way," said the commercial agent who tells the story. "The reply of my companion for a day was: 'He died from the effect of the joke that had been played on nearly everybody in that town. It may have been an old one when the morning stars shouted together for aught I know, but it was new in our town and was sprung by a Maine Yankee who had been living in our burg for several years. His name was Charley Davenport, and he died many years ago. In his shuffling way he went from store to store and said that he had just heard that a well known citizen had got shot. Then the people who had listened asked where the man got shot. Davenport said in his drawling voice, 'He bought 'em.'

"'That very night, after everybody who had bit had got through cussin' Davenport, Bill Richardson, the old hotel keeper of the town, was shot. Every one knew Bill Richardson. As soon as the accident occurred a friend of Bill rushed to a nearby doctor. He was a member of one of the big churches and was as well known for his piety as he was for curing nearly everything that come his way. But he was a very sensitive man. Richardson's friend who called on the doctor was greatly excited.

"'Doc was upstairs when he was summoned to the window by loud knocks. He raised the window and asked what was wanted. The man below replied that old Bill Richardson had got shot. Now it happened that Davenport had sold doc that day on the old gag, and he was as mad as a harried hornet about it. So when the man below told him that old Bill Richardson had got shot doc forgot about his religion and yelled back: 'You go to blazes. I know where he got 'em!' And with that he slammed down the window and went to bed.

"'Before the friend of old Bill Richardson could find another doctor old Bill had passed away. He might have died anyway, but if it hadn't been for that old joke he would have had a chance. The joke didn't stop with old Bill's death. It was soon noised about that doc had cussed from his window, and he was haled before the church session and there was a smart scandal for several days, but when it was explained how doc had been sold he was declared not guilty. I lived in the town several years after that and as long as I did I never heard of anybody playing a joke of any sort.'"—New York Herald.

Shakespeare as an Actor.

About the year 1590 one of the London companies received an addition in the person of a young man who was not only a skillful and useful actor, but who also possessed the accomplishment of being able to adapt older plays to the taste of the times and even proved to have the gift of writing tolerably good plays himself, though older and jealous colleagues might hint at their not being altogether original. This young man, whose capacities became of no slight use to the company and the theater, was named William Shakespeare.—From "A History of Theatrical Art."

QUINCY HIGH WINS FROM MELROSE

Local Boys Add Another To Long List of Victories

SCORE 17-0

Inspired with a firm determination to play the remainder of their games in a manner indicative of championship form, the Quincy High school football warriors opposed the Melrose High contingency in football conflict at Merry Mount Park yesterday, and, as was anticipated, emerged from the contest in victory, the score being 17 to 0. The visitors were considerably lighter than the local players, and averaged 140 pounds on the line. Then too, they seemed to lack the team play possessed by Coach Staff's lads, who seemed to be able to penetrate the opposing line at random, and who, in truth, should have won by a much larger score.

As it was, the game had its interesting side, and there were times when many exciting features were contributed.

Punting was resorted to in a large measure by both sides, but the high wind that prevailed, made it difficult for those who kicked the ball, to acquire any great distances. The forward pass was tried at different times all by the local eleven and only on one occasion, when a throw from Blackmur to White netted 40 yards, did it work successfully.

Quincy High did not have any luck at all, either with the majority of punts, or with the tries for field goals, because on nearly every occasion, the kick was blocked by an opposing player. The same rule applied to the visitors, who likewise shared the local boys in the fate of blocked kicks. Melrose High was kept on the defensive side during the greater part of the game, and only twice was first down made. The centre part of the opposing line seemed to be the weakest, but outside of this, the other Melrose players accredited themselves in fine style.

A comparison of the two backfields easily showed the local boys to be superior, for they were able to get started much quicker than their opponents who played in the same respective positions, and were thus able to reap better results. There was one man on the opposing backfield who showed up to great advantage for the Melrose eleven, and he was Milton, the captain, who played left half back. He seemed to be alert to the situation all the while, and his alacrity on all plays was especially noticeable.

At one time he circled the local right end, broke through a number of players, and ran with the ball 65 yards before being downed. Every time he reaped gains, and exhibited great form, not only on the offensive but on the defensive side as well.

McDonald was tried out in the backfield for Quincy High and showed that he is worthy of bearing considerable watching in the future. Trask and Halvosa were also in the lineup and both gave good accounts of themselves.—

The work of the Quincy ends was largely conspicuous, and Blackmur, Page and Finlay, also did some splendid work, while the usual ground gaining of Holmes was as prominent as ever before.

The first period was taken up mostly in the interchanging of the ball. The visitors were forced to resort to punting, owing to the fact that no gains could be acquired. Page seemed to fare better than his opponent in kicking; due principally to the fact that he was aided by the wind.

Towards the end of the period, the local boys got down to effective work. First Holmes, then Finlay, would each, in successive turns, tear through the opposing lines for gains of 10 and 15 yards. Blackmur failed on his forward passes, and this proved a serious obstacle to the local eleven.

The ball was finally landed within 25 yards of the goal line, and the local boys were now in a fine position to score. A tackle play by Johnson worked successfully. On the next rush Finlay was given the ball, and in the scrimmage muffed it. White, however, lost no time in recovering it, and running over for the first touchdown of the game.

In the second period a few penalties were imposed and once, the local players suffered a penalty of 15 yards, for tackling an opposing player after he had signalled for a fair catch. It was in tris period that Milton made his 65 yard run. Thiis play was cleverly executed and he would have gone for a touchdown had not a couple of Quincy players blocked him on the outside section of the field. Miilton showed speed throughout the game, and was easily the shining star of the opposing eleven.

In the third period Melrose had the ball, and was forced to punt, in failing to gain downs, on four occasions: Duppy, the right end, took the ball on a criss-cross play at one time, and succeeded in running 25 yards with the pigskin. Another penalty of 15 yards was imposed on the local players in the early part of the period. Holmes and Page were seen to do Trojan work. The latter punted the ball and the visitors were held for downs on Quincy's 13 yard line. Here Blackmur called the local backs to plug the line, and Finlay placed the ball over for the second touchdown. Page failed to kick the goal. White and Larkin rushed the ball a couple of times after the next kickoff and their work in this respect is worthy of commendation.

The last period was a most exciting one, for both teams played as best they could. The punting of Page was an added feature, and a 25 yard run contributed by Milton, again brought the speedy left half back of the opposing eleven to the fore. Finlay also did some heavy plunging, and by contributing a 20 yard run, was enabled to place the ball over for the last touchdown of the game. Babb, the plucky centre of Melrose High, was injured towards the last part of the period and had to be removed from the field. It seems that he was kicked in the ribs on an attempted punt by Page. The last goal kicked by Page was a pretty one, and it is safe to say that he is one of the best punters in interscholastic circles.

Only two games now remain to be played by Quincy High, one will be played next Saturday at Worcester with Worcester High and on the following Saturday, the great Waltham High aggregation will be encountered at Waltham. The local boys are exceedingly desirous of winning these two games, and if such a feat can be accomplished, the predictions of all local fans shall have come true and the efforts of Coach Staff to round out a championship team shall have been more than appreciated.

LIVELY BOWLING.

In a bowling match which was close and exciting from start to finish, the Clapp Memorial team defeated the Quincy Y. M. C. A. five at the local alleys last evening. The score resulted in a 1281 to 1276 victory for the Weymouth team.

The highest sum total was made by Loring of the winners, who attained the 303 mark. The same player also had the highest mark for a single string, his roll being fixed at 117. He was the one star of the game.

Brooks played well for the losers and finished close to Loring. His total for three strings was 292, while he had a mark of 111 to his credit for a single string.

ORGANIZE NEW CLUB AT ATLANTIC

Perhaps the youngest club to organize in this vicinity is the H. B. C. club of Atlantic. The members are all school friends, nearly all being pupils at the high school. The officers elected for the year are:

President—Viola Jackson.
Vice President—Louise Churchill.
Secretary—Winnifred Pratt.
Assistant Secretary—Bertha Fuller.
Treasurer—Marion Wilson.
Assistant Treasurer—Dorothy Holway.
Historian—Beatrice Rogers.

The club meets Monday afternoons this week Miss Louise Churchill being the hostess.

The young ladies sew and have a good time in a social way among themselves. Without doubt we shall hear from this club later on; for who knows but that they are laying the foundation for a much larger and broader line of work as they advance in years and experience, for in organization, ideas for good are put into practice which otherwise never would be.

Mrs. Stephens of Prospect street entertained ladies at whist Tuesday afternoon, for the useful table committee of the fair. It was announced that German whist would be played, and it proved very interesting to all present. Mrs. Goddard won first prize, Mrs. Jelenek second, and the consolation was awarded Mrs. Foster.

—A movement to raise funds for a monument in Washington in memory of the women of the civil war will prosper most if made nationally comprehensive. There is no need to distinguish between womenfolk who prayed for preservation of the Union and equally devoted wives, mothers, and sweethearts of men who fought for the confederacy. Their courage and tenderness are our common heritage.

If China becomes a republic what tedious times they'll have waiting around the bulletin boards for the returns from the back counties.

UMPIRE EGAN TELLS OF COBB'S GREAT STEAL.

"Possibly the best one I ever saw Cobb engineer was at the expense of Frank Baker of the Athletics," says Umpire John Egan. "Cobb occupied first, when Crawford singled a short one to right field. Murphy threw to Baker, and Cobb made a half slide into third, arriving ahead of the ball and in a cloud of dust. The throw was such that all Baker's attention was centered upon getting the ball instead of on the runner.

COBB.

"He missed the runner altogether and was digging around in the dust trying to catch him. Cobb made a slide that brought him to his feet and without hesitation sprinted for home. Baker took another swing where he supposed the runner was before awaking to the situation. Then he made a hurried throw home, and Cobb fell away from Ira Thomas and was safe."

In a recent game with Cleveland in Detroit he gave a wonderful exhibition of base running. In the first inning he stole first and second. In the eighth, with two out and the bases empty, he tied the score. He easily beat a grounder to Olson, whose throw sailed over Lajoie's head. Cobb, approaching second when Blanding secured the ball, saw the pitcher throw to Ball and set sail for third. Ball threw wild, and Cobb tore for the plate, sliding around Easterly, who had the ball waiting for him.

Republicans And Democrats Size Up Results Progressives' Hopes Raised

Effect of Off-Year Election Upon Next Campaign

Washington, Nov. 9.—Republicans, progressives and Democrats all are trying to extract comfort out of Tuesday's elections. All apparently are pleased—the Republican regulars with the general Republican gain in the states, the progressives for the display of independent voting and the Democrats for the re-election of Governor Foss in Massachusetts and their gains in many city elections, where party spirit undoubtedly influenced results.

The pleasure of the progressives over the Republican victories in New Jersey, New York and Maryland may appear peculiar, but it is based on the fact that the progressive leaders have much use for the prestige of the Republican party and count upon it as a big asset in case La Follette should secure the nomination for president.

After a conference at headquarters the progressives here declined to issue any statement but they were manifestly encouraged by the election results. They are anxious to believe that the election of a Republican legislature in New Jersey has weakened Woodrow Wilson, but they attach little significance to the apparent election of a Republican governor in Maryland, believing that the people of that state thought the Democratic nomination for governor was "stolen" from Blair Lee by Arthur P. Gorman and were punishing, for the results of the convention, Gorman, who won the nomination by only one vote.

An important consideration is the effect, if any, which these off-year elections will have upon Republicans in the south. If the general tendency of these elections is to encourage the Republicans for 1912, the importance of southern votes to both Taft and La Follette is enhanced.

The southern Republicans will be subjected to a severe pulling and hauling by regulars and progressives, the former declaring that the Republican party is coming back to its own and that Mr. Taft should be renominated and re-elected, and the progressives urging, on the basis of the elections of 1911, that some Republican can win the presidency, but La Follette is the only Republican that can.

Aside from deductions based upon hopes, the cold facts are that the elections almost everywhere were influenced by local considerations—by anti-Tammany sentiment in New York, by the Smith-Nugent combination to sacrifice the Democrats and elect Republicans in New Jersey, and by the Gorman-Lee episode in Maryland.

The re-election of Governor Foss in Massachusetts is taken here as the most significant result of the day, in view of the issue made by the Bay State Republicans that "a vote for Frothingham is a vote to sustain Taft and his vetoes."

COMMITTEE CONSIDERS LOWER GAS

At Conference With Gas And Electric Commission

REPORT LATER

The special committee of the City Council, appointed under a resolution of Councilman Richards, to consider the question of a reduction in the price of gas in Quincy and to consult with the Citizens Gas Co. and Gas Commission, held a conference Wednesday with the board of Electric Light and Gas Commission.

The committee went over the gas situation in Quincy from the start, bringing out the fact that Milton and other places, controlled by the Consolidated Gas Company were paying considerable less than consumers in Quincy. The committee also told the commission that the citizens of Quincy felt that they were entitled to cheaper gas. After the hearing the Gas Commission took the matter under advisement and will make a report to the committee at a later date, unless it is deemed advisable by the commission to hold another conference.

FORMER SOLDIER IS DEAD

Edward J. Keegan Once Complimented By General Miles

DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Edward J. Keegan, the son of Mrs. Catherine Keegan of Glencoe place, died Tuesday at the Boston City Hospital after a long illness, aged 31 years. Mr. Keegan served in the 3d United States Light Artillery in the fighting in China which followed the Boxer uprising and afterward saw considerable service in the Philippine Islands.

Young Keegan was picked by Gen. Nelson A. Miles on his last trip to the Philippine Islands as commander-in-chief of the Army, as the soldier with the neatest and best-kept equipment and uniform in the long line of soldiers paraded in Manila in honor of Gen. Miles. The latter, after examining the arms and general uniform of all the soldiers, commanded young Keegan to step three paces forward and complimented him for his neat appearance.

After doing service in the Army young Keegan served as brakeman on the New York and Boston trains on the New Haven Railroad.

—The Springfield school board has sanctioned the establishment of school savings banks in that city, in accordance with the recent legislation along that line. The Springfield Republican comments thereon as follows: "Bank Commissioner Chapin has reason to rejoice at the order of the school board authorizing principals to establish school savings banks, since the permissive act passed by the legislature of 1911 was recommended by him. And his pleasure will be shared in a measure by parents who feel that children might make a better use of pocket money than to spend it for candy, chewing gum and pickles.""—Milford Gazette.

FORMER PASTOR OF FIRST CHURCH DIES IN CAMBRIDGE

Rev. John D. Wells Who Came Here In 1860 And Stayed Nearly Ten Years Passed Away Monday

Body Brought To Quincy Today For Burial

Rev. John D. Wells for many years pastor over the First church in Quincy died at Cambridge Monday. Speaking of his pastorate over the First church Pattee's history says.

In the year 1860, Rev. John D. Wells received a call and accepted. Rev. Mr. Wells was ordained over the First Church Thursday, December 27, 1860. The ordination exercises were as follows: Prayer by Dr. S. K. Lothrop; sermon by Dr. J. H. Morrison of Milton; ordaining prayer by Dr. Ezra S. Gannett; charge by Dr. A. P. Peabody; right hand of fellowship by the Rev. Rufus Ellis; address to the people by C. A. Bartol, D. D.; concluding prayer by Wm. Newell, D. D; benediction

Mr. Wells was greatly devoted to his parish. During the latter part of his administration he received a greater salary than any other of his predecessors. July, 1864, he enlisted as a private in the regiment of three months men who were stationed in the west. In 1871, being out of health, he asked of the society a vacation of a few months for the purpose of taking a tour of Europe for the restoration of his health. This request was freely granted him by the parish. On his return, with renewed health, he resumed his labors where he continued to minister to their wants until failing health caused him to resign his charge. Mr. Wells delivered his farewell sermon May 28, 1876, which closed his pastorate with the First church, after having been connected with the parish about nine years and five months. Mr. Wells while connected with the church established and carried out quite a large and extensive private school. He graduated at

RECEPTION TO TEACHERS.

The Noah Torrey School Association of South Braintree, demonstrated its activity and growing importance, beyond any question of doubt, at a public reception to the teaching force of the Noah Torrey school, Wednesday evening. There was a large attendance and best of all a most cordial and friendly atmosphere.

Chairman Herbert F. Kneeland of the school committee was present and gave an eloquent, instructive and pleasing address. I. Wendell Gammons of the school committee also gave a message of optimism and encouragement. Miss Catherine Gogan sang two delightful solos, accompanied by Miss Genevieve Gogan. Mr. Finney also sang, Miss Florence Rogers acting as accompanist. Miss Clara Day gave the piano overture.

Mrs. Mabel Sawyer Rogers, president of the association, presided in her usual graceful and pleasing manner, the other officers being seated with her on the platform.

Following the entertainment there was a genuine old-fashioned-really-mean-it reception. Superintendent Wiggin and Mrs. Wiggin, Principal Maddocks and Mrs. Maddocks and all the teachers of the school being in the line. Punch was served by Miss Florence Rogers.

The officers and members of the association are much gratified at the success of their first public function, and the large and enthusiastic attendance is regarded as an indication of a bright future for the association.

NO COMPLAINTS, PLEASE.

Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, was praising American hotels:

"They are stupendous," he said. "There's nothing like them abroad. And as a rule their service is as incomparable as their size and their magnificence.

"Sometimes, though—not often, but sometimes—the American hotel guest is treated more like a boy in a boarding school than a paying visitor in a hotel. Thus a friend of mine went to the desk in his hotel the other day to lodge a complaint.

" 'A complaint, eh?' said the clerk. 'Well, I guess you'll have to see the boss about that. That's him there.'

"My friend turned to the boss, who stood at his elbow, smoking a cigar.

" 'Are you the proprietor of this hotel?' he began.

"The proprietor took his cigar from his mouth, looked my friend up and down and drawled:

" 'Well, I thought I was till you came.' "—New York Tribune.

CASE QUICKLY DISPOSED OF

Davie Is Given Five Years on His Plea of Guilty

IS SENTENCED ON ONE COUNT

Boston's "Boy Broker," Who Was Widely Known In Religious Circles, Admits Larceny of $9500, Although His Stealings Are Said to Have Amounted to $120,000—Penniless When Placed Under Arrest

Boston, Nov. 9.—Robert E. Davie, the "boy broker," who was extradited from South America for the alleged larceny of $120,000, was sentenced to five years in the house of correction by Judge Sanderson n the superior criminal court, after he had pleaded guilty to one count in an indictment charging the larceny of $9500 in stocks and bonds from Hannah L. Greenwood of Somerville, the wife of an evangelist.

Another indictment was brought against Davie by the grand jury, charging him with larceny on three counts, the first two practically the same as in the other indictment, and the third with the larceny of $107,000 from William H. Jackson.

By agreement between District Attorney Pelletier and Counsel Anderson, the second count of the indictment and the second indictment were placed on file.

Robert E. Davie, who began life as a bundle boy and who at the age of 25 years dissappeared, leaving hundreds of creditors clamoring for securities and money estimated by the police at $200,000, is the most consummate actor ever brought to the attention of the Boston police authorities.

While he was mulcting the old ladies in Brookline, friends of his boyhood days, he was assisting enthusiastically Rev. J. W. Chapman in his Boston revival meetings. He was a Sunday school teacher and Bible student and he consummated what the police consider the most remarkable act of his career—the securing of money from Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian.

Davie entertained lavishly, and one of his favorite pastimes was to run over to New York, where he would engage one of the most expensive dining suites in the place, and run up bills for thousands of dollars.

When found in Rio de Janeiro in February, five months after his disappearance, he was penniless, lonely and homesick, and when taken into custody sobbed out his relief and expressed the wish that he would soon be in the United States, regardless of the consequences.

At 14 years of age Davie decided to leave school and he took a job as a bundle boy in a Boston dry goods store. At the age of 17 he became bond clerk in the firm of R. L. Day & Co.. At 18 he was with Wiggin & Elwell, stock brokers, and at 20 started out for himself. Within a year or two he owned a touring car and drove blooded horses and the two years previous to his disappearance was considered a prodigy of financial acumen and associated with the moneyed men of the city. In Scotch society circles and in the churches he was considered a man among men, and his lay assistance to many pastors was considered highly edifying and Davie was being continually held up to growing youth as a man to be imitated.

One of Davie's best advertising schemes was his tour of New England with a negro octette, which sang gospel melodies, while he delivered prayers and sermons.

When his finances became hopelessly entangled Davie closed his office and taking all the money he could lay hands on fled from the city.

Blankenburg Overturns Philadelphia's Big Republican Majority

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—In one of the most bitterly fought elections in the history of Philadelphia Rudolph Blankenburg, independent Republican, defeated George H. Earle, Jr., the Republican organization candidate for mayor, by the small plurality of 4364. The normal Republican majority in Philadelphia is between 75,000 and 100,000.

The victorious mayoralty candidate has been in the forefront of reform movements in Pennsylvania and Philadelphia for more than thirty years. He fought M. S. Quay at every opportunity.

Mr. Blankenburg was born in Germany 68 years ago. United States Senator Penrose supported Earle and took the public platform in his behalf.

JUDGE REMEMBERS OWN BOYHOOD DAYS

Acquits Youth Brought Before Him For Climbing Fence

Lynn, Mass., Nov. 9.—"People who don't like boys should move from the city to the country," said Judge Cutler of the Lynn municipal court after he had listened to several witnesses who spoke against George Hitchings, 16, who was arraigned before him on the charge of climbing a fence on the premises of Jacob Robinson.

"People must expect boys to climb fences, posts, spouts, etc., when they live in the city," added Cutler. "Such exercise contributes to the muscular development of boys, and is a factor in enhancing struggling young manhood.

"For that reason I find the boy not guilty and order his discharge from custody."

Despondent Boston Dentist Takes Own Life With Poison

Boston, Nov. 9.—Dr. Lon F. Brine, a Back Bay dentist, once a member of the famous old quartet of the Immaculate Conception church, and especially prominent a decade ago in affairs of Catholic societies, widely known as both an amateur and professional opera singer, ended his life by taking poison in a room at the Hotel Rossmore.

The only motive that suggests itself is worry over financial difficulties and the gradual loss of his patients.

Dr. Brine was about 50 years old, and as far as known never was married. He usually lived in Brookline, but had not settled since his return from Scituate, where he had been during the summer. He was living at one of the downtown hotels.

SEVERE LOSS TO UNIONISTS

Lose Greatest Asset In the Resignation of Balfour

BICKERINGS OVER VETO BILL

Believed to Be Cause For Leader of Opposition Relinquishing His Post After Figuring Conspicuously In Affairs of British Empire For Last Twenty Years—Chamberlain and Long Mentioned as His Successor

London, Nov. 9.—The news of Arthur J. Balfour's resignation as leader of the Unionist party caused the utmost surprise and in some quarters consternation. The Unionists do not attempt to disguise the seriousness of the loss of one who is admittedly the greatest asset of the party.

It is understood that Balfour's decision is unalterable. He advances the state of his health as the ostensible reason for his withdrawal from leadership, but there is no doubt that the bickerings in the party ranks were the primary cause. He will remain in parliament, representing the city of London.

The choice of a successor to Balfour seems to be between J. A. Chamberlain and Walter H. Long. The former is the Liberal Unionist member for East Worcestershire and for some time has been mentioned by the opponents of Balfour as his possible successor. Long represent the Strand.

Arthur J. Balfour has been one of the most conspicuous figures of the British parliament for the last twenty years, and of late years, as premier and as leader of the opposition, he has been a dominating personality in the affairs of the empire. His first notable service was as Irish secretary, during which time the crimes act was put into force. He was first elected leader of the house of commons upon the death of W. H. Smith, and throughout the session of 1892 he displayed increasing ability in leading the Unionist party.

With the return of Gladstone to power, Balfour directed his speeches against the home rule measure for Ireland. On the return of the Unionist party to power in 1895, Balfour again became leader of the house. His leadership, while aggressive, was always marked with a courtliness and tact which won him favor from both sides.

When the recent crisis arose over the passage of the veto bill limiting and practically terminating the powers of the house of lords, Balfour found himself for the first time at odds with a considerable portion of the party he was leading.

The supreme test on the veto bill was its acceptance or rejection by the house of lords, and if rejected the creation of a large number of peers to force it through the upper branch of parliament. In this emergency Balfour was for concession without forcing the issue of creating new peers, whereas Lord Hasbury took the lead of a conservative element, known as the "die-hards," which were determined to resist the veto measure to the last.

The policy of Balfour prevailed despite this split, and the veto measure was accepted by the house of lords.

But the result left a deep impression and even resentment in some quarters, and it was felt that however wide Balfour's concessions had been from a political viewpoint they had seriously crippled his leadership of a united party. His retirement marks the close of this recent bitter division growing out of the crisis on the veto measure.

BEST BANKNOTES.

They Are Produced by American Talent and Methods.

HARDEST TO COUNTERFEIT.

From the Time of Paul Revere, the First American Banknote Artist, Ours Have Been More Difficult to Imitate Than Those of the Old World.

To say that Americans make the best banknotes in the world may sound at first rather boastful, and yet any history of the art and industry of note engraving which failed to record that fact would be incomplete. Paul Revere was the first American banknote artist, and from the time of the chartering of the Bank of North America under the direction of Robert Morris, in 1781, up to the present American engravers have excelled not only in the artistic quality of their designs, but in their provisions against counterfeiting.

Marco Polo found banknotes in China ages ago, printed on paper made from the bark of the mulberry tree. One of the notes upon which the great Venetian traveler himself may have gazed is on exhibition at this day in the office of an American company. It is one of a series issued by the Ming dynasty about 1399 A. D.—"current anywhere under heaven"—and seems to have been printed from wooden blocks on a sheet of paper nine by thirteen inches, a bigger surface than any man could cover with both hands outstretched. It is good for "one string of cash." The provision against forgery is simple to the point of severity: "Counterfeiters hereof will be executed. Persons giving information of counterfeiters will be rewarded with taels 250 and in addition will receive the property belonging to the criminal."

Another great government has placed much dependence upon death as a deterrent to imitators of its promises to pay. When Jacob Perkins of Newburyport, Mass., invented the method of transferring designs from hardened steel plates to steel cylinders and retransferring to flat plates, thus enabling the engraver to devote the time necessary to accomplish his best work in the original and reproduce it at will, the new process aroused international interest. Mr. Perkins and his associates went to London in 1819 at the instance of the British minister at Washington to help the Bank of England to issue notes not easily counterfeited. But the conservative old bank refused to adopt the new method, preferring, as one of the Americans said, to rely upon the hangman rather than the engraver. Nevertheless the English began in time to follow American methods after the geometric lathe had been invented by Asa Spencer of New London, Conn., and improved by Cyrus Durand.

The governments of continental Europe depead exclusively upon color work to protect their paper currency, and several of the large banks of issue have civil engineers in charge of their bureau of engraving and printing, though what connection there may be between engineering and engraving is a mystery. Many Italian banknotes are easy to counterfeit. The Bank of Spain has of late abandoned its own plant because its notes were imitated so successfully that counterfeits were accepted by the bank without question. A private concern now does the work. The Bank of Greece now uses the American method, having had sad experiences with notes of Austrian, German and English fashioning.

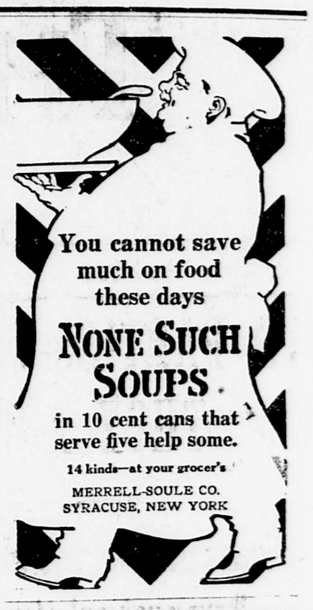

A myth that probably will never die tells us that the notes of the Bank of England cannot be counterfeited. As a matter of fact, they can be imitated readily enough, for little attempt is made to protect the notes beyond the use of a watermark paper. The watermark can be easily copied.

One practical safeguard of great effectiveness is the custom of the Bank of England to cancel every note that is returned to the bank and issue another in its place. This and the practice of keeping a record of the numbers of all bank notes used in every business establishment keep alive a keen sense of responsibility which adds to security. The custom of circulating soiled banknotes, of course, gives the counterfeiter his best opportunity. Forgery is much more readily detected in a crisp, stiff, new bill than in a rumpled and dirty one.

The American style of banknote has become the standard in the countries of Central and South America. The experience of the Brazilian government led the way in this after various disappointments. First the much vaunted Austrian system was tried, the notes being engraved and printed in England under that system. They proved a complete failure. Counterfeiters flourished. The Brazilians tried banknotes made in France, and these were promptly and extensively imitated as soon as the counterfeiters could get their plates and paper ready. Brazil tried German and English establishments, but still without securing protection to the banknote circulation, and at last turned to the United States and found a type of bills practically impossible to counterfeit. So it is no boast, but a mere record of fact, to state that Americans make the best banknotes in the world.—Detroit News.

WILL BE PUT ON MARKET

Part of Adams Farm On Sea St. For Building Purposes

FINELY LOCATED

A part of the Adams farm on Sea street is about to be put on the market. That part of it between the Denning farm house and Adams shore has been surveyed and laid out into house lots, and streets are now being cut through it. It is understood that the Adams homestead will be retained intact with a good part of the surrounding farm, but that the balance will be sold.

The location is an ideal one for a summer residence, as the property borders on Quincy Bay, affording a most sightly view of the harbor. While none of the lots have as yet been sold, as the plans are not yet ready, it is understood that there have been several applications for sites bordering on the shore front for summer residences. It is understood that restrictions will be placed on the class of buildings to be erected and that there will not be any of the shacks that characterize certain parts of Houghs Neck.

A Cheerful Liar.

One time the late ameer of Afghanistan asked the English diplomatic agent at his court to give a description amid a circle of Afghan boys of the largest gun in England. The Englishman described the 100 ton gun, and when he had finished the ameer observed to his admiring subjects, "I have seen a gun the cartridge of which was as large as the gun which has just been described to you." It would never do for an ameer to be astonished, much less to confess himself beaten.

ALL SOULS' MEN'S CLUB.

A most enjoyable evening was the verdict of all who attended the meeting of the Men's club of All Souls' church, Braintree, held in Parish hall Wednesday evening. Supper was served at 6.30 o'clock preceded by an informal social gathering for the preceding half hour. One of the famonus repasts for which the club is famous was provided and all did it ample justice.

After the tables had been cleared and cigars lighted, the president of the club, Mr. Alva Morrison introduced as the speaker of the evening Judge Harvey H. Baker who addressed the meeting on "The Boston Juvenile Court," of which he is the presiding justice. He is an easy speaker, genial and witty, and having just that understanding of and sympathy with human nature that makes him the right man in the right place.

The court was established in 1906 and has done and is doing a great work in making good citizens out of boys and girls who have strayed for one reason or another from the straight and narrow path. The speaker explained very clearly that the comparatively recent legislation concerning juvenile offenders does not emasculate the law but rather gives the court greater scope. Whereas at one time many offenders escaped from lack of proof, the new law provides that any minor exposed to criminal, vicious or immoral influences may be held on complaint of being a wayward child. While this seems at first glance rather harsh it gives the court a chance to exercise its peculiar powers and enables the judge to confer with parents, guardians or teachers and so dispose of the case for the best interests of the child.

The court handles about one thousand cases a year. It serves the north, south and west ends and the back bay and employs continuously three probation officers. The cases are heard in the judge's private room and "His Honor" can exclude any person whom he wishes from the proceedings although there are nearly always several privileged persons present.

The youthful offenders are as a rule of foreign birth and their troubles generally arise from a lack of knowledge of our customs, from broken homes or perhaps some unsuspected disease such as epilepsy or even insanity. While the young law breakers are made to realize that they have committed an offence in defiance of the social order they are not treated like older criminals but are given a heart to heart talk and sometimes are fined, but more often are put on probation and so treated as to make them useful citizens of the commonwealth.

The judge told of boys in the congested districts who are obliged because of lack of room at home to spend most of their waking hours on the streets, especially on the Sabbath. This of course leads to gambling, Sunday ball playing and the like. His Honor sympathizes with these boys in a great measure and elicited loud applause by remarking that the Sunday laws as now enforced really mean one law for the poor and an entirely different interpretation of the same law for the rich. For instance the boys of the poorer class are forbidden to indulge in the most innocent game on the Lord's day while the wealthy portion of the community play golf to their heart's content. Judge Baker speaks very highly of the probation system and of the efficiency of its officers.

In conclusion he made a stirring appeal to the business men of the club to be willing to employ some of these boys, to give them a chance rather than to throw them back upon the care of the state and thus increase taxation and other social burdens.

Judge Baker's remarks were loudly applauded and he was tendered a unanimous rising vote of thanks by the club. The speaker answered numerous questions propounded by interested auditors and after the singing of Home Sweet Home the meeting was declared closed.

Respect of Dead Royalty.

Dead royalty was treated with scant respect at Holyrood a century ago. C. K. Sharpe, the friend of Scott, writing to Robert Chambers in 1825, recounted some of his experiences during his wanderings among the tombs in Holyrood. "I remember many fragments of the royal bodies shown in the chapel of Holyrood House—one entire, saving the hand. * * * In later times I paid a visit to the chapel after the royal vault had been closed. 'Oh, man,' said the female in charge, 'if ye had cam here a while syne I cud hae showed ye muckle mair in this place—King James the Fifth's shuther (shoulder) and Lord Darnley's thigh banes, and a gude bit o' the Earl o' Buchan's back.'"—London Chronicle.

THE COWBOY'S TICKETS.

They Were Good on the Train, but Only For a Little While.

A bunch of old time traveling men were visiting at a Topeka hotel, and talk turned on to courageous conductors "I have known."

A story was told on John Becker, for years a conductor on the Santa Fe. He was practically awarded the palm for being the bravest "con" who ever set foot on a through Kansas train in the old and perilous days.

One day, just after the Santa Fe train had left Dodge City, Becker passed through the car to take up the pasteboards. Two cowboys had boarded the train at Dodge, and Becker went up to them and said, "Tickets, please."

For an answer the cowboys whipped out big revolvers—the Colt's blue steel brand, 44 caliber—and replied:

"Here they are!"

"They're good," said Becker quickly, with a deprecatory wave of his hand, and he passed on through the car. The cowboys chucked their "irons" back into their holsters and settled back comfortably, thinking that the train was theirs.

Becker walked on back to his little wardrobe at the front end of the next car and, unlocking it, took out a sawed off double barreled shotgun loaded with slugs. He cocked both hammers—for it was before the hammerless automatic days—and, getting the gun properly placed in front of him, he marched back into the car where the cowboys were.

He stepped briskly in front of them and shoved the big gun into their faces, holding it at such an angle that a shot would have swept off the heads of both.

Then he said again, gently, "Your tickets, please."

The hands of the cowboys twitched convulsively toward their pockets, and Becker interjected, "Give me those tickets, please, that have handles and shove 'em at me with the handles toward me—toward me, understand?" he added, bearing down hard with the emphasis on "me."

The tickets came across with the handles in the requested direction.

"Now, dig up the coin," he demanded, "to the next station where we stop."

They dug.

"Now, at the next station you fellows unload. Understand?" The sawed off was still at a dangerous location and the hammers still up.

The cowboys nodded vigorously in the affirmative, and they unloaded quickly and without words at the next stop.

Becker made no fuss over the matter; didn't talk about it at all. He just accepted it as part of the day's business and seemed to see nothing in it that was extraordinary.—Kansas City Journal.

Life Rings on Mountains.

An extraordinary example of the way in which a mountain may afford on a small scale an image of the earth's climates, arranged in successively higher circles, has been found in the San Francisco peaks. These ancient volcanoes rise out of a plateau having a mean elevation of 7,000 feet above sea level.

The peaks are encircled with zones of vegetation which run almost like contour lines around them. Between 6,500 and 8,500 feet the yellow pine is the dominant tree. From 8,500 to 10,300 feet the Douglas fir, the silver fir, the cork fir and the aspen share the available ground. Between 10,300 and 11,500 feet the Engelmann spruce and the foxtail pine take possession and ascend to the tree limit.—Scientific American.

Misleading Book Titles.

Some book titles are distinctly misleading. Ruskin's "On the Construction of Sheepfolds" is a famous example of these, and there are others. Mr. Henry James' novel "The Lesson of the Master" has more than once been catalogued as a religious work. The same fate befell Sir Edward Hamilton's "Conversion and Redemption," a highly technical study of schemes for the reduction of the national debt. "Disloyala; or, The Doubtful Priest," was the title originally selected by Shorthouse for the book we now know as "John Inglesant." It was pointed out to him that such a title would lead people to regard it as an attack on Roman Catholicism, and this induced him to change it.—London Chronicle.

How an Ostrich Shows Temper.

When annoyed or angered by the approach of a human being, says a writer in the Strand Magazine, the male ostrich slightly arches his neck, and, drawing in a big breath, he blows out his neck and issues a three note defiance ("bo-bo-bo-o-h"). It is in the last prolonged note that his neck swells out so abnormally. The hen bird never "drums," as the natives term it, though I have heard of one that tried very hard to ape the male, but the result was ghastly failure.

His Achievements.

"After I am gone," he complained, "people will begin to notice what I have done."

"Well," his wife sadly replied, "if they do it won't take them long."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Shrewd Woman.

Howard—I can't get my wife to pay her bills by check. Edward—Why not? Howard—She says that she won't have the horrid bank people know what everything costs her.—Judge.

Such help as we can give each other in this world is a debt we owe each other.—Ruskin.

PRESSURE OF AIR.

It May Readily Turn the Thermometer Into a Fibber.

THE BOILING WATER POINT.

On the Scale This Is Marked at 212 Degrees, but Under Certain Conditions It May Be Several Hundred Degrees—The Critical Temperature.

On an ordinary Fahrenheit thermometer there is written opposite 212 degrees "Boiling point of water" and opposite 32 degrees "Freezing point of water." Neither of these is correct except for a certain condition of the atmosphere, and that is when it gives on the barometer about thirty inches, or fifteen pounds pressure to the square inch. This is the ordinary pressure at what is known as sea level, and to this all thermometers are calibrated. In a mountainous region the pressure is hardly ever so much as fifteen pounds, and water boils at sometimes as low as 200 degrees.

If water is boiled in a diving bell, where the pressure is forty or fifty pounds a square inch, its temperature will be several hundred degrees instead of 212. If water is boiling in a near vacuum the temperature is so small that the hand thrust into the water would actually feel cold.

What has been said about the boiling point applies to some extent to the freezing point, but here it differs for different materials, whereas the remarks about the boiling point of water apply to the boiling points of all liquids.

Some substances when they freeze become larger, while others become smaller. On this depends the freezing point at different pressures of atmosphere. Water expands on freezing; so do type metal and some other things. All other substances become smaller on freezing. Water pipes burst when the water freezes. Coins of gold and silver are stamped instead of being molded, for the metals grow smaller on freezing or solidifying, and consequently the coin would be wabbly.

It has been found that the things that expand on solidifying, as water, freeze at a lower temperature when the pressure is increased, while the others freeze at a higher. When a substance that expands freezes under higher pressure than usual it has to exert more force to shove the pressure away, and consequently has to use up more of its heat energy, thus losing more heat and becoming colder.

Take the substance that contracts when it solidifies. The pressure will help it to get smaller, and consequently the greater the pressure the less heat it has to lose on attaining the solid state, so it will freeze at higher temperature. If the pressure is great enough it may freeze or solidify at a thousand degrees temperature, which is high enough to change most substances to vapor under ordinary atmospheric pressure.

This is one of the reasons advanced to prove that the interior of the earth is solid, for the assumption is that the core is made up of substances that contract when freezing, and there is, of course, an enormous pressure a few hundreds of miles below the surface.

In regard to the boiling points of liquids, there is an upper limit to the point at which a thing boils—that is, changes to the state of vapor. It is called the critical temperature. No matter how great a pressure exists on a substance, if it is at a temperature greater than its critical it will change to vapor anyhow.

The ignorance of this point held back the making of liquefied gases—such as air, carbon dioxide, etc.—for many years. The experimenters tried to liquefy gases at ordinary temperatures by enormous pressures, whereas if they had just cooled the gases below their critical temperatures before applying the pressure liquefaction would have ensued immediately.

This is the method employed today in making liquid air. The air is compressed at first and then allowed to issue from a small orifice, thus expanding and cooling, is then pumped back and compressed by the pump, allowed to go through the orifice again, thus cooling still more, until at last it is below the critical temperature, when the compression caused by the pump liquefies it. — Lawrence Hodges in Chicago Record-Herald.

In Trouble.

"Yes," he said regretfully, "I'm in a tight corner. My sweetheart is wild on the subject of germs and microbes, and she insists that I must choose between her and my mustache. I'm to lose one or the other."

"Lose the mustache, my boy."

"That's just the trouble. If you ever saw me without it you'd pity my haunting fear that when it's gone I'll lose the girl too."

The Simple Answer.

A society man at a luncheon said of a well known suffragist:

"She accomplishes a great deal, but some of her methods are not quite fair. A man once inquired of her husband:

"'Do you give your wife an allowance, or does she ask for money when she wants it?'

"'Both,' was the simple answer."

In Doubt.

"Were you ever up before me?" asked a magistrate.

"Shure, I don't know, yer anner. What time does your anner get up?"—London Answers.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size!

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

The Yankee Knack

THE story of American industrial development has no more fascinating or impressive chapter than that devoted to the discoveries and improvements resulting from the extraordinary inventive genius of the New England workman. He is never content with things as they are. He is forever experimenting—and successfully. He searches until he finds the soul of the machine, and from this intimate acquaintance he begins to eliminate and improve. He accomplishes the paradox of perfecting a perfect article. If there is a practicable way to make one part do the work of two, if some added device will simplify a process or improve a product, he will not rest till he has worked out the problem. This passion for invention has been from the first a vigorous characteristic of the New England mind. The early settlers were artisans rather than tillers of the soil; and when by a bitter struggle with an undeveloped country they had supplied their immediate wants, they naturally turned again to manufacturing; and this mechanical bent, stimulated to alertness by a vigorous climate, resulted in course of time in an almost incredible mechanical ingenuity—the "Yankee Knack."

This genius for simplification of processes, this wonderful knack of devising machinery which will do the work of the human hand, has multiplied the output of our factories: and this in turn has increased wages and decreased the hours of labor, and so brought a great uplift into the lives of our workmen; given them the power to provide better homes for their families, better education for their children, and greater leisure in which to work out a broader destiny for themselves. As in the past, so in the present and the future. The "Yankee Knack," which long since turned New England into a vast workshop, is still at its age-long task—simplifying, improving; lowering cost of production, ever raising quality of product—and all to the end that the average American family shall enjoy today what were luxuries but yesterday, and gratify in their turn the yet undiscovered desires of tomorrow.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Now that Hyde Park is Ward 26—what suburban neighbor desires to be Ward 27, asks the Boston Globe.

The state election over we turn to the hustle of the municipal campaign. Practical politics we have always with us.

The scrambling of the public to get the dollars they have put into the trusts vindicates Mr. Morgan's likeness of the trusts to scrambled eggs.

Premier Giiolotti denies that the Italians have practiced cruelty in Tripoli, but they can not be acquitted until it is learned if their hurdygurdies are in tune.

China gets a constitution, but will they keep it like Uncle Sam does his, up in the attic under the eaves, where it gets all dusty with the school books he used when a boy?

In view of the attitude of the suspicious Danes toward Dr. Cook, we believe they would decline to make money on such a sure thing as the shell game at cattle show.

Williaim Rockefeller has won $12.50 as a prize for his chrysanthemums. Probably he will now feel that he can afford that bed of hollyhocks on his front lawn for which he has been hoping so long.

Some of the telephone companies announce that they will give emergency calls free, but this does not mean that the dear things at home can call up hubby for nothing to remind him of that yeast cake.

Will these separated units of the Tobacco trust really race down the track as the government seems to think, or will they trot along the course hand in hand and divvy up even on the prize money?

Mr. Taft remarked the other day for the 76,914th time that the law must be obeyed. And yet about once in six weeks they engineer a rise in the stock market because some people think he was only fooling.

Mary Garden says she is wedded to the public and will not consider marriage before she is 45. Better look out, Mary! When the public gets tired of its favorites, it does not bother about the divorce court and never pays alimony.

The trusts are justified for exactions by the very true remark that every one else would do just the same if they had the chance. But the fact that all hogs put their feet in the trough does not prove that that is good table manners.

A reduction in thep rice of gas is still under consideration, the question now having reached the Gas Commission. Here's hoping that some way may be found to give Quincy the same benefits as received by Milton and other nearby towns.

It may be thought that the base ball fans, now that the season is closed, would have some leisure to meditate on the perilous state of the nation. But by the time the autopsies on last summer's games are completed, there will be the work of the teams on Southern diamonds to be attended to.

WHAT OUR NAVY HAS DONE.

Such a rapid fire of criticism has been directed at our navy of recent years, that the tax payer finds some satisfaction in reading of the fine appearance of 99 of our ships as they paraded in the Hudson River the other day.

The armor belt line may be incorrectly located, the explosives may be handled so closely to the gun turrets as to increase the hazards. But when you read that the Santiago fleet in 1898 probably hit the enemy five times out of each 100 shots, while the percentage of hits in modern practice under equivalent conditions is about 40 per cent, the engineering defects look comparatively trifling.

The type of manhood developed by our naval work is the central factor. In any other navy in the world, the young officer needs an income of his own from outside sources. With us all that is needed is the brains to pass the examination, and car fare to Annapolis. The son of the day laborer may lead his class.

The spirit of the navy is shown by their attitude toward legislation. When bills for more pay and for more battleships have been pending, the officers say let the pay go, but give us the battleships and a few more colliers.

In the loafing times in the officers' mess room, you will hear the usual semi indifferent club talk about sports, politics, girls, newspapers, books, etc. But when they get to engineering problems of ballast and deflections, the chairs hitch forward and the voices grow tense.

The public thinks of a naval officer as a daring sort of a plunger who would jump into a burning powder magazine just as he would extinguish a bonfire in his father's back pasture, and who would spend $50 a day on sporting life when ashore.

Navy life however, tends to develop a very self contained and high bred type of man. When they put on their boxing gloves of an evening, they go in for all they are worth, as the honor of their ships and the temper of the audience demand. But a cat call from the audience or one single groan questioning the decision of a referee, means that all contests are called off for that evening.

AN ENJOYABLE EVENING.

There surely is some variety to the monthly meetings of the Men's club of the Methodist Episcopal church, South Braintree, Wednesday evening Samuel Clough of the Edison Electric illuminating Co., Boston, was the speaker. This young man has spent more than a dozen years in studying the now almost forgotten Boston of that period between its original settlement up to the year 1800, and his talk on "The Topographical Development of Old Boston," was a classic.

Mr. Clough illustrated his talk with well executed maps, and did the illustrating and speaking so nicely that the astounding, but true story, was listened to with the closest possible attention. It was a literary treat, instructive, pleasing, and remarkable, which will be long remembered by those who were fortunate enough to be present. Mr. Clough was given a unanimous vote of thanks, and at the conclusion of his address invited the audience to ask for further information, and the invitation was generously accepted.

Representative Henry M. Storm was a special guest, and was given three rousing cheers and a vote of appreciation. The reception committee comprised President I. Wendell Gammons, Rev. George H. Parkinson, William D. Dyer, George O. MacDonald, Hon. James T. Stevens, William F. Rogers and Henry T. Cushman.

The splendid supper was in charge of Chef A. H. Clark, assisted by J. H. Benfield, Fred B. Watson, S. B. Gammons and others. The eatables included escalloped oysters, rolls, coffee, fruit, etc., and all present did ample justice to the spread.

VALUE OF SYSTEM.

Whether In Working or Thinking It Helps on to Success.

Working or thinking without system enfeebles the mind and leaves the mental faculties in a clogged condition, so that they do not work sharply. The mind must be kept clear and clean for the present problem, so that it may seize and grasp with all its might the thing it is attempting to accomplish.

There is only one best way to learn how to act. That way is the way of system. Systematize your thoughts, your energies, your abilities. Learn early in life to do this, and it will prove the master habit that wins success.

Systemless men are always surprised that the heads of great enterprises can find so much time for social life, for hobbies, for travel. They cannot understand it at all. They do not realize that a man of great organizing ability, with a splendid system, can do more effective business in a single hour at his office than a systemless man can accomplish in twelve. It is not the number of hours, but the effectiveness of the system, that tells.

One of the advantages of a college course is that it trains the mind to work by system. Whether he likes to or not, the student is forced to concentrate his mind when the time comes, no matter what his mood or how he feels. Four years of training in this should put the mind into working order. It should tune the intellect so that all the strings will be in harmony. A good college education should train the mind to think concisely, deeply, effectively at will.—Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

24 MEMBERS ADMITTED

At Regular Meeting of Loyal Order of Moose

MAY BUILD CLUBHOUSE

At the regular meeting of the Quincy Lodge, No. 413, Loyal Order of Moose, 24 new members were admitted. A number of applications are now on the waiting list and there are up to the present time 45 who have yet to be initiated. A smoke talk will be held by the local order in Electa Hall, November 22.

A special effort is being made to have the membership increased to 600, for when that number is attained in the membership of the local organization, preparations will then be made to build a clubhouse. A clubhouse is already contemplated in Boston, the cost of which will be in the vicinity of $120,000, and the members of the local branch are in hopes of seeing a clubhouse erected in Quincy in the near future.

The first anniversary social and dance will be held in Alpha Hall, on Thursday evening, December 7, and the committee in charge has already planned many interesting features to celebrate the occasion.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

The Quincy Choral society has set the date of its "Golden Legend" concert for Tuesday Jan. 23 and subscription tickets were issued this week. These tickets offer an extra inducement to the early purchaser this year, not only giving the right of choice of seats before the public sale, but also giving the holder the right to attend rehearsals. Musical people who will enjoy the concert in proportion as they are familiar with the music have here an opportunity of listening to the practice of it if they choose to do so. Singers who wish to study the choral methods of instruction may find it valuable.

The executive board of the Quincy Choral society is working always with an eye to the future, believing that this opportunity of study should be conducted as a civic enterprise, inclusive and not exclusive. Choral singing and music in general, as a universal power for good and the uplift of humanity, has never acquired the position in this country that it has held in Europe for centuries. No composer of our own has felt this so keenly as did the late Edward MacDowell. His festivals and methods of study inaugurated at Peterborough, New Hampshire, were all thought out with the hope and belief that music would come to occupy its true place here in the near future. He planned to make Peterborough a second Bayreuth. It is gratifying to many of our citizens that the Choral society seems to have started with these ideals in mind; and that it seeks to establish itself not as a commercial enterprise, but as a means of making this art universal and uplifting, a living power for all that is best in our community.

NORWAY'S INCOME TAX.

It Reaches All Incomes in Excess of $83.08 Per Year.

How should you like to pay an income tax on next to nothing? If you were a Norwegian living at home and earning $134 a year you would be taxed on one-tenth of it if you were unmarried; on about one-twentieth of it if you were married and had no children. If you had children you still would be taxed on one-fiftieth of it.

With an income of $536 a year you would be taxed if unmarried on more than half of your income, if married and having no children on about 40 per cent of your income, having one child on about 37 per cent, two children on about 31 per cent.

Unmarried and having an income of $2,680 a year in Norway your income tax payment would be $121.22; married, with one child, $380.94; married, with six children, $355.17. All that you would get off your income tax (married) for having six children would be $66; all that you would get off by having five more children would be $44 and six bits!

Married or unmarried in Norway, you could escape paying an income tax only by having an income less than $83.08 a year. Think of paying an income tax out of earnings of $7 a month!—New York Press.

A Terrible Storm.

The most violent storm that ever ravaged England occurred Nov. 26 and 27, 1703. The loss in London alone was $10,000,000. Eight thousand people were drowned in the floods. Twelve warships, with more than 1,800 men on board, were lost. Trees were uprooted—1,700 of them in Kent. Eddystone lighthouse was destroyed, and Winstanley, its contriver, was killed with several others.

JURY GIVES WOMAN $4,000 FOR INJURIES

Awarded damages

An echo of a trolley accident which happened in 1908, came yesterday at Dedham, when Mrs. Margaret F. Ford of Weymouth, was given a verdict of $4,000 by a jury in the civil session of the Norfolk Superior Court, sitting before Chief Justice Aikin, in her suit of $30,000 for injuries against the Old Colony Street Railway Co.

The injuries are alleged to have been received when a car of the company on the way to Nantasket jumped the tracks near Beal street, West Hingham, crashed through a fence and fell down a steep embankment.

Harvard in 1854, and from the Divinty School in 1859, and was 25 years of age at the time of his settlement here.

After leaving Quincy, Rev. Mr. Wells went to California and later became a member of the state board of charity and for a quarter century was its secretary and one of the leaders in the progress of charitable work in New England. For many years he wrote the annual report and was the author of many of the best laws relating to the care of the state's poor. He resigned his position on the board several years ago owing to failing health.

The body was brought to Quincy this afternoon for burial.

MAN INJURED HORSE KILLED

When Car Strikes Team on Adams Street, Braintree

MAN IN HOSPITAL

Nathan Sternberg of 100 Intervale street, South Quincy, was seriously injured on Adams street, Braintree, Wednesday night, when he came into collision with a street car. The shock of the collision killed the horse and Sternberg who was driving the team was also severely injured. He suffered a fracture of the left collar bone, besides having his left leg and hip badly bruised and his hand cut. After receiving first aid treatment, he was taken to the Quincy City hospital.

He drove out of a blind side street onto Adams street, directly in front of an approaching car from Rockland. He did not see the car nor the motorman could not see the team until it was too late to avoid an accident. Sternberg tried to turn his horse aside but did not get off of the track before the wagon was struck. It was thrown violently one side and the horse killed and the wagon smashed. Sternberg was thrown clear of the wreck but was injured as noted above.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

I am a voter seeking information on the Mayoralty situation. I recognize that both candidates representing the Republican party are reputable business men and are considered so by all with whom I have conversed. I have found but one objection against one of the parties. It has been called to my attention that Mr. Miller in his capacity as Chairman of the School Board has been prejudiced in a matter of awarding the coal contracts for school use, placing such contracts with out of town dealers in preference to favoring our home merchants. It has been alleged that this action on Mr. Miller's part incapacitates him for efficient service in the Mayor's office. I must admit that this does sound like one man's opinion but this argument has been put up to me by several voters and I understand it is being widely circulated as campaign ammunition, and in order that I may be right in voting, I am anxious to obtain the other side of this affair. As there are always two sides to a political tale. I appeal to the column of your paper for this enlightenment. Let us have the full truth in regard to these contracts in order that I and other voters may act intelligently.

Very truly yours,
Eric H. Ewertz.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

NO CORE.

They sang "Sweet Adeline" last night,
And Fitzy led the song.
He told them that the skies were bright,
For 'Gene was very strong.
"About those cores?" piped one, and then
Fitz made them gasp and roar;
"If Foss should win his second fight,
There won't be any core.'"

Foreigner—"They tell me there are still large deposits of gold in the western part of this country."

New Yorker—"True—but no larger than some of these right here in town."

Governor Dix, at a luncheon in Albany, said of a political leader who had been worsted:

"He will get a little of his own medicine back now. It reminds me of a story.

"A man entered an eating house and ordered a steak and fried potatoes.

"'Yes, sir; steak and potatoes, sir,' said the waiter. 'And will you have chops and peas along with it?'

"'No, thank you.'

"'Roast beef, then, perhaps, sir? The roast beef's very fine today.'

"'No!'

"'How about a nice lobster or a brace of crabs, sir, with the steak?'

"'No!'

"'Shadroe and succotash, perhaps, sir?'

"'No, I tell you.'

"'A nice mess of fried catfish and waf—'

"But at this point the proprietor summoned the waiter to him.

"'What do you mean, you scoundrel,' he said, 'by tormenting that patron in such an outrageous manner?'

"'Oh, I wasn't tormenting him, sir,' said the waiter, 'I was just trying to make him feel at home. He's a barber.'"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A CLOSE THIRD.—"You admit that you are not first in her affections, yet you seem cheerful."

"Oh, I can't expect to compete with the pug dog and the rubber plant."—Washington Herald.

DUMMY.—"One can accomplish much by utilizing spare moments."

"That's right. That tall girl yonder has read seven summer novels this season while she was dummy at bridge."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The waiter, who needed only his order to go to the kitchen, was standing at one side deferentially, with his order slip and pencil in hand.

The delay was noticeable and irritating to the unskilled diner, and finally he pointed blindly to the middle of a page with his finger.

"Give me some of that," he said.

The waiter looked over his shoulder and remarked:

"That's mayonnaise dressing, sir."

"I know it. I can read."

'But"—apologetically—"what will you have it on, sir?"

"On a plate, you bonehead! Do you feed your customers in troughs here?"

SPOILED.—"Johnny, did you have a good time at the party?"

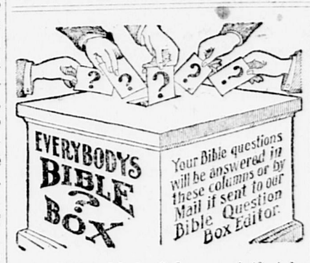

"How could I have a good time? I had promised mother to behave myself."—Courier-Journal.

WELL—"Money is on trial in this country."

"Well, some of it is being acquitted. I met a lawyer this morning who said he had just cleared $1000."

"I should think you would give that hired man a good scolding," said the summer boarder.

"'Tain't any use," replied Farmer Corntossel. "That hired man has got an idea that listenin' to me scold is the way he earns his wages."—Washington Star.

Q.—What kind of fire must that be which is to burn up the earth at the end of the world, when it is written of that very time, "THERE SHALL NOT BE A COAL TO WARM AT, NOR FIRE TO SIT BEFORE?" See Isaiah xlvii, 14.

Answer.—The Scriptures in many places refer to the time of destruction in the end of the present order of things under various symbols or illustrations such as "fire," "earthquake," "whirlwind," etc. The literal earth or planet on which we dwell is not referred to in connection with these statements, but the present social order, with all of its selfishness and evil, is to be destroyed in a destructive time of trouble "such as was not since there was a nation." The earth itself will never pass away, for the Bible declares that the Lord formed it to be inhabited and will eventually 'make the place of His feet (His footstool— the earth) glorious." The expression of the prophet, "there shall not be a coal to warm at, nor fire to sit before," we understand to signify that during the time of trouble and distress that shall come upon the nations in the last days, there will be no place or source of comfort and consolation for the class of false prophets or prognosticators of the preceding verse.

THE MAGNETIC NEEDLE.

It Is Quite Often Very Far From Being True to the Pole.

"True as the needle to the pole," like many another popular saying, conveys a distinctly erroneous impression. In order to keep itself duly informed as to the unfaithfulness of the needle to the pole, or, technically, the "variation of the compass" from the true north, our government maintains a division of terrestrial magnetism.

Not only does the magnetic needle vary at different places, but the variation changes from year to year and even at different times in the day. On magnetic survey charts those places which at a particular time have the same amount of variation are connected by what is known as an isogonic, or equal variation line. Through these points on the map in which there is no variation of the needle from the true north a line known as the agonic passes.

Iron deposits and mountain ranges modify the action of the unknown causes of the periodical variation and cause these lines to become even more crooked than those which mark equal temperatures, known as isothermal lines.

Isogonic charts may be accurate today and full of small errors in a few years. The famous Mason and Dixon's line between Pennsylvania and Maryland, which was surveyed in the years 1763 to 1767, was run by the stars and not by the needle, a great piece of foresight in that day. If it had been surveyed by the compass in 1800 it would have shown a deviation in some places of two miles, and had the line been run by uncorrected compass a hundred years later, in 1900, the variation would have reached nearly nineteen miles to the south and the rich coal fields of two Maryland counties would have been thrown into Pennsylvania.

The discovery of the magnetic needle's shortcomings is believed to have been made during the voyage of Columbus. The disclosure constitutes a high tribute to the scientific perceptions of that day, even though it spread consternation among the ships' crews —Harper's.

ANIMALS IN A FRENZY.

There's Danger Afoot When Captive Wild Beasts "Go Bad."

What those who have charge of wild animals in captivity, and especially trainers, dread most among the large beasts is that inexplicable change of temperament on the part of the animal known in the parlance of the menagerie as "going bad."

Lions are likely to go bad about the tenth year of life; tigers, two or three years earlier. The male tiger is the dread of the profession when he reaches this condition, because he is more likely to go into a frenzy without warning, and once gone bad nothing will satisfy him but murder.

He will leap for any man within reach, and when once his teeth are on the bone nothing but fire will make him relinquish it, and not always that.

This "going bad" may come in the nature of a sudden attack or it may develop slowly and be counteracted if taken in time. An old trainer can usually detect the symptoms of this curious ailment. It seems to be in the nature of a disease, and other animals recognize it and shun the affected one.

When its progress is apparent the danger is not great. All that is required then is a level head and the wisdom to refrain from further interference with the animal.

Sometimes this bad temper will last but a short time, and again it will become the permanent condition of the animal. In that case he is sent to the lonely cage to spend the rest of his life in comparative obscurity, disturbed merely by the passing crowd and his daily meals.—Pearson's Weekly.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Friday, at Merrymount park, Quincy High was defeated by the strong Powder Point school team, by a score of 5 to 2. The game proved exciting throughout. Powder Point secured a safety in the second quarter of the game. Shortly after this Quincy got a safety which tied the score. The score remained de uatil in the last five minutes of play, a Powder Point man kicked a goal from the thirty-five yard line. This ended the scoring making final score Powder Point 5, Quincy 2. Powder Point outweighed Quincy and their line was greatly strengthened by the presence of Messenger the 258 lb. guard.

On Tuesday, at Merrymount park, Quincy High defeated Melrose High by a score of 17 to 0. Melrose had an extremely light team and broke down before the plunges of the Quincy backs. Quincy has now won seven and lost three games of football.

Saturday, Quincy High journeys to Worcester to play the High school eleven of that city. The team is undergoing a series of hard practice scrimmages and intends to surprise the Worcester lads. This game and the game of Saturday, Nov. 18, at Waltham against the High school completes the schedule of 1911.

The cross country inter-class run was won by Charles Wade '15. His time was 11-45. The distance was two and one quarter miles. Fred Kingsbury '13 finished second, while A. Williams '13 finished third. Wade is to receive a white Q for establishing a new record for the school. The time was good considering poor roads and a cold rain.

HOUGHS NECK ASSOCIATION

Held Regular Meeting Wednesday Night In Associates Hall

COMING ELECTION

A regular meeting of the Houghs Neck Associates, was held in Associates' hall last evening, and was attended by a large number. In fact it was the largest number that has been noticeable at a meeting of the organization for some time.

In the absence of James E. Wall, the president, the meeting was presided over by Oliver G. Fosdick.

Four new members were admitted and it was decided to suspend all business until after the election of officers. The work of the various committees was accepted and after the business meeting a collation was served, which consisted of ice cream, coffee, cake, sandwiches and tonic.

It was announced at the meeting last night that only one more meeting would be held before the election of officers. It will be remembered that at the last election James E. Wall defeated Henry W. French, a member of the Board of Registrars for the office. Mr. Wall immediately gained popularity and it was mainly because of the instance that he was boomed for Mayor.

Mr. Wall was present at the repast last evening and was hailed as the next Mayor. He will not be a candidate for president of the Associates this year, even though he could have it without any trouble.

DR. WALKER OFFERS TO SELL A FINGER.

Will Give Digit to Mrs. Waldorf For Money to Build Hospital.

Mrs. Reginald Waldorf of Philadelphia and Los Angeles, Cal., who advertised for a "living right index finger," can buy the desired member if she likes from no less a person than Dr. Mary Walker, the woman who wears trousers. Dr. Walker has sent this letter to Mrs. Waldorf:

Mrs. Reginald Waldorf—I have just read that you desire to purchase a right index finger. Will you give me enough to erect a consumptive ward on my estate at Oswego, N. Y.?

I have saved hopeless cases, and because I declare consumption is not contagious money is not forthcoming to erect a ward.

I finish this letter not using my index finger. MARY E. WALKER, M. D.,
Surgeon of War 1861-65.

P. S.—If return ticket is sent will come immediately so you can decide if my finger is desired by yourself.

Mrs. Waldorf desires a finger to replace one she lost in an accident. She is reported to be independently wealthy and capable of paying almost any price for a finger, provided it suits her. She believes that the finger can be grafted on her hand and that eventually she will have a perfect one. Dr. Walker is eighty-one years old.

She figured prominently in the civil war as a surgeon and was one of the first woman suffrage workers in the country. For years she has worn man's attire. She is anxious to erect a hospital for consumptives, and in a note she says she would sacrifice much more than a finger if it were possible to realize her dream.

Slavery In Old Greece.

The Greeks were slave owners with a vengeance. All manual work was done by "barbarians," as the Greeks called those who had been captured in war. The greatest of the Greeks saw no evil in the institution. Aristotle is quite outspoken in his justification of slavery. A certain amount of mean work had to be done, he claimed, and "mean natured men" were intended to do it. The slaves in some of the Greek states outnumbered the freemen four or five to one. Manual labor came in Greece to be thought a degradation, suited only for beings who could not do the higher work. Even freemen who worked for wages were by Aristotle placed outside the constitution. And what was true of the Greeks was equally true of most of the other ancient nations.—Exchange.

"Aren't you afraid the law will take us in hand for gambling?" said the timid man who had just been persuaded into making an election bet.

"Never mind," answered the confident politician. "Even if it does, you're all right. They wouldn't send you to jail for making that bet. They'd send you to the insane asylum."

THE CODE DUELLO

It Had Its Origin In the Barbarous Wager of Battle.

QUEER COMBATS IN FRANCE.

One Fatal Affair of Honor Was Fought Out In Balloons, and Another Was Decided With Billiard Balls as Weapons—A Duel Between Women.

The idea from which the code duello was developed came down from the north with the barbarians who overran the Roman empire. They brought with them the ordeal or wager of battle or judicial duel, which sprang from their idea to fight it out and let the guilt or innocence of the accused be determined by the result of the battle.

Strangely enough, the judicial duel was considered a fitting mode of settling disputes between man and wife. To equalize as much as possible the inequality of such a contest the man was put in a pit in which he was buried up to the girdle, while one of his arms was bound to his side. Sometimes a barrel took the place of a pit. For a weapon the man had a baton or stick, the woman a kind of sling with a stone in it.

The story of the duel in the modern sense may be dated from 1527, when Francis I. gave the lie to the Emperor Charles V., a proceeding which promised to lead to a combat of exceptional interest, but which never took place because mutual friends reconciled the pugnacious monarchs.

By this time the judicial duel had been gradually abolished, and the private duel, fought before witnesses, who seconded the principals in the encounter, came in. Sometimes the seconds also mixed it up, and instead of a duel there was a quartet or a sextet. The day of dueling has passed long since in England and America and only lingers in France as a sort of harmless comedy.

Several duels have been fought between women, and there are two or three instances of duels between a man and a woman, in which the man did not always get the better of it.

One of these duels between women was that between two Frenchwomen, the Marquise de Nesle and the Comtesse de Polignac, in the eighteenth century. The two titled women were rivals for the affections of a certain duke, and an incident occurred which brought on a bitter quarrel between the two jealous grande dames.

As a result of this the marquise challenged the comtesse to fight her a duel, and the challenge was accepted. Pistols were chosen and the Boise de Boulogne selected as the place of meeting. When the women had taken their places the comtesse called out to the marquise, "Do you fire first, madame, and, mind you, don't miss me; don't imagine for a moment that I am going to miss you!" The marquise fired, but missed and hit a neighboring tree. The comtesse smiled. "Your hand trembles with passion, madame," cried she. "You are lost!"

The comtesse aimed deliberately at the head of the marquise and fired. The marquise fell with a great cry as of one who had received a mortal wound, but the bullet had only cut away a minute piece of her shell like ear. All Paris laughed—even the duke.

Two duels have been fought from balloons. The most interesting was that between M. de Grandpre and M. Le Pique, which took place on May 3, 1808. Why they selected balloons is not clear, but possibly because ballooning was one of the crazes of the day.

Each duelist, with his second, got into a balloon in the field adjoining the Tuileries, and in the presence of a great crowd the cords were cut and up shot the balloons. The combatants were armed with blunderbusses. At about 800 feet from the ground Le Pique fired, and Grandpre immediately responded. The latter's shot was effective and penetrated Le Pique's balloon, which rapidly descended, and Le Pique and his second were dashed to death on a housetop, while Grandpre and his second descended safely some seven leagues away.

A duel with billiard balls took place in France Sept. 4, 1843, between two young men named, respectively, Lefant and Melfant. They quarreled over a game of billiards and decided to fight a duel with the balls with which they were playing. They drew lots for the first throw, and Melfant won. "I am going to kill you at the first throw," said Melfant, and, aiming the missile, he hurled it at Lefant, striking him in the center of the forehead and killing him almost instantly.

Among curious American duels was that fought at the Oaks, the famous New Orleans dueling ground, between M. Pedesclaux, a creole, and a retired French cavalry officer, in antebellum days. The duel was fought with both combatants mounted on magnificent stallions and armed with broadswords. It was a fierce battle, in which the French officer was killed.

Consolation.

"I have been a drudge all my life," he complained.

"Well," the unsympathetic old bachelor replied, "it's largely your own fault. Why did you ever get married? Look at me."

"Yes, I'm looking at you. That's what reconciles me to my condition. After all, there are worse things than drudges in the world."—Chicago Record-Herald.

HATLESS MAN CAUSES SURPRISE

Some surprise was expressed by those in City Square this morning to see Inspector Lennon of the Board of Health, driving Municipal Maude down Hancock street, bareheaded, his silver gray hair waving majestically in the air as the wind created by his speed blew through it. Some were unkind enough to say that he had lost his top piece on an election bet, but such was not the case.

It seems that while wandering aimlessly about the basement of City Hall, he took off his hat to deliver one of his heart to heart talks and so interested and earnest was he, that he forgot where he had left it and imagined that some one had purloined it.

On his return sometime later, he found his hat reposing gracefully on his desk bearing a tag, which informed him that it had been found and returned by one of his close friends, James by name.

THEY PLAYED CHESS.

The Loser Afterward Learned Without Asking Why He Lost.

Baron Hengelmuller, the Austrian diplomat, a man famous for his chess ability, one day at a house in Washington met a young man whose name he did not catch when the introductions were made. Chess was the topic of the conversation by all those in the company, and presently the young man suggested diffidently that he would be highly honored if the baron would play a game with him.

The baron consented. They sat down. After a few moves the baron looked up from the table checkmated and found the young man reading a paper. The chessmen were placed again and, after not so many moves as before, the baron looked up to find the young man reading the paper and himself checkmated.

After his dinner the baron came back. He wanted another game, being somewhat chagrined at the ease with which he had been beaten. As he came in he found the young man who had played with him that afternoon blindfolded and playing against sixteen opponents at the same time. The young man was Pillsbury.—Saturday Evening Post.

FINE GIFT FROM FORMER RESIDENT

The new bridge which is to cross the Sudbury river, between the towns of Concord and Lincoln, which is the gift of Charles Francis Adams, formerly of Quincy, but now a resident of Lincoln, is under construction. Codman & Despredelle of Boston are the architects.

The bridge is an innovation in country construction and design, inasmuch as general habit of bridge builders has not been to give much attention to the architectural treatment of bridges in rural districts.

This new bridge sets a standard in such construction and far surpasses any like bridges.

It was designed with this point in view, and unusual attention has been paid to its architectural beauty, as well as to permeability of construction. It is intended to be both useful and ornamental and a worthy tribute to Concord and Lincoln.

PAGANINI HELPED HER.

The Great Violinist Didn't Play the Miser on This Occasion.

The following story places Paganini in a better light than this musical miser was accustomed to appear. And really one is led to wonder which is true Paganini—the miser or the artist giving his talent to assist a poor servant girl. One morning the maid who waited on him in Paris came to him, weeping, and told how her lover had been conscripted and sent away to the war, and she, of course, was too poor to buy a substitute for him.

Paganini resolved to aid the girl and took a unique way to do it. He procured a wooden shoe and so fashioned it that it could be strung up and played like a fiddle. Then he advertised that he would give a concert and play five pieces on the violin and five on a wooden shoe. Of course this strange announcement drew a good house. The violinist had given the girl tickets to the concert, and after it was over he went to her, and, pouring 20,000 francs into her lap, he told her that she could now purchase a substitute for her sweetheart and with the remainder set up housekeeping. He also gave her the wooden shoe that had brought her such good fortune and told her to sell it. Of course this curious instrument brought her a goodly sum, which she added to the amount which was to bring her domestic happiness.—W. Francis Gates in "Anecdotes of Great Musicians."

A young minister had obtained a kirk in a mining district in Scotland. After a deal of difficulty he managed to secure lodgings. The first morning following his arrival the landlady knocked at the door with the rather unusual query as to whether he had washed himself. "Yes," he said. "Why?" "Because," she replied, calmly, "I'm gaun to mak' a dumplin' for the dinner, an' I wad like the len o' the basin!"—Shoe and Leather Journal.

MEASURING THE EARTH.

Erastosthenes Made the First Attempt and Did Fairly Well.

The earliest attempt to measure the circumference of the earth was made by a Greek, Erastosthenes, who was born 276 B. C. He found that at Syene the gnomon, or upright pillar, used by the Greeks to measure the height of the sun in the sky, showed the sun to be exactly overhead at midday at the time of the summer solstice, while at Alexandria the gnomon cast a shadow upon the same date, showing that the latter point was one-fiftieth of the earth's circumference north of Syene.

Erastosthenes reasoned correctly that the length of the shadow at Alexandria bore the same relation to the circumference of the small circle described from the top of the gnomon as a center that the distance between the two cities bore to the circumference of the globe. This latter was 5,000 stadia, or about 625 miles, which when multiplied by fifty gives 31,250 miles as the circumference of the earth. This result is not quite correct, but as nearly so as could be expected from the first crude attempt to estimate it. —New York Sun.

MOVING PICTURES

Ingenious Methods of Producing Startling Effects.

TRICKS OF THE CAMERA MEN.

Expedients by Which Puzzling Situations and Incidents That Seem to Contradict the Laws of Nature Are Recorded on the Finished Film.

The ingenuity of man is exercised, to a wonderful degree in the creation of novel and seemingly impossible situations and episodes for production in the moving picture shows, and audiences are often bewildered in trying to decide how the curious effects, which at times seem to contradict the laws of nature, are secured. Yet, like the conjurer's tricks, it is all very simple when the veil is lifted.

There are some scenes depicted which, while amazing enough in their way, do not puzzle the critical beholder in solving the ways and means of their making. There are the railroad accident, obtained by means of children's toys; the warships and the aeroplanes, which are also photographs of playthings; the burglar in his unheard of performance of climbing the front of a house, and—last, but not least—the man clinging to the ceiling of a room. The pictures explain themselves.

But when we see a man jumping out of a fourth story window, see him fall fifty feet to the ground and then get up and run away unhurt, we ask, How is this possible? The origin of the picture is very simple. The fugitive jumps out of a low window in the studio, which is fitted up in the style of the desired room. Then the photographing process is interrupted. The next picture is taken in the street in front of a real house. A life sized puppet is dropped from one of the windows. When it has reached the ground the machine stops, the actor puts himself in the place of the figure, the reel is started again, the man gets up and runs away.

In like manner auto accidents and similar episodes are arranged.

Another impossibility—a man swims through a river and on the other side he climbs a ten foot wall without difficulty. Origin of the pictures: The man is photographed sliding from the wall into the water, but in taking the picture the reel is turned wrong way, so the motion is reversed when the picture is reeled off in the right direction.

The last obstacle in representing the seemingly impossible was cleared away when some clever mind conceived the idea of stopping the photographing process, not after a series of pictures, but after each single picture or after each two or three of them. The work involved was enormous, as eighteen pictures are taken every second—that is to say, about 50,000 pictures are required for a reel, which is to amuse the public only ten minutes! But human perseverance has accomplished the task, and the results obtained are extraordinary. The following examples will prove it:

A pile of small stones is put on a black table, and the apparatus is fastened vertically above the stones. Then a short turn of the crank, and a few identical pictures of the stone pile are taken. One of the stones is then removed from the pile; another short turn, which gives two or three pictures showing the first stones separate from the pile. The process is repeated until the stones laid aside by hand show the writing, "Good Night!" The finished film does not show the hand that removed one stone after another, but creates the impression that the stones arrange themselves in the form of magic writing.

Instead of the stones, a lump of clay may be placed on the table and some kind of a figure is gradually modeled from it by hand; but, this hand being invisible, it seems as if the figure formed itself.

In the same way a herring can gradually be sent back into the tin can from which it was taken. —Gartenlaube, Leipzig.

A Trifle Withered.

In his native tongue no one could have made more graceful speeches than M. Blanc, but when he essayed compliments in English he was not quite so successful.

"Have I changed in the five years since we met in Paris?" asked an elderly woman who desired above all things to be thought younger, much younger, than she was.

"Madame," said the courtier, his hand on his heart, "you look like a rose of twenty years!"—Youth's Companion.

A Drain on the Company.

On his way home from the theater, where he had seen a performance of "Othello," Bobby was unusually quiet.

"Didn't you enjoy the play?" grandfather asked, at last.

"Oh, yes, very much," replied Bobby. "But, grandpapa, there's one thing I don't quite understand. Does the black man kill a lady every night?"—Youth's Companion.

Two of a Kind.

"You fondle that pug puppy," complained the lover, "until I am actually jealous of him."

"You're all alike," answered the girl. "This puppy is jealous of you."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SAVED BY NEW ENGINE

Fire Threatened to Wipe Out the Whole of a Maine Village

Monson, Me., Nov. 9.—A new gasolene fire engine, put in use for the first time, was all that saved the entire town of Monson from being wiped out by flames last night. As it was the greater portion of the business section of the village was reduced to ashes, half a dozen families made homeless, and it is feared that one man may have lost his life.

The fire started in the dry goods store of F. J. Hughes in the very heart of the business section, and when discovered was making good headway. Before it was stopped the Masonic block, a three-story wooden structure, the postoffice and five stores were in ruins.

The cause of the fire is not known and the loss is roughly estimated at $50,000.

PRESENTED BY WATTERSON

Lincoln Memorial Is Unveiled In Kentucky's Capitol Building

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 9.—While President Taft and a vast assemblage of people, including many of those who wore the gray in the conflict between the north and the south, looked on, an heroic bronze statue of Abraham Lincoln was unveiled in the capitol building of the state in which the martyred president was born.

"Proof of a re-united country," said Governor Willson of Kentucky, in accepting the staue. Henry Watterson presented the statue.

The addresses of Taft and Willson singularly agreed in almost identical declarations that of all figures in national history there is none that is calculated to bridge chasms of sentiment between sections as is Lincoln's.

CHINESE IN PEKIN TERROR STRICKEN

No Question of Seriousness of Situation at the Capital

Pekin, Nov. 9.—Two men are on the way to Pekin whose coming is anxiously awaited. One of the men is Liang Chi-Chiao, the noted exile, who is considered the most influential Chinaman of letters.

He is believed to be returning here from Japan to take an active part in the work of reform. The other is General Chang Shao-Tsen, commander of the Lanchau troops, who forced promises from the administration of a constitutional government.

There is no question of the seriousness of events in Pekin. The foreign residents, for the present, are amply protected, but thousands upon thousands of the natives are terror stricken and they fear the approach of Chang Shao-Tsen, who may not come alone.

CANNOT GET BACK

No Jobs Waiting For Men After They Are Forty Years Old

Washington, Nov. 9.—That a man cannot get a new position after he is 40 years old was asserted before the Employers' Liability and Workmen's Compensation commission by Arthur E. Holder of the American Federation of Labor.

He had been speaking of the satisfactory operation of the British compensation act of 1906, which recently he had investigated, when a question was asked as to its effect on the employment of men of advanced age.

"The man who is over 40 and who has a few gray hairs cannot get back when once he loses his job, but he can hold on if he has a place," he said. "It is the same here that it is in England, and it is the same in Germany and throughout the continent."

TO HAVE DIVORCE PROCTOR

The Latest Novelty Introduced In the "Show Me" State

Kansas City, Nov. 9.—A "divorce proctor," whose salary is to be paid from a fund raised by the reform organizations of Kansas City, and who is to cope with the "divorce evil," is to be installed here Nov. 13.

This office was created as a result of criticism of the divorce machinery of this county.

Personal service on the defendant is not obligatory. The judges have agreed to postpone hearing divorce proceedings till the proctor can get first hand evidence in all suspected cases.

tention of retiring to private life at the end of that time.

Although the governor is not talking on the national situation at this time there is no question but that his victory in Massachusetts puts him in line for the Democratic nomination for vice president or for president in 1912.

It is generally conceded that the Republican machine has received its death blow and that the result finally ends the dominance of Senator Lodge in the party. The strongest gains in the towns were made in the western part of the state, where Senator Crane is supposed to dominate the situation.

RHODE ISLAND FIGURES

Complete Returns Show That Pothier Has Plurality of 7125

Providence, Nov. 9.—Republican government in Rhode Island was given an overwhelming endorsement at the state election according to returns completed yesterday. Every member of the Republican state ticket was elected, and the number of Democrats in the legislature next year will be greatly reduced.

By the election of Governor Aram J. Pothier of Woonsocket the state gives a governor a fourth term for the first time in forty-two years. Pothier received 37,625 votes to 30,500 for Lewis A. Waterman, the Democratic standard bearer, a plurality of 7125.

Others elected on the state ticket are Lieutenant Governor Zenas W. Bliss of Cranston; secretary of state, J. F. Parker of Providence; treasurer general, Walter A. Reed of Gloucester; attorney general, Herbert A. Rice of Providence.

In the incoming general assembly there will be thirty-three Republican senators, five Democratic senators, seventy-one Republicans in the house, eighteen Democrats and one Socialist.

Rhode Island will, after next year, hold biennial elections, as the proposition was accepted by considerably more than the three-fifths vote required. With the acceptance of the matter Massachusetts is the only remaining state to hold annual elections.

The big shore resorts went wet after a lively day in getting out the vote. One town, West Greenwich, changed from the wet to dry column.

TIGER'S TAIL TWISTED

Tammany Buried Under Wreckage of Landslide In Brooklyn

New York, Nov. 9.—Charles F. Murphy and Tammany Hall are in deep gloom because of the fusionist victories in this city and the loss of the legislature by Tammany. Murphy will be unable now to jam his charter for this city through a legislature devoted to the interests of Tammany Hall.

Tammany barely saved its judicial ticket in the borough of Manhattan, while in Brooklyn the fusion judicial and county tickets were overwhelmingly elected.

How the people of New York state feel about Murphy and Tammany domination is indicated by the fact that the Democratic majority of twenty-four on joint ballot in the legislature has been turned into a Republican one of thirty or more. The assembly will stand: Republicans and fusionists, 100; Democrats, 49; Socialists, 1.

THE KENTUCKY ELECTION

Democrats Elect State Candidates by Large Majorities

Louisville, Nov. 9.—Kentucky is still counting the majorities her voters gave to practically all the Democratic candidates in the state. The next administration goes into office with a heavier indorsement than accorded to any set of candidates in years.

James B. McCreary, governor of Kentucky thirty-two years ago, has been re-elected at the age of 73 years by a majority ranging over 30,000. His opponent was Edward C. O'Rear. it is assured that every Democratic nominee has been elected by a majority about as large as that received by McCreary.

The state legislature in joint assembly will have a Democratic majority, probably 85, assuring the election of Congressman James, Democrat, to the United States senate as successor to Senator Paynter. James is the nominee of the state Democratic primary.

CLAIMED BY BOTH PARTIES

But Indications Are That Republicans Have Carried Maryland

Baltimore, Nov. 9.—Incomplete returns from Baltimore city and the state indicate that for the second time since the Civil war Maryland has elected a Republican governor.

Phillips L. Goldsborough, the figures so far received appear to show, has carried the city by about 2000 and the counties by as much more.

State Senator Gorman, the Democratic nominee for governor, however, declares his conviction that he has been successful.

Mr. Goldsborough's running mates on the ticket, Morris A. Soper, for attorney general, and John H. Cunningham, for comptroller probably are elected.

The constitutional amendment providing for the disfranchisement of the negro appears to be decisively defeated.

The probability is that the legislature in both its branches will continue to be controlled by the Democrats.

How to Take Raw Eggs.

An invalid who has been compelled to subsist largely on a diet of raw eggs has found several ways of making them more appetizing. When a little lemon juice is squeezed over a raw egg, she says, the flavor reminds her of oysters. For a change she uses orange juice and has the whole beaten to a stiff froth. Raw egg whites she manages to consume without pain by mixing them with the juice of an orange and some chopped or crushed ice. So treated, she says, the taste of the egg is not perceptible.

How to Take Out Grease.

Magnesia will take grease spots out of carpets and rugs. Get a block of it from the drug store for 5 cents, scrape it with a knife into fine powder and lay this on the grease spot, covering it entirely. Rub it in a little, and let it stand overnight. Remove it the next day with a clean whisk broom, and the spot will be gone.

THAT LOTTERY TICKET

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

One day a tramp who was plainly on his last legs staggered into the village of Scottsville and dropped down in the street in front of the tavern. He was carried into the hostelry and a doctor sent for, and in two days he was dead. The verdict at the inquest was that he had died from sickness and exposure.

When the coroner overhauled the dead wayfarer's pockets he found lots of simple things and a ticket in a Prussian lottery. This ticket was in an envelope and had been kept clean. It was for a quarterly drawing that would not take place for nine weeks yet, and according to its face it might draw a prize of $25,000. No one in Scottsville had ever seen such a ticket before, and very little was said or thought about it for three or four days, or until a certain New York drummer came to town on one of his trips. He was appealed to for information, and his reply was:

"Well, I guess yes. I've bought them myself, though I've never had any luck. Why, I've known four different men who have drawn fortunes in that lottery. It's backed by the Prussian government and is as good as forty national banks."

The drummer created an instant excitement about that ticket. It started right in as a main topic of conversation and held the place. Then a lightning rod man came along and offered $100 cash for it. He knew three men who got their start in life by drawing large sums in that very lottery.

Three days later a hog drover came along and made an offer of $250 for the ticket. According to his story, one of the members of the beef trust got his first $1,000 from that very lottery. Then a tin peddler offered his whole outfit for the ticket, and the town of Scottsville began to buzz. Of a sudden the landlord of the tavern demanded possession of the ticket, to have and to hold until the debt to him had been paid. A tramp had died in his house. He had put in a bill to the town for $3, but on thinking it over had concluded that $100 was little enough. The coroner was an honest man, but he might get drowned in the mill pond and the ticket soaked to a pulp.

The carpenter who had made the five dollar coffin jumped his claim to $30 and demanded that he be protected by having the ticket turned over to him. The sexton followed suit. The doctor in the case who had administered only one dose of medicine had got made out his bill yet, but when he did it would be for at least $50. It was a case that had bothered him, and he couldn't afford to be bothered for less than half a hundred.

Then came a day when Scottsville was almost swept off its feet and left gasping for breath. Along came a Mr. Jones, a cattle and hog buyer. He was no old sport, but he knew a good thing when he saw it. He always invested in that lottery. He had bought that ticket in the city. He had lost it on the road, and a tramp had found it. He must be handed his property or there would be such a row as that part of the state had never heard of. Mr. Jones was a good bluffer, but when it came to taking an oath he faltered and was run out of town.

Then there came a deacon of the church from a village a few miles away. He came in humility and shame, but still he came. His village wanted a new church building, but the members of that particular faith were poor in purse. It had worried them, but it worried the deacon worst of all. He had figured every way he could, but could see no light until he saw the advertisement of that lottery. He turned to it as a saving clause. He sent money and got the ticket. It was against his conscience, and he told nobody of it. Whatever money the ticket drew was to be freely given to the erection of the new church. This was no doubt the true story of the ticket, which had been stolen from the deacon's house by the tramp, but had it been ten times true it would not have been handed over to him.

The day before the drawing, when it did not seem that the excitement could go higher without exploding something, the drummer and the lightning rod man returned. They bid against each other for the ticket. Perhaps they understood each other, but their faces were very grave as the bidding stopped at $700. Then a huge bonfire had to be built to relieve the strain. Few slept that night, and next day a public purse was made up to send a messenger to the city for news of the drawing. He didn't take the ticket with him—oh, no! That would be taken later on by a crowd of honest and determined men, each one armed to the teeth.

At the end of the third day the messenger returned. He was cheered. He was assisted from the stage with tender hands. He was assisted to mount a barrel, and then the crowd fell away and waited for his words. He calmly looked about him and then calmly said:

"Feller—citizens. That 'ere ticket"—

Thirty seconds of awful suspense.

"That 'ere ticket didn't draw a durned thing!"

One wild, long drawn yell of disappointment and anger and terror, one long hour of kicks and cuffs and reprisals, one awful night in which infants shuddered, and then Scottsville was herself again.

GOVERNMENT BUYS AN ISLAND FOR $25,000.

Mill Rock, In Hell Gate, Has an interesting History.

Mill Rock, one of the rocky islands in Hell Gate, which has given no end of trouble to mariners ever since the Dutch boatmen sailed through those waters, has been bought by the United States government for $25,000. It will be used as a general storage place and field plant for the extensive harbor and river work being done by the government in the vicinity of New York.

It was bought from William R. Peters, a merchant and bank director of New York, who has owned it for about twenty years.

It was nearly 100 years ago that the government held nominal possession of the island. At the outbreak of the war of 1812 a small blockhouse was erected there. Directly opposite, at Hallett's point, on the Astoria shore, a fortification was thrown up and dignified by the name of Fort Stevens, while a little to the southeast on high ground a tower was erected called Castle Bogardus. These fortifications were intended to defend the approach to the city from the sound, but there was never any occasion to use them.

Part of the old blockhouse was removed in time, and the remainder fell to pieces. Soon after a fisherman squatter, Alexander Gibson, popularly known to the residents on the shore as Captain "Sandy" Gibson, put up a wooden shack on the island. He caught his fish off the reefs, and up to half a century ago he was a familiar character in the locality.

The old fisherman lived there unmolested for so long a time that he established a squatter's right to the island and his proprietorship was virtually admitted by the hotel man, Charles Leland, who bought the rocky island from Gibson in 1863 for $300. This was the first deed of conveyance in the island ever recorded, and to strengthen his title Alexander Gibson had the statement inserted in the deed that he had held undisputed possession for upward of fifty years.

Mr. Leland was too busy managing hotels to improve his island. He named it Leland island, and as such it was known for many years. When Mr. Leland went into bankruptcy it was sold by his assignee to Cecil Campbell Riggins, a prominent New York lawyer, for $2,500.

The ownership up to this time only included the single acre above water. At low tide there is a smaller island a few yards to the south, and this had been called Little Mill Rock. Mr. Riggins endeavored to establish his rights to the land under water, but about this time the government squatted on the land and used it in connection with the second explosion in Hell Gate of 1885, when a large reef beyond Hallett's Point reef was blown up, the big Hallett's point explosion having taken place in 1876.

Mr. Higgins did not establish his rights to the land under water, although in his deed to Mr. Peters about twenty years ago he assigned his rights to somewhat over eight acres below high water mark. Mr. Higgins sold it for $6,000, showing a steady rise in its value from the $300 paid to "Sandy" Gibson in 1863. To assist navigation a dike has been constructed by the government on the reef.

SAVING THE ROBIN.

200,000 Leaflets Distributed In Crusade Against Bird Slaughter.

Mrs. Russell Sage, through the National Association of Audubon Societies, is sending out 200,000 leaflets describing the native song birds, particularly the robin, in whose protection the philanthropist is deeply interested.

Mrs. Sage has given $5,000 for three years for arousing interest in the protection of the robin. Up to last season robins could be bought in the markets of southern cities at from 5 to 10 cents a dozen, and even now many are being slaughtered. While laws have been passed to protect them, there are still seven states where there is an open hunting season.

As a result of Mrs. Sage's crusade 533 Junior Audubon classes were formed last year in twelve states, with a membership of 11,000. Lexington, Ky., formed nine classes, with a membership of 1,000.

New Horse For Taft.

President Taft got a new riding horse from West Virginia the other day. The horse came just after the Canadian reciprocity fight had ended, and the president took one look at him and called him "Reciprocity." The new presidential steed is sixteen hands high, dappled iron gray in color and able to carry a man of the president's weight.

All Broken Up.

At last the oil trust is no more.
'Tis broken into bits,
But not a person here has seen
One Archbold throwing fits.
The Standard's torn itself apart
With statutes to comply,
But old John D. says nothing. He
Just winks his other eye.

The Standard Oil is fragments now.
They number thirty-three.
To heaven's winds they all are thrown
To suit the court's decree.
Still Archbold hasn't torn his hair,
None yet has heard him sigh,
While on the links old John D. winks
His saintly starboard eye.

The Standard Oil is broken up—
It is, ah, yes, it is—
But those who owned it as a whole
Continue in the biz.
The little pieces are not lost.
They're somewhere down Broadway,
And old John D. he laughs "Ho! Ho!"
And winks the same old way.

—Tom W. Jackson.

FEMININE FANCIES

THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

In this column we publish from day to day recipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

Cut them and paste in scrap book for reference.

HOW TO PROTECT EYES.

Women Should Wear Hats That Shade the Face In Summer.

Strong sunlight causes wrinkles, a fact many women have learned too late to their sorrow. Once thoroughly established, these telltale furrows, the unmistakable imprint of the finger of time, are very difficult to eradicate, requiring constant effort, even great physical discomfort, to entirely erase.

A certain amount of sunlight is good for the skin and for the eyes. No one of nature's elements, if used with discretion, will act as a destructive power to the body. The trouble with the sunlight cure is that it is too often taken in overdoses. Notice on a particularly bright day, a day when the sun's rays are almost metallic in their strength, how the eyes of the people you meet are squinted in an effort to alleviate the pressure on the nerves of sight.

This squinting process causes innumerable little wrinkles to appear about the eyes and across the bridge of the nose. Holding the face in this strained position easily becomes a habit, and once it is a habit the damage is done.

One of the best ways to prevent injury to the eyes as well as a premature mask of age is the wearing of a hat that will shade the eyes. Persons whose work compels them to be much out of doors during the summer months should select a hat with a broad or drooping brim. Despite the fact that much fun has been poked at the bushel basket hat of fashionable moment, it is much more sensible for summer wear than the peach basket variety that snuggles up close to the hair and leaves the blazing sun to burn its way across the face and eyes.

Women have the added protection of a parasol, a bit of femininе frippery that has its mission of service as well as of beauty. Lacking this recourse, men should select soft hats that turn down over the eyes, wide brimmed sailors or panamas, for a prematurely furrowed face no more becomes a man than it does a woman.

In extreme cases use glasses with lightly darkened lenses and observe what a rest they will confer upon the tired sun strained eyes.

In the summer time the eyes should be treated to a daily bath of boracic acid, for dust and particles of dirt are blown into them, and danger to the eyeball ensues. A bath of warm water in which has been dissolved a little boracic acid will work wonders in keeping the eyes in good condition during the summer season.

How to Stop Smoking.

Do not light the first cigar less than half an hour after breakfast. The more difficult this delay may be the more need there is for a cure. The remainder of the day smoke as usual. It is only the first cigar with which we are dealing. Keep this up for a week, then lengthen the interval to an hour for another week, then make it one and a half hours, two, two and a half and so on. If you have an "all gone" sensation, a longing for something and don't know what sort of feeling, eat an orange or apple or almost any kind of fruit, but don't smoke until the time is up. The nerves, being deprived of their morning stimulant, are crying for nourishment, which nature is hastening to supply through increased appetite to supply digestion. By the time the first cigar is entirely eliminated the cure is effected with no serious disarrangement of the heart or digestive apparatus. It now requires only a moderate will power to make the cure permanent.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

How to Clean White Silk Gloves.

To clean white, delicate silk gloves with fuller's earth, draw them on the hands smoothly and wash your hands and arms literally in the powder, rubbing the hands again precisely as you would with soapsuds; shake off this dirty powder and draw off the gloves. You will find that the hands and arms are sprinkled with dust and grime which have sifted through the gloves. Clean the hands and arms, shake the gloves wrong side out and repeat the operation; twice or three times will be sufficient to clean the gloves.

White silk gloves that are washed with soap and water become yellow unless the water is kept at an equable and low temperature. Besides, the water causes them to shrink.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Tomato Soup. To one quart can of tomatoes add one pint of hot water, and let come to a boil. Mix together two heaping tablespoonfuls of flour, one of butter, one teaspoonful each of salt and sugar, rub smooth with a spoonful of the hot tomato, and mix all together, let boil for 15 minutes, rub through a sieve, and serve hot.

Stuffed Cabbage. Cut out the heart of a good sized cabbage; chop some cold veal finely and mix it with herbs and bread crumbs, season with salt and pepper and add a beaten egg to bind the stuffing together. Fill the cavity in the cabbage with the stuffing, tie the cabbage firmly together and boil for two hours. Pour around a good gravy when serving it.—Martha D.

White Candy. Two cups sugar, one-half cup water, one scant level teaspoon cream of tartar, vanilla. Mix the sugar, water and cream of tartar and boil until the mixture will thread when dropped from the tip of a spoon. Flavor and pour into a buttered pan. When cool enough to handle, pull until white, and cut in any way desired.

Raisin Cake Without Eggs. One cupful of sugar, one half cupful molasses, one cupful sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda half cupful of butter, one cupful of raisins; chop and flour; one teaspoonful each of allspice and cinnamon, half teaspoonful of cloves and one teaspoonful baking powder; flour to make a very stiff batter.

Stewed Chicken Fried.—Take a nice plump chicken, joint and place in a kettle with sufficient water, season to taste, and cook until tender. Then remove the meat, dredge with flour and fry a delicate brown in pan, with small quantity of butter or lard, then add some of the broth, enough to make gravy, and let simmer a few moments. This makes an old or tough chicken almost equal to a fried spring chicken.

Fig Cake. Two cupfuls of sugar, two-thirds of a cup of butter, one cupful of milk, four even cupfuls of flour, five eggs, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, one of soda sifted with the flour; mix the butter and sugar until creamed, add the unbeaten yolks of the eggs, add the milk and the flour slowly beating all the time, lastly the whites of the eggs. Flavor two cupfuls of chopped figs and mix in. Bake quickly.

FOUR BRITISH BOXERS COMING

An Invasion Is Planned by Quartet of Little Fellows In November.

The coming of the English boxers under Will Ames the first week in November is being watched with interest, as it may result in some good matches between the little fellows. Sid Smith, who is coming over, is certainly a clever youngster and has beaten everything that walks over there at 112 pounds. He will have to give away weight to Johnny Coulon and Frankie Burns, but is willing to do that in order to get the matches. Billy Marchant, the 124 pound star, who is coming also, will have plenty of bouts and with boys who will test him to the limit. If he is as good as Jem Driscoll, as they claim, then he must be a wonder. Sid Burns, who was to have fought Georges Carpentier, the French welterweight, also intends coming, but his place may be taken by George Randell, a likely lightweight, whom Manager Ames thinks well of.

WAS CRUEL TO ANIMAL

And Will Be Taken To Court To Explain Matters

HORSE PUT OUT OF MISERY

Complaint was made to the police Wednesday of a horse that was in a bad condition along side of the railroad track between Quincy and Braintree. The horse which is said to be owned by Rafael Naclerio, was back of his barn in such a position that the animal could only be seen from a passing train. According to the train men, the horse had been there for four days. They had seen the animal fall down and try in vain to get up. Thinking that the matter should be reported, the men informed the police and Wednesday, Inspector Goodhue went up to investigate. He found the horse in a very bad condidtion and put him out of misery. Inspector Goodhue who is the local agent for the cruelty to animal society is to bring Naclerio into court for cruelty to the horse.

"BEAT QUAKERS," YOST'S CRY

Michigan Eleven Planning Trick Plays For Penn.

"Beat Pennsylvania!" is the battle-cry of the Michigan football player. Since the season started Coach Yost and his Wolverenes keep close tabs on reports of the Quaker eleven. Last year Michigan held Pennsylvania to a 0-0 score, and this year it hopes to do even better. "Hurry-Up" Yost is teaching his men all kinds of tricks in order that the Red and Blue collegians may be conquered when they battle on Michigan's gridiron on Nov. 18.

Yost does not bury the fact that he has one of the best teams in years. He already has gone on record as saying that he expects this year's team to make as great a record as his great 1904 eleven did. The Wolverenes look upon the Quaker game as the hardest of the season and the best one from which to judge Michigan's real gridiron strength. There is no method of obtaining the Wolverenes' strength since Yost's squad does not play with the conference teams. Both Chicago and Michigan play Cornell, and these games will go a long way toward showing how strong the Maize and Blue team is compared to other western elevens.

The personnel of Michigan's present eleven is much the same as last year's. Not only is Yost lucky to have practically an intact team, but he has been fortunate in locating suitable substitutes for emergencies.

A slight glance at the players reveals at left end Garrels, who is a brother of the famous Jimmy Garrels of the '04-'06 team, who is thought to be one of the best wings Yost has developed in years. Stanfield Wells, an All American end of last year, is again holding down a wing position. Yost says he would not want a better man at tackle than Captain Conklin. Pontius, while a new man, has shown surprising strength as his leader's partner. The worst holes "Hurry Up" found to fill were the guards.

Michigan felt a severe blow when she lost Benbrook. So far Almendinger, a likely looking lineman, has been used as a guard, while the other guard has been Boyle, a veteran of last year's team. Petersen, a new man, is playing center. He promises to be as good as if not better than Cornwall, who played the position last year.

McMillan, the sensational quarterback find of last season, is again on the job. In the matter of backs Michigan is well fortified with Craig, Torbet, Huebel, Wetmer, Robinson and Harrington.

Yost is giving a lot of attention to Thompson, the fullback, whose kicking abilities give him a big advantage over the other men out for the middle back position. Thompson has developed into quite a kicker, and it is upon him that Yost depends to score a Pennsylvania victory.

BASEBALL IS UNCERTAIN.

Recent Clashes Upset All Dope by the Wise Ones.

Baseball is a funny thing. Cleveland, third placer in the American, proved no match for Cincinnati, the sixth place team in the National, yet the St. Louis Browns, who were a bad last in the younger league, licked the Cardinals, who finished fifth in the old league, and the White Sox, who were in the second division in the American, whipped the Cubs, runners up for the pennant in the National. It is that beautiful uncertainty that makes the game so immensely popular. The Athletics beat the Giants in the world's series, but the majority of experts predicted this, as Philadelphia is individually and collectively a better ball club, as was proved in the recent games.

CAN KILBANE BEAT ATTELL?

All Things Considered Cleveland Boy Has Fine Chance.

SHOWS SPEED AND SKILL.

Youngster Who Recently Defeated All the Cracks on the Pacific Coast Picked by Many to Defeat the Featherweight Champion.

Now that Johnny Kilbane has cleared his path toward the championship goal now held by Abe Attell the question presents itself. What are Kilbane's chances with the holder of the championship title?

There will be a big diversity of opinion among the followers of the game throughout the country. Johnny has thousands of admirers who have absolute confidence in his ability to beat the wonderful little Hebrew fighter, and on the Pacific coast there are a good many who will support him in his dispute with Attell in case they are matched.

Although the sporting enthusiasts of the coast have the reputation of being partisan to a marked degree and bitterly prejudiced against all boxers from other parts of the country when they are opposed in battle to a native son, there are some fair minded who cannot get around the fact that the Cleveland boy arrived on the coast a stranger and in the face of discouraging conditions beat three of the hardest boys in his class, thereby earning recognition in the select circle and the right to battle with the holder of the world's championship.

In other words, Johnny Kilbane, by his gallant fighting, made the Californians, prejudiced as most of them were, like him. They will, or at least a number of them, now back him in his match with Abe, for the Californians are a shrewd lot when they set out to wager their money on a boxing bout.

Viewed from a strictly unbiased point of view and with due respect to Abe Attell and the wonderful ability he has displayed in the past, it now looks as if Kilbane stands a good chance of winning the title that Abe has defended so valiantly for so many years. There are several reasons for this conclusion. In the first place, Kilbane has shown high class in every department of the game. He has proved to be an exceptionally brainy sort of a fighter, possessed of the necessary speed, hitting power and ability to stand punishment. He has also shown remarkable endurance, for he has finished all of his battles in good condition and not been fatigued to any extent.

Attell is reaching an age at which the average pugilist begins to retrograde, while Kilbane is just approaching his maturity as a fighter. The best fighters ever known to this country reached their best between the years of twenty-one and twenty-four years. Kilbane is now going on twenty-two, and he is still gaining in strength and hitting power.

GOTCH MAKING TOUR.

Meeting All Comers, Too, but They Must Tackle Turk First.

Frank Gotch, the champion wrestler of the world, is being pestered by knights of the mat from all over America and Europe for bouts. Since his triumph over Hackenschmidt Gotch has been in no mood to try conclusions with a man like Zbysco, but has been busily engaged perfecting a tour around the world in which he picks up lemons to drop in overnight matches.

In the Gotch stable is Yusuf Mahmout, the big Turk, who has forced the shoulders of many good wrestlers to the mat. Since Yusuf has been engaged by Gotch the champion has used the Turk as the "fall guy." Every time a wrestler challenges Gotch to a bout the champion replies, "Throw Mahmout and then I'll consider your case." As the Turk is almost as good as Gotch at the game, the climbers of the wrestling ladder fail to reach the champion.

COLUMBIA TO RACE AGAIN.

Defender of America's Cup Against Shamrock I. and II. Being Overhauled.

The famous old yacht Columbia, which successfully defended the America's cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock I. and II. and which was afterward converted into a house yacht, is to race again. She has been towed to Magothy river and is being fitted out with a racing rig.

The Columbia is owned by Captain Charles A. Tucker, who has been using her as a houseboat about Baltimore waters. He now proposes to have the old cup defender thoroughly overhauled, which will include new mast, rigging and sails.

McDonald Establishes Shot Put Mark.

Pat McDonald, the weight tosser, made a new record with the twenty-four pound shot recently at Celtic park, New York. He succeeded in propelling the sphere a distance of 38 feet 10 11-16 inches. This supplants the old mark of 38 feet 2¾ inches, made by Ralph Rose in New York seven years ago.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

All the members of the local High School football squad were put through some gruelling practice yesterday afternoon, in preparation for the coming battle with Worcester High, scheduled to take place at Worcester next Saturday. Coach Staff seems to feel adequately satisfied that his boys have shown marked progress in nearly every game, and he feels that if the Quincy High team had a few more games on its schedule, that the showing that would be forthcoming towards the close, would be nothing short of wonderful.

Yesterday afternoon the boys lined up in two teams, and though it would naturally be expected that the first team would have things all its own way, such was not the case, as the second team played its opponents almost to a standstill.

Only two games now remain on the schedule, the one already referred to and the last one with the much heralded Waltham High combination at Waltham, on the following Saturday. It will be remembered that Waltham High has had its goal line crossed this year more tran once, and on this account the local boys are especially desirous of rounding into the best condition for the final game. Up to date, Quincy High has lost three games, and two of those games were lost by close margins.

The playing of Johnson, the captain, has been widely noticeable and judging from the sentiment that prevails in his behalf among the various newspaper writers, he will in all probability be given first choice for the left tackle position on the all-interscholastic eleven. He surely has merited it, for he is without a peer among the schoolboy players in his respective position.

The Coliseum will be the scene of an exceptionally warm roller skating contest this evening when Frank Connors and "Matt" Hennessey come together to settle the championship of Southeastern Massachusetts. Both young men are prominent in athletic circles, and both are conceded to be about as fast a pair as can be found among the different roller skaters.

Hennessey especially is well known to the local rink, for he has won frequent prizes there. Connors in a five mile race is considered to be without a peer, yet he will find that Hennessey will prove to be his toughest proposition, when the race at the Coliseum is started this evening. Hennessey is familiar with the rink itself and this will give him a slight advantage over his opponent. The race will be one well worth watching and any one who desires to spend a most enjoyable evening should make a special effort to be present.

Practical.

"My good woman," said the social reformer, "your children seem to be slightly obstreperous. Have you any clearly defined theories about bringing up your little ones by scientific methods?"

"No, I haven't, madam," answered the much tried mother as she firmly grasped a squirming child in one hand and her slipper in the other. "I'm bringing them up by hand."—Baltimore American.

Very Complicated.

Aunt Kate—What brings that young Mr. Stevens to the house so often? Mildred—Well, his mother's stepfather married a second cousin of my father's great-aunt. We're trying to figure out what relation that makes him to me, and it can't be done in one evening.—St. Louis Times.

BECK SAYS GRIFFITH FEARED NEWSPAPER MEN.

Fred Beck tells some amusing stories of the days when he was a member of the Cincinnati Reds. "Our manager," says Fred, "called us together on one occasion and told us that he wanted us to stop talking to the baseball writers who were accompanying the team. He said we must cease all exchange of courtesies with them, not even nod to them in the hallways or at table, and that there would be a lot of trouble if he caught any of us holding any conversation with these writers. If any of the players obeyed this order I never noticed it. They all kept right on chatting with the scribes. The day I was traded to Philadelphia he warned me not to tell the newspaper men, and I immediately hotfooted to the table where they were breakfasting and told them the full particulars."

"OLD MEN" IN PUGILISM.

Term Used Often by Expert Confusing to Fight Fans.

"Many of the fighters now regarded as belonging to the past generation are comparatively young men. Take "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, for instance. Some of the New York sporting writers described the pitiable efforts of 'old Jack' in the recent affair with Sam Langford, yet Jack is only thirty-three. Young Corbett, who was a bright and shining light of the Queensberry realm a few years ago, is but thirty-one, and Terry McGovern, who is also on the retired list apparently, is the same age. Tom Sharkey cried enough of the ring at twenty-nine. Bat Nelson, who is only twenty-nine at present, had to admit that he was no longer the Durable Dane when he went under to Ad Wolgast on Richmond field a year and a half ago. Abe Attell, who is just twenty-seven, is evidently of the opinion that he should not be asked to tackle the youngsters of his class unless he is well paid for taking the risk."

The writer of the above paragraph does not appear to understand that after an athlete, no matter in what line of effort, passes his thirtieth year the speed and vitality that have enabled him to win battles decrease very rapidly. In the case of Jack O'Brien, he is at thirty-three an "old man" athletically, although still young in comparison with human beings in the ordinary walks of life.

There has been only one exception to the rule—Fitzsimmons—but he was a freak.

So far as McGovern and Young Corbett are concerned, their decadence was due not to age, but to injurious habits. Nelson succumbed to the series of terrific beatings he took during his busy career. He was severely punished almost every time he entered the ring, and that tells on a man.

Provided his injured arm thoroughly heals, Attell will be able to enter the ring and defeat any man in his class. As champion he will naturally insist on proper compensation.

BASKETBALL IN GOOD SHAPE.

Game Is Gradually Getting a Firm Foothold In This Country.

Organized basketball is gradually getting a foothold in the country. The Hudson River, Eastern and Central are the parent organizations, and now comes the Massachusetts State league, which is to be modified on the plans of the defunct New England league. The New England league was the leading professional league of its time.

The Hudson river circuit includes New York and New Jersey towns; the Eastern league is made up of three Philadelphia teams, one from Camden across the Delaware river from Philadelphia; a Trenton (N. J.) team and one from Reading, Pa., while the Central league includes Pittsburg and adjacent towns. In a play-off for the interleague championship last fall the Central league team won three straight from the Eastern league champions.

Soldier On Monument Work of Mrs. Theo. A. R. Kitson

BEAUTIFUL AND IMPOSING

North Attleboro's new soldiers' monument was erected Thursday on the Baptist Common and on Saturday will be dedicated with elaborate exercises.

The monument represents a Civil War soldier on the march. It is eight feet high, on a pedestal 12 feet high. The soldier was designed by Mrs. Theodore A. Ruggles Kitson of Quincy and was cast in bronze in Providence. The base of the pedestal is 10 feet square. On top of this is another granite slab 7 1-4 feet square and on another 5 1-2 feet square. From the top of this to the foot of the monument are bronze tablets 4 3-4 feet high.

On the front tablet, below the soldier, is the following inscription: "To commemorate the loyalty to country, the self-sacrifice, the heroism of the men of this town who fought to preserve the Union in the days of the Civil War." Just below this are the dates "1861-1865."

On either side are bronze tablets bearing these inscriptions: "The demands for loyalty to our country are as great upon the sons as they were upon the sires. The safety of the country lies in the intelligence, the moral character, the patriotism of her citizens." The other: "On this common was drilled the first company of men of this town who answered the call to arms in defense of the Republic in the days of 1861."

On the back of the monument is the date "1911."

On either side of the monument are the symbols of arms, representing the four branches of service, the Navy, infantry, artillery and cavalry.

At the dedication and unveiling on Saturday there will be a big parade, followed by an oration by J. Payson Bradley, past commander of the Massachusetts G. A. R., remarks and singing. Miss Alice F. Stanley will unveil the monument. During the exercises factories and stores will be closed.

FUNERAL OF REV. MR. WELLS.

The burial of Rev. John D. Wells, a former pastor of the First church, was held in Quincy Thursday afternoon. Prayers were said at the grave by Rev. C. B. Ames, recently assistant pastor of the First church.

—Advice to motorists to run slowly while passing schools is timely. Speed laws are debatable things, but when the highway commission reports 100 deaths and 1100 injuries from automobile accidents in 11 months, the need for some better restriction on automobile users than exists is plain. Technically, many of these accidents are not the fault of the motorists. No one will go so far, however, as to assert that the deaths were necessary. With the school-going season in full swing the need for extra caution is pertinently impressed.—Boston Record.

PETITIONS FOR RECOUNT

Democratic Chairman Smith Has Papers Circulated

RESULT WILL INTEREST

A recount of the votes cast in both the Fifth and Sixth districts, at the election Tuesday for Representatives will be made. While the petition for it had not been filed up to 11 o'clock, it was definitely known that the papers or rather the petitions would be in today. The recount will be held on petition of the Democratic City Committee and are asked for on the usual grounds that the petitioners believe that votes counted for Piper should have been counted for Sullivan and that votes counted for Leslie should have been counted for McDevitt.

No one expects that there will be any matrial change and the main object of them in the past have been simply to afford an opportunity to see the ballots, that it may be known how many Democrats who voted for Foss, voted for the Republican representatives. It has not been definitely decided when the recount will be held. Thetime for filing petitions for recounts expires at 5 o'clock tonight.

TWO PLANS.

Two plans for the redistricting of the State into sixteen congressional districts, as allowed by the recent Congress, have been submitted. One is offered to the special congressional redistricting committee by ex-Senator Elmer C. Potter and the other by Rep. Geo. E. Stevens of Dracut. Senator Barnes is a member of the committee and Norfolk County's interest will be well looked after.

ATT'Y GENERAL'S RULING ABOUT REGISTRATION

The Ledger, some weeks ago published the ruling of the Attorney General relative to the enrolment registration to be used at the municipal caucuses. It will be remembered that under the new law, the party enrolment in other years was not used at the state caucuses but a new enrolment made of the voters.

Under the ruling of the Attorney Generalthe enrolment made at the state caucuses can not be used at the municipal caucuses next Tuesday, but that made at the municipal caucuses in November last year, must be used. While there are many who do not agree with the Attorney General, his ruling will stand and the election officers have been notified that at the coming caucuses the enro lment used at the last municipal caucuses must be used.

It is well known that in some wards in Quincy, many Democrats became enrolled as Republicans at the time the enrolment law went into effect While the law provides a way to change the enrolment before the next caucus, few did so with the result that today there are enrolled on the municipal lists many who are known to be Democrats, but who will now be obliged to vote the Republican ticket or none at all.

At the recent state caucuses, many of these people took the opportunity to be enrolled in their proper party and it will be somewhat confusing for them when they enter the polls to vote. It is also going to cause some confusion from the fact that there are now two enrolments in the city, one for the state and one for the municipal caucuses. It is probable that the next legislature will take the necessary steps to remedy the condition.

WILL HOLD RALLY.

A rally in the interest of Eugene R. Stone for Mayor will be held at Hibernian hall, South Quincy, Saturday night. As this is the home ward of John L. Miller it looks like bearding the lion in his den.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Mr. Taft was welcomed by 150,000 people to Pittsburg, but he can not possibly give them all a clerkship.

No trust is on a secure foundation until it gets a full line of widow and orphan stockholders to present as reasons why it should not be molested.

Just think, less than seven weeks to Christmas. Not a bit too early to do some of your holiday shopping and spare the poor over-worked clerk of the last minute rush.

The Thanksgiving proclamation having been issued, Mother need no longer doubt that the usual number of mince pies will be called for this year.

The corporations call for a business men's party, but if they only let people in who have a million, they won't control post offices enough to attract many patriots.

Mr. Taft rode 60 miles an hour in an automobile the other day, but there is nothing to indicate that this was because he was hurrying to get back to the White house.

Congress will devote itself largely to regulating corporations this winter, with at least 391 different opinions, perhaps 393, if Arizona and New Mexico get their representatives in.

Nevertheless, as we have said before, by all means let this grand good state have some satisfactory law regarding the protection of the milk supply. Too important a matter to be made a politcal issue.

It is said that Postmaster General Hitchcock will get married and resign from the cabinet. He may change his mind about quitting work after seeing one or two dressmakers' bills.

Counterfeit 1910 nickels are said to be in circulation, but if any of our readers get one we advise them to confront the loss with equanimity and not try to work it off on the contribution box.

Mayor Shank of Indianapolis is doing good work to reduce the cost of living by selling potatoes, pears, etc., but he isn't really meeting the situation until he puts in a line of fall millinery.

We note that contests for Speaker of the House and president of the Senate have begun in earnest—with our own Senator, George L. Barnes as one of the candidates. It is to be hoped that he will land the honor, no more capable man could be given the honor.

All honor to Abraham Lincoln, the martyred president of the United States. The magnificent granite memorial building erected in Kentucky and dedicated yesterday to the memory of the great statesman will stand for ages—satisfactorily representing the strength of the President who freed the slave and saved the Union. But that which will cause a greater feeling in the humble cabin of logs which the grand and imposing structure covers, the cabin in which Lincoln was born—a reminder of Lincoln the man, rather than that of the great statesman.

QUINCY FAVORED.

For a town to be located near a large city of course, from a business standpoint, has its disadvantages. But there are many things of an important nature in its favor, among them the possibility for public service of men of fine executive ability, who hold positions of high trust in the trades and marts of the metropolis and make their homes and spend their leisure hours in the delightful surroundings of a suburban community. Here in Quincy we are especially favored and we would indeed be ungrateful if we did not take cognizance of the fact. A perusal of the list of our public servants will bear out the above. There's Bailey—a ranking officer in a financial institution; Bryant, the executive of a leading paper warehouse; Rand, manager of the greatest news gathering combination in the world; Murray, the brains of one of Boston's large printing establishments; Shaw a noted civil engineer; Gilliott of the Robbins Iron Works and Richmond, a peer in his field as an adjuster. And so it goes, a small city with the cream of a metropolitan community at its disposal. Such being the case it behooves the voters to see that only superior men are placed in line for public service.

ROMANCE WITH CASH.

A Meriden, Ct., man recently sued a girl for money spent in entertaining her, a New Bedford, Mass., man demanded his presents back and trusteed the girl's salary for $29.16 for something overlooked.

The newspaper paragraphers have had no end of fun with these business like swains. It might be said incidentally that heir matter of fact view was no more commercial than that prevailing in the upper strata of society. There marriage often does not take place until the money basis of the trade is drawn up into bomb proof form by the smartest lawyers.

In what might be called middle class America, the money background of courtship has fortunately dropped out of sight as far as it could, considering money loving human nature.

The thrifty economist views with stern preproof the demands of the debutante for candy, theatre seats, and automobile and carriage drives.

The attitude of the girl of the period was satirized a few years ago by the coon song, "If yer haint got no money yer needn't come round." And yet after all, this is one means by which a testing of the disposition of the moths that flutter about her flame is permitted to the girl of the period.

A host of successful and honorable men are exceedingly mean to their wives on the money side of life. It never enters their head that the woman is fairly entitled to a certain definite share of the family income, be it large or small. Where the married woman has to replenish her funds only by begging for each specific gift, the equal partnership of the home becomes wholly a fiction.

It is not unnatural that the girl of the period should like to know a little about the attitude of her suitors on these matters. The fellow who does his courting on the Dutch treat basis gives evidence that Nature meant him for permanent bachelorhood.

On the other hand the girl of the period reveals her own disposition in these ways. The girl who devours a $2 dinner at the expense of a $2 a day man will demand pretty nearly the same proportion if he gets $20 a day.

CHINA'S TURMOIL AND THE YELLOW PERIL.

By the expressive phrase the "Yellow peril" many politicians of the Hobson type, both in Europe and here, have been sounding the alarm of the dangers of Oriental aggression.

The revolution in China seems likely to advance those great reforms that must take place before China can compete with the modern world. The imitative capacity that has transformed Japan from a semi-barbarous people into a world power will probably accomplish equal results in a single generation in China.

Military arithmetic can easily figure that China's 400,000,000 people could produce an army that would outnumber all Europe and America. And a people who are willing to work for ten cents a day ought on paper to be able to beat out Europe and America on all production.

Although we look down at the Chinese as a nation of laundrymen and other menial workers, their ancient philosophy has taught some truths that the western world has yet to learn. One of these truths is that fighting is the most expensive method of settling quarrels. The Chinese personally are peaceable. Their diplomacy will never walk around the globe with a chip on its shoulder.

As the cost of living in Japan has doubled in twenty years, its producers will not always have the low wages that makes their economic competition seem threatening now.

OFF YEAR THOUGHTS.

National interest in this off year election centered in Massachusetts, where the choice of Gov. E. N. Foss, Democrat, for a second term, indicates that the people are far from ready to re-enter the fold of stand pattism and party regularity.

It was just the same old Massachusetts that in 1908 cast a majority of 110,000 for William H. Taft. It was not many years ago that a Massachusetts man who failed to vote the party ticket at a gulp without looking at the names of the candidates, was thought worthy of the black ball at your club and hardly fit to be admitted into the Congregational church.

At the present time in Massachusetts there are a number of people, who like the insurgent leader, believe in reading a bill over before you vote for it.

The high tide of Democratic success, registered last year in the election of Gov. E. N. Foss by a plurality of 37, 561, receded to something under 8,000 this year. That was to be expected. But the fact that in a campaign in which the tariff issue was brought to the front by both sides, a normally Republican state went Democratic for a second time, suggests that the voters have not yet forgotten the Payne—Aldrich tariff, nor do they believe in allowing manufacturers to name teh amount of protective tariff tax they should be permitted to impose on their fellow citizens.

Otherwise than in Massachusetts, the voting was too much on local issues to have large national significance The Republican gains in Rhode Island are offset by Democratic gains in Kentucky.

It is a significant fact, even in Rhode Island, a manufacturing state, that in country districts outside the cities having factories protected by tariff taxes, there were Democratic gains. The farmer is gradually becoming aware of the fact, hidden to his vision for many years, that high protection compels him to buy in a market where prices are raised by artificial taxation, while what he has to sell is helped but slightly by tariff taxes whose effect is only nominal.

VOTING MACHINES.

One of the latest voting machines was on exhibition in Boston recently and given a severe test when put through its paces.

When in transit to and from the polling places, the machine is enclosed in a substantial case 3 by 3 by 1 1-2 feet in dimensions. Set up for operation the keyboard stands at a convenient height for the voter to manipulate the keys which register his vote.

When used at the polls, the machine is so situated that no other person than the one voting can possibly see what candidates are being voted, being capable of more secrecy, if anything, than the Australian method.

In approaching the machine, a voter qualifies in exactly the same way as he now does. After his name is approved he gains access to the keyboard by raising a bar, which automatically unlocks the key board, and prepares machine to receive his vote.

The candidates' names are clearly printed and arranged in columns, according to the office to which they aspire. To register his vote for a given candidate the voter simply turns a key, thereby scoring one vote for that candidate and locking up the entire column, so that he cannot possibly vote for another candidate in that column; although he can, if he chooses, turn back the key, canceling his vote and unlocking the column when he can again vote for any one candidate in the column. The machine may be adjusted to allow two or more votes in the same column if that number are to be selected for the same office, but when the eligible number have been voted on, the column locks, as in the case of the one-candidate column.

After completing his vote for all candidates, the voter leaves the machine by raising another bar which erases from the face of the keyboard all trace of how he voted, registers how he did vote in the interior of the machine and prepares the keys for the next operator.

The voter has thus cast his vote in about 60 seconds, in absolute secrecy and without any possibility of an error which could disqualify his ballot.

When the polls are closed the total vote of all candidates is automatically stamped on paper ribbon, of which as many copies may be obtained as is desirable and the absolutely correct totals are thus in the possession of the officials within one minute of the closing.

MANY RELICS DESTROYED

Fire Levels the Second Oldest Church In Springfield

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 10.—A spectacular fire destroyed last night the Olivet Congregational church, the second oldest house of worship in the city, at a loss estimated at $30,000. Many valuable relics were also destroyed.

The blaze started from a defective flue near the furnace and quickly spread beyond the control of the firemen. Located on Armory hill, on State street, the blaze was visible from all parts of the city, and for two hours made a thrilling spectacle. None of the contents could be saved.

The church was built in 1834, principally for the benefit of the men working in the armory nearby.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor Ledger:—

I noticed a letter in your issue of Thursday signed Eric H. Ewertz wanting some information as to why I voted to let the contracts for supplying the school houses with coal to an out of town firm in preference to local firms.

The answer is purely an economic one. The school Committee advertised for bids for the coal supply for six months. The bids of three firms came in. The out of town firm was $270.45 less in one case and $154.60 in another, and as our advertisement placed no restrictions on locality I felt they should be given a square deal, and I rave never seen any cause to change my mind. The statement went forth that we would not get full weight. I put that up to the out of town firm, and they said "we could put on our own weigher," which was done. Then the statement went forth that the quality must be poor, until finally the committee had it tested, which showed that the heat units were high, fully as high as the Boston tests for their schools.

Now Mr. Ewertz, do you think that I as a public official should vote the tax-payers' money to pay bonuses to any person, simply because they do business on one side of an imaginary line. I do not take off my hat to any one in my interest for the welfare of the City, but this issue is too narrow minded to consider seriously.

Our local merchants should be able to furnish the same goods as cheaply as any one, and if they can't it should not be made an election issue, but it has been, and I do not fear the results.

Mr. Ewertz, you probably noticed in the Ledger several days ago, an item, which said, "A certain local dealer had taken out papers and was circulating them for my opponent," and I have good information that he was only the third choice, as two others approached had absolutely refused to run under those conditions.

Further, let us see if our local coal merchants are entitled to so much sympathy from the School Committee, or the public. Let me take you back to the coal strike and famine, when the coal contract for schools was let to a local firm. Prices went up step by step, until the coal contract was repudiated, and the chairman of the School Committee had to go to Pennsylvania and contract for a barge load of coal, and when it arrived at Quincy, it was delivered at the school houses with city teams. This action on the part of the School Committee was all that saved the schools from being shut up.

Further, Mr. Ewertz, I do not believe in this little Quincy idea. Do our local people buy all the monuments that are made in Quincy? Do they buy all the battleships? Did we not all rejoice when the Argentine Republic ordered two battleships of our Fore River Co? Do our people buy all the products of the Tubular Rivet & Stud Co., the Boston Gear Works, the Wollaston Foundry, or any other factory, yet do not these industries contribute to the prosperity of every merchant in Quincy. If other localities were to carry out the same principal, where would our manufacturers be?

No, Mr. Ewertz, I am not ashamed of my action on the coal question.

Trusting that I have answered you so you and your friends can support me for Mayor.

I am Respectfully youfs,
JOHN L. MILLER,
Candidate for Mayor.

Editor Ledger:

I was much impressed by the evident sincerity of the voter seeking information about our candidates for Mayor in your Thursday issue. Although feeling that a small matter of this kind could have little place in a contest between men so well known as the two candidates, yet I was convinced that the information sought by Mr. Ewertz should be made public for his benefit, and perhaps for others who might be sharing his dilemma.

There is nothing equal to getting facts at first hands, so I went to Mr. Miller for his side of the story. He was already posted on the stories being circulated to his detriment, and was willing to put his side of the controversy before the people, trusting the people for a just decision.

Briefly he stated: That the School Committee advertised for bids for school needs. That a certain firm bid $270.45 less than all other bidders one year, and $154.60 another year, this firm being located outside the city's boundaries.

Onthe question of awarding the contracts his vote was in favor of the lowest bidder, regardless of location. That the city's interests might be guarded on the question of quantity, the coal was weighed by the city's own employe; and to make sure of quality, the committee has had the coal tested, with satisfactory results.

Mr. Miller feels that any criticism of his action in this affair must arise from personal animus of parties interested in the matter, for he contends that no open-minded tax-payer believes that the money of the city should be expended on a sentimental rather than on a business basis.

Mr. Miller further stated that he had been a member of the School Committee for seven years, and chairman two years; that the Committee has the expending annually of $150,000, and not once during his term of office has the appropriation been exceeded.

So much for Mr. Miller's story. Now to help the voter looking for information. The story sifted down to its final analysis is that this candidate for mayor, while serving the city in another capacity, showed conscientious scruples about being overgenerous with the city's money, and incurred the displeasure of certain parties by his independent and honest action. Here is the information you sought, Mr. Voter. Do you think a man who can and will deal honestly with the people's money is a good man for our mayor's office?

"You were drunk yesterday; isn't that true?" asked the captain.

"Yes, it's true," replied the mate.

"Well, as long as it's true it stands in the log," said the captain.

A few days later the captain was scanning the log and he came across the following:

"The captain sober today."

"What do you mean by inserting in the log that I am sober today?" he asked of the mate.

"It's true, isn't it?" the mate inquired.

"Of course it's true. I was never known to be drunk in all my life," said the captain.

"EVERYWOMAN."

Coming direct from its long and phenomenal run of triumphant success in New York, Henry W. Savage's production of "Everywoman" will hold the boards of the Majestic Theatre on Monday night. There are three good reasons for the tremendous success scored by this altogether remarkable play.

First because of its stimulating novelty and its deeply impressive story. Second, because it is superbly acted by a company that was chosen by the nicest discrimination regarding individual fitness. Third, because it exemplifies the finest modern achievements in stagecraft as regards scenic environment and perfect costuming. The richest resources of money and brains have been lavished upon this modernization of the ancient morality play of the fifteenth century.

"Everywoman" tells an interesting and significant story by expressive and incessive action; it affects the feelings by situations that are vital with dramatic power, and it cheers the mind with its satiric humor and its crisp, pungent philosophy of life. The theme of the play is the ultimate triumph of love over materialism. The author, the late lamented Walter Browne, did not seek to obtrude his moral, did not play the pedant with it, did not lecture or preach upon it, and above all he did not bore his audience with it, but the lesson is there just the same, and everybody who sees the play of "Everywoman" carries away the eternal truth that when love, polluted by contract with vicious influences triumphantly resists them, then love is her own salvation. It must not be inferred, therefore, that the play is a moral lesson in disguise. It is, on the contrary, one of the most fascinating entertainments ever staged. It is full of the joy of living, if not of absolute Rabelaisism.

The dignity and splendor of the production of "Everywoman" have rarely been duplicated, it will be seen here at the Majestic just as New York has been privileged to enjoy this remarkable work.

END OF THE BRIDGE.

As he promised when it was withdrawn at the height of its success John Craig is to revive "The End of the Bridge" at the Castle Square. It will be remembered that it ran for no less than nine weeks, and that it was even more popular at the close than at the beginning of its triumphal career. It succeeded because of its merits and because of the merits of its acting, and there are still many within a fifty mile radius of Boston who were then disappointed in their efforts to obtain seats, and who will now be glad to learn that the opportunity has come again. Therefore on Monday "The End of the Bridge," Florence Lincoln's play which was awarded $500 in Mr. Craig's first annual Harvard competition, will be given again at the Castle Square and prosperity may again be prophesied for it. It will be staged exactly as before, and as before the cast will include Mr. Craig as Dr. Garret. Mary Young as the wife, George Hassell as Felix Marriett, Henrietta McDannel as Peter, and Walter Walker, Albert Hickey and Mabel Colcord in the other roles. The public will again come to see "The End of the Bridge" not merely because it is the work of a college student, but because it is one of the very best and most interesting plays ever seen on the Boston stage.

POMANDER WALK.

"If you would dwell in the Land of Happiness," says the Sage, "go and see 'Pomander Walk.'" Great crowds of playgoers have been heeding his advice this week, and the Plymouth Theatre on Eliot street near Tremont, Boston, is being packed at all performances. For the two hours and a half of this delightful comedy, there is nothing to cause a frown, a blush or a boresome moment; as the Boston Transcript truly says, "'Pomander Walk' is all charm." It takes you completely out of yourself and into the fairyland of romance and charm, the same being a queer little London byway or Walk ruled by a crotchety old Admiral and containing some of the oddest, most eccentric humans that ever donned shoe leather. There are four love stories going on in the tiny Walk, and in the love affairs of Marjorlaine and Jack, of Barbara and Basil, of Lucy Prior and Lord Otford, of Mrs. Poskett and Sir Peter you get as deeply absorbed as if you were their very next door neighbor. At the end, when the curtain rings down, it doesn't seem like an ordinary play at all, but as a kind of joyous holiday far, far off from the realm of your business and your cares. And probably not until you get home will you take the trouble to appraise and analyze the really fine work of the all-English cast which caused you to lose yourself in "Pomander Walk."

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Ruth St. Denis, the world's greatest exponent of the terpsichorean art of the Hindus, comes to B. F. Keith's Theatre next week in a magnificent production of "The Mystic Dance of The Five Senses." This is the most popular of the cycle of East Indian dances created by Miss St. Denis, in which she became the rage of London, Paris Berlin, and New York. India and the Hindus have always possessed a strange fascination for Occidentals, but it remained for Miss St. Denis to draw aside the veil of mystery that has hitherto shrouded the religion and customs of this strange country and bring the dreamy breezes and atmosphere of the Orient to the doors of everyday America. The East Indian dances as interpreted by Miss St. Denis do not represent the physical abandon so characteristic of the so-called "Oriental dances" common to the variety stage, but depend considerably upon pantomime. Miss St. Denis served a long apprenticeship as a dancing girl under the management of David Belasco, and during this period she gained an intimate knowledge of light effects and stage management that has made her East Indian dances a delight to the eye, while the music, arranged by Walter Merwrowitz, and the burning of incense in the temple scene, take still other senses into captivity. At B. F. Keith's Theatre Miss St. Denis will be supported by a company of twenty-five Cingalese, while the scenic equipment showing the innermost sanctuary of a Hindu temple, requires two big baggage cars for its transportation.

CORONATION PICTURES.

It is the same old story that must be told of the Coronation pictures at Tremont Temple. They remain because the public demands it, and they will continue during the coming week to interest two audiences every afternoon and evening. The new scenes displayed, and reproduced in the actual colors of life, have met with immediate success, and it is extremely doubtful which may be said to attract the most attention and arouse the greatest applause. The crowning of the Prince of Wales, the Richmond Horse Show, are all appreciated fully as much as the views presenting the ceremonies and processions in London pertaining to the Coronation itself. Mr. Farnsworth's lecture is still a feature of the entertainment.

SUNDAY NIGHT CONCERTS.

Another concert will be given at the Castle Square on Sunday evening, and it promises to be no less popular than its predecessors. It is the effort and intention of the management to provide an entertainment of the highest and most refined class, such as any person desiring an evening's recreation can take pleasure in. To this end the very best artists are secured and the motion pictures are of the very latest and best selection. The box office opens at six o'clock, and the overture begins at eight, the program continuing for two and a half hours. Seats are also on sale at the Castle Square box office through the week.

BIJOU THEATRE.

Noting with regret that the children of today seldom have the opportunity of hearing old songs of many lands, which have been replaced by popular modern rag-time and illustrated songs, the Bijou is presenting a series of folk songs and dances with appropriate settings and costume. These numbers were produced under the direction of Josephine Clement, using talent regularly employed by the Bijou and were given trial performances during the summer. Special attention is called to the value of these numbers for school children. Saturday mornings the balcony of the theatre will be reserved for the exclusive use of children and those accompanying them. A matron will be in charge to care for those unattended.

—The rumored resignation of Postmaster-General Hitchcock calls attention to the modish procedure of getting a reputation in Washington and then capitalizing on it in private life. The prominent official who makes good in the government service usually has no trouble in obtaining a comfortable berth in private life, as in the case of Mr. Cortelyou, to mention one of many striking cases. The announcement in regard to Mr. Hitchcock coming at the same time as the news that, for the first time since 1883, the postoffice department shows a profit, it may fairly be assumed that, irrespective of the methods which he has used, Mr. Hitchcock has made good, even if the profit is a paper balance only.—Boston Herald.

THE MARINE BAND

History of Uncle Sam's Famous Musical Organization.

STARTED BY A KIDNAPING.

Tradition Says That the Original Band Was Spirited Away From Sunny Sicily by Captain McNeil of the American Frigate Boston.

One of the best known and most popular musical organizations in this country is the United States Marine band. It is always selected to furnish the music at important government functions, such as inaugural balls and receptions at the White House, and is always assigned the post of honor in notable parades. Indeed, it is the ablest and most famous military band in the country.

There is an interesting tradition that the original Marine band was kidnaped from the sunny slopes of Sicily. The story goes that one Captain McNeil of the American frigate Boston, was cruising in the Mediterranean, when his soul yearned for the sound of real music, an art that had been little developed in this young republic. When ashore he heard a regimental band play so tunefully that the bluff old seadog became inspired. The inspiration was promptly put into execution. In his suavest manner he invited the Sicilians aboard his ship to play for "a ball." The invitation was accepted with alacrity, induced no doubt by the prospect of American gold.

A few nights afterward the entire organization was on board the frigate with its instruments when the captain suddenly found it expedient to return to the United States. So it was up anchor and away before the astonished Sicilians could protest. There is no authentic record of what became of this band of Italian musicians, as many of the marine corps archives were destroyed in 1814.

The official records do show, however, that shortly after the marine corps was organized, probably in 1801, Lieutenant Colonel Archibald Henderson brought from Naples a group of thirteen Italian musicians, which was the inception of the organization as an instrumental band.

An act to establish a marine corps was approved by President John Adams on July 11, 1798. This law provided for a drum and fife corps consisting of sixteen drummers and sixteen fifers, one of whom should act as fife major. This constituted the Marine band until the arrival of the Neapolitans, about three years later.

For several years the band had no special leader. First one member and then another acted as fife major. This practice continued until Aug. 14, 1815 when J. L. Childs, of the sloop Lexington, was regularly appointed and served until 1824. He was succeeded by Eutine Feluset, who served until Oct. 29, 1830, when Fran is Scheetz was appointed, serving until Sept. 22, 1843. Scheetz was relieved by Francis Scala, who served until 1848 and again from 1854 until Dec. 13, 1871.

It was under Scala's leadership that the band first became famous. He inaugurated the open air concerts at the White House and the capitol grounds, for which congress allowed extra compensation in 1856. These concerts grew in such favor that steps were undertaken to improve the organization, which was still officially known as a fife and drum corps. Legislation was obtained to reorganize it as a band, with a principal musician and thirty members. On July 25, 1861, President Lincoln affixed his signature to a law that recognized the first band as part of the military service of the United States.

Scala retired in 1871 after having served in the band nearly thirty years, twenty-two of which he was its leader. He was succeeded by Henry Fries, who served until Aug. 22, 1873. Louis Schneider was appointed Sept. 2, 1873, serving until Oct. 20, 1880. On Oct. 20, 1880, John Philip Sousa was chosen leader. Sousa had formerly been a member of the band, as had his father. The elder Sousa enlisted in 1861 under the name of Suacca, but upon re-enlistment he gave the name of Sousa, which he continued to use thereafter.

Sousa left the service July 30, 1892, to organize a band of his own, and Francesco Fanciulli was appointed. He served until Oct. 3, 1897. When his term expired he was not reappointed, and the band was without a leader until the following March, when William H. Santelmann was appointed.

In 1898 the band was again reorganized. In order to bring it up to the standing to which it was entitled as the leading military band of this country a law was passed, which President McKinley signed March 3, 1898, increasing the band to seventy-three members, consisting of a leader with the pay and allowance of a first lieutenant of the marine corps, a second leader at $75 a month and allowances, thirty first class musicians at $60, thirty second class musicians at $50, ten privates and a drum major. The members are enlisted for four years.—John B. Cox in Washington Star.

The Solar Plexus.

The Scriptural expression "bowels of compassion" is justified by the discoveries of modern science. Whenever anything affects our nerves we feel it more or less in our "innards." It is the solar plexus which is concerned in such emotionalism. Of course in itself it cannot feel, but it sends messages to the brain, which interprets them as coming from there. The solar plexus is a mass of nerves and nerve structures in the abdomen at the back of the stomach.—New York Tribune.

Q.—Astronomers have discovered in the course of their investigations, by means of photography and modern high-power telescopes, that there are more than 125,000,000 suns in the heavens and these for the most part are larger than our own sun around which the earth and planets revolve. It is said that the nearest one of these suns, the nearest fixed star, is so far distant that light traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles a second would require something over three years to traverse the distance to this earth. Comparatively speaking, then, this planet upon which we reside, is but a small grain of sand in one far off corner of the Universe. Are we to understand, then, in view of all this immensity of the heavens with all of the wonders of creation (and we know not how much more lies beyond our magnified powers of vision), that St. Peter's words (II Peter iii, 10) are to be taken in a literal sense and that the heavens and the earth are to be actually burned up because of the wrong doing on the part of some of the insignificant inhabitants of this diminutive speck of dust.

Answer.—A casual inspection of the Apostle's statements in this third chapter should quickly convince any one that highly figurative language was used by the inspired writer. Three worlds and three heavens are mentioned, the "worlds" representing the social orders or arrangements of three epochs of time—the "heavens" representing the spiritual ruling powers of those three dispensations. The "fire" is symbolic, representing the destructive season of unrest and trouble that will sweep aside the present evil world or order of things. See the following Scriptures as showing that the fire is not literal, and that the earth is not to be destroyed. (Zephaniah iii, 8, 9; Ecclesiastes i, 4.)

Judge Pulled Judge's Nose

Kansas City, Nov. 10.—For pulling the nose of Judge Dodd, a jury in the circuit court decided last night that Judge Moss must pay $250. Dodd asked $15,000, but the jury believed $10 actual and $240 punitive damages enough.

A Fine Savage Custom.

The untutored mind of the Indian or savage often appears strange to us, but there is sometimes reason in what at first sight seems eccentric. A South African tribe has an effectual method of dealing with bores, which might be adopted by western people. This simple tribe considers long speeches injurious both to the orator and his hearers, so to protect both there is an unwritten law that every public orator must stand on one leg only when he is addressing an audience. As soon as he has to place the other leg on the ground his oration is brought to a close.—London Globe.

Georgetown, Col., Nov. 10.—After men had been prospecting there for years, it remained for a woman, Mrs. William Aldred, to discover what is supposed to be the richest mine opened in the history of mining in Clear Creek county.

In extending a tunnel, Mrs. Aldred has uncovered a body of mineralized quartz seamed with streaks of almost pure gold at a distance of 175 feet from the portal and assays show values of $15,000 a ton in gold. As the tunnel is extended the ore becomes more solid and indications are that a fabulously rich discovery has been made.

WHITE'S BIG CORN CROP

Connecticut Man Gets Grand Prize For Yield of 112 Bushels an Acre

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 10.—It was announced at the Massachusetts corn show that the judges had awarded the Bowker grand prize of $500 to Lester S. White of Collinsville, Conn., for 160.4 bushels (harvest measure), which was found by analysis to equal 112.63 bushels of shelled corn per acre.

Last year the prize in this contest was awarded for a yield of 103.23 bushels of crib-dry shelled corn—a gain this year of 9½ bushels per acre—a remarkable showing considering the season.

White's corn (yellow flint) was grown on moist meadow land and did not suffer from drought, nor was it affected by the early frosts.

Judge In McNamara Trial Warns the Veniremen to Silence

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 10.—Possible efforts, intentional or otherwise, to discuss the McNamara murder case with prospective veniremen met with cognizance by Judge Bordwell from the bench.

Speaking to the three jurors and three accepted talesmen in the trial of James B. McNamara, the judge admonished them not to talk about the case among themselves or to mention it in any way.

Clark McLain, a Passadena banker, joined Brewster C. Kenyon, a reputed capitalist, yesterday as a talesman accepted by both sides as to cause. J. B. Sexton, a retired farmer, made the third. Jurors Bain, Green and Lisk, already sworn, appeared in court only at the beginning of each session. They were allowed to remain the rest of the time in the jury room, where they played cards and read magazines.

OHIO IS DECLARED "RIPE FOR PICKING"

Progressives Trying to Prevent Solid Taft Delegation

Cleveland, Nov. 10.—"Ohio is ripe for the picking," was in substance the contents of telegrams which have been sent from here by local Republican progressive leaders to the leaders of the national Republican progressive organization analyzing the results of the Ohio election.

The exchange of telegrams between Cleveland and Washington gave further life to the plans of the national Republican progressive organization to concentrate its strength in Ohio in an effort to prevent a solid Taft delegation to the national convention from Ohio.

The fight will be carried straight to the present Republican state organization, nominally in control of Taft's friends, in an effort to compel the organization to declare for a voting test of the sentiment of Ohio Republicans on the presidential condition.

HOWARD PYLE DEAD

American Was Well Known as Writer as Well as Artist

Florence, Nov. 10.—Howard Pyle, the American artist and author, died here of heart failure. His home was at Wilmington, Del., where he was born in 1853.

"I should say," Pyle said one day, "that there is no such vice or human quality as an artistic temperament. It is a phrase and nothing more, which is employed to cover a good many delinquencies.

"A successful artist," said Pyle again, in talking to an interviewer, "is just like any other successful man—conservative, provident and normal. He does his work and takes care of himself and his credit."

REDUCED CROPS IN 1911

Farmers Have Been Compensated, However, by the Higher Prices

Washington, Nov. 10.—The decreased production in crops this year as compared with last year is being compensated to the farmers by the larger prices they are receiving, as shown by figures given out by the department of agriculture.

The aggregate production of crops in 1911, it is estimated, is approximately 7.9 percent less than those in 1910, and about .4 of 1 percent less than the average production for the succeeding five years.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Discoveries made by detectives investigating the death of John M. Quinn lead them to believe that they have encountered a murder mystery similar in its essential aspects to the Vermilya case, except that a pistol instead of poison is alleged to have been used in taking human life.

When the police arrived, Quinn told them and Dr. Bonfield, who also was summoned, that he had been shot as he lay asleep, but did not know by whom. Mrs. Quinn declared her husband had been shot by a burglar, according to the detectives. She was finally taken into custody and held as a suspect.

Examination of Mrs. Quinn led to her being asked to reveal her past life. She did this, but, according to the police, told of her first marriage to a man named McDonald and neglected to tell them of her second marriage to Warren Thorp in Jackson, Mich.

This fact led the detectives to Jackson, where they learned that Thorpe, too, had been shot and killed while asleep in bed. They learned also that her mother, who lived with him, had died under circumstances that have not been explained.

In the Thorpe death the police declare they have learned that Mrs. Thorpe, now Mrs. Quinn, insisted that her husband had been shot to death by burglars.

Mrs. Thorpe was arrested at the time but the police were never able to clear up the mystery, and she finally was freed. A son of Thorpe was found in Jackson by the detectives. He accompanied the detectives to Chicago and when the inquest is begun over Quinn's body he will confront the suspected woman.

A revolver of an old pattern was found in the house, according to the police. It was identified by J. W. Miller, a boarder in the Quinn house, as one he had owned for several years and which disappeared from a drawer in his room the day before Quinn was shot.

Mrs. John M. Quinn formerly conducted a boarding house in Kalamazoo, Mich., while her husband was employed by the street railway company. Before coming here in 1903, she resided in Blackman, Mich., having married Warren Thorp, who later was found dead at Jackson with a bullet hole through his head.

Information obtained here is to the effect that the woman found dead in the home of the Thorpes at Jackson was Mrs. Quinn's mother, Mrs. James Taylor. It is said that Mrs. Taylor's death was never fully explained.

Before her marriage to Thorpe, Mrs. Quinn is said to have been married to John McDonald, who is also said to have been found dead in bed in 1901, under suspicious circumstances.

TO SAVE THEIR HERDS

Cattlemen Will Use an Aeroplane In Hunting Beasts of Prey

Galveston, Nov. 10.—Ten ranchmen, owning 150,000 acres in Pecos, Brewster and El Paso counties, stocked with 200,000 cattle, have invested in an aeroplane, not for pleasure, but to rid their lands of the wolves, panthers and mountain lions which kill cattle.

They estimate that it cost them $100 a month for men to hunt the wolves, not to mention the thousands of dollars worth of cattle killed.

The new aeroplane will carry two men and it is planned to penetrate the wild country and dispatch beasts of prey with guns from a safe distance in the air.

GARBAGE IS TIED UP

Twenty-Five Hundred New York City Employes on Strike

New York, Nov. 10.—With the health of 5,000,000 people in Greater New York menaced as the result of a strike called Wednesday night, which caused 2500 employes of the street department to stop work, many forces united in an effort to induce the men to return to their tasks.

The men struck as a protest against night work, and as a result the removal of garbage was made impossible.

NEW BANKING REFORM

Banks Must Not Withhold Items Sent to Them For Collection

Washington, Nov. 10.—State bank commissioners will be requested to co-operate with the treasury department in its effort to break up the habit of certain banks of withholding items sent to them for collection.

The national banks already have been instructed concerning this matter and national bank examiners ordered to report to Washington any bank which retains for an unreasonable time money which it has collected for another bank.

Comptroller of the Currency Murray is sending a copy of this circular to superintendents of banks in the different states requesting that they follow the federal example with regard to state banking and trust companies. He believes that the state supervisors will take equal interest with him in rooting out this minor but irritating evil.

ASKS COURT TO SET ASIDE CONVICTION

Lawyer Claims That Grand Jury Never Indicted Him

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 10.—Motions and an affidavit were filed in court here yesterday, charging that the grand jury of Middlesex county never voted or legally returned the indictment on which Jackson Palmer, a Boston and Lowell lawyer, was tried and convicted for perjury.

Already, Palmer claims, some members of the grand jury have communicated to the justices of the courts the facts upon which the charges in the motions and appending affidavit are based. The action for Palmer, in which the court is asked to set aside his conviction, was taken upon the instigation of Attorney Whipple, who will appear for the petitioner.

The indictment against Palmer was returned in the September session. Palmer was arrested, tried and convicted. It was charged he gave perjured testimony in connection with the grand jury investigation of the official conduct of Middlesex county officers. He had been called as a government witness.

ROOSTER COAL-BRIQUETTES — NO SLATE — NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

DRAGON FLAG HAULED DOWN

Reformers Take Canton, the Greatest City In China

IS DONE WITHOUT BLOODSHED

Amoy and Foochow Also Go Over to Revolutionists—Imperial Government Disappears From Shanghai—Indiscriminate Slaying, Burning and Looting by Manchu Troops at Hankow—New China Has Arisen

Shanghai, Nov. 10.—Canton, the largest city of China, has gone over to the revolutionists. The dragon flag was lowered from the government building, probably never again to be raised.

The provincial assembly of Chihli province, in which Pekin is situated, has declared for the reformers and demanded the resignation of the viceroy. Amoy, one of the most important cities of the land, and Foochow, capital of Fukien, yesterday accepted the new order of things. Tien Tsin is about to fall, probably without fighting.

Nanking in the south and Pekin in the north appear to be the remaining strongholds of the Manchus. Up to the present foreigners are safe.

The Manchus still hold Nanking, but they are outnumbered four to one by the revolutionists, who are awaiting supplies of ammunition before resuming the attack. The latter lost heavily Wednesday, without greatly damaging the enemy, and yesterday suspended operations. The Americans have landed marines to protect the consulates where the foreigners have gathered.

In Shanghai the situation has become increasingly serious. The imperial government has absolutely disappeared, and the foreign consuls are unable to recognize the self-constituted government, which, however, is maintaining order, except across the river, where the British warehouses are situated. These were looted yesterday. The local police fled upon the approach of the rioters. The consular body considered the question of landing marines, but decided that this step would be unwise at present.

The revolutionists hold the telegraph offices on the lower Yangtse and are now taking the incoming funds, but a difficulty will arise when they come to settle with the cable companies and to pay the interest and instalments on the foreign mortgages.

The government at Pekin is now reported to be without funds. This is regarded as a menace.

The one black spot in the situation is Hankow, where all kinds of atrocities have taken place—indiscriminate slaying of men, women and children, and looting and burning by the Manchu troops. Hankow is likely to prove the political undoing of the shifty Yuan Shi-Kai. As near as can be figured it was his putting of a price on "rebel guns" that put the Manchu troops out of hand and started the worst phase of that affair, where hundreds of lives have been sacrificed and perhaps $50,000,000 worth of damage done. Certain it is that his evident effort to retain the Manchu dynasty placed him under the suspicion of the revolutionists.

There is little doubt, however, that a new China has arisen and that its advent is of more consequence to Asia than several Japanese-Russian wars. It has been easy for Japan, Russia, Germany and others to wring concessions from a small, corrupt Manchu ring, but dealing with 450,000,000 people will be quite another thing.

Doubtless Japan and Russia are following the march of events in China with breathless interest in spite of the statement from St. Petersburg that the revolt was of "slight importance."

LINCOLN CABIN IS ENSHRINED

Dedication of Imposing Memorial in Kentucky

FARM A NATIONAL PRESERVE

Granite Building Provided and Endowed by American People Accepted by President Taft on Behalf of Nation—Lauds Memory of Martyred President, Who Rose From Humblest Soil to Greatest Genius

Hodgenville, Ky., Nov. 10.—Enshrining the log cabin in which Abraham Lincoln first saw light, an imposing granite memorial to the war president was dedicated here and accepted for the nation by President Taft. The exercises were, in a measure, a continuation of those begun Wednesday at Frankfort, when a statue of Lincoln was unveiled in the state capitol.

The ceremony yesterday afternoon, however, marked the consummation of a nation-wide movement to convert the Lincoln birthplace into a national preserve.

The great granite building, completed, provided out of contributions by loyal Americans and endowed by them, occupies the site of the cabin in which Lincoln was born near the centre of the Lincoln farm, the shrine today of the whole country. Cut into one wall of the memorial hall are these words: "Here, over the log cabin where Abraham Lincoln was born, destined to preserve the union and free the slave, a grateful people have dedicated this memorial to humanity, peace and brotherhood among these states."

Within is the rude cabin of logs, the same that the newly wedded Lincoln and Nancy Hanks built when they took possession of the farm that has become a national park.

"There is nothing so fascinating, on the one hand, and nothing so difficult on the other, as the tracing by heredity of the development of genius and real greatness," said President Taft, beginning his address. "The explanation of Lincoln and his wonderful character from his origin and environment is almost as difficult as the explanation of Shakespeare; but the passion of the world grows for more intimate knowledge of his personality and a deeper inquiry into the circumstances of his wonderful life."

The president noted the appropriateness of the memorial on the Lincoln farm, and went on, saying: "Few men have come into public prominence who came absolutely from the soil as did Abraham Lincoln. It is difficult to imagine the lack of comfort, accommodation and the necessities of life that there were in the cabin in which he was born. With an illiterate and shiftless father and a mother who, though of education and force, died before he reached youth, his future was dark indeed. In the stepmother that his father found for him, however, he had a woman of strength of character and of education enough to assist him."

Lincoln's lack of advantages for study and the persistency with which he kept up his reading, were touched upon and the president continued, saying, in part: "The almost squalor in which he passed his early life made him familiar with the sufferings, thoughts and sympathies of the plain people, and when he came to great power, his understanding of their reasoning and of their views gave him an advantage in interpreting their attitude which cannot be overstated.

"He was not slow, but he was cautious, deliberate, attentive, as befitted one who insisted on establishing every proposition that he adhered to by original reasoning from fundamental postulates. The lucidity and clearness of his thought manifested itself in the simplicity, directness and clearness of his style.

"He was a lawyer and a good one. His mind was luminous with truth. His conscience was governed by devotion to right, and the tenderness of his heart was only restrained by his intellect and his conscience. The diary of his cabinet officers shows how under his very nose, and generally with his clear perceptions of it, political combinations were formed, only to be dissolved and fall harmless through the patient tact of this master of men, this greatest of diplomatists. When he came to the presidency he had little political experience and no training in administrative matters.

"No man in public life was ever so much abused as Lincoln. The contrast between his position in history today and the description of him by his friendly critics during the Civil war can hardly be credited.

"The great reason for the present memorial is the constant reminder it furnishes of the unexplained and unexplainable growth and development, from the humblest and homeliest soil, of Lincoln's genius, intellect, heart and character, that have commanded the gratitude of his countrymen for the good he worked with them and awakened the love and devoted admiration of the world."

Asquith Says England Has No Cause to Quarrel With Any Nation

London, Nov. 10.—A new lord mayor of London, Sir Thomas B. Crosby, M. D., was inducted into office, and at the lord mayor's banquet last night Premier Asquith made his fourth successive speech in honor of such occasion.

"There is no secret about either the aims or the methods of British policy," said the premier.

"Where British interests are involved it is our business to safeguard them. Where treaty obligations come in it is our duty to fulfill them. Where we have established friendships and understandings we seek to maintain them loyally and intact.

"But our friendships are neither exclusive nor jealous. We have no cause to quarrel with any nation. Nor, with such a history and such an empire as our own, have we any disposition to curtail or fetter the natural and legitimate aspirations of others."

BRIDE STABBED TO DEATH

Four Italians Suspected of Having Committed the Crime

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 10.—A posse of sheriffs, farmers and laborers on the New York aqueduct rounded up, last evening, four Italians for the murder of Mrs. Henry Hall, the bride of a few months of a superintendent of the aqueduct near Yorktown.

Mrs. Hall was attacked and robbed of $70 by several men who entered her little cottage near Yorktown, while her husband was at work on the aqueduct a mile and a half away. She was stabbed twice, one wound being near the heart.

The four suspects were hurriedly brought to the jail here in the sheriff's automobile, there being fears of mob violence against them.

WOMAN KILLED

ing. The outgoing train prevented her from seeing the southbound train which was pulling into the station from Boston. As Mrs. Eldridge stepped upon the further track she was struck by the locomotive and dragged fully 50 feet.

The body was carried into the waiting room of the station, where it was found that her skull had been crushed. Medical Examiner Dr. John Peterson of Hingham, who examined the body, declared that death had been instantaneous.

Much indignation is felt against the railroad for not properly protecting so important a crossing. A number of bad accidents have been narrowly averted at this point during the past summer, and frequent protests have been made.

Mrs. Eldridge, who was Miss Lizzie Wade, was a native of Scituate and very well known. Her father was the late Nathaniel Wade of Scituate Center.

She was about 45 years of age and lived at 45 Harrison avenue, North Braintree, and the wife of a piano case maker employed in Boston. She has one daughter Miss Eva Eldridge.

NEW LOCATION FOR BUILDING

Considered At Parents' And Teachers' Association Meeting At Adams School

ALL FAVOR MADISON AVE.

Fully 250 were in attendance at the meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Adams school, held in the school hall Thursday evening. The principal topic of the evening, and the one which proved to demand the attention of all present was the desired site for the new location of the school building. At previous meetings some opposition had been experssed and a few were in favor of Water street, although the majority held tenaciously to the Madison avenue site.

On this occasion the entire sentiment seemed to swing in favor of the Madison avenue location and when a rising vote was finally taken, there was not one dissenting vote to be recorded against it. President Alfred O. Diack was in the chair and a list of speakers proved to the many present that the Madison avenue location was, without a doubt, not only the most suitable, but the most ideal spot that could have been selected, no matter what phase of the situation is taken into consideration.

The great surprise of the evening took place when Councilman Robert J. Craig announced that he had been delegated by Mayoralty candidate John L. Miller, to inform those present that he latter had retracted his opposition to the Madison avenue location and was willing to abide by the will of the majority in asking that the new Adams school be built on the Madison avenue location, selected by the Building committee and the teachers and parents at large.

The school site committee had reported in favor of the Madison avenue site and the report was received with great pleasure. Mr. Diack also formally announced that Mr. Miller had withdrawn his advocacy of the Water street lot and was willing to have the school built on Madison avenue.

School Committeeman Arthur W. Newcomb spoke at length upon the desirability of the Madison avenue location and gave the many reasons why it would be of greater advantage to have a school located there instead of on Water street. He considered the many phases dealing with the proposed location and gave numerous instances where the benefits to be derived would far eclipse those that would accrue in the event of a schoolhouse being erected on such a site as the one proposed on Water street. Dr. Edward H. Bushnell, also a member of the school committee went on record in favor of Madison avenue location and gave as his principal reason for so doing that he believed that the members of the school board should favor the site desired by the parents and that their will should be final, in that it was mainly for their convenience that the new school house was to be erected.

Councilman John R. Richards favored the Madison avenue site because he felt it was centrally located, and that the surrounding conditions were such that much added improvement was warranted and much development would be forthcoming at an early date. He said the immediate section where the schoolhouse is desired was building most rapidly and he therefore thought that such a consideration should make the Madison avenue site a most advantageous one from every consideration.

Councilman George A. Bolster asserted that at first he had been inclined to favor the Water street lot, but that he had later seen the difference of the two locations and had become convinced that the Madison avenue site was much better for the erction of a schoolhouse.

Councilman Robert Craig, as mentioned above, represented John L. Miller in the matter and himself went on record in favor of the Madison avenue site. Mr. Craig presnted practically the same arguments as were advanced by other speakers.

Vice President Hobart of the association spoke in favor of the Madison avenue situation and said he hoped that enough land would be procured, at least 100,000 feet in order that a playground could be made for the children, as the Ward Three playground would be too far away from the school.

At the conclusion of the discussion on the matter a unanimous vote was recorded in favor of the Madison avenue location and refreshments brought the affair to a close. Miss Ross of the sixth grade was in charge on the hospitality committee.

A meeting of the schoolhouse site committee will be held next Tuesday and petitions will be put in circulation.

BOWLING AT WEYMOUTH.

The Quincy Quintet journeyed to Weymouth last evening to compete with the Old Colony League champions. They were only able to get one string on the champs and earned every pin they got. The rolling was very high, Weymouth getting 501 in the first to Quincy 432. In the second Quincy came strong and pulled out of defeat by 9 pins 473 and 464. Weymouth won out the third 443 to 408.

Kiley the old timer was up to his old stunts again getting 131-92 and 105 making a total of 328 pins which gave him the honor of getting high single and high total. Smith of Quincy got a total of 280.

A return match will be rolled at Quincy in the near future and some great rolling will be seen as these two teams are old rivals.

K. OF P. JOY RIDE.

The much talked of joy ride of Monatiquot lodge, Braintree came off on schedule. Twenty couples comfortably filled a handsomely decorated electric car. Starting from Braintree depot at 7.05 the car proceeded to Weymouth where it was met by a delegation from Delphi lodge who escorted the riders to their Castle hall and gave them a rousing welcome. Remarks were made by several of the party and twenty minutes was spent in social intercourse. On departing Delphi lodge presented them with a basket lunch and wished them godspeed. The car then proceeded to Rockland by the way of South Weymouth arriving at 9.30. Rockland lodge certainly did itself proud and gave them a welcome long to be remembered. An entertainment had been provided which consisted of a drill by the Pythian Sisters together with vocal and instrumental music.

The drill work of the Pythian Sisters was something new to most of the riders and was greatly enjoyed. Before leaving for home all were invited to partake of a lunch, which had been prepared by Rockland lodge. Three cheers were given for both lodges and cheers for individuals present lingered on the air as the car departed for home. Another lunch was served on the car coming home but everybody ate sparingly as there was a limit even to eating, songs and jokes occupied most of the time.

It was conceded that it was the greatest success Monatiquot lodge ever had and similar excursions are hoped for. That everybody had a good time goes without saying. It was a howling success from start to finish.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL NOTES.

(By Teri Bus.)

They are in the second round of the All American League. The Eagles we mean.

The defeat of the True Blues on Fore River Park helped the Eagles along. Three goals to nothing was a big victory.

The winners played class football, and thoroughly deserved the victory. Every player worked hard to bring the bacon home. They got the first slice.

Good luck to them for the second round. May the tie be played on the home ground. Of course the Eagles can play the game anywhere.

The True Blues were a fine team. They played a fine game, and struggled to the last moment to score. Hendry was their stumbling block.

The first goal was a clever one, but the one "Dannie" McDonald got was a beauty. It put the game on ice.

After the third goal the True Blues showed great combination, but could not reduce the lead. Sharples was in goal.

The team from Paterson were a good lot. They met their defeat, but had a handshake for the Eagle's players, and wished them all success. We do the same.

The referee gave his decisions prompt and accurate. He had a hawk's eye on all misplays.

The McGregors (clan) add points to their Boston District League credit. Fore River should have played them last Saturday. Will the Clan claim the points?

The Boston Americans will have a visit from the McGregors tomorrow. The Clan team will be:—Goal—J. Haldane; backs—R. Wilson and A. Rae; half backs—D. Melville, Thos. Robertson and A. Cummings; forwards—T. Melville, D. McDonald, R. McDonald, A. Simpson and Boyle. They should win.

The Eagles travel to Fall River. The team to play is the same as last Saturday. The game is one of the New England League series. The only thing we are afraid of is over confidence, but they should win.

The Eagles have been improving their club house lately and Mr. Sam Young has been busy installing a a platform so that the members can have the full use of the punching bag that has been set in there. Let them punch it hard and often.

The shipyard officials gave permission to all, who wished to see the game between the True Blue and the Eagles, to stop work at 2.30 last Saturday. That was the reason why so many ironworkers were on the field.

PARISH SUPPER AT FIRST CHURCH

In Charge of Hospitality Committee

SOCIAL HOUR LATER

A goodly number of the parishioners of the First church were present Friday evening, at the parish supper and social which was held in the chapel. The evening's entertainment was in charge of the Hospitality committee, of which Mrs. William B. Nichols is the chairman and proved to be a most enjoyable one. At 6.30, a turkey supper was served in the dining room, which was pronounced by all, most excellent.

Adjourning to the chapel there was a short social hour during which Charles H. Johnson announced the preachers who had been secured to supply the pulpit during the coming month. They included some of the leading Divines in the denomination and he urged the parishioners to take advantage of the opportunity to hear some of the leaders, hoping that they would be greeted by large congregations.

The entertainment program opened with a soprano solo by Miss Wilhelmina Baldwin, who sang Harris' "The hills of Skies," She was followed by Miss Janet Chesney of Boston, a graduate of the Emerson school of oratory who delighted her hearers with a reading entitled "Sandy MacGlashan's courtship" and for an encore gave a short domestic sketch.

Herbert Kearnes gave two short tenor solos "The cares of yesterday" Metcalf and "Bowl of roses," Clark. For an encore he sang "The rose of Allandale."

Miss Chesney then gave another reading "The Patterson twins" and for a double encore gave "But I darsent," and a humorous selection.

The delightful program closed with a contralto solo by Mrs. Bertha Carlson Potter who gave "I hid my love" by D'Hadelet and for an encore "Oh! that we two were maying."

The soloists were accompanied on the piano by William Ellis Weston.

NICOL WINS PRIZE AT FLOWER SHOW

Local Man Awarded Silver Medal For Beautiful Display

DR. KENDALL WINS

Mention was made in Monday's Ledger of the unusually fine display of chrysanthemums, cultivated this year by James Nicol of this city. Mr. Nicol, as usual, exhibited at the annual chrysanthemum show this week at Horticultural hall and it is very gratifying to his friends to learn that he has been awarded a silver medal for a vase of Mrs. Jerome Jones' chrysanthemums.

In addition to the medal, Mr. Nicol was awarded the first and second prizes from the Henry A. Crane Memorial fund, for the best vase of Mrs. Jerome Jones' blooms and 1st prize for a vase of ten blooms, on long stems, pink, named.

Mr. Nicol's display at his greenhouses this year was well worthy of a visit, and while the best of his blooms, were of course taken to the exhibition, he will doubtless have many visitors Sunday to see what he has left. The pink blossom for which he was awarded first prize was an unusually large one on a stem at least six feet tall and were certainly magnificent.

In addition to the prizes for chrysanthemums it is pleasing to note that Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic, was awarded first prize for the best collection of hardy native grapes not less than three varieties of three bunches.

SURPRISED ON EVE OF LEAVING

Daniel T. Falvey of the plant department at the Quincy telephone station, who leaves today for the Isle of Pines where he will be engaged in business in the future, was pleasantly surprised at the telephone building this morning by the heads of the plant, commercial and traffic departments and presented with a large pig skin travelling bag and cut glass toilet set. The gift came as a great surprise to Mr. Falvey, but told of the high regard in which he is held by his fellow employees.

The presentation speech was made by Councilman Edward P. Histen, who briefly told of the great regard which they had for him and wished him all kinds of good luck in the new position he is to accept. Mr. Falvey was some minutes in recovering himself, but when he did, expressed his sincere thanks for the unexpected gift and assured the donors that he would always remember with pleasure the happy hours which he had passed in their company.

MR. BAIRD TENDERED RECEPTION

By 150 Members of Winter Club At Pandora Hall

LEAVES FOR EUROPE

A reception was tendered to Archie F. Baird of Sea avenue, at the Pandora dance hall, Houghs Neck, last evening by some 150 members of the Winter club. Mr. Baird left this morning for an extended business trip through Europe, and will be gone for three months.

The affair begun about 8 o'clock, and continued till midnight. A supper had been prepared by the women members for the occasion and the event itself was pronounced to be one of the best ever observed by the organization.

Neil J. Regan was the toastmaster, of the exercises and speeches were made by Oscar Sandberg, Daniel J. Maloney and Councilman John R. S. Ross.

The musical program was furnished by William Greenwood, who in his original comic way, entertained those present by his almost inimitable wit. Philip Catarus sang a few songs, while Mrs. Phillip Catarius officiated on the piano.

Mrs. Roswell Y. Woodbury also favored the merrymakers with singing and she was forced to reply to many encores. Nearly every one present had something to say, and the event as far as speechmaking was concerned, came to a close when "Archie" himself responded very touchingly to the appreciation and kindness that had been manifested by his many friends.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Mrs. Mae Wood Park says the social status of women is improving, but some of the men will be asking whether the women will stay at home and produce good muffins if the social status becomes so attractive.

The recount will take place and the mockery of the secrecy of the present form of balloting flaunted in the face of an indulgent public. Of course if the result of the contest had showed a sufficiently close vote to warrant it —the affair would have been well and good. But the operation becomes somewhat of a travesty of our method of holding elections. It is safe to say, however, that there are exceedingly few in this intelligent community who cannot see at a glance the import of the whole matter. Another good reason brought home, for the early installation of the voting machine.

THE AUTOMOBILE AND POLITICS

In this year's elections, the use of the automobile by political candidates was more noticeable than ever before, and makes a marked change in campaign methods.

Ten years ago a candidate who when outside the metropolitan districts made three speeches in 24 hours, thought he was doing a good day's work. He would address a country audience in the afternoon, and a couple of rallies in the evening, going from one town to another by train.

Now a candidate is expected to make anywhere from a dozen to 25 speeches daily, and may cover 50 to 100 miles by motor car.

Villages that were never before addressed by a candidate for high office have had the satisfaction of gripping one by the hand, and receiving his complimentary palaver with their own ears.

The five minute speech to the cross roads audience may be exceedingly effective or it may be worse than useless. It takes many candidates about five minutes to get their wordy introductions out of the way, and when the chauffeur reminds them that they are due at the next town as soon as he can get there, they leave without having given their audience and definite impression good or bad.

A candidate who has never had newspaper experience will do better. In five minutes he should be able to say 500 words, as much as the average newspaper editorial. Let him dispense with his decorative introductions, and plunge to the heart of his subject as the editorial writer does

To Retiring Councilman Is Found In Albert N. Murray

SHOWS GREAT PUBLIC SPIRIT

When the announcement was made by Councilman Bryant that he would not be a candidate for reelection, the voters of Ward Five began to look about for a worthy successor. It was of course impossible to find a man of his experience, and the kind of men needed to stand in his place were not offering their services. Citizens realized that a man must be found who would render that same broad minded, public spirited service to which the City had become accustomed during Mr. Bryant's long career.

A young man has been found who will, it is believed, maintain the standard. Everything in his record thus far indicates it, and it was only after much persuasion that Mr. Albert N. Murray consented to become a candidate for Councilman-at-large.

Mr. Murray was born at Rockport, Mass., in 1873. At the age of 14 he found employment in a printing house in Boston and was steadily advanced from journeyman to foreman, starting in business for himself to 1898 with practically no capital. He is now Presidentof the Murray & Emery Company and has one of the largest and finest establishments in the printing business in New England. His Company is known for the quality of its product and for its strict integrity.

A genuine interest in his surroundings and a desire to see things go well, prompt Mr. Murray to connect himself with associations and projects that have for their object municipal betterment. He has an optimistic way of working and planning and sees beyond present conditions to better things ahead. Mr. Murray is active in many directions; is a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and of the Quincy Board of Trade, and has become known in Wollaston, where he has lived for the past six years, for his energy and public spirit. He is well known in Masonic circles; is a Director in the Quincy Y. M. C. A. and Vice President of the Wollaston Parent-Teachers' Association.

Citizens of Quincy will be doing the city a good turn if they elect Mr. Murray to the Council.

PRATT—MARDEN.

A quiet but pretty home wedding was solemnized Friday evening at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Marden in North Hanson, the bride being their daughter Eva L. and the groom Henry F. Pratt, son of Charles F. Pratt of East Bridgewater.

The house was tastefully decorated with cut flowers, plants and foliage. Only the immediate families were present at the ceremony, Rev. Robert Bryant of North Hanson being the officiating clergyman. Miss Edith Olson of Quincy was bridesmaid and the best man was John Blute of Whitman. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

An informal reception followed the ceremony after which the happy couple left on a wedding trip to New York. The bride's going away gown, which was also the one in which she was married, was of dark blue with hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt are to reside at East Bridgewater where they will be at home to their friends after Jan. 1st.

The bride is well known in this city where she has resided for several years, her father W. M. Marden being familiar to many as local correspendent for the Boston Herald but more recently holding the responsible position of Court Officer at the District Court.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WHY HIGH PRICE GAS?

Editor Quincy Ledger:

Referring to the high prices which are continually being saddled upon the people of Quincy I would like to inquire of the genial manager of the Citizens Gas Light Co. how it is that the Old Colony Gas Co. is able to lay several miles of mains in the comparatively sparsely settled towns of Braintree, Weymouths, Abington North Abington, Rockland and Whitman, and also erect a costly plant at Weymouth Landing and offer to sell the gas to the inhabitants of these towns for $1.25 per 1000 feet, 15 cents cheaper than the Citizens Company is charging to its Quincy consumers?

As the president of the Old Colony Gas Co. quoted to me the $1.25 rate I have reason to believe that it is correct.

I have no doubt but what the 3,500 customers, including 2,202 owners of gas stoves, would be pleased to have the manager of the Citizens Gas Co. explain why it is that the Old Colony Gas Co. can open up sparsely settled territory and sell its gas through these country villages, so to speak, for $1.25 whereas our Citizens Co., representing the Boston Consolidated Gas Co., pipes the city of Quincy having a population of 32,000 and then strenuously claims through its astute manager, to be struggling to keep its head above water on $1.40 gas.

Marshall Adams.

Editor, The Ledger:

Favorable comment has been made in these columns concerning the significance of the awakening of the citizens of Ward five to the need of securing men of high calibre as candidates for office. The care with which the question of the proper and adequate representation of the Ward in the City Council has been considered by voters aroused to action by the consciousness that if the best civic government were to be secured the best men should be induced to run for office, is indicated by the fact that the candidates for the council offered by the committee of voters, reside in sections of the Ward widely separated from each other.

A stranger studying a map of ward five would immediately note that physical conditions contributed to a sort of "three in one" combination of territory, embracing the attractive growing residence section east of the railroad, the rapidly expanding business and residential locality of which the Norfolk Downs station is the centre, and the earlier settled portion known as "The Heights." It would appear, therefore, that the only way in which Ward five could have adequate representation would be by sending a man to the council from each of these sections. Accordingly, one of the candidates, Mr. Charles L. Gillatt, is a prominent resident of the eastern, or "Park" section, Mr. Irving L. Shaw, equally well known in his neighborhood, lives at "The Downs," and Councilman Charles W. Bailey, who is named for re-election on the excellence of his record, makes his home at "The Heights." The wisdom of thus aiming at complete representation, as well as at binding together all parts of Ward five, for the best interests of the whole Ward would seem to need no further elucidation.

The necessity of enlisting other men like Mr. A. N. Murray and Mr. James L. Rand as candidates respectively for nomination as councilman-at-large and school committee-member-at-large is but another indication of the civic spirit which is operating in Ward five.

BOYS ENJOY LECTURE.

Over 100 boys thoroughly enjoyed Mr. H. J. Kilbourne's talk which was given this morning in the hall of the Y. M. C. A. The boys listened intently to every point brought out and enjoyed the address from start to finish. Of added interest were the illustrated songs, "Throw Out the Life-line" and "Onward Christian Soldiers" which received the hearty appreciation of all present.

CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR MAYOR

EUGENE R. STONE

To the Republican Voters of Quincy:

I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor. I have been a member of the City Council for four years, serving a portion of that time, as a member of the Finance Committee and Chairman of the Fire Department and Police.

I am a member and for two years President of the Quincy Board of Trade.

I feel I am familiar with the City's financial condition, its resources and liabilities, and with those municipal problems which must be dealt with during the coming year.

I recognize that these problems should be met honestly and fearlessly and solved solely in the interest of the City.

I recognize that strict economy must be practised in all the City's departments, but I believe it should be a sane and reasonable economy, one which will help, and not retard, Quincy's inspiring growth, as both a residential and a manufacturing city.

I recognize that at the head of each department there should be a man not only of known probity of character and ability but one willing to give the City the full benefit of those qualities.

I recognize that Quincy's future as a Commercial City is largely dependent on the solution of our Freight Transportation problem. It is therefore important that immediate action be taken to secure for Quincy Merchants and Manufacturers proper water, as well as rail, transportation facilities. The intelligent development of our Water Front and the establishment of a Public Dock will be important factors in securing this end.

I recognize that all the Laws for the conservation of the public health, morals and rights of the Citizens should be actively and impartially enforced.

I recognize that the Chief Executive should realize that he is Mayor and the servant, not of a few, but of all the people and the whole City.

If honored by being made your Nominee next Tuesday, I will be elected Mayor at the December Election and I pledge myself to the foregoing principles and every principle, which makes for the welfare and prosperity of our City.

I assure you that if elected I will enter office untrampled by any other pledge or promise whatsoever.

Wouldn't it make you sick to see some store advertise about the cleanliness of their own store and saying that in some stores the goods are thrown at the customer instead of getting properly waited on. We believe there are other stores in Quincy as clean as the one who advertises about it who don't advetrise but leave the people to judge for themselves and for throwing the goods at the people, we don't believe there is a store in Quincy who treat their customers in such a way, for our Quincy people are too enlightened to be treated in such a fashion.

MEN FIND BONES.

A gang of men, in the employ of Councilman Sandberg, who are engaged in excavating for the new Filene building at the junction of Washington and Summer street, Boston, Friday, unearthed the skulls of some twenty or thirty bodies. The skulls were found on the Hawley street side at a depth of about eighteen feet below the surface. The old Trinity church stood on this site and it was the custom to bury bodies in the vault beneath it. It may have been some of these or it may have been the remains of some of the early settlers and that a cemetery was once located on the site.

Clothes of the Right Sort

IF YOU KNEW the positive Safety of buying at this store—and of my absolute desire to give the utmost in value and service I am convinced that nothing could stop you from favoring me with your patronage.

I believe I have the best suits and overcoats that money can buy. I know they are fairly priced. I know that in every instance, the prices are lower than the same merchandise commands in other stores. I don't expect to talk everybody into buying here, but I do know that if you will take suit for suit, fabric for fabric, assortment for assortment, the great percentage of you will decide on this store as the place to make your clothing investment. This is not advertising chaff, but "the real meat of the cocoanut," as I know you'll find it today.

SUITS for $10 to $18

The man who hasn't bought his winter suit yet will find just what he wants at this Money Saving Store. Every style fabric and color at the lowest prices, and wear and looks in every suit.

OVERCOATS $15 and $17

Don't get the idea that you must pay $25 or more for a good Overcoat. Warmth and wear is in every coat we sell. Big, long loose fellows with belts, plaid backs and silk yoke linings—or the more subdued patterns for the man with quiet taste. All are here.

BOYS SUITS $2.50 to $6.50

Mothers will find that we'll give her boy the squarest kind of a deal and the biggest value for the money if she will trade here. No mother wants to pay $10 or $15 for a suit for her live growing boy—and there's no need of it in this store.

Ralston Shoes

Are you satisfied with just ordinary shoes or do you want shoes with style, shoes of character? Ralston shoes are so different from the ordinary run, you'll take pleasure in showing them to your friends, in comparing them inside and out with shoes that come from other stores. Foot-Moulded, they're sure to fit and wear.

Interwoven Hose

About every third man you meet on the street wears Interwoven Hosiery. That's a pretty big claim, but it's an actual fact. Our sales of Interwoven are increasing every day. Wives and mothers recommend them because they need no darning and give more wear than any other sock made. Cotton, Cassimere, Silk. 25c, 35c, 50c a pair.

ENTERS BIG SUIT.

Wilbur F. Lakin of Quincy seeks $500,000 damages from J. E. Henry & Sons, lumber and paper men of Lincoln, N. H., by a suit brought in the Suffolk superior court yesterday. He held large interests in the Chartered Company of Lower California. The company was pressed on its obligations of $185,000, he avers, and he borrowed $200,000 of the defendants, giving them as collateral bonds of the company of the par value of $885,000 and stock of the par value of $4,947,000. He claims that the defendants subsequently sold the collateral and applied the proceeds to the loan. The amount realized was insufficient to pay the loan, he claims, and they did not protect him properly.

NEW POSTAL CARDS.

It is said the postal cards to be issued when the present supply is exhausted will be much better than the sort now exasperating the public. They certainly can and should be. The cards are a government monopoly and immensely profitable. The government can afford to make them of first class quality stock and it hasn't done so since it took over the manufacture. The present cards are no credit to the department selling them.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION.

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership, heretofore existing between Andrew Milne, Jr., and James Hector, at Quincy, Mass., under the firm name of Milne & Hector, has this day been dissolved by mutual consent, and the business taken over by said Andrew Milne, Jr., who will pay all bills and collect all accounts of said firm.

Q.—Why did the Lord say to Adam, "Cursed is the ground FOR THY SAKE?" Will the "curse" ever be removed?

Answer.—There is a depth of meaning in the words, "for Thy sake," that has never been so apparent as in these latter days. It is well for the race that in its fallen state of selfishness and evil, it has had to contend with the harsh conditions brought about in the earth by the curse. Men are more contented and satisfied when actively engaged in some form of labor, contending against the things that would hinder them from attaining the goal of their ambitions. It is also true that where one is employed the temptations of life are greatly lessened. "Idleness is the mother of vice," is a true saying recognized by all. Work, not excessive toil, is a blessing and therefore, for man's sake, the Lord arranged that man should live by the sweat of his brow. The curse is to be removed when the race of mankind has been made perfect and all of the inherited meanness and selfishness eradicated from the human heart. Then the race will no longer need to be under the sentence to hard labor and imprisonment in death, but will delight in doing good and practising the precepts of love and justice. Just as the earth now produces spontaneously the briars and thorns and thistles and weeds, so then it will produce the fruits and flowers in abundance. The entire earth is to become as the Garden of Eden, for "the desert shall bloom and blossom as the rose, and streams shall break forth in the wilderness," and "the earth shall yield her increase." "There shall be no more curse."—Revelation xxii, 3.

CRANCH SCHOOL MEETING.

At the meeting of the Cranch School Parents' and Teachers' Association, Tuesday evening, the musical part of the program presented by Mrs. George Pfaffmann and Mr. Albert Schenkelberger was most enjoyable. The applause given Mrs. Joseph Evans and Miss King for their finely rendered duets on the piano showed the hearty appreciation of the large audience.

Mr. Clarence Lundin, pianist and Mr. William Roach violinist came in for their share of applause during the social hour.

Miss Helen Burke of Grade V and her committee, Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., Mrs. Luther Glover, Mrs. Barrett, Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Ericson served raspberry punch and wafers.

The school exhibit in the hall was unusually fine, the color work in flowers being especially attractive, and the neatness of all work shown being very commendable, always indicating care and thoughtfulness.

The fine acting done by the Misses Bass, Fox, Kemp and Lovejoy in their play all tended to make the evening one long to be remembered.

EASTERN STAR PLAY

signified, for fully 700 people attested to its comic features every one feeling satisfied with the remarkable production. The play was staged under the direction of Mrs. Isabelle Davis, and every character in it was presented in a style that would reflect credit upon professional artists.

In the first act the scene was laid in the small reception room of the Grand Hotel, Wefsern manners, tactics and customs were exemplified in a large measure throughout and the entire play was portrayed in a most pleasing manner.

The second act showed the study in Mr. De Reister's house, in New York, a month later. An instance of love seems to predominate through this scene, and frequent remarks of joy, sarcasm and irony, lent an air of enticement to the act itself that frequently elicited great applause from the auditors.

In the third act was shown the grounds in front of Mrs. De Reister's cottage in Arizona, at a time supposed to be two months later than in the previous act. The scenery itself presented a picturesque appearance and the elaborateness of the costumes worn by the able amateurs, caused the comedy itself to be pronounced one of the best ever staged in Music hall.

At the conclusion of the play, the floor was cleared for dancing, which was in order till 1 A. M. Selig's orchestra furnished the music for the occasion.

The cast of chaarcters in order of appearance was as follows:

Miss Aurora Saunders—from Pike's Corners, Mrs. Grace Carlton Ames
Waiter—from the Grand Hotel, Mr. William Elliot
Mrs. John Mortimer De Reister—from Arizona, Mrs. Clara Catariua
Jim Duffy—(chauffeur) from the farm, Mr. Harvey L. Ames
Miss Madge De Reister—from Fifth Avenue, Miss Mildred L. Crowley
Mr. Clifford De Reister—from College, Mr. Merton A. Turner
Harold Stuthers from Washington Mr. Roy Prout
Mr. De Reister—from Wall Street, Mr. Arthur L. Thomas
Miss Dorothy De Reister—from Boarding School, Miss Annie E. Rose
Suzette—from Paris, Miss Clara E. Call
Dick Murphy—from Wild West, Mr. William E. Taxbox

The committee on arrangements was composed of Mrs. Clara R. Cadarius, Miss Annie E. Rose, Miss Mildred L. Crowley, Miss Clara E. Call and Mrs. Grace C. Ames.

The ushers for the affair were Mrs. Margaret Gammons, Miss L. Charlotte Barnicoat, Miss Eleanor M. Files, Miss Jessie M. Raymond, Miss Lydia D. Raymond, Mrs. Josephine Schools, Miss Ethel Schools, Miss Flora Deacon.

ARRESTED ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Sabestiano Fasci was arrested Friday by Inspector Goodhue for a statuatory offence at Quincy. It is claimed by the police that last Feburary he took a 14 year old girl named Muriel Mason from Weymouth and went through some kind of a mock ceremony which he informed the girl was a marriage ceremony. She says that he took her into a big building and gave her a paper and said we are now married. Since the time the couple have been living on Granite street as man and wife.

The attention of the police was brought to the case by the selectmen of Weymouth. When called on by Inspector Goodhue, the girl declared that she was married and told the officer of her visit to Boston. Fasci who is a section hand on the railroad, heard of the officer's visit and immediately took the girl to Boston Friday morning and this time it is said that they were married, although the marriage was not a legal one, for the girl did not have the consent of her parents. Frasci was in court this morning and held until Wednesday for a hearing.

Anty Drudge Talks to a Woman Who Hasn't Tried the New Way of Washing.

Anty Drudge—"You poor unfortunate victim of the old-time washday habit! Why won't you wash in the Fels-Naptha way, and strike off the chains that bind you to the steaming washboiler and the all-day hard rub-rub on the washboard?"

If you really believed what we say about Fels-Naptha you would use it, wouldn't you?

But you think that it's too easy—impossible.

Many men are wealthy to-day because the majority thought the same thing about the telephone.

To you boiling seems necessary to thorough cleansing.

With soaps of the old sort it is.

The clothes must be boiled in order to get the dirt out by rubbing.

Incidentally much of it gets rubbed in.

Fels-Naptha separates the dirt from the fabric in cool or lukewarm water.

Once separated it is easily rinsed away.

But you must remember that Fels-Naptha is made to be used in cool or lukewarm water, summer or winter.

Get Fels-Naptha to-day and follow directions on red and green wrapper.

A BOSTON GIRLS' BUDGET.

Hubbite Maids Hear of a Model Man—He LIVES, However, Far Away, in a Remote Massachusetts Village—Back Bay Highbrows Rent a Stable and Install Exclusive Theatre for Plays above Lowbrow Comprehension—The Style in Ladies' Backs this Season Demands a Dull Ivory Polish—A Spirited Prelude to the Boston Operatic Season.

A perfect model of a man Massachusetts boasts, according to a report which has reached the beantown Gomorrah. This individual lives in a small village in the central part of the state, and is composed of the following virtues, and some others. He has never had a smoke; nor a drink; doesn't know one card from another; doesn't like the city and its wicked ways; never used profanity; isn't overfond of the girls; and it is said that he isn't a mollycoddle either. He has even intimated to an interviewer that he had never been kissed; though his memory may not run back to babyhood. Doubtless he may also have voted for Governor Foss. Bay State pride in this paragon of virtues has to be tempered a bit by the fact that he lives in a very small village.

A theatre for 130 selected subscribers, no public ticket sale, presenting plays unknown to the general stage is the latest Hub project, to be opened in January. A stable converted simply and inexpensively into a theatre is as distinctly a highbrow achievement as the remaking of a vulgar skating rink into the recherche Copley Hall. A small company of distinguished literateurs, playwrights and authors, has fitted up this primitive establishment with the object of producing little known plays of famous playwrights, and others from original manuscript. They will not compete with the regular theatres, but aim to produce only such plays as are too clever or too artistic to appeal to the average theatre-goer. It is to be art for art's sake, for no salaries will be paid to the actors participating, who are selected from the best amateurs in the city and vicinity. One night each week will be set aside for the admission of students of stage technique. The list of members of the organization is a conservative statement of "Who's Who?" in the Hub's literary circle.

The time honored question, "Mother, shall I wash for high or low neck?" must now be altered by the substitution of "polish" for "wash." And it applies primarily to the back—yes, the back, not the back of the neck. For Dame Fashion reasons that as her adherent has been wearing low necked gowns all summer and fall, should she appear at an evening function with a gown of the same cut she would obviously be wearing an afternoon or street dress—therefore, the line of demarkation must be lowered by quite some degrees. All which introduces the necessity of having a proper back to exhibit. It must be rather flat with just the correct curve and must be of the right color and exquisitely polished. Not to shine like a piano, you understand, but the satiny gloss which comes from bleaching with peroxide, lime juice or acid if necessary, Russian massaging, Turkish massaging (one or two more nationalities may be added as desired,) scrubbing with towels, velvet pads, chamois and other materials, use of needle shower, oils or sheep fat, and the result plentifully dusted with flesh colored powder. Over this should be hung pendants, jewels, necklaces and other ornaments, while judicious dabs of black court plaster accentuate the finished surface. After all these things are done correctly and effectively, miladi may devote herself to the minor details of her costume, and feel presentable for her evening at the opera or elsewhere.

Operatic songsters began to be seen in Boston simultaneously with the first days of Indian summer, and one at least of them is to be heard by the Hub's enthusiastic music students who more than perhaps any other class of the population appreciate the educational opportunities created by the presence in the city of so many distinguished musicians. There was a spirited prelude to the grand opera season in Jordan Hall of the New England Conservatory of Music on the evening of Nov. 8 when Ramon Blanchart, one of the Opera Company's principal baritones, presented a song recital to which Conservatory students and others were admitted gratuitously. Such an event naturally crowded the house, for Mr. Blanchart apart from his international reputation as a successful singer at about all the world's leading opera houses has become a local celebrity through his engagement as regisseur of the School of Grand Opera just established by co-operation of the New England Conservatory and the Boston Opera Company. Mr. Blanchart's program, beautifully rendered in four languages, Italian, Spanish, French and English, contained among other numbers an exquisite song "Los ojos verdes" dedicated to himself by the Spanish composer, Aguirre, and a brilliant example of American tone composition, "O let night speak of me," by George W. Chadwick, the Conservator'y director. Assisted at the piano by F. Stuart Mason, of the music school's faculty Mr. Blanchart displayed the capacities of his remarkable voice before a large and commending audience among whom sat no less a dignitary of the church than the newly designated Cardinal O'Connell. In the seats, too, were noted several of Mr. Blanchart's fellow members of the operatic troupe. All told it was an occasion to make the onlooker feel that Boston, the music centre, is being developed rapidly in ways helpful to the thousands of young people who come thither from all quarters of the globe in quest of musical advantages that are paralleled in no other city.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choices small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

MAY LAND BIG POSITION

It is not news to many Quincy people, that Mayor Shea has been favorably mentioned, a number of times this fall, as a possibility for the vacancy on the Highway commission board, made vacant by the resignation of Chairman Parker. Monday's Record says.

Mayor Shea of Quincy is said to be backed by Mayor Fitzgerald, Martin Lomasney and F. J. MacLeod for the vacancy on the highway commission, left by the resignation of Chairman Parker.

Mayor Shea's affiliations with paving stone firms, whose interest in the highway commissionship is obvious, makes certain of strong support for him from this class of business concerns and other corporation interests, to whom Shea has been a valuable friend, can be expected to back him.

Rear-Admiral Bowles is a personal friend of Mayor Shea, and the latter exerted himself to assist the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. of Quincy, of which Bowles is president, to avoid excessive payments for the expense of the new Fore River bridg.

JOHN L. MILLER'S CANDIDACY For Mayor.

Quincy, Mass. November 11, 1911.

To the Voters of Quincy:—

Tuesday, Nov. 14th is Caucus day, when you must decide who is to have the nomination for Mayor. I offer my name for your consideration.

Many new voters are not acquanted with me, but I have been in the city forty years, and have always taken a deep interest in her welfare. I was the first to advocate and push through town meeting an order for $5000 for improved sidewalks, thirty years ago.

I organized the Merry Mount Granite Co., and was its manager for seven years, employing from sixty to seventy-five men, and it was a success from the start. I started the firm of Thomas & Miller that did a large business in New York and New England. This firm continued for twelve years, I being the sole manager. Mr. Thomas then retired, and I succeeded to the business, conducting it in my own name for the past twelve years, erecting my memorials in every state in the Union. I was president of the Granite Manufacturers' Association four years. This is the largest and strongest commercial body in the city. In 1910 I organized the Quincy Blue Granite Quarry Co., and was its first president.

I have always stood and worked in the open, trickery or graft is repugnant to my nature. I am not a politician, as that word is generally interpreted. I wear no man's collar, but do stand for a square honest administration, and I have the cordial support of those citizens who stand for a businesslike administration, and to give you the best service possible. Are these the qualities you want in a Mayor? If so, I ask your support.

JOHN L. MILLER,
211 Franklin Street.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The members of the local High school football squad, took the 12 o'clock train for Worcester today, where they are to try conclusions with the Worcester High aggregation. A number of rooters, most of whom are students at the local institution took the trip to Worcester and there is no doubt that a spirit of enthusiasm is sure to be noticeable at the game, no matter what the outcome may be.

Worcester High is a fairly fast combination yet the local boys, from their performances this year, seem to be superior in every department. Of course, an exact judgment cannot be made from a comparison of scores, but it would seem that the exhibition of both teams against Medford High, considered to be without a peer in interscholastic circles, would give us a good idea of what may be expected today.

Worcester High was beaten by Medford High to the tune of 40 to 0; Quincy was defeated by a 23 to 0 score and at times gave Medford High the run of its life.

Coach Staff felt confident this morning that Quincy would come out a winner, and he is eagerly looking forward to the game next Saturday with Waltham High at Waltham. This will be the last game of the season, and a large crowd of rooters will accompany the local boys, in order to help them bring the football season to a close in a most fitting manner.

The Quincy A. A. football warriors encounter the Chelsea Y. M. C. A. team at Chelsea this afternoon, and if the calibre of both teams is any indication, a game for blood should be in order. The local team has gained an enviable record this year, for it is the only contingency that has crossed the goal line of the Orient A. A. eleven for a long time. The feat was accomplished last Saturday and now the local team is being considered by all as one of the fastest semi-professional football elevens in the state.

Eric Nelson won his noice race at the Coliseum, Thursday night, under the management of Edward P. Powers. Mr. Powers is very prominent with the boys and is to offer a watch as first prize to the winner of each Saturday's night race.

THIRTY-SIX YEARS AGO.

The rallying committees worked with a will, and the result was that Weymouth cast the largest vote ever before polled in town, the total number being 1801—the highest number of votes polled previous to this election being 1,417 in 1860.

For Governor of the Commonwealth—Alexander H. Rice of Boston, 872; Charles Francis Adams of Quincy, 688; John I. Baker of Beverly, 221.

For Representative in General Court, 5th Norfolk Representative District—Henry F. Barker of Quincy, 908 in Weymouth; 857 in Quincy; total, 1,765. Benjamin S. Lovell of Weymouth, 879 in Weymouth; 839 in Quincy; total, 1,718. George F. Hayden of Weymouth, 891 in Weymouth; 840 in Quincy; total, 1,731. Zachariah L. Bicknell of Weymouth, 722 in Weymouth; 846 in Quincy; total, 1,568. Cyrus Sherman of Weymouth, 677 in Weymouth; 840 in Quincy; total, 1,517. Abner B. Packard of Quincy, 677 in Weymouth; 834 in Quincy; total, 1,501.

The Representatives elected in the 5th Norfolk District—Quincy, Weymouth, Three—Henry F. Barker, Rep.; Benjamin S. Lovell, Rep. and George F. Hayden, Rep.

It will be seen by the above that Weymouth and Quincy were together and entitled to three representatives It will also be seen that Weymouth was the larger part of the district and also that Weymouth was a Republican town while Quincy was a Democratic town.—Weymouth Gazette.

LOST CHILD.

The lost child call from Box 74 at 7.30 Friday night, was to summon aid to search for Jessie Wilson who had been missing some hours. The little girl was found later at a house at Quincy Point.

WOLLASTON MAN HURT.

Albert Vail, 26 years old, of 116 Waterson avenue, Wollaston, was one of the three men who were seriously burned on Friday in Boston, when a heavy piece of metal slipped from their grasp and fell into a pot filled with scalding metal.

All three were putting the heavy piece of metal into the melting pot when it slipped and instantly there was a shower of hot metal which literally covered all three men.

TWO BLAZES QUICKLY PUT OUT

The alarm from Box 39, at 5.14 Saturday night was for a fire in one of the sleeping rooms of a double house on Penn street, owned by John O'Brien and occupied in part by the owner and John St. Clair. The fire started in one of the rooms in the St Clair side and according to the occupants, an oil stove was the cause. The loss will not exceed $50.

The Central station was called out at 7 o'clock Sunday night for a chimney fire in a house at the corner of Granite and School streets. There was no loss.

—If the public is educated to appreciate how billboard advertising blots the landscape and disfigures nature, advertisers will see the folly of such unpopular methods, however conspicuous they may be.—Leslie's Weekly.

CAT GIVES ALARM AT EARLY BLAZE

A black cat, the pet in the household of William Knowlton, 33 Taylor street, South Braintree, probably saved the lives of the family Sunday morning.

About 3 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Knowlton were awakened by the cat jumping on their bed and crying. When they awoke they were almost chocked by smoke. Harying out of bed and turning on the lights, they saw the smoke was coming from downstairs and both ran to the floor below.

A couch was found to be on fire and Mr. and Mrs. Knowlton lost no time in getting it out of the house, whereupon it burst into flames and one of Mrs. Knowlton's feet was burned. One side of the sideboard and part of a side wall of the room were on fire and these were extinguished.

The 12-year-old son, William, was found unconscious from the smoke, but he soon revived. The loss was about $75.

No alarm was given by the Knowlton's and the neighbors knew nothing of it till they saw the burned couch out in the yard this morning.

It will be a good many score of years, however, before it joins the same class with Harvard, Yale and other New England institutions, when it comes to prestige, sentiment, loyalty and the other intangible things which go to make a great university.—Medford Mercury.

MAN THROWN FROM AUTO

When Car Becomes Unmanageable And Strikes Pole

MACHINE DAMAGED

An automobile, said to be owned by a party from Newton named Verigold, became unmanageable on Adams street this morning and ran into a telephone pole. In the auto was a man and woman. The woman was driving and after coming down Rice's hill, lost control of the car. The woman clung to the steering wheel and was uninjured. The man was thrown out, however, and landed on his back in the street but fortunately escaped serious injury. The automobile was quite badly buckled and otherwise wrecked.

The car was a new one and the woman immediately telephoned into the garage and shortly after a car came out and hauled the cripple back to Boston. The pole was badly splintered.

TODAY'S COURT.

Philip Hand was sent to the state farm for drunkenness at Holbrook.

Alex Casini was arraigned for violation of the liquor law at Quincy. Case continued until Nov. 17.

Dennis F. Russell was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy. Sentence suspended until March 12, 1912.

Joseph H. McLaughlin was sentenced to six months in the house of correction for neglect of his family at Quincy.

20TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Of Mr. And Mrs. Elmer E. Gray Celebrated In Fitting Manner

RECEIVE BEAUTIFUL GIFT

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Gray of Newton street, Wollaston, were given a party Saturday evening by members of the Dorothy Q. Lodge, I. O. O. L. and relatives from Haverhill and Lynn to the number of fifty. It was given to celebrate Mr. and Mrs. Gray's twentieth wedding anniversary and was a complete surprise to them.

They were presented with a beautiful linen table cloth and two dozen napkins by John V. Leland in beahlf of those present.

During the evening refreshments of ice cream and delicious homemade cake were served and music was enjoyed including some of the songs which will be sung at the minstrel show which is planned for next month, and Mr. Leland read an original poem of 26 verses.

At a late hour their friends departed wishing them many more years of wedded happiness.

POLICE MAKE RAID.

Lieut McKay, Inspector Goodhue with officers Milford, Hinchon and Thorne raided the premises of Alexander Casini at 49 Haydn street Sunday afternoon and seized 30 bottles of beer and 40 empty bottles. Casini was in court this morning for violation of the liquor laws.

LITTLE CHANGE CAUSED BY RECOUNT

A recount of the votes cast at the state election for represntatives from the Fifth and Sixth districts was held Saturday evening by the registrars of voters. The recount was watched by representatives of the several candidates and as anticipated the result of the vote as announced by the election officers was but little changed. In the Fifth district some minor changes were made in both the votes of Representative Piper and Candidate Sullivan the net result being that Piper lost two votes which leaves his plurality 61 instead of 63 as announced.

In the Sixth district there were also some minor changes. No change was made in the vote of Representative Leslie but Candidate McDevitt gained three votes so that Leslie's pluraliy was made 60 instead of 63.

The one interesting thing brought out by the recount, was that in Ward Four somehing like 12 Democrats voted for Nickerson the Democratic progressive candidate while in Wards Five and Six about 30 Democrats voted for him. The balance of the votes which he received were Republican votes in Ward Five.

BRIEFS

Mrs. Alfred Rogers has closed her house at Marshfield Hills and will spend the winter in Wollaston with her daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Pierce of Haverhill and Mrs. Thomas Cunningham of Lynn spent the week end with their relative Mrs. Elmer E, Gray of Newton street coming to attend the celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Gray's 30th wedding anniversary.

MAYORALTY CANDIDATES

For Nomination Will Fight It Out Tomorrow

BIG VOTE EXPECTED

Tomorrow is the great battle of ballots to determine who the nominees for the various municipal officers to be voted for in December shall be. Outside of the contest among the Republicans for the Mayoralty nomination, there does not seem to be much interest, although it is said that in the wards where there is a contest for Ward Councilmen, the candidates are getting a hustle on to get out a large vote.

The polls will be opened at 12 o'clock noon and will remain open until 9 P. M. As the election officers are not permitted to begin to count the votes until after the polls close it will probably be among the early hours of the morning before the result is known. Both the candidates for the Republican nomination are working hard and both make the claim that they will win out. The contest makes it certain that the caucus will be largely attended.

BOTH HAVE RALLIES.

Rallies in the interest of Eugene R. Stone and John L. Miller, candidates for the Republican Mayoralty nomination at the city primaries to be held Tuesday were successfully held in two wards of the city on Saturday night. Both drew large crowds who gave an enthusiastic "send off" to all parties.

CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION
FOR MAYOR

EUGENE R. STONE

To the Republican Voters of Quincy:

I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor. I have been a member of the City Council for four years, serving a portion of that time, as a member of the Finance Committee and Chairman of the Fire Department and Police.

I am a member and for two years President of the Quincy Board of Trade.

I feel I am familiar with the City's financial condition, its resources and liabilities, and with those municipal problems which must be dealt with during the coming year.

I recognize that these problems should be met honestly and fearlessly and solved solely in the interest of the City.

I recognize that strict economy must be practised in all the City's departments, but I believe it should be a sane and reasonable economy, one which will help, and not retard, Quincy's inspiring growth, as both a residential and a manufacturing city.

I recognize that at the head of each department there should be a man not only of known probity of character and ability but one willing to give the City the full benefit of those qualities.

I recognize that Quincy's future as a Commercial City is largely dependent on the solution of our Freight Transportation problem. It is therefore important that immediate action be taken to secure for Quincy Merchants and Manufacturers proper water, as well as rail, transportation facilities. The intelligent development of our Water Front and the establishment of a Public Dock will be important factors in securing this end.

I recognize that all the Laws for the conservation of the public health, morals and rights of the Citizens should be actively and impartially enforced.

I recognize that the Chief Executive should realize that he is Mayor and the servant, not of a few, but of all the people and the whole City.

If honored by being made your Nominee next Tuesday, I will be elected Mayor at the December Election and I pledge myself to the foregoing principles and every principle which makes for the welfare and prosperity of our City.

I assure you that if elected I will enter office untrameled by any other pledge or promise whatsoever.

EUGENE R. STONE,
52 River street.

A vote for Mr. Stone means an honest economical and efficient business administration of the affairs of the City of Quincy. All citizens will be sure of receiving a courteous and fair treatment by Mr. Stone.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Mr. Wickersham: "Will the congregation now rise and sing 734 verses of 'Steel away,. "

A man recently played the piano 27 hours in succession, but it would be a much greater feat to listen to him.

Mr. Roosevelt calls for the control of judges, but who are going to control the people that control the judges?

The advisability of trial engagements is discussed, but this is probably the effort of some young man to get a girl's company without having to buy her an engagement ring.

As Canada wouldn't even tell Uncle Sam she'd be a sister to him; the old gentleman might well suggest that she return some of the expensive presents he made during his courtship.

Londoners have refused to bid for the bell that once hung in the poet Wordsworth's room, but no doubt they would have paid good money if it had been powerful enough to serve as a dinner bell.

The farmers who keep on reading papers at Grange meetings on "Does farming pay?" must have difficulty to keep from snickering as they think of the prices they are getting for all food products this fall.

The Warsaw, Mo., Times says the size of a $10 bill depends on whether you are getting or losing it. If you earned it doing political work, too, it looks ten times as big as if you made it at your regular job.

The Zeppelin air-ships are doing better, one of them having completed a 100th trip with many passengers. But it will be some years before the man who never rode in an air-ship gets his picture in the papers.

COLLEGE DEGENERACY.

Discussion has raged this fall over this question, originating in the attack by R. T. Crane on modern colleges. Even those who worship at the shrine of the good old days will find instances at which the most riotous sophomore of today would balk. Take the historic Conic sections rebellion of Yale, where forty-nine students openly defied the faculty, following a demand for a change in the method of reciting.

Or take the riot at the university of Virginia in 1836. The faculty having forbidden a military organization to parade the college grounds, professors' houses were broken in, windows and doors and other property smashed. Four years later a professor was wilfully shot dead by a student, who was celebrating this event, he having resolved to shoot any professor who interfered.

Open and concerted defiance of college authority by large bodies of students seems less common than formerly. The boys seem to have acquired some conception of the obligations of citizenship in a scholastic democracy.

The modern college boy, however, probably carries his practical joking to greater lengths than ever before, stealing grave stones, assuming control of railroad trains, buying signs to acquire a reputation for stealing them.

As to the habits of vice, when you look over the old college song books and note the many ditties like "Landlord, fill the flowing bowl" and "Comrades when we're no more drinking" it is evident that hey had something besides cambric tea in the good old days.

It is true that athletics, with all its hysteria and emotionalism, strains a college boy's honor to the snapping point. To the black clothed and bespectacled professor of a previous generation things look pretty bad. We have known one of that type to condemn the base ball catcher as tricky because he feinted to throw to first and actually threw to third!

But when you hear the average college boy defend "practical base ball" as the ringster defends "Practical politics," it is evident that sinister influences are at work.

One element of decadence that is largely new is the presence of so many rich men's sons. The young man with five thousand a year, with a heart on automobiles and wine parties and actresses, is a damage to any college. The quicker the faculty get rid of that kind, the larger their contribution will be to American life.

NO INSINUATION INTENDED

Article In Ledger Taken From Boston Publication

EXPLANATION

In publishing an article from the Boston Evening Record of Nov. 10 in which credit was given that paper, relative to Mayor Shea and the possibility of his appointment as a member of the State Highway Commission, the Ledger did so thinking it a compliment to the Mayor and city that he should be sought for the office. We did not comment on the statements as set forth in said article or endorse them in anyway and regret the sentiments therein expressed could be contsrued as uncomplimentary to Mayor Shea or President Bowles. During his long years as a resident in Quincy both as a business man and in public office Mayor Shea has never been accused of underhand dealings, and no one for a minute believes that he in any way exerted his influence to save the Fore River Co., from excessive payments on account of the building of the Fore River bridge. On the contrary it is a matter of record that the Fore River Co. voluntarily offered to assume a large portion of the expense incidental to the building of the new bridge.

The statement that paving stone firms were supporting Mayor Shea is equally as ridiculous from the fact tha the State Highway Commission does not build paved streets,, confining its work to the building of country roads of gravel.

The Ledger regrets that any idea that it endorsed the article in question should have been understood.

LONG JOURNEY ENDS

President Taft Is Again an Occupant of the White House

Washington, Nov. 13.—The White House is occupied again. President Taft quit his private car in the Union station here Sunday morning at 6:45 o'clock, exactly on time at the end of his 15,000-mile trip.

Mrs. Taft, who was expected here before the president came, has not arrived. The president had breakfast and luncheon alone, attended church and spent the remainder of the day resting and receiving callers.

Bank Ills Cause Tuberculosis

Columbus, O., Nov. 13.—Grover Tipton died in the state prison here from tuberculosis, contracted, it is said, when he swallowed a roll of bills to avoid having them found on his person when arrested.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!

One of the strongest advocates for the depression of the railroad tracks through the City of Quincy, in the elimination of the grades at the Water and Saville streets crossings, was Gustavus B. Bates. So persistent was he in his efforts that the tracks be depressed, that he became known as the man with the "depressed" feeling. This caused some smiles to appear yet there was hardly one who did not agree with him that such as he advocated should be done. Mr. Bates is one of Quincy's active and prosperous business men although his place of business is located just off City Square. He is very much alive, however, and often contributes articles on public questions through the press of the city. When he sits down to write, the ink fairly flows from off his pen like spring water. He is also very apt to say just what he means and call a "spade a spade."

Mr. Bates first saw the light of day in the City of Boston, July 24, 1860. His education was received at the public schools of Boston, Braintree and Weymouth. Leaving school, he learned the trade of a plumber and tinsmith and at the age of 24, married the youngest daughter of the late Rev. Thomas Spilsted of Weymouth. He came to Quincy in 1889 and established a plumbing and heating business which he has since carried on. He is also the manufacturer of the Bates Combination hot water heaters the Bates range boiler and the Bates Laundry tag. He is also interested in the Weymouth Seam Face Granite quarry. Always fair to his employees he never has had a strike and has frequently been a strong advocate for laws that seek to better the condition of the workmen. He is a thorough business man, decidedly opposed to political chicanry. Just what his political faith is, does not matter. He never held public office, although he was the Socialistic Democratic candidate for Mayor in 1904.

In a campaign document issued at that time he said I have always been an independent in city affairs. I respect and admire any man, (I care not what his race or religion or his politics, may be) if he is an honest, upright and good citizen, be he white or black, young or old, rich or poor."

He is a member of the Odd Fellows fraternity, the Royal Arcanum, Quincy Yacht club and Quincy Board of Trade.

Q.—Since the Kings of earth claim to reign by "DIVINE RIGHT," by what authority did Satan offer Jesus Christ the rulership of the kingdoms of the world?

Answer.—When we say that the Kings rule by "Divine right," we would not be understood to mean that their kingdoms are the kingdoms of God or any part thereof; nor that God endorses their rule or rulers, wars, etc. The Scriptures intimate that 2500 years ago God took away the earthly kingdom which He had established in the nation of Israel, and gave the lease of power successively to four great universal rulers or empires. These are pictured in the book of Daniel as a great image; Babylonia, the head; Medo-Persia, the breast and arms; Greece, the belly and thighs; Rome, the legs of iron, including the present divided state of the Roman Empire represented by the toes, and the commingling of state and Church, as represented in the commingled clay and iron. Speaking of this, the Apostle declares, "The powers that be are ordained (permitted) of God," and he tells us, the Church, that we should be subject to these powers, not because they represent the Divine will, but because it is His will to permit them to be in control, and that we are therefore to be fully submissive to the Divine arrangement of the matter.—Daniel ii, 31-35; Romans xiii, 1.

Satan is Scripturally termed. "The prince of this world," and again, "The god (or ruler) of this world." 'John xii, 31; II Corinthians iv, 4.) But he holds this dominion, not by any authority from God, but by deceiving mankind through false doctrines, superstition, etc. Satan could, therefore, very properly, very truthfully propose to Jesus that if He would work in harmony with him he would give Him mastery over the earth—make Him King of the earth.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor Ledger:

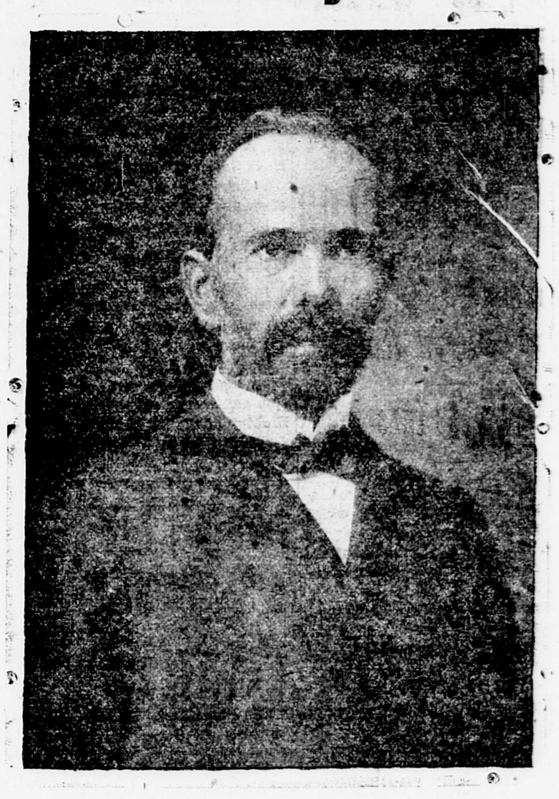

To correct an error in your issue of Saturday the 18th, where you had the undersigned reported as being present at the rally to Eugene R. Stone at the residence of Mr. Edward J. Sandberg. I wish to state that I was not there, nor have I been to any meeting as favorable to the candidacy of Mr. Stone, because it is my belief that the interests of the City will be better served with Mr. J. L. Miller as Mayor.

Trusting that you will kindly publish this correction in justice to me, and to the readers of your paper.

I remain,
Yours truly

JOHN L. MILLER'S CANDIDACY For Mayor.

To the Voters of Quincy:—

Tuesday, November 14th is Caucus Day

when you must decide who is to have your nomination for Mayor. Many new voters are not acquainted with me, so it is only fair to tell them, what I have been, and what I stand for.

Forty years ago I entered an apprenticeship as a granite cutter, and followed the cutting some seven years, being the second president of the Granite Cutters' Union in Quincy.

In 1878 I organized the Merry Mount Granite Co., and was its manager seven years, employing from sixty to seventy-five men, and it was a success from the start.

In 1886 I started the firm of Thomas & Miller, who did a large business, covering the New England states and New York. This firm continued for twelve years, I being the sole manager. The senior member then retired, and I succeeded to the business conducting it in my own name for the past thirteen years, erecting my memorials in every state in the Union.

In 1910 I organized the Quincy Blue Granite Quarry Co. and was its first president, and am now one of its directors.

I was president of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association for four years. This is the largest and strongest commercial body in the city.

I have been vice-president of the National Association of Granite Industries of the United States, and am now vice-president of the National Retail Monument Dealers' Association.

I am a member of the Quincy Board of Trade, and I have worked and pledged money to try and make it the power it should be in our city.

I have been a member of the School Committee for seven years, and chairman two years. I have always worked for progessive education, where the man's children that could not go to college could get the very best training for his life work. Any one visiting the High School can judge by results.

I was the first man in Quincy to advocate improved sidewalks, and when the old town meeting had $500 in the warrant, I moved to strike out the $500 and insert $5000, and defended my motion and it was carried. This was twenty-five years ago.

WHAT I STAND FOR

The best sidewalks and streets that our city can afford, and for the best and most progessive schools.

For the development of Quincy's great asset, her water front, as soon as proper plans can be made and an intelligent scheme laid out.

For strict economy in the departments, consistent with the progress of our city, that we may live within our income.

For the best department officials that can be procured, consistent with the salaries paid.

For civic righteousness, a celan city, a square deal to all, and full value for the money expended.

I am not merely a sleeper in the city, but an all day and night citizen.

I am an employer of men who believes in their rights as well as my own.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Annoucemens For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The usual services were held Sunday at the First Presbyterian church as follows:

Morning service at 10.30. As this was Temperance Sunday, a sermon on temperance was preached. The text being found in Prov. 4.15; Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass it by.

Mr. Matheson gave some very interesting figures on the liquor question, and spoke of how China was giving up her opium trade and of how the Emperor of Germany was doing all in his power for the cause of temperance.

The Bible school, Brotherhood and Ladies' class met at 12 o'clock. The Bible school lesson was also a temperance one and remarks on the lesson were made by the pastor, Mr. Clark, Mr. George Wilson, and Mr. McLeod.

The C. E. service was held at 6 o'clock. The leader for the meeting was Mr. Edward Meekin, the assistant being Miss Ruth McLeod.

The evening service was held at 7 o'clock and was largely attended.

The Thursday evening service is a Laymen's meeting and is to be led by one of the Laymen of the church at 7.30 P. M. The Young people's meeting at 7 o'clock.

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Samuel R. Maxwell of Greenfield, occupied the pulpit at the First church Sunday morning and preached an eloquent sermon to a large congregation. He is one of the leaders among the younger preachers of the denomination and is a brilliant speaker.

The Alliance held its third regular meeting this afternoon in the ladies' parlor. Rev. Samuel R. Maxwell gave a talk on "Church Unity."

A delightful performance is assured for Friday evening, Nov. 24, when the "Japanese Girl" will be given under the auspices of the alliance. With Mr. Weston at the piano and the musical excellence of the cast, it can not fail to be an enjoyable evening.

The Junior Alliance meets tonight in the social rooms of the chapel. There will be a social hour, sewing and refreshments.

FIRST CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

Sunday was the 83d anniversary of the dedication of the First church. Pattee's history tells us that the cellar was commenced April 9th, 1827, and on the 11th of June the corner stone was laid with appropriate solemnities. On Wednesday, Nov. 12, the new church was dedicated to the service and worship of the one living God. Rev. Dr. Gray offered the introductory prayer; Rev. Mr. Brooks read selections from the Scriptures; Rev. Dr. Lowell offered the dedicatory prayer; the pastor of the church Rev. Peter Whitney preached from Genesis xxviii:17 and Rev. Dr. Porter offered the concluding prayer.

The work included in the original estimate made by the architect, was performed at a cost of $3,000, within the estimate. The total cost of the building with the improvements around it was $30,488.56 to which must be added the sum of $4,350, voted to be paid to the proprietors of the pews in the old meeting house and to the cost of the furnace. The debt incurred by the erection of so costly an edifice, was finally, in the year 1833, wiped off.

It is interesting to note that the red chalk marks made by the granite cutters on the large pillars in front of the church, when cut, can be seen today.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services were held in Christ church yesterday as follows: 8.00 A. M. Holy Communion, 10.30 morning prayer and sermon, 12.05 Sunday school and Galahad Brotherhood, 7.30 evening prayer and address.

In the evening the rector, Rev. R. E. Armstrong continued his address on Confirmation. The subject discussed last evening was the "Church." He told in brief the history of the church. He said in part as follows: "When a person becomes confirmed he is made a member of the church. Christ church, Quincy, is descended from a continuous, unbroken chain from the Christian church of Jesusalem. The Episcopal church is God-made not Man-made.

There are three opportunities concerning the character of this church. They are first: The church is a divine institution with a human mission. The ideas are sometimes reversed. It is a divine institution because it was founded, erected and officered by God. The church is the visible manifestation of Christ.

Without the church there would be no Christianity. The church is the visible manifestation of Christ.

Without the church there would be no Christianity. The church is the body of Christ and is the visible side of Christianity. The Holy Spirit in the church is the invisible side of Christianity. Men rend the body of Christ so that it is divided into various sects and schisms. Christ wished us all to be in one church, or one fold that is one form of religion.

The second proposition is that the church is an organism for the dispensing of Christianity not an organization for the attainment of Christianity. It is an organism because it is founded of living men, not precepts, laws, etc. The church is the only organization that maintains itself throughout all ages. For example "Kingdoms rise and wane but the church of Jesus constant will remain." Christ gave up his life for the church but the Holy Spirit still remains in the church. For example, "Gates of Hell can never 'gainst the church prevail."

The church was Christ's first and great method of saving souls in the form of a society of living men. He organized and officered it and sent it forth into the world. Therefore is the church worthy of loyalty and love. It is here that this life is found."

The services for the week are as follows:

Monday, 8.00 P. M., vestry meeting.

Tuesday, 3.45 P. M., Junior Auxiliary.

Wednesday, 4.00 P. M., Junior Confirmation class; 8.00 P. M., Senior Confirmation class.

Friday, 7.30 P. M. St. Margaret's Guild, Mrs. Burke's night; 7.45 P. M., Reapers' Birthday night, with Mrs. C. H. Wilson, 43 Saville avenue.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH.

The Wollaston Unitarian club will hold its regular meeting Tuesday, Nov. 14. Dinner at 6.30 P. M. Speaker Dr. Mark W. Richardson, chairman of the Massachusetts State Board of Health.

Wednesday, Nov. 15, the Women's Alliance will hold an all-day sewing meeting at the home of Mrs. Frank A. Page, 103 Grand View avenue. The hour of assembling is ten o'clock. Luncheon will be served at 12.30 at twenty cents per plate. All women in the parish are invited.

A stereopticon lecture on "The Protection of Children" by Ray S. Hubbard of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children will be given Sunday, Nov. 19, at 7 P. M. The public is cordially invited.

The annual Union Thanksgiving service will be held in the Congregational church, Thanksgiving Day at 5 P. M.

First in importance in any church must ever be the Sunday morning service of worship. If you neglect this, no amount of interest in other organizations will atone for the loss to yourself, the evil influence over others and the direct injury to the church which you thus inflict.

The next Vesper service will be held Sunday, Dec. 10 at 4.30 P. M.

The monthly meeting of the Unitarian Sunday school Union of Boston will be held at the First Parish church, Dorchester, Monday Nov. 20. Social hour 5 to 6; Supper 6 to 7. Address and Discussion 7 to 8.30. The Rev. Charles T. Billings of Lowell will speak on "The Supreme Aim in Sunday School Instruction."

The beautiful poem "The Things that Endure" by Washington Gladden was read by our minister at the morning service.

Rev. Carl G. Horst preached a strong sermon from the text: Brethren be not children in mind; but in mind be men. 1 Cor. 14, 20. He said: "What we need is not less Theology but more,—more close, hard thinking about God and His ways, as disclosed in history and experience. 'As a man thinketh so is he' Our manner of life depends on the view we take of the meaning and end of life. All religious progress is the result of clear-cut thinking. It was the new thought of Channing, his vision of the moral perfection of God, which made him oppose Calomism with all his might, because calomism he said 'takes from us the Father in heaven and substitutes for him a being whom we cannot love if we would and whom we ought not to love if we could.'

"He showed that Pure Christianity (i e Unitarian) contained no such doctrines as taught by Calomism and urged that people should substitute the Bible for their rule of faith, in place of Calomism creed.

"Religion is a thing of the heart, But in order to distinguish between what is true and false, essential and non-essential, permanent and transient, we must use our head. Thought helps us to clear religion of what is false and unworthy. Religion unguided by reason is apt to become blind supersition or sickly sentimentalism. We must love God not only with our heart, but with our mind."

HALL PLACE M. E.

At the morning service at the Hall Place M. E. church, Miss Helen Martin sang a solo. Sunday school was held at 12 M. and Junior League at 3 P. M. The topic for the Epworth League at 6.15 was "The Injunction with the Invitation." The leader was Miss Hilda Francis. Miss Maud and Miss Catherine Hodgkinson sang a duet, "Let Him In."

Rev. Mr. Thompson of the United Presbyterian church occupied the pulpit in exchange with the pastor at the evening service. The subject was "The Lord's Need," text Luke 19-34. "The Lord hath need of him." Mr. Thompson emphasized two things which the Lord needed, and which we could give Him, our love and our service.

The Ladies' Aid meet in the vestry Tuesday evening.

Thursday evening the second in the course of lectures will be given by Rev. T. W. Staples, on the Grand Canon of Arizona.

Prayer meeting Friday at 7.30 P. M.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

In the morning before a large audience, the pastor Rev. Wesley Wiggin, gave a temperance sermon.

Mr. Sedgwick superintendent announced the close of the contest between Mrs. Dewsnap's class and Mr. Sutermeister's the latter having won the banner. Mrs. Carter's class challenged Mr. Sutermeister's for the banner. The Murray class had over 90 per cent of its members present.

Miss Nevers, the deaconess led the Junior League using the blackboard. A large number were present.

Epworth League was led by Chester Cleveland.

The pastor gave an interesting sermon on "Chips and Chinks" in the evening.

Today the Ladies' Aid hold an all day sewing meeting in the vestry.

Tuesday at 8 P. M., Queen Esther circle meets with Miss Mable Lupton 261 Newport avenue.

Thursday Mr. C. H. Pope speaks on "Solar Heat," at the Men's club. All men are invited.

Friday at 7.45 P. M., the regular prayer meeting. Subject, "Confessing Christ." Romans 10:9-10. Miss Irma Douglas will sing.

Miss Alice L. Niles speaks Sunday at the morning service and vespers will be held at 4.45 and also next to the last Sunday of each month.

SWEDISH BAPTIST.

The new pastor, the Rev. Paul Hallin, occupied the pulpit at both the morning and evening services, preaching before large congregations.

The topic in the morning was, "Two men finding Christ." The discourse was used to point especially to fact that the gospel means as much to men as to women and children. Men are daily taking more and more interest in religion, an example, the "Men and Forward Movement" which is claiming so much attention just now.

In the evening the subject was "Saviour of the Lost." Regular services will be held during the week.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sermon by the pastor Rev. Joseph Walther: Subject: "To the Work! To the Work!" One of the most attractive hours the Walther and Rand Men's classes have ever given followed the morning services.

The rendering of the "aMrch from Athalia" by large orchestra under the leadership of G. H. Critchley, and a ten minute talk by J. L. Miller, candidate for Mayor of Quincy, were very much enjoyed.

An attendance of 906 for the last three Sundays is a new record for the school this year.

The Junior Endeavor Meeting met at 3.30 in the chapel, Miss Ethel M. Campbell in charge. Y. P. S. C. E. met at 6 in the chapel. Preparatory Service at 5.45. Subject: "The Case against the Saloon." Leader, Mr. at 7 in the Auditorium. Sermon on "Men Who did Things." Subject: "The Man Who Disobeyed."

Monday evening at 7.45 there will be a meeting in the vestry of the Congregational church of all boys who are interested in the "Boys' Scout Movement." Our boys are urged to attend.

Tuesday evening at 7.45 a Cottage Prayer meeting will be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Holmes 8 Chester street. Deacon Geo. E. Thomas will lead.

Wednesday afternoon at 3 the Women's Home Mission Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Wellington Record, 357 Newport avenue. Subject: "The Negro."

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

Services were held on Sunday at the regular hours, starting with Holy Communion at 8 o'clock.

The meeting of the Girls' Friendly society on Friday of this week will be "social night" and will be held at the home of Miss Weeks. 161 Grand View avenue. It is expected that the entertainment will be an informal "musical" with several outside guests providing the program.

The members of the Junior Auxiliary are planning a play to be presented in December. The play chosen is entitled: "Mother Goose's Goslings," and the work of rehearsing is to begin with this week's meeting. The members have been occupied this fall in making scrap books to be sent at Christmas to the Boston children's hospital.

ST. PAUL'S M. E. CHURCH.

The regular services were held in the church Sunday as follows: 10.30 A. M. the pastor preached from the book of Amos, 4th chapter and 12th verse, the subject, "The Solemn Requisition." Sunday school was held at 12. The young people's meeting held at 6.30 was lead by Harry Anderson. His subject was John as a close follower of Christ.

The evening service was held at 7.30, the pastor spoke from the gospel of John, the 20th chapter and 14th verse. The male choir sang two good songs. Four new members joined the church at this meeting, their names are Frank Oscar Johnson, Mrs. Emma Josepina Johnson Miss Julia Cornelason and Miss Edith Johnson.

—The post office depaprtment has raised the ban on Santa Claus mail. Rescinding a recent decision, Postmaster Gen. Hitchcock has directed that any letters addressed to "Stanta Claus" may be delivered to charitable organizations or benevolent persons that ask for them, instead of having such mail returned to the senders or destroyed.

LETTER FROM DR. E. N. HARDY

To His Former Parishioners And Quincy Friends

IS FINELY LOCATED

Dr. Edwin Noah Hardy was given formal recognition as pastor of the First Congregational church of La Grange, Ill., Tuesday, October 31. Ministers and delegates were in attendance from many of the suburban and city churches and in the evening the other religious organizations of La Grange joined in extending a welcome to Dr. Hardy.

The following communication will be of great interest to the former parishioners of the popular pastor:

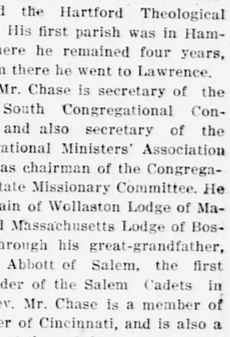

See Letter

Editors Quincy Ledger:

I think that it is high time to redeem a promise which I made to you more than six months ago that I would occasionally write you of my impressions of the Middle West. I am rather urged to this by personal considerations since I am hopelessly indebted to many friends in Quincy who in various ways have been reminding us of their continued interest in our welfare and persistently soliciting information concerning our life here. As nearly all these good friends are regular readers of the Ledger I may be able in this way to fulfill my promise to you and directly answer some of the many inquiries which almost daily come from the City of Presidents.

"Yes, I like the West," was my answer to the obvious query. "But" said Dr. C. L. Morgan, a former Bostonian, and my interrogator, "You must not judge the whole Middle West by the people of La Grange for your lot has fallen in one of the choicest places of the region." There is much to support this statement. The very conditions which have made La Grange one of the very best suburbs of Chicago and attracted to it people of sterling worth and highest ideals has naturally made it unattractive to the ultra-fashionable and sporting classes. Building lots are very expensive. Most of the homes in the main part of the city have cost ten thousand dollars or more. Most of the people own their homes and to maintain in them necessitates a large and sure income. The people make their money very easily and rapidly and are exceedingly generous. There are almost no poor people. There are no saloons and there has never been one in the place. No quetsionable places

LABEL CAMPAIGN.

The necessity for an educational campaign to make the public familiar with the various union labels, and the continuation of the campaign against the convict labor system in various States were discussed in the annual reports of officers at the opening session of the union label department of the American Federation of Labor held at Atlanta, Ga.

President John B. Lennon also emphasized the value of moving picture exhibits of various labels shown in the larger cities, and recommended the extension of this work.

of amusement. The city regulations respecting all sanitary matters are very strict. The schools are considered among the best in the State. The city is beautifully laid out.

About forty years ago it was open prairie, when cut up for residential purposes over thirty thousand shade trees were set out. There are no fences and the lawns are kept up with the greatest care. Asphalt sidewalks are found everywhere throughout the city. It is strictly a city of homes, nine-tenths of the men are in business in Chicago. The church life is very strong and in a recent canvas it was found that over ninety per cent were identified with the churches. The Congregational church is considered as strong as any in the city, has a beautiful building and is well equipped. Our Sunday school is just about the size of that in Bethany church in Quincy. The Endeavor Society is much stronger and the Missionary organizations very vigorous. My audiences are fully as large as in Quincy. We like the city, the church, and the people very much and we are not without some tangible evidences that our love is reciprocated. Two things may be spoken of indicative of the feeling of the people. For the first time in the history of the church an ecclesiastical council was called to give official recognition to the pastorate. After five months of service the church wished to do this for us. The Council convened last week and represented all the strongest churches on the denomination in Chicago and vicinity. The addresses were of high order and given my men who have known us for many years. Drs. Barton, McElveen and Morgan all former Bostonians. The whole occasion proves a love feast for the church because of the expressions of congratulation and fellowship. Without special effort the accession have been large thus far. Twenty-eight in number and all heads of families save six and including many leading people of the city. Just one-half have been men and thirteen on confession. We are very happy in our work.

That which first most impresses one from New England is the tremendous activitiy everywhere apparent in and about Chicago. Life is very intense. The business men attend more strictly to business. My home is on the main street and consequently I observe the hour when the men leave for Chicago. An express train of eight or nine cars is filled at Hinsdale and La Grange every morning at a quarter past seven not by clerks and wage earners but by men who are at the head of great industries. The men work hard, make longer hours than in New York or Boston, have the very latest and best equipment, organize their business for the very highest efficiency, and are making money, in many cases, with surprising rapidity. While many of the men smoke, there is almost no drinking among the La Grange men. The life is so intense that men are driven to extremes, either they are very free from bad habits or they become dissipated. So we see almost every day evidences of the saying that "Chicago is at once the worst and the best city in the country." The bad men are certainly about as bad as one can find anywhere, and the good men are far most outspoken for the honest and true life. This is seen in the churches there is less half way convictions, men are very strong in their convictions and are not a whit afraid to stand up for them anywhere. There is a tremendous stimulus in the life here. It never is monotonous, never uninteresting, always keyed up to the highest pitch. I have never known a group of people who could do more in the same time. Their interests are multitudinous and yet they find time, strength and means for each in its proper order. The people are optimists sure that tomorrow will be better than today and ready to shoulder heavy burdens to realize their hope.

While none of us have been homesick, we all have many very strong attachments which tug at our heartstrings for the City of the Presidents. We can never forget the happy life there, the many, many friends, the loyalty of the people of the church and the affection of long tested friendships. In making my statement to the Council I declared what I wish everyone in Quincy might hear that from my view-point I believed that there were few pastors in the country, who on the whole, had enjoyed a happier pastorate in a church or pleasanter life in a community than ours in Bethany church and in the city of Quincy. We can never repay the kindness which we received and yet gladly make public acknowledgement of it while we determine to pass it on to some one else.

E. N. Hardy.

Adventure

A Romance of The South Seas

BY JACK LONDON

PROLOGUE.

In this remarkable romance of the south seas Jack London has rivaled the best efforts of Robert LouisStevenson in the same field. Interest is aroused at once and becomes cumulative as Sheldon, the plucky owner of Berande plantation, though sick and weak, dominates 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by sheer grit and fear inspiring weapons; as Joan Lackland takes and holds her place beside him while he sears upon dark souls "the flaming mastery of the white man;" as this man and woman, thrown together under most unconventional circumstances, work and fight side by side in their strange partnership. Their thrilling adventures among savage people recall the lines:

"We are those fools who could not rest
In the dull earth we left behind,
But burned with passion for the west
And drank strange frenzy from its wind.
The world where wise men live at ease
Fades from our unregretful eyes,
And blind across uncharted seas
We stagger on our enterprise."
—"The Ship of Fools."

CHAPTER I.

SOMETHING TO BE DONE.

He was a very sick white man. He rode pickaback on a woolly headed, black skinned savage the lobes of whose ears had been pierced and stretched until one had torn out, while the other carried a circular block of carved wood three inches in diameter. The torn ear had been pierced again, but this time not so ambitiously, for the whole accommodated no more than a short clay pipe. The man-horse was greasy and dirty and naked save for an exceedingly narrow and dirty loin cloth, but the white man clung to him closely and desperately. At times from weakness his head drooped and rested on the woolly pate. At other times he lifted his head and stared with swimming eyes at the cocoanut palms that reeled and swung in the shimmering heat. He was clad in a thin undershirt and a strip of cotton cloth that wrapped about his waist and descended to his knees. On his head was a battered Stetson, known to the trade as a "Baden-Powell." About his middle was strapped a belt, which carried a large calibered automatic pistol and several spare clips, loaded and ready for quick work.

The rear was brought up by a black boy of fourteen or fifteen, who carried medicine bottles, a pail of hot water, and various other hospital appurtenances. They passed out of the compound through a small wicker gate, and went on under the blazing sun, winding about among new planted cocoanuts that threw no shade. There was not a breath of wind, and the superheated, stagnant air was heavy with pestilence. From the direction they were going arose a wild clamor, as of lost souls wailing and of men in torment. A long, low shed showed ahead, grass walled and grass thatched, and it was from here that the noise proceeded. There were shrieks and screams, some unmistakably of grief, others unmistakably of unendurable pain. As the white man drew closer he could hear a low and continuous moaning and groaning. He shuddered at the thought of entering, and for a moment was quite certain that he was going to faint. For that most dreaded of Solomon island scourges, dysentery, had struck Berande plantation, and he was all alone to cope with it. Also, he was afflicted himself.

By stooping close, still on man-back, he managed to pass through the low doorway. He took a small bottle from his follower and sniffed strong ammonia to clear his senses for the ordeal. Then he shouted "Shut up!" and the clamor stilled. A raised platform of forest slabs, six feet wide, with a slight pitch, extended the full length of the shed. Alongside of it was a yard wide runway. Stretched on the platform, side by side and crowded close, lay a score of blacks. That they were low in the order of human life was apparent at a glance. They were maneaters. Their faces were asymmetrical, bestial; their bodies were ugly and apelike. They wore nose rings of clam shell and turtle shell, and from the ends of their noses, which were also pierced, projected horns of beads strung on stiff wire. Their ears were pierced and distended to accommodate wooden plugs and sticks, pipes, and all manner of barbaric ornaments. Their faces and bodies were tattooed or scarred in hideous designs. In their sickness they were no clothing, not even loin clouts, though they retained their shell armlets, their bead necklaces and their leather belts, between which and the skin were thrust naked knives. The bodies of many were covered with horrible sores. Swarms of flies rose and settled, or flew back and forth in clouds.

The white man went down the line, dosing each man with medicine. To some he gave chlorodyne. He was forced to concentrate with all his will in order to remember which of them could stand ipecacuanha and which of them were constitutionally unable to retain that powerful drug. One who lay dead he ordered to be carried out. He spoke in the sharp, peremptory manner of a man who would take no nonsense, and the well men who obeyed his orders scowled malignantly. One muttered deep in his chest as he took the corpse by the feet. The white man exploded in speech and action. It cost him a painful effort, but his arm shot out, landing a back hand blow on the black's mouth.

"What name you, Angara?" he shouted. "What for talk 'long you, eh? I knock seven bells out of you, too much, quick!"

With the automatic swiftness of a wild animal the black gathered himself to spring. The anger of a wild animal was in his eyes; but he saw the white man's hand dropping to the pistol in his belt. The spring was never made. The tensed body relaxed, and the black, stooping over the corpse, helped carry it out. This time there was no muttering.

"Swine!" the white man gritted out through his teeth at the whole breed of Solomon islanders.

He was very sick, this white man, as sick as the black men who lay helpless about him and whom he attended. He never knew each time he entered the festering shambles whether or not he would be able to complefe the round. But he did know, in large degree of certainty, that if he ever fainted there in the midst of the blacks those who were able would be at his throat like ravening wolves.

"I KNOCK SEVEN BELLS OUT OF YOU, TOO MUCH, QUICK!"

Part way down the line a man was dying. He gave orders for his removal as soon as he had breathed his last. A black stuck his head inside the shed door, saying:

"Four fella sick too much."

Fresh cases, still able to walk, they clustered about the spokesman. The white man singled out the weakest and put him in the place just vacated by the corpse. Also he indicated the next weakest, telling him to wait for a place until the next man died. Then, ordering one of the well men to take a squad from the field force and build a lean-to addition to the hospital, he continued along the runway, administering medicine and cracking jokes in beche-de-mer English to cheer the sufferers. Now and again from the far end a weird wail was raised. When he arrived there he found the noise was emitted by a boy who was not sick. The white man's wrath was immediate.

"What name you sing out alla time?" he demanded

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES
NO SLATE NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

MATTERS AT COUNCIL MEETING

An adjourned meeting of the City Council will be held this evening and while there have been but few committee meetings since last Monday, the meeting will doubtless be an important one. In addition to committee reports there are several matters that may come up for action, one in particular being the order appropriating $2,500 for replanking the Neponset bridge. This order is not on the table.

BROCKTON FAIR.

According to a report of the board of directors of the Brockton Fair Association at annual meeting Friady afternoon, the profits of the fair this year were less than one-half what they were a year ago, but despite this fact it was voted to give $500 to the Brockton Hospital and $500 to the Wales Home for Aged Women

Charles Howard was re-elected president with these other offices: Vice-president, W. B. Cross, B. O. Caldwell, F. F. Field, F. S. Telman; secretary, P. G. Flint; treasurer, E. M. Thompson; directiors, the officers, and A. W. Packard, F. B. Gardner, F. L. Crocker, Horace A. Keith, H. L. Tinkham, Walter Rapp, W. L. Wright, Everett T. Packard, Fred Drew, finance committee, Emerson Goldthwaite H. A. Keith and Fred Drew.

The fair next year will be held Oct. 1, 2, 3 and 4.

According to members of the board of directors, no consideration was given the report that the fair was to be transferred from Brockton to Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H.

"There is absolutely no doubt," declared one, "that the fair will be in Brockton next year, and the year after for all I know."

WOLLASTON YACHT CLUB

Yacht club and "Jack" Harland of the Inter Club Racing association both had a good word to say after which Ex-Commodore Dawes spoke.

Next came Walter Stone of the Annisquam club. Walter is a whole vaudeville entertainment himself and when he started on his songs and stories, if the members had had their way, he would have taken up the rest of the evening.

Following a speech by Ralph Goudy of the Winthrop Yacht Club, Frank F. Taylor chairman of the entertainment committee was introduced.

At the outset he stated he had a poem to read and asked the assistance of someone. "Ex-Commodore Fenno was prevailed upon to share the platform and the following original poem by chairman Taylor was read:

We all remember years ago
When the Yacht Club was started
Because we didn't think alike
From the Squantum then we parted.

But those days are passed and gone
Good feeling now prevails,
And may the Wollaston and Squantum flags
Both fly above our sails.

But who among us here tonight
Has worked harder for the club
Than the man who stands beside me now
Soused to the eyes—with grub,
Captain Joe Fenno

Who is it when we need a man
To help us with our floats
To take them out or put them in
And fasten all the ropes,
Captain Joe Fenno.

Who is it, when we want advice
For this thing or for that
A man who always has his head
And knows just where he's at,
Captain Joe Fenno

Who is it has the club at heart
Who works both night and day
To make this club the winning club
In good old Quincy Bay,
Captain Joe Fenno.

Are we a winner? Well I guess
We're right there every minute
And Joe you bet you're life we're proud
To have you a member in it.

And so as proof of our regard
And to show appreciation
We'd like to make you president
Of this grand glorious nation.

But this of course we cannot do
Till Bill Taft's reign is passed
Instead we're going to give you now
A viisio stereo glass.

This glass cannot magnify
Our feelings toward you Joe,
But we know you'll have to use it
To find in this club a foe.

Captain Fenno was visibly overcome at the presentation of the binocular glasses, a gift of the club, but quickly recovered and made a fitting speech in reply.

Between the various speakers, popular songs in which all joined, were enjoyed. A vaudeville show of nine numbers containing acts from various Boston theatres followed which held the attention of the members until a late hour.

THE BOY SCOUTS.

Thre seems to be a certain hesitation on the part of some people to interest themselves in the Boy Scouts of America, and it appears that this is due to the fact that they want to know more of what the principals and objects of the organization are, before associating themselves with it.

Primarily, the object of the movement is to make the boys of this country more manly, more moral, more useful, and to direct their minds and interests into channels that will lead them to become more capable, self-respecting citizens of the future.

This movement started in England and has been a wonderful success in the solving of the boy problem in that country.

The New England headquarters are at No. 835 Old South Building, Boston.

It is the American boy we are trying to reach, to build up his body, his respect for others and himself, and the religion of the Boy Scouts of America is summed up in article 12 of the Scout law, which reads as follows:

"A scout is reverent. He is reverent toward God. He is faithful in his religious duties and respects the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion."

The expense is small. It costs nothing to join, and after the boy has proved himself master of certain requirements, he takes the scout oath and is allowed to purchase a uniform.

The uniform is of government tested material and is made by the same contractor that makes the army uniforms. The outfit of the boy need cost about $4.00 complete, and is well worth the money, and saves many a costlier garment being worn on his camping hikes. These uniforms can only be purchased by regularly enrolled Scouts and only by them on an order signed by the scout master.

"Him fella my brother belong me," was the answer. "Him fella die too much."

"You sing out, him fella brother belong you die too much," the white man went on in threatening tones. "I cross too much along you. What name you sing out, eh? You fathead make um brother belong you die close up too much. You fella finish sing out, savvee? You fella no finish sing out I make finish quick."

He threatened the waiter with his fist, and the black cowered down, glaring at him with sullen eyes.

"Sing out no good little bit," the white man went on, more gently. "You no sing out. You chase um fella fly. Too much strong fella fly. You catch water, washee brother belong you, washee plenty too much, bime bye brother belong you all right.

"Jump!" he shouted fiercely at the end, his will penetrating the low intelligence of the black with dynamic force that made him jump to the task of brushing the loathsome swarms of flies away.

Again he rode out into the reeking heat. He clutched the black's neck tightly and drew a long breath; but the dead air seemed to shrivel his lungs, and he dropped his head and dozed till the house was reached. Every effort of will was torture, yet he was called upon continually to make efforts of will. He gave the black he had ridden a nip of trade gin. Viaburi, the house boy, brought him corrosive sublimate and water, and he took a thorough antiseptic wash. He dosed himself with chlorodyne, took his own pulse, smoked a thermometer, and lay back on the couch with a suppressed groan. It was mid-afternoon, and he had completed his third round that day. He called the house boy.

"Take um big fella look along Jessie," he commanded.

The boy carried the long telescope out on the veranda and searched the sea.

"One fella schooner long way little bit," he announced. "One fella Jessie."

The white man gave a little gasp of delight.

"You make um Jessie, five sticks tobacco along you," he said.

There was silence for a time, during which he waited with eager impatience.

"Maybe Jessie, maybe other fella schooner," came the faltering admission.

The man wormed to the edge of the couch and slipped off to the floor on his knees. By means of a chair he drew himself to his feet. Still clinging to the chair, supporting most of his weight on it, he shoved it to the door and out upon the veranda. The sweat from the exertion streamed down his face and showed through the undershirt across his shoulders. He managed to get into the chair, where he panted in a state of collapse. In a few minutes he roused himself. The boy held the end of the telescope against one of the veranda scantlings, while the man gazed through it at the sea. At last he picked up the white sails of the schooner and studied them.

"No Jessie," he said very quietly. "That's the Malakula."

He changed his seat for a steamer reclining chair. Three hundred feet away the sea broke in a small surf upon the beach. To the left he could see the white line of breakers that marked the bar of the Balesuna river and, beyond, the rugged outline of Savo island. Directly before him, across the twelve mile channel, lay Florida island, and, farther to the right, dim in the distance, he could make out portions of Malaita, the savage island, the abode of murder and robbery, and man eating, the place from which his own two hundred plantation hands had been recruited. Between him and the beach was the cane grass fence of the compound. The gate was ajar, and he sent the house boy to close it. Within the fence grew a number of lofty cocoanut palms. On either side the path that led to the gate stood two tall flagstaffs, like ships' masts, with topmasts spliced on in true nautical fashion, with shrouds, ratlines, gaffs and flag halyards. From the gaff of one two gay flags hung limply, one a checker board of blue and white squares, the other a white pennant centred with a red disk. It was the international code signal of distress.

The man ordered the great bell to be rung as a signal for the plantation hands to cease work and go to their barracks. Then he mounted his manhorse and made the last round of the day.

In the hospital were two new cases. To these he gave castor oil. He congratulated himself. It had been an easy day. Only three had died. He inspected the copra drying that had been going on, and went through the barracks to see if there were any sick lying hidden and defying his rule of segregation. Returned to the house, he received the reports of the boss boys and gave instructions for next day's work. The boats' crew boss also he had in, to give assurance, as was the custom nightly, that the whale boats were hauled up and padlocked. This was a most necessary precaution, for the blacks were in a funk, and a whale boat left lying on the beach in the evening meant a loss of twenty blacks by morning. Since the blacks were worth $30 a piece or less, according to how much of their time had been worked out, Berande plantation could ill afford the loss. Besides, whale boats were not cheap in the Solomons, and, also, the deaths were daily reducing the working capital. Seven blacks had fled into the bush the week before, and four had dragged themselves back, helpless from fever, with the report that two more had been killed and kai kai'd (eaten) by the hospitable bushmen. The seventh man was still at large and was said to be working along the coast on the lookout to steal a canoe and get away to his own island.

Viaburi brought two lighted lanterns to the white man for inspection. He glanced at them and saw that they were burning brightly with clear, broad flames, and nodded his head. One was hoisted up to the gaff of the flagstaff, and the other was placed on the wide veranda. They were the leading lights to the Berande anchorage, and every night in the year they were so inspected and hung out.

He rolled back on his couch with a sigh of relief. The day's work was done. A rifle lay on the couch beside him. His revolver was within reach of his hand. An hour passed, during which he did not move. He lay in a state of half slumber, half coma. He became suddenly alert. A creak on the back veranda was the cause. The room was L shaped; the corner in which stood his couch was dim, but the hanging lamp in the main part of the room, over the billiard table and just around the corner so that it did not shine on him, was burning brightly. Likewise the verandas were well lighted. He waited without movement. The creaks were repeated, and he knew several men lurked outside.

"What name?" he cried sharply.

The house, raised a dozen feet above the ground, shook on its pile foundations to the rush of retreating footsteps.

"They're getting bold," he muttered. "Something will have to be done."

The full moon rose over Malaita and shone down on Berande. Nothing stirred in the windless air. From the hospital still proceeded the moaning of the sick. In the grass thatched barracks nearly two hundred woolly headed man eaters slept off the weariness of the day's toil, though several lifted their heads to listen to the curses of one who cursed the white man who never slept. On the four verandas of the house the lanterns burned. Inside, between rifle and revolver, the man himself moaned and tossed in intervals of troubled sleep.

ACTIVE CANDIDATES.

While much has been said of late about the contest that is going on in Ward Five for the nomination of Ward Councilman, but little mention has been made of the candidacy of Horace W. Richmond or Charles E. Barker. This does not mean that these two gentlemen are quiet by any means, because they are putting up a very active campaign, and it is an open question as to which three of the five candidates will win.

As has been stated by the Ledger before some unusually good timber has been mentioned in Wollaston this year, for Councilmen, and it is taken as a good sign that the voters are sitting up and taking notice.

PUBLIC HEALTH MENACED

Disinfectants Are to Be Used In the Streets of New York

New York, Nov. 13.—New York streets have become so littered with piles of garbage as the result of the street cleaners' strike that today Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards will begin the use of disinfectants. The strike has now been in progress four days.

Commissioner Edwards' decision was made after a tour of the city with Dr. Lederle, commissioner of health, who feared that conditions were such as to menace public health. Lederle said that he found conditions on the East Side "pretty bad," but he was confident that Edwards would be able to restore normal conditions in two or three days.

GALAHAD DISCUSSED PICTURE SHOWS

That moving picture shows are a moral benefit to the community, was discussed by Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church Sunday. John Spargo valiantly maintained the affimative while W. G. PeParce took the negative. Every member took a lively part in the general discussion.

Mr. Spargo said: "We have got to have intertainment of some kind, and how better than by hearing good talent and seeing scenes depicted by means of moving pictures, from the best authors. All this we get at a popular price. There is no suggestion of fast life from them because they are all passed upon by a board of censorship before they are allowed to be presented to the public and, if one does get by the board, it is readily condemned by the general public. The managements are doing their very best to give a good, clean, moral intertainment proving a great help in raising the standard of morals in the community. Such pictures as the Passion play, the Panama Canal and the reviewing of the fleet at Provincetown are not only instructive, but carry with them a great significance that could not be conveyed to the people otherwise. This is what the public attend the moving picture shows for, and, if at any time a picture appears before a Quincy audience, that is anyway suggestive or immoral, it is then time for the City fathers to use their influence in supressing it.

Mr. Pearce sharply criticised the present moving picture shows, that the use of abbreviated costumes should be eliminated. That the use of vulgar expressions, freqently profanity tend to destroy the moral susceptibility of the audience, particularly the younger generation. That a large number of the pictures depict social evils which create a injurious mental and passionate impression. That the moving picture places are fast becoming habitual meeting places for the young of both sex.

The character of the music, to a large extent is of no benefit to a large percentage of the audience and the shows are a detrimental to home influences. The pictures would be of a great bneifit to Quincy if they could be broght under municipal management, with a board of or own censorship, depicting social conditions in our own community and not of outside evils. They could be instructive to the schol children if they were broght under this head. We are gradually departing from the moving picture developing the music hall theatre that has been detrimental to others cities and an evening to the church at large.

SOCCER GAME WINDS UP WITH BATTLE ROYAL

So warm was the soccer football contest between the Fore River and Oaks clubs, at Fall River last Saturday, that police succor was necessitated in order to allow the game to proceed in a fitting manner. The game itself was a good one and the honors were divided evenly, the score resulting in a 1 to 1 tie.

That the game was well fought can be best attested by the fact that in the second half, with the score still 1 to 1, Foley of the Oaks and D. McDonald of the Fore Rivers, decided to estrange themselves from the soccer game, and take recourse to the fistic art. The result was, that even in this latter department, the Marquis of Queensberry rules were totally ignored and both men indulged in a sort of combination football and prize fighting. Both struggled in the dirt and the crowd present immediately rushed to the scene of conflict.

The police were quick to rush to the aid of the combatants and accomplished their work without drawing clubs. The keen rivalry that exists between both contingencies, was responsible in a large measure for the roughness of the game and it is safe to say that a more exciting game has not taken place in soccer football circles this season.

POLITICAL NOTES.

One of the most level headed men in the present City Council is Councilman Edward F. Parlee of Atlantic. Councilman Parlee serving this year on the Committee on Streets and Public Buildings and has done excellent service. Through his efforts, Atlantic got its share of new streets and permanent sidewalks and he had done other excellent service. It is just such men as Councilman Parlee, that the City Council and the tax payers of the city need.

It is said that if Councilman Smith, who is running this year on the Democratic ticket as Councilman at large, should be elected, he will be among the possibilities as President of the new Council. Councilman Smith has been called to the chair several times the present year by President Bryant and in every case has acquitted himself with credit.

USEFUL TABLE PARTY.

The useful table committee in charge of the fair of Memorial church Atlantic gave a party at the home of Mrs. L. Fuller of Botolph street Saturday evening. As the fair commences Tuesday the committee's outside work ended with this affair and it proved most successful in every way.

Refreshments were served throughout the evening. These parties have been helpful in bringing together the people in a social way as well as helping along a cause that is of a mutual benefit to a community.

Demand for tickets for the lecture by Emery L. Crane on Friday evening, indicates that he will be greeted by a full house and that a goodly sum will be realized for the Quincy Day Nursery.

LIVE SPORTING EVENTS

QUINCY 8, WORCESTER 0.

The members of the local High school football team journeyed to Worcester last Saturday, and in one of the hardest fought games of the season, defeated the Worcester High combination by the score of 8 to 0. The local team was at its best, and the only deplorable tactics noticeable in the game was the general "rough house" work of the home team, so called "slugging" being resorted to in a large measure.

Owing to the Holy Cross College game, the contest was not as largely attended as is usually the case, yet those present were given ample opportunity to witness the superior work of the Quincy boys.

As has been demonstrated in every game this season, the punting of Page was a potent factor in enabling the local boys to emerge from the contest in triumph. Time and time again, he was called on to keep the ball out of danger, and on every occasion his kicks were good for 40 or 50 yards. Not alone in the punting department did he show up to advantage, but even in rushing the ball, he classed himself as an efficient ground gainer, and proved himself to be a formidable player in the backfield position.

His kick from the 25 yard line in the third period, from a difficult angle, was nothing short of spectacular, and it was acclaimed by all to have been about the best field goal ever made in the Worcester gridiron.

The tackle plays of the local eleven were used several times, and every time enabled Captain Johnson to reap great gains. Johnson himself was in the game all the time, and in fact the whole line showed itself a tower of strength, as was manifested when Quincy held its opponents for downs on the three yard line.

The Quincy ends played splendidly and lost no time in getting down under punts, and tackling the opposing runner almost in his tracks. The forward pass was tried five times and worked successfully on each occasion.

The home team depended for its game mostly on shift plays, yet when the local boys became awakened to the situation this play failed to work to advantage.

The local boys made their score in the third period by consistent line plugging. The ball was advanced to the 25 yard line and a forward pass to Larkin gained the touchdown. A number of local fans, many of whom were students at Quincy High, took the trip to Worcester.

In the evening all the players went to a theatre and the local boys are now looking forward to next Saturday when they terminate their football season of 1911 by trying conclusions with the much heralded Waltham High aggregation.

QUINCY A. A. 6, CHELSEA 0.

Adhering tenaciously to their claim of 160 pound champions of the state, the members of the Quincy A. A. football eleven travelled to Chelsea, Saturday, and on Carter Field, before a crowd of 1000 loyal rooters, vanquished the strong Chelsea Y. M. C. A team to the tune of 6 to 0. The game had been widely advertised and the fact that great anxiety had been expressed as to the outcome, is responsible for the large attendance, a great portion of which was comprised of the fair class of football enthusiasts.

As was expected it was a game for blood, and only the strong offensive work of the local eleven, prevented the game from resulting in a tie score. The defensive strength of the Quincy boys' was likewise displayed conspicuously, when, in the very first period, they prevented their opponents from scoring, by holding them for downs within a distance of three yards from the goal line.

To commend any one player on the local eleven would have a tendency to discredit the article of football presented by the other ten team mates, but there was one boy who shone forth in the limelight and he was McDonald, better known to all as plain "Webb."

His punting was the one great feature of the game, and was noticeable to advantage in the first part of the game, when his long kicks deterred the home team from making a score.

On one occasion he got off a punt which went fully 70 yards, and which proved to be the main drawback for the Chelsea team in its endeavor to rush the ball down the field.

For two periods the game was played pretty evenly, but in the beginning of the second half, the local boys seemed to enter the game with renewed vigor, confidence and determination, and at once began to use every effort to win.

Forward passes, line plunges and tackle plays were tried successfully, and by continued plugging, the Quincy A. A. had succeeded in placing the ball within striking distance of the goal line. It was now within 25 yards of the desired spot.

A couple of rushes placed it on the home team's 15 yard line, and on the next rush, Boyle, by a sensational burst of speed, was enabled to score the first and only touchdown of the game. McDonald kicked the goal in fine style and the score stood 6 to 0 in favor of the local team.

In the fourth period the local team displayed the same form as in the third. Consistent line plunging again placed the ball in close proximity to the goal, but when Hunter put the pigskin over for a seemingly second touchdown, the umpire declared him to have been offside and the ball went to the Chelsea team. Quincy regained possession of it, however, and when the whistle blew for the end of the game, the local had advanced the ball to the home team's 3 yard line.

A number of local rooters accompanied the Quincy team, and they were all pleased at the annexation of the 4th straight victory. The next game will be played at Merrymount Park, next Saturday and from the article of football that the local boys have been exhibiting, a record breaking crowd should be on hand to witness the contest.

BASKET BALL.

The games played last Saturday evening in the Y. M. C. A. were far superior to those of the preceding week in all around playing and excitement.

The "Columbia" team, Capt. Wilson, sprung a big surprise on "Penn" Capt. Tirrell and his fast bunch. Although Columbia was without the services of their star center Alstein, R. Favorite, a reserve man, put up such a fine game that the result was in doubt until the last two minutes of play when "Husky" Pinel shot two fine baskets. Verner Johnson was the dark horse of the game for he more than made Capt. Tirrell work for his shots and once in the second half, he brought down the house by standing his opponent on his head, during a scrimmage.

Second Game.

The second game between Dartmouth and Brown, was a "corker" from start to finish. Dartmouth winning out by the fine shooting of Capt. Trask, who caged 6 goals, all from difficult angles. Trask's work was all the more remarkable when we consider that he had played a hard game of football at Worcester, with the local High school team and then had to hurry back to Boston to get here on time for basket ball. "Red" Shirley of the "Brown" team, did his best to keep Trask from scoring but as he has not been playing basket ball for two years, he was not equal to the pace. Tytler also played a good game for the losers.

Third Game.

The last game of the evening proved to be the best played and the fastest one of the three, although the score was 24 to 9 in favor of Cornell, Capt. Rich against Carlisle, Capt. Thomas.

The passing of Rich, R. Cranshaw and Estey has seldom been surpassed on the local floor and if the rest of the team can speed up to those three men the opposing teams will have a hard time downing them.

"Al." Thomas, "Bill" Cranshaw and "Bones" Francis had plenty of shots for goals but they all seemed to be nervous and Thomas was the only one of the three to score. Mundie and "Fish" Hunt, of Cornell, furnished lots of fun for the spectators by their playing and general "rough house" work.

A meeting of the N. E. A. A. A. U. Basket Ball League of Greater Boston, and of which Quincy A. A. is a member, will be held this evening in the rooms of St. Joseph's A. A. Cambridge street, West End, to perfect plans for the coming season. There are now 11 clubs in the league, and it is expected that another club will be enrolled this evening so as to make a 12 club circuit.

There is also to be a second league comprised of the second teams of each club. The games will all be played under the supervision of the basket ball commitee of the N. E. A. A. A. U., which will also appoint the various officials.

It is expected that all plans will be perfected this evening and that a complete schedule of games will be drawn up. The opening game will be played on Thanksgiving Day. William H. Flynn, is the representative of the local association, on the schedule committee.

The teams now members of the association are the Quincy A. A., the Madison A. C. of Charlestown, St. Mary's A. A. of the North End, St. Joseph's T. A. of the West End, St. Alphonsus A. A. of Roxbury, Lynn Y. M. C. A., Notre Dames of South Boston, Cathedral Y. M. C. A., Coast Artillery, Cunningham Gymnasium of Milton, Fr. Matthews of Cambridge, and Sodality A. C. of East Boston.

The local association will be represented by an exceptionally fast team and will be composed of last year's High school stars, including Manning, Harmon, Prout and the Chapman brothers. The local games will be played either in the Coliseum or in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy.

This movement on the part of the Quincy A. A. is bound to add much to the athletic outlook this coming year. Basketball was once a conspicious figure in the athletic pabulum, right here in local circles and if the endeavors of the Quincy A. A. are to be realized, we may rest assured that the old time spirit of enthsiasum bids fair to be resucitated. Then too, the local team will be as fast as any of them, and if it can land the pennant, the Quincy A. A. will then be without a peer in the country as an athletic organization at least from a football and basket ball standpoint.

FRED C. POPE PASSES AWAY

Prominent Citizen Of Atlantic Is Dead Aged 74

HIS CAREER

Frederick C. Pope, one of the long residents of Atlantic and one of its most prominent citizens passed away at his home on Ocean street, Monday, aged 74 years. Mr. Pope has not been in good health for some months, but he has been able to be about up to within two weeks.

FREDERICK C. POPE.

Mr. Pope was one time prominently identified with the affairs of the city, being the assessor from Ward Six during the first two years of the city government. He was appointed as Principal Assessor by Mayor Fairbanks in 1891 and served in that capacity during the years 1891 and 1892.

"DARK HORSE" IN WARD 4

Dr. T. J. Reynolds Enters Field For School Committee

WILL USE STICKERS

Considerable talk has prevailed during the past few days in the Ward Four section, owing to the fact that no contests were to take place today among the various Democratic aspirants. In past years, the fourth Ward has invariably been the scene of the warmest contests for the different municipal offices, and much anxiety had been expressed this year over the failure of a sufficient number of candidates entering the field, to make the contests close and exciting.

There was but one candidate for School Committee from the Ward, and he was Joseph McPherson, but now Dr. T. J. Reynolds is in line for the honors, and his will be a "sticker campaign," since he has failed to file nomination papers.

Dr. Reynolds is well and familiarly known in the West Quincy district and has a score of friends who were pleased to be informed this morning that he was to be a candidate on "stickers." McPherson seems to be a favorite among a number of the young voters and it surely will prove an interesting struggle.

There was a rumor about this morning that ex-Councilman McDevitt was to be a candidate for Council from Ward Four, but the rumor was dispelled this morning by a number of his friends, who, when interviewed, stated that there was absolutely no foundation in such a report.

STONE AND MILLER SPEAK AT RALLY HELD IN WARD 5

Both Candidates Outline Platform And Receive Great Reception

Other Candidates For Local Officers At Meeting

At the rally in the Park and Downs church Monday evening both of the Republican mayoralty aspirants were heard beside a good sprinkling of candidates for ward councilmen and others interested in local politics.

Although the church was as cold as the proverbial barn and those present sat huddled up with overcoats, the meeting was not a frost as might be supposed but a goodly amount of enthusiasm was aroused.

William MacDonald presided and introduced as first speaker Charles L. Gilliatt candidate for ward councilman. Mr. Gilliatt spoke of the future hope of Wollaston in regard to manufacturing interests and urged that no "bullets" he used at the coming caucus. He advocated the return of Bailey to the council if for no other reason than this failing there would be three new men in the council this year from the ward.

Frank Shay in a clever and entertaining speech asked that the candidates be selected on their merits without personal feeling and that there be no slates that are easier broken than made. The thing to do is to get out the vote and when the polls close on the caucus, win or lose, fight for the candidates nominated.

Eugene R. Stone, candidate for the Republican mayoralty nomination spoke at length of his platform as outlined in the "Ledger." If elected he proposed putting the tax rate up where it belonged for one year to straighten out the financial condition of the city.

He would endeavor to develop Quincy's waterfront and denied he was in a deal with the Democrats, if elected, to keep in office the same heads of departments.

He would attempt the improvement of freight and transit facilities and if elected would give the city an efficient business administration. If defeated he would do all he could to elect Mr. Miller.

Charles E. Barker, candidate for councilman said he was running on his friend's solicitation and was not what is commonly known as a politician or office seeker. He had resided here for 12 years and if elected would do everything in his power to further the interests of Wollaston.

Irving L. Shaw, also councilmanic

CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION
FOR MAYOR

EUGENE R. STONE

To the Republican Voters of Quincy:

I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor. I have been a member of the City Council for four years, serving a portion of that time, as a member of the Finance Committee and Chairman of the Fire Department and Police.

I am a member and for two years President of the Quincy Board of Trade.

I feel I am familiar with the City's financial condition, its resources and liabilities, and with those municipal problems which must be dealt with during the coming year.

I recognize that these problems should be met honestly and fearlessly and solved solely in the interest of the City.

I recognize that strict economy must be practised in all the City's departments, but I believe it should be a sane and reasonable economy, one which will help, and not retard, Quincy's inspiring growth, as both a residential and a manufacturing city.

I recognize that at the head of each department there should be a man not only of known probity of character and ability but one willing to give the City the full benefit of those qualities.

I recognize that Quincy's future as a Commercial City is largely dependent on the solution of our Freight Transportation problem. It is therefore important that immediate action be taken to secure for Quincy Merchants and Manufacturers proper water, as well as rail, transportation facilities. The intelligent development of our Water Front and the establishment of a Public Dock will be important factors in securing this end.

I recognize that all the Laws for the conservation of the public health, morals and rights of the Citizens should be actively and impartially enforced.

I recognize that the Chief Executive should realize that he is Mayor and the servant, not of a few, but of all the people and the whole City.

If honored by being made your Nominee next Tuesday, I will be elected Mayor at the December Election and I pledge myself to the foregoing principles and every principle which makes for the welfare and prosperity of our City."

I assure you that if elected I will enter office untrameled by any other pledge or promise whatsoever.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Italy and Turkey seem likely to fight for some time, but there are no signs that the population will be so reduced that we can't get our bananas sold.

Joseph H. Choate says young men should enter only the profession that has a strong attraction for them. But we need something besides base ball players.

The administration is certainly forcing the trusts into nominal compliance with the law, but is all of this upsetting process doing anything to reduce the cost of living?

J. P. Morgan says dissolving the trusts is like unscrambling a scrambled egg. From the considerable admixture of hog, the trusts look more to some people like ham omelette.

Stripes are not to be worn any more by the prisoners at Atlanta federal jail, but we trust that some checks will be placed on their further misconduct.

It is going to cost $1,458,929 to run Yale university for the coming year, but if the college produces a winning foot ball team and would let it go on the road a short time, that little sum could be raised.

TODAY'S CAUCUS.

Of great interest is the fight today in local circles for political honor. An animated campaign has been waged by the candidates for the Republican Mayoralty contest and it is seldom, if ever, that two such superior men have entered the arena to seek the highest gift that can be offered in the city's public life.

From time to time it has been our pleasure to publish the many qualifications of both candidates for the office they seek. Both are men of high business acumen, honest to a fault, and with records standing high in the minds of their fellow citizens with whom they have long lived and been in close touch in both a social and business way.

That the election today will be close, goes without saying. When the smoke of battle has cleared away and the victor named, whoever the winner, this fact is assured, that he will give the city an honest, fearless and business like administration, creditable to himself and satisfactory to those who have put him in office.

THE GAINS OF SOCIALISM.

The gains in the Socialist vote in the November elections all over the country does not necessarily mean that a largely increased number of people want the farms and factories turned over to the government for the politicians to run for their own benefit.

But when the Socialists get 11 mayors in prosperous Ohio, and come within 3,000 votes of electing a lieutenant governor in conservative Mississippi, there are symptoms of political fever which politicians will scrutinize.

Over in Germany a Socialist vote is being cast much larger proportionately than in America. This does not mean that any large proportion of Germans believe theoretical socialism, that government should own the industries. It means that a great many liberal minded people who do not believe in "collectivism" vote the Socialist ticket as their only available means of protest against an illiberal government.

In our country a somewhat parallel phenomenon is being observed. The Socialist gains are largely in municipal elections. This is essentially a protest against the American habit a a municipal government of politicians, by politicians, for politicans.

The city councils of American cities have for many years been a kind of "nigger heaven" for the smaller political fry. For some men there is a peculiar romance about the smaller pickings and stealings of politics Five dollars earned by the exercise of their "inflodence" looks bigger than $25 earned by raising corn or cabbages.

Recognizing their inability to enter the higher walks of political aspiration, the city councils have presented an available field for their Lilliputian statesmanship. Entrance is easy. The fact that you are not too standoffish to clink beer mugs with your fellow patriots over the saloon bar proves that you are sympathetic with the great throbbing heart of the common people ,and therefore competent to spend the people's money.

But when good fellowship is preferred to business efficiency, the tax payer pays the difference. Here comes in the Socialist candidate for mayor or councilman, commonly a man outside the existing rings. Realizing the inefficiency of government by politicans, the despairing voter thinks he would like to try government by long haired theorists.

Will he be any better off? Perhaps so, here and there, where Socialist candidates have some real capacity for business. But ordinarily not.

THE RISE IN THE STOCK MARKET

The chill tremors of last September in Wall street, which depressed stock prices below the actual cash values of the existing properties, have been followed by a rise which bids fair to carry values above a point warranted by interest returns and degree of security.

The only people who ever make any money in Wall street are those who buy when every one else has a blue chill, and prices are low, and who sell when every one else is shouting Hurrah, and prices are high.

The insiders who understand human nature always play that game and hence they generally win.

The Lamb, however, rarely does that. He takes the blue talk of the brokers at its face value. He fails to realize that it is merely the game of the men who want to buy valuable properties cheap. He fails to realize that the bull talk is manufactured by those who fear prices are too high, and want to retain the level until they can get under cover.

As 99 out of 100 outsiders lack the nerve to play the game the only way it can be played, 99 out of 100 people should never buy one solitary share of stock.

THE CHINESE REVOLUTION.

The Chiuese laundryman in his shapeless bags misnamed trousers, shuffling down the street in his shapeless gait, is generally admitted not to be a representative of the best the Celestial empire can produce. Some of us who have met the clean cut students now in our colleges know personally that they are of a type which will create a much greater stir in the world.

But when you think that the present revolution, which bids fair to overwhelm the oldest empire on the planet, has been delayed until the year 1911, when among other peoples it would have happened at least 250 years earlier, you touch a fundamental weakness in the Chinese temperament.

A recent writer in the Arena attributes China's sleep to an utter indifference to whatever does not seem to the Chinaman to touch his personal interests directly.

He gives this illustration of indifference to human sufferings on the part of others: A party of American tourists were looking over a leading Chinese city under an English speaking Chinese guide. They came to the place of execution. The guide gave vividly all the gruesome details of the various fashionable forms of exit from this mortal life. There were beheading, slow strangulation, death by the thousand cuts, etc. The women of the party looked a bit pale.

"But you don't do those things now, do you?" queried one of the women. The guide looked slightly puzzled.

"O, no, not now," he said, "four o'clock this afternoon."

The Americans threw taxed English tea into Boston harbor because they could not have a vote on the way their taxes were spent. Probably the taxes were no higher than what we pay today. Very likely they were honestly spent. But our people could not swallow the principle of the thing.

Over across the world, long suffering John Chinaman not merely has no say as to how his taxes should be spent, but about half of the taxes find their way into the pockets of official grafters. And the grafters have not been people of his own race and traditions, but the foreign Man-Chu dynasty, who conquered the country in 1644, and have ruled it ever since.

The Chinese have splendid qualities of patient industry. But until they acquire the passionate ideals of justice and devotion to national initiative that have made America great, they will not be a large force in world politics.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Editor:—This letter to Mr. Miller was placed in his hands on Monday morning with a request that he make the contents known to the voters and his explanation in fairness to all concerned. My duties at the City Council last evening failed me the pleasure of hearing Mr. Miller, for I was informed when through at City Hall, that Mr. Miller had gone by some time before to Ward Five. However, on my way home, I met the chairman of Mr. Miller's rally, who came from another ward to preside and was led to believe that most of the suggestions contained in my letter to Mr. Miller had not been discussed. However, I feel that in Mr. ness to all and having questioned Mr. Stone, and believing that hasty endorsements are not conducive to best results in a standard bearer, and having always been a consistent Republican, I feel that in justice to all who have stood for Republican principles in our city the last four years that Mr. Miller should not ignore questions of this nature. I have been pre-judged. I am not passing judgment, and simply desire to place the facts even at this late hour for under the circumstances I believe only with a full knowledge of the facts should judgment be passed. A square deal is the slogan of both candidates and I have endeavored to place them on record in a full sense of the term.

Mr. J. L. Miller, Republican Candidate for Nomination for Mayor,

Dear Sir:—At the Ward Three rally at Hibernian hall on Saturday evening, Nov. 11, a few questions were suggested to the candidate. It was my intention to ask at your rally Monday evening the same questions but realize that it would be unfair to ask questions which could not be answered in time to convince the doubtful. I will suggest now that one of your ward workers approached me after the meeting on Saturday evening and inferred that my questions to Mr. Stone was a frame up and that my position in not coming out and supporting Mr. Miller was subjecting me to severe criticism and was lead to suppose from the general tenor of the conversation that my position, I presume politically, was very precarious. Now let me say at this point that if my methods of dealing with candidates and questions pertaining to the city's interests are not conserved by my methods or if the voters have someone whom they believe will serve them more honestly and with a more single eye to their interest I will assure them now that there is nothing in the political atmosphere as I see it that appeals to me and I trust that Your assistant and all others in their good judgment consider it right act as suggested.

Now we come to my position in relation to your candidacy. You phoned me and asked if I was with you. My reply was that I was for Stone, but even now, like many others with whom I converse, we are looking for light in relation to the best interests of our city which every citizen worthy the name should consider before personal friendship or any other motive.

You will naturally say, "What is the objection to my candidacy." I will try in a brief way to suggest a few reasons. First, if you have been right the last few years in endorsing what we have been receiving under the so-called Civic Righteous Government we have been wrong. I am ready to admit that when the Wards Five and Six people were called to arms in opposition you came forward and radically condemned what you had previously been so urgently fostering and upholding, and when in your own section the same conditions were live issues your silence was very eloquent. No doubt the severe criticism your good taste allowed at the Mt. Wollaston Bank some two years ago when you undertook to catigate me for my heinous crime of supporting a Republican candidate when you suggested how sorry you were at having voted for a Councilman who stood as a Republican and to think that such a one should have the temerity to admit having voted for the Republican mayoralty candidate rank heresy on my part. Was it not?

Now, in view of the fact that you have been a firm supporter of Civic

Mr. Miller replied to Mr. Richards letter as follows:

John R. Richards,
Candidate for nomination for Councilman at Large.
Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir:—

I received a long letter from you yesterday which you wished me to reply to at the Ward 3 reception last night. I note your list of questions but as my time was limited for speaking last night, and not wishing to use your brains to speak from, I did not read it, but as you threatened after the meeting to publish it, I have thought best to answer it, that the voters can judge for themselves, for in your coming out as First Lieutenant for my opponent in this part of the city, it can be readily seen that you are trying to make votes for him, and if you have taken that attitude, then I do not wonder that my friends would not feel like voting for you for Councilman-at-Large, but they do not act with any knowledge of mine.

You will recall the night when the President of the City Council left his chair and took the floor, and told you that he was sick and tired hearing you talk about "My constituents, and the People," as if every Councilman did not have as much interest for their constituents as you, yet you made more hollering about it than all the rest, so if I do not take as much interest in the welfare of our city and people as you, I am willing to let the people judge for themselves. I would ask you what you have done for the "People?"

You acknowledged over the telephone that you were out for Mr. Stone, my opponent, and I was glad to hear you declare yourself, but now you want me to think that you are on the fence looking for information, and not sure on which side to drop. Is this not that attitude of a trimmer?

When you say I have endorsed what we have received in the so-called Civic Righteous government, I would say I have not endorsed in any manner what we have been getting, and you know it, but I have refuesd to be made a mouthpiece for you, for some two months ago you wrote me a long letter in regard to the Lincoln school building, I took no notice of it, for the people had entered judgment on that building a year ago and do not endorse your statement made on the stump.

As to what you term a castigation two years ago, in front of the Mt. Wollaston Bank, and as you are wholly at variance with facts, and Republican candidate was not mentioned, does not call for further notice.

As to approving contracts, that is not a part of my duty, and you as a Councilman ought to know it. I have protested the contracts on the Houghs Neck and Montclair schools, as you could easily inform yourself if you wished to.

As to the Adams school lot and building, I refuse to bring that in to politics, even to catch voters. The people of the Adams district know where to find Miller on that, and have no doubt of the result. When YOU say I capitulated by proxy on the eve of election, well that is real rich. That is almost like you climbing on the fence looking for information at the eleventh hour.

Your letter summed up only is a trick to try and catch votes for my opponent, but he has failed at two occasions before to catch votes enough to elect him, and unless all signs fail, the people will render the same verdict today.

Your first qestion I can answer by saying that I am as good a Republican as you ever were and have done as much for the party.

As to the rest of your questions, they are all covered in my platform as published in Monday's papers.

As I have never sold anything to the city, I feel I am perfectly free to judge of questions as they arise, in an independent spirit. Wishing you all success, I am,

Yours very respectfully,
John L. Miller,
Candidate for Mayor.

Gompers Touches Upon Politics In His Annual Report

REFERENDUM AND RECALL

Will Be No Real Representative Democracy In United States Until They Are Adopted, According to Head of Federation—Days of Political Boss Are Numbered—Beneficent Influence of Union Labor Realized

Atlanta, Nov. 14.—President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, in his report submitted to the delegates of the thirty-first annual convention, predicted great changes in American methods of government, particularly with regard to political parties. He gave to the referendum, initiative and the recall the unqualified indorsement of organized labor and declared that a real, representative democracy never had been known in the United States because of the general absence of these provisions.

"This seli-deification of judges," he said, in defense of his indorsement, "this sanctimonious cant about 'mob rule,' some of which was in President Tatt's message vetoing the Arizona statehood bill, is mere drivel."

President Gompers' report, which covered sixty closely printed pages and would make more than thirty columns in a newspaper, says it leaves many subjects untouched or inadequately presented. In the main, the report declares for, and says organized labor demands:

The referendum, the initiative and the recall.

Passage of the so-called anti-injunction bill at the next session of congress.

Restriction of immigration.

Further restriction of convict labor.

Legislation to relieve civil service employes from the executive orders prohibiting them to petition congress.

Uniform laws for protection of life and health in factory buildings.

A department of labor in the federal government.

Employers' liability and workmen's compensation acts throughout the states.

Severe arraignment is made of so-called scientific management or efficiency systems.

"With the membership now more than 1,750,000, the greatest in its history, and its financial condition excellent, the organization, often called the greatest altruistic institution of the times, enters the thirty-first year of its work, says the report.

"Despite all opposition of the most relentless kind, the American labor movement grows and thrives; its beneficent influence for the common uplift of labor and of all our people extends to all fields of useful activity and is becoming more generally recognized.

"Labor's contentions of many years have become merged, or have rather co-ordinated with those of the progressive of all parties. The people as a whole, irrespectfve of class, conditions, calling or partisan alignment, have declared for freedom in fact, and not merely in name. They are taking affairs political into their own hands.

"In lieu of the political boss and his machine we shall have leadership of intelligence, pleading for public justice, with adherents proportioned in number to the strength of the arguments. The stuffed ballot-box, the false count, and the perjured election returns will likewise disappear.

"I deem it unwise, or rather impolitic, to waste our energies now in efforts to abolish political parties. Perhaps they are institutional in all free governments. But if we cannot now destroy them, we may, by more assiduous and regular exercise of our privileges and rights of citizenship, do much in the way of controlling them."

Mr. Gompers refers very briefly to the contempt of court proceedings against Vice President John Mitchell, Secretary Morrison and himself, which are still pending before the courts in the District of Columbia.

The McNamara case, however, is taken up at some length and fully reviewed. Gompers expresses his faith in the innocence of the men now on trial at Los Angeles for alleged dynamiting outrages and denounces in unmeasured terms their removal from Indiana to California.

TWO MORE SUBMARINES TO BE BUILT

Work has just been commenced at the Fore River shipyards on two submarines for the United States Navy and two more will be started as soon as possible. In addition two begun some months ago are well under way. The newest ones will be 140 feet long. Those just commenced are the Haddock and Chaciot, all of the submarines being named for fish.

The armor is being set in place on the Argentine battleship Rividavia and the turrets are being put on. The heavy plates are being received fast from the rolling mills and there is no such annoying delay as caused the long waits on the United States battleships North Dakota at the same yard. The Rividavia is expected to be ready for delivery to the Argentine Government early next summer and when she goes in commission she will be the finest battleship afloat, a distinction which she is likely to enjoy for only a few months, however.

The big steam collier Newton will be delivered to her owners, the New England Coal & Coke Company, Nov. 17 and will immediately go into that company's coal carrying trade.

KNEW SHE HAD RIVAL

Wife of Police Chief Suffered In Silence For Sake of Family

Washington, Pa., Nov. 14.—For two years Mrs. W. J. Dulaney, widow of Police Chief Dulaney, who was killed in the apartment of Miss Ada Lennox, suffered silently with full knowledge of the "other woman."

"I hoped that some day his infatuation for Miss Lennox would die out," said Mrs. Dulaney. "He was good to me and the childdren, and I preferred to wait and hope for the time when he would become tired of her. My sole aim in remaining silent was to spare my little children humiliation in later years."

Mrs. Dulaney believes that her husband was shot by a third person, probably another admirer of Miss Lennox. Miss Lennox and her mother are in custody.

Virginia Supreme Bench Denies Murderer's Petition

Richmond, Nov. 14.—The supreme court of appeals denied the petition for a writ of error by Henry C. Beattie, Jr., convicted of murdering his young wife. This decision on the appeal from the judgment of the Chesterfield court, which sentenced him to die in the electric chair Nov. 24, is final. Clemency or reprieve by Governor Mann only can save the condemned man.

Beattie's last hope of judicial interference was dashed when the supreme court announced that "the trial court was plainly correct in its ruling and the appeal is therefore denied." No further comment was made upon the case.

Powerful influences are said to be at work upon Mann for and against either commutation or pardon. It is not believed he will intervene.

Sea Captain Lands In a Hurry and Elopes With Wrong One

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 14.—Captain Harry Edwards of the schooner May H. eloped from Kent island with Miss Betty Harrison, daughter of G. F. Harrison. The Harrisons have twin daughters. People living on the island have often mistaken one of them for the other, and that was what Edwards did when he eloped.

The captain landed from the schooner intending to elope with Mary Harrison. He met Betty first, and thinking she was Mary, hurried her off to a parson and then aboard the schooner.

Betty was jealous of the attentions paid her sister by Edwards, and decided the best way to stop it was to marry him herself.

The schooner is somewhere in Chesapeake bay, with Edwards and his wife aboard, headed for Baltimore, while Mary is mourning the fate that leaves her a single woman.

New York, Nov. 14.—The backbone of the street cleaners' strike appeared to have been broken when a force of 1800 strike-breakers, under heavy police guard, made substantial progress in ridding the streets of a five-day accumulation of health-endangering refuse.

Awed, apparently, by the vigorous stand taken by the city authorities and the large number of police on guard, the strikers and their sympathizers ceased their riotous tactics.

Mayor Gaynor refused to treat with William H. Ashton, the strike leader, although Ashton went to the city hall with M. J. Regan of the state board of arbitration.

SPEAK IN INTEREST OF MR. RICHMOND

A number of representative citizens were present and were given an opportunity to express their views at a meeting Monday evening in the interests of the candidacy of Horace W. Richmond for councilman from Ward Five. The meeting was held at the home of John L. Hamilton, Elm avenue, Wollaston Park, Mr. Hamilton acting as chairman for the evening.

Candidate Richmond spoke at length giving his views on the various needs of the ward and telling what his endeavors would be if he were elected to office. He had been a resident of Wollaston for twelve years and actively engaged in the real estate business there where he accomplished much for the betterment of that part of the city.

He told of his reasons for taking up the nomination and declared that if elected he would represent the ward as a whole and show no partiality for any one of the sections into which the ward seemed to be divided.

Mr. Richmond also went into detail regarding the local situation and the candidates in the field.

Eugene R. Stone, candidate for the Republican mayoralty nomination arrived later in the evening and spoke.

Local speakers expressing their opinion included: John B. Curran, Herbert W. Polk, Mr. Broughton, George W. Hinkley, Mr. Anthony, C. H. Smith and Abner Baker. A hearty vote of thanks was extended Mr. Hamilton for his hospitality.

INTERESTING LECTURES AT SCHOOL MEETING

A large number gathered at the meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' association at the Wollaston school Monday evening. A business meeting in charge of the president Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham opened the evening.

Two interesting lectures were enjoyed, Dr. Dana W. Drury of Boston speaking on "The ear" and Dr. W. H. Lowell of Boston on "The eye." Both men are specialists in their line and by means of large colored charts made plain the complicated organs under discussion. At the close of the lecture an opportunity for questions was offered and refreshments followed, served by the social committee.

The committee was composed of Mrs. Charles L. Seavey, Mrs. C. J. Hogue, Mrs. H. C. Seymour, Mrs. John Payson, Mrs. Frank Cross, Mrs. Arthur Ford, Mrs. James Brown, Mrs. Sidney Baker, Mrs. Edward Capen and Mrs. Albert Rhodes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Righteousness and fostered the conditions and practically approved the methods of contracts, etc., which recently you condemned so much. Naturally, when you come out under the same standard of righteousness, we want to know how the square deal for all applies.

One of the questions relating to the Adams school location and buildings. I cannot understand why you autocratically assumed that the people must accept your location or have their portions reduced in view of the fact that the other members of the school board heard could see no good reason why the people were not entitled to the location they desired and also a twelve room building with an assembly hall similar to the one at Wollaston. The fact that you capitulated, by proxy, on the eve of election seems like another case of consistency similar to the outpourings about school contracts at the eleventh hour, condemning what you had been assisting in promoting, but only condemning at the proper political time. Is this your idea of civic righteousness and the square deal, or is it not rather the method of political expediency?

Having offered the following suggestions to Mr. Stone I will place them for your consideration as they are questions of vital interest to the voters at this time.

1. Are you a Republican?
2. Do you believe in Civic Righteousness? If so, is it the same brand produced in Quincy the last three years and have you endorsed its exponent?
3. Are we to have one commissioner or a double headed one as at present?
4. Are contracts to be fairly awarded and when awarded are the contracts to be carried out in accord with orders and specifications?
5. Will you see that the people on Independence avenue and other streets in the city where oiling assessments are charged that the work is performed as often and properly as required by conditions?
6. What position do you take in regard to the equalization of taxation?
7. What is your position in regard to the railroad assuming a reasonable proportion of the cost of the widening of Washington street.
8. Will you conserve the people's rights in the Public Dock proposition regardless of all interests but the taxpayers whom you will be under oath to serve.

SPENCER JURY SECURED

Wife and Mother of Slayer Will Testify In His Behalf

Springfeld, Mass., Nov. 14.—Testimony of Bertram G. Spencer's girl wife and his mother will constitue two of the trump cards of the defense attorneys in their effort to save him from the electric chair for the killing of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, a Springfeld school teacher.

In an effort to sustain the insanity claim the two women will relate from the witness stand incidents in the life of the "day clerk-night robber." Strange conduct on his part, alleged to have dated back several years, will be described.

Because of the difficulty in filling the jury box predecions were made at one time that the necessary twelve would not be secured until today, but after 133 men had been called the jury was finally secured. Spencer's fate will be passed upon by men who have passed the youthful stage. The majority of the jury are near the half century mark.

Q.—Did God create all the vermin, pests, bacteria, disease germs, etc.?

Answer.—The Bible declares that all of God's works are perfect. Therefore we are forced to the conclusion that the evil things in the world such as mentioned in the question, as well as many others, must have been formed by some malevolent power or influence exercised by beings in opposition to the God of love and kindness and goodness. This thought is indicated in the Scriptures which state that Satan is "the god (ruler) of this present evil world," and that he has associated with him a host of fallen angels or demons, whose delight it is to deceive and afflict mankind. From the time of Adam's disobedience down to the time when God, the Heavenly Father, shall again take charge of earth's affairs, the race has been under the dominion of the Evil One, and all are able to recognize his evil influences in the world in more or less degree. As God permitted Satan to usurp the earthly dominion with certain restrictions, we can understand why the weeds and thistles and the briars, as well as the insects, germs and pests have come into existence and been so prolific. Nevertheless, the time is coming when all these evil conditions shall be removed, and even Satan himself, the author of these things which have afflicted the race so long, is to be destroyed.

ENTERS NEW FIELD.

Through the purchase of a large interest in the Joseph M. Wade Publishing Company, John N. Cole of Andover, Mass., becomes publisher of Fibre and Fabric. In the reorganization, Mr. Babcock will be president of the publishing corporation and Mr. Cole treasurer, and associate editor and business manager.

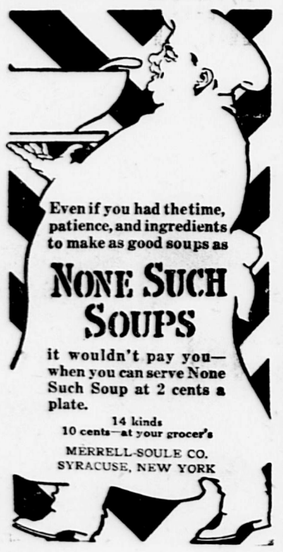

Mr. Cole brings to the textile publication field an unusual fitting. Five years of his early life were spent in one of the leading woolen mills of New England, his plan at that time contemplating textile manufacturing for a life business. A change in that plan led him to purchase, in 1886, the oldest printing office in New England, in which he established a weekly newspaper. The development of that printing and publishing business has been steady and consistent, until the end of the first quarter century under his management finds it one of the largest printeries in New England, outside of Boston, occupying its own building, and conducting a printery reputed to be one of the best equipped in the field.

Beginning in 1896, Mr. Cole began the publication of a daily newspaper in Lawrence, succeeding in five years in making it the most important paper in that city in point of circulation and influence, and disposing of it after ten years, only because an advancing political life made it impossible for him to give to it the necessary attention.

A lifetime interest in politics led Mr. Cole to go to the Legislature from his home town of Andover in 1902, where he soon secured a commanding position. Upon the retirement of Mr. Frothingham from the Speakership in 1905, Mr . Cole was elected to that high position and served for three years as Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives. Since 1908 he has devoted himself to his publishing business at Andover.

ON THE CRATER BATTLEFIELD

Memorial to Massachusetts Heroes Is Unveiled

AN IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIAL

Blue and Gray Veterans Unite In Paying Tribute to Men Who Fell In Battle — Governor Foss Praises Grant and Lee, Who Were Matched Against Each Other In the Great Double Tragedy

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 14.—A notable blue and gray reunion culminated here in the unveiling on the Crater battlefield of the handsome granite monument erected by the state of Masaschusetts to its soldier and sailor dead who fell here in the war between the states. Governor Foss of Massachusetts and Governor Mann of Virginia participated in the ceremonies.

The unveiling was preceded by a parade through the city, in which several organizations took part. The Stars and Stripes, confederate flags and the Virginia state flag appeared in the procession.

At the battlefield Miss Otela Mahone, granddaughter of General William Mahone who led the charge at the Crater, drew aside the huge American flag placed over the monument by Colonel James Anderson of Springfield, Mass. Governor Mann delivered an address of welcome, then Colonel Anderson, chairman of the monument commission, transferred the shaft to Governor Foss, who in turn presented it to the people of Virginia through Governor Mann. Governor Foss said in part:

"It is appropriate that here at Petersburg such a monument as this should be erected near the spot where the double tragedy of the Crater proved to the whole world the horrors and the futility of war. This crater, blown out of solid earth by one side for the destruction of the other, became a pitfall for both.

"Here in America, with the combined forces of our several sections and the united wealth and power of our great country, we have it in our hands to be the arbiters of universal peace.

"Let us set our faces toward that great achievement. Let us also work to strengthen the bonds of trade and mutual understanding from the lakes to the gulf, and from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

"It is notable, also, that here, where this monument stands, the greatest leaders of the American people were matched against each other. To a northerner of open mind, it is a privilege here to pay a tribute to the earnestness of purpose, the nobility of character and the consecration to sincere conviction which marks every act of Robert E. Lee.

"When we seek examples of that exalted manhood, which has made glorious the name of America, we cannot think in terms of north and south or east and west. We must think in terms of Washington and Lincoln, of Grant and Lee.

"Here the indomitable Grant threw his tremendous energies into the campaign, and here Lee matched his consummate strategy against heavy odds.

"The history of America has been made by men like these, whether they won or lost; and the country that brings forth men of such parts and powers is equipped to conquer all that may come against her."

A. S. Roe of Worcester, Mass., delivered the oration of the day.

The ex-confederates tried to entertain the Massachusetts visitors as royally as the Virginians were entertained July 4, 1910, by the Grand Army men at Springfield. A banquet at Robert E. Lee school last night was the closing event of the visit.

"PATRIOT" FOWL APPEARS

National Colors Are Developed In a New Breed of Hen

Mountain View, Cal., Nov. 14.—Patriotism to the ultimate degree is exemplified in a new breed of hens now flaunting the national colors at the poultry farm of Dr. I. G. Royte here. Bright red of head, pure white of body and indigo blue of tail, the fowl came into the world a short time ago.

There are several of the vari-hued birds and Royte asserts that the extraordinary plumage is the result of long experimental observation. He has named the new breed "Patriot."

Woman Horsewhips State Official

Wichita, Kan., Nov. 14.—C. W. Trickett, assistant attorney general, was horsewhipped at his hotel by Marie Secah, a fortune teller. She claimed her business had been interfered with by charges by Trickett. She was not arrested.

Perhaps Fatally Scalded

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Nov. 14.—John Henry, 22, employed by the East Haven Veneer company, was horribly scalded by falling into a vat of boiling water used for steaming veneer logs. He is not expected to recover.

NEW ORDINANCE.

Councilman Ross offered an order establishing an ordinance relative to movers of furniture. The order provides that all persons or corporations engaged in the moving of furniture shall file with the City Clerk on blanks provided for that purpose the name of the party moved, the place moved from and the place moved to. The idea of the ordinance is to put a check upon persons who buy furniture on credit and then without permission move to another section of the city, or as it often happens to another town thereby putting the owners to considerable trouble in locating it. Referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

CULVERT WANTED.

Councilman Leslie offered an order for a culvert over Sachem brook. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Leslie offered an order for lights at the corner of Waterston avenue and Sewall street and at the corner of Waterston avenue and Phillips street. Adopted and referred to the Executive.

NEPONSET BRIDGE.

On motion of Councilman Smith, the order for $2,500 for planking Neponset bridge was taken from the table.

Councilman Smith said that argument was not necessary. The only question was if the city is to provide the money to pay for the labor and material on the bridge. As to the question if the railroad or city should pay for the planking between the rails, that was a matter to be settled by the law department.

Councilman Sandberg spoke at length on the subject. The Commissioner stated to the Street Committee that he thought that the railroad should pay for the planking between the rails and he thought that they would do it.

In reply to a question by Councilman Richards the Commissioner stated that the whole amount would be required to pay the bills. That he had already expended $3,400 on the bridge. He did not think that $2,000 would clean things up. It would pay the lumber bills but would not pay the department for the work done.

Councilman Gardner asked if he did not say that the railroad should pay that $500 for planking between the tracks?

Commissioner Bainbridge replying, said that he did say that they ought to pay. That they had always done so before. He also said he thought that the railroad would be fair.

Councilman Sandberg then asked the Commissioner a number of questions as to just what he did say before the Street Committee. There seemed to be some difference with what the Commissioner said and what Councilman Sandberg believed that he said.

In reply to a question asked the City Solicitor, if an accident happened on the bridge between the rails who would be liable, the City Solicitor said that the parties would first sue the city and that it would be up to the city to sue the railroad to recover the amount of damages the city had been assessed. Continuing he said that it was the duty of the city to see that the bridge was safe, then make a demand on the railroad.

The question as to who was liable for the planking between the rails was now before his department. If the railroad fails to pay the bill it will be up to my department to bring suit against the railroad and have it tried out in court.

Councilman Craig felt that the railroad should pay, but the planking is down and the only thing now is to pay for it and then sue the railroad to get it back.

Councilman Bailey said that he was glad that the City had made it clear that the case would not be dropped and that the bills ought to be paid.

Councilman Jenkins asked the Commissioner if he would show the council the bills for the bridge work and the Commissioner started down to his office to get them.

Mayor Shea said that this was a simple business proposition. The Commissioner has never said that the railroad would pay. He has $2,500 to carry on the bridge work for a year. The city has to pay a large percent of the cost of maintenance of the Fore River bridge which will amount to $1,500. Then he has got to make repairs on the Warren avenue bridge which will cost $300. The Neponset bridge needed to be repaired. This work had to be done. He expended the money under my orders, what sense is there in the City Council arguing who shall pay the $500. If it is proper for the railroad to pay, they will. I ask you gentlemen to act on this matter like business men.

Councilman Ericson said that while he thought the railroad should pay, that the law made them exempt. Let us pass the order.

Councilman Richards said that he thought everybody now understood the situation and the only thing to do was to pass the order.

Councilman Sandberg moved to lay on the table. Motion lost on a rising vote 8 yes and 9 no.

Councilman Jenkins said he understood that the bills had not been approved and had not been sent to the City Auditor.

Mayor Shea replied that bills are not sent to the Auditor until he has the money to pay them.

The order was then passed Councilman Jenkins and Sandberg voting no.

Just as the President announced the result of the vote, the Commissioner returned with the bills sticking out of his pocket.

SEALER'S SALARY.

The order increasing the salary of the Sealer of Weights and Measures came up for its final passage but on motion of Councilman Richards was referred to the Finance Committee.

The order appropriating $350 for rewiring the High school took its second reading and the rules were suspended.

Councilman Sodergren asked the Commissioner a number of questions as to the kind of wiring to be installed.

A motion of Councilman Sandberg to lay on the table was lost on a rising vote of 5 yes and 13 no.

The order was then passed Councilmen Sodergren and Sandberg voting no.

PAYNE STREET.

The order for a tar concrete sidewalk on Payne street took its second reading and the rules were suspended.

Councilman Craig spoke in favor of the order. People on that street had built houses twenty years ago and did not have a sidewalk.

Councilman Branch believed it was too late in the year to pass a sidewalk order.

A motion of Councilman Sandberg to lay on the table was lost.

The order was then put on its final passage and failed to pass 12 voting yes and 5 no. Councilmen Bailey, Branch, Ericson, Parlee and Sandberg voting no. The vote was then reconsidered and the order laid on the table.

POLICE MISC.

The order transferring $1,000 to Police Miscellaneous took its second reading. The rules were suspended and the order passed.

Adjourned at 8.5[illegible] until Nov. 20.

Grover of Gloucester, first pastor of the church, in the presence of the nineteen original charter members. As the flames destroyed the paper the congregation stood and sang "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

The exercises opened with reading and prayer by the pastor, Rev. Leon H. Austin, formerly of the Washington Street Congregational church at Quincy Point. This was followed by organ and violin selections, hymns and addresses by the pastor; Mr. Grover, the first pastor; Rev. James Alexander, a former pastor, and Rev. Perley B. Davis, D. D. ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

CHAPTER II.

SOMETHING IS DONE.

In the morning David Sheldon decided that he was worse. That he was appreciably weaker there was no doubt, and there were other symptoms that were unfavorable. He began his rounds looking for trouble. He wanted trouble. In full health the strained situation would have been serious enough; but as it was, himself growing helpless, something had to be done. The blacks were getting more sullen and defiant, and the appearance of the men the previous night on his veranda—one of the gravest of offences on Berande—was ominous. Sooner or later they would get him, if he did not get them first, if he did not once again sear on their dark souls the flaming mastery of the white man.

He returned to the house disappointed. No opportunity had presented itself of making an example of insolence or insubordination—such as had occurred on every other day since the sickness smote Berande. The fact that none had offended was in itself suspicious. They were growing crafty. It was one man against two hundred, and he was horribly afraid of his sickness overpowering him and leaving him at their mercy. He saw visions of the blacks taking charge of the plantation, looting the store, burning the buildings and escaping to Malaita. Also one grewsome vision he caught of his own head, sun dried and smoke cured, ornamenting the canoe house of a cannibal village. Either the Jessie would have to arrive or he would have to do something.

The bell had hardly rung, sending the laborers into the fields, when Sheldon had a visitor. Forty men, armed with spears, bows and arrows and war clubs, gathered outside the gate of the compound, but only one entered. They knew the law of Berande, as every native knew the law of every white man's compound in all the thousand miles of the far flung Solomons. The one man who came up the path Sheldon recognized as Seelee, the chief of Balesuna village. The savage did not mount the steps, but stood beneath and talked to the white lord above.

Seelee was more intelligent than the average of his kind, but his intelligence only emphasized the lowness of that kind. His eyes, close together and small, advertised cruelty and craftiness. A gee string and a cartridge belt were all the clothes he wore.

As he talked, or listened, he made grimaces like a monkey. He said yes by dropping his eyelids and thrusting his chin forward. He spoke with childish arrogance strangely at variance with the subservient position he occupied beneath the veranda. He, with his many followers, was lord and master of Balesuna village. But the white man, without followers, was lord and master of Berande—ay, and on occasion, single handed, had made himself lord and master of Balesuna village as well. Seelee did not like to remember that episode. It had occurred in the course of learning the nature of white men and of learning to abominate them. He had once been guilty of sheltering three runaways from Berande.

Unfortunately, he was ignorant of the ways of white men. This particular white man educated him by arriving at his grass house in the gray of dawn. In the first moment he had felt amused. He was so perfectly safe in the midst of his village. But the next moment, and before he could cry out, a pair of handcuffs on the white man's knuckles had landed on his mouth, knocking the cry of alarm back down his throat. Also, the white man's other fist had caught him under the ear and left him without further interest in what was happening. When he came to he found himself in the white man's whaleboat on the way to Berande. When his tribe had returned the three runaways, he was given his freedom. And finally, the terrible white man had fined him and Balesuna village ten thousand coconnuts. After that he had sheltered no more runaway Malaita men. Instead, he had gone into the business of catching them. It was safer. Besides, he was paid one case of tobacco per head. But if he ever got a chance at that white man, if he ever caught him sick or stood at his back when he stumbled and fell on a bush trail—well, there would be a head that would fetch a price in Malaita.

Sheldon was pleased with what Seelee told him. The seventh man of the last batch of runaways had been caught and was even then at the gate. He was brought in, heavy featured and defiant, his arms bound with cocoanut sennit, the dry blood still on his body from the struggle with his captors.

"Me savvee you good fella, Seelee," Sheldon said, as the chief gulped down a quarter tumbler of raw trade gin.

"Fella boy belong me you catch short time little bit. This fella boy strong fella too much. I give you fella one case tobacco—my word, one case tobacco. Then, you good fella along me, I give you three fathom calico, one fella knife big fella too much."

The tobacco and trade goods were brought from the store room by two house boys and turned over to the chief of Balesuna village, who accepted the additional reward with a noncommittal grunt and went away down the path to his canoes. Under Sheldon's directions, the house boys handcuffed the prisoner, by hands and feet, around one of the pile supports of the house. At eleven o'clock, when the laborers came in from the field, Sheldon had them assembled in the compound before the veranda. Every able man was there, including those who were helping about the hospital. Even the women and the several pickaninnies of the plantation were lined up with the rest, two deep—a horde of naked savages a trifle under two hundred strong. Some wore penknives clasped on their kinky locks for safety. On the chest of one a china doorknob was suspended, on the chest of another the brass wheel of an alarm clock.

Facing them, clinging to the railing of the veranda for support, stood the sick white man. Any one of them could have knocked him over with the blow of a little finger. Despite his firearms, the gang could have rushed him and delivered that blow, when his head and the plantation would have been theirs. Hatred and murder and lust for revenge they possessed to overflowing. But one thing they lacked, the thing that he possessed—the flame of mastery that would not quench, that burned fiercely as ever in the disease wasted body.

"Narada! Billy!" Sheldon called sharply.

Two men slunk unwillingly forward and waited.

Sheldon gave the keys of the handcuffs to a house boy, who went under the house and loosed the prisoner.

"You fella Narada, you fella Billy, take um this fella boy along tree and make fast, hands high up," was Sheldon's command.

While this was being done one of the house boys fetched a heavy handled, heavy lashed whip. Sheldon began a speech.

"This fella Arunga, me cross along him too much. I no steal this fella Arunga. I no gammon. I say, 'All right, you come along me Berande, work three fella year.' He say, 'All right, me come along you work three fella year.' He come. He catch plenty good fella kai kai (food) plenty good fella money. What name he run away? Me too much cross along him. I knock what name outa him fella. I pay Seelee, big fella master along Balesuna, one case tobacco catch that fella Arunga. All right. Arunga pay that fella case tobacco. Six pounds that fella Arunga pay. Alle same one year more that fella Arunga work Berande. All right. Now he catch ten fella whip three times. You fella Billy catch whip, give that fella Arunga ten fella three times. All fella boys look see, all fella Marys (women) look see; bime bye, they like run away they think strong fella too much, no run away. Billy, strong fella too much ten fella three times."

The house boy extended the whip to him, but Billy did not take it. Sheldon waited quietly. The eyes of all the cannibals were fixed upon him in doubt and fear and eagerness. It was the moment of test, whereby the lone white man was to live or be lost.

(To be Continued.)

STONE AND MILLER SPEAK

candidate disclaimed any power for political spell binding or linguistic pyrotechnics. He stood firmly on his feet and was not connected with any interests. He had neither asked, got and didn't expect any promises whatsoever. He was absolutely independent and if elected would simply do the best he knew how.

Councilman Charles W. Bailey, candidate for reelection was indignant that voters should be misled by talk of any "frame up" or "Baptist deal." There was no such thing.

Mr. Bailey told of how the self appointed citizens' committee hads ent delegates to the different sections of the ward with the sole object of finding the man best fitted to reppresent the locality. They had selected good, clean, substantial business men and the speaker didn't know whether the other two candidates recommended, ever went to church or not.

In closing Mr. Bailey referred in highest terms to Charles M. Bryant in whose retirement from public life he declared the city was losing the service of a disinterested public spirited servant.

John L. Miller candidate for Republican nomination for Mayor told of his 40 years' residence in Quincy and his practical business experience.

He believed he would be nominated at the caucus. For some reason the business men and the working men were for Miller. He realized that it was no cinch to be mayor of Quincy and that the city's finances did not call for a bed of roses.

He would combine his long business experience with his best endeavors and wear no man's collar. "They say Miller's too rigid" said the speaker "and they want an easy and supple mayor." He compared the two Republican candidates as a ball and a cube, the first being easy to roll and get round.

Mr. Miller claimed priority in the contest and that his opponent had been put forward by certain interests who desired to see the speaker defeated.

The speaker mentioned the waterfront question as the most important in 50 years and told of the use to which the waste granite on the North Common might be put in the development of Boston harbor. In closing he strongly urged the return of Bailey to the council.

Albert N. Murray, candidate for councilman at large, in his humorous manner denied that he was a Baptist and said that the men advocated should not be picked up on Sunday to see which way they were headed. He was not a reformer but if he did go, to the council he would promise to give the best that was in him.

Councilman Bryant, the last speaker, thanked the voters for their support in the past. He had given a great amount of time to city affairs. Ward Five should be careful in their selection of candidates. They should send to the councilmen of mature years and sound business judgment. They are needed at city hall.

The ward was fortunate in picking out a man like Bailey. The speaker had not agreed with him at first, but did now. He did not know which had brought the other around.

A councilman ought to be kept at city hall 3 or 4 years then he gains some weight and experience with the council. Some claimed he always had something up his sleeve. This was not so but he had been in the council 13 years and his recollection was good.

This ward and Ward Six deserve a great deal on account of the increased valuation they have given the city. It belonged to this section to get something and what it wants to do is to send down Bailey and some others and keep them there.

A hasty retreat followed Bryant's speech each voter making rapid strides to reach his own fireside and warm up.

FACTS ABOUT NOMINATION PAPERS

It will probably be of interest to those thinking of taking out nomination papers to know how many signatures are required for such. The number necessary is based on the total vote for Governor at the election in 1910. The vote was 4932 and as the basis is two signatures for every 100 that voted, it means that for Mayor, Councilman at Large, or School Committee at large, 98 signatures will be required. For officers to be voted by the ward alone, the number of signatures varies. They are as follows:—Ward One, 20; Ward Two, 14; Ward Three, 16; Ward Four, 16; Ward Five 18; Ward Six, 14.

He then dropped off of the board until 1894 when he was appointed as assessor from Ward Six by Mayor Hodges

Since retiring from active political life as a city official, he has served for many years as Warden of Precinct One of Ward Six, and was reappointed to that position the present year.

He was a large real estate owner in Quincy, the Pope farm at Atlantic being one of the most desirable residential sections of the city. It was not until within a few years however that the estate came into the market.

Mr. Pope was a widower, his wife having died some year ago. He issurvived by a son and two daughters with whom he resided.

BASKETBALL.

The results of the opening games of the basket ball series at the Y. M. C. A. show six teams tied for first honors with a percentage of 1000. All the games were closely played and from the performances of the different players, the struggle for the honors of supremacy gives every promise of being a warm one.

Brooks, as in most other athletic branches at the local association, takes the lead in having secured the greatest number of baskets, no fewer than 8 being credited to his name.

The percentages of the various teams, and the number of baskets given to the various players, are as follows:—

TO MAKE HOCKEY FASTER.

National Association of Canada Will Cut Out Position of Rover.

The National Hockey Association of Canada at a preliminary meeting held informally and secretly recently arranged for changes in the rules to be adopted at the annual meeting the second week in November. It was practically decided to cut down the number of players on each team and by doing away with the rover have teams of only six men.

It is considered that this will make the game much faster and will also tend to make it more open, but followers of the sport here are not of one mind on the radical change.

MORAN TO MEET DRISCOLL.

Two Clever Englishmen Will Battle In London Dec. 2.

Owen Moran and Jem Driscoll, the English featherweights, have signed articles for a twenty round bout at the Empire Skating palace, Birmingham, England, on Dec. 2. The purse is $13,000, and a gold belt goes with it, while each man will bet $2,000. The weight is 126 pounds at 5 o'clock.

If both men are at their best critics in this country believe that Driscoll will be the winner on points, as he easily outclasses Moran as a boxer.

Bronzed by foreign seas, he entered the office of his colleague, but the cashier's chair was vacant.

""Is Mr. Smith out?" he asked, anxiously. "I am an old friend of his."

"No, sir," returned the clerk. "Mr. Smith is not out. He won't be out for ten years."

Here the clerk smiled grimly.

"The firm is out, though," he went on; "$15,000 exactly."

TRIAL TO BEGIN IN TWO MONTHS

Jan. 15 Is Set Over Protest of Counsel For Richeson

ARRAIGNMENT OF DEFENDANT

Pleads Not Guilty In Response to Indictment Charging Him With Murder of Avis Linnell—Counsel Insures Rights as to Filing of Motions to Quash Indictments—Prisoner Appears Calm and Collected

Boston, Nov. 14.—Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson will be placed on trial, charged with the murder of Avis Linnell, on Jan. 15. The motion of District Attorney Pelletier for the commencement on that day of what gives promise to be the most sensational murder trial in the annals of the criminal history of Massachusetts was allowed by Judge Sanderson.

It was strenuously opposed by William A. Morse, who, by a few words which he uttered, suggested some hitherto unforeseen and important reason why this case should not be tried within two months, but should rather be postponed until at least six months have passed.

When Morse had resumed his seat, Pelletier stated that the defendant, through his attorneys, Judge Harris, Judge Dunbar and the son of the latter, already had been amply notified of the intention of the district attorney's office to ask that this case be set down for a trial in January.

"I feel that the trial of the case in January gives this defendant every opportunity to protect his rights and to fairly present his defense," said Judge Sanderson. He then said he was of the opinion that two months was a sufficient delay. "I think a trial ought to come as speedily as possible after the commission of the offense."

At a few minutes before 5 o'clock last evening Clerk Manning called out quietly: "Clarence V. T. Richeson." The door leading into the detention room was thrown open and Attorney Morse stepped into the room. Behind him, with his head held high, followed Richeson. He was dressed in dark clothes with a low turn-down collar and black four-in-hand tie. Court officers led him to the iron lattice-work dock and Manning began reading the indictment. The prisoner, with the thumb of either hand gripping the rail of the dock, listened carefully, or seemed to.

Before the clerk had finished more than two paragraphs of the first count Morse arose and interrupted him, saying: "Before this defendant is called upon to plead to this indictment, I wish to insure his rights as to filing of motions to quash the indictment."

District Attorney Pelletier said he had no objection to the defense filing the motion at a later time, so long as a motion which he would make to set the case down for trial in January was not interfered with. It was agreed any motions should be filed within ten days.

This technicality decided, Manning resumed the reading. As he finished reading, Manning looked up and addressed Richeson. "What say you, are you guilty or not guilty?" And the answer came through the intense silence of the courtroom. "Not guilty."

His voice was without a tremor as he answered the clerk. If anything he seemed by the way he answered to show scorn of the charge made against him.

Immediately after Richeson had pleaded Manning asked, "Have you counsel?"

"I have," came the response.

"Who are they?" again asked Manning.

"Mr. Dunbar, Mr. Morse, those gentlemen in front of you," quietly responded Richeson. Then court adjourned and Richeson was taken to his cell in the jail.

IS AFRAID OF FORTUNE

Poor Old Man Not at All Pleased With Bequest of $250,000

Waterville, Kan., Nov. 14.—Old, poor and suffering from an ailment which is slowly taking his life, Peter Odell learned without joy that he is the heir to one-half of the $500,000 estate of his brother, A. H. Odell, who was found dead in Los Angeles, Cal.

When told of his good fortune he cried out: "Why could he not live to enjoy it, and not leave it to me? I don't know what to do with so much money. I am afraid of it.

EMPIRE IS TOTTERING

Foreign Intercession Beginning to Be Discussed at Pekin

Pekin, Nov. 14.—Yuan Shi-Kai, the last prop of the throne, has reached Pekin at last. In honor of his arrival an edict was issued appointing him commander of all the troops in the vicinity of the capital. Great efforts are being made to induce him to accept the premiership, but he has given no definite answer as yet.

The opinion is held at the legations that there are serious complications in store for China and greater sufferings than she has yet endured. The prospects of foreign intervention by other powers than Russia and Japan are beginning to be discussed.

Winter is expected to terminate the massed movements of troops, but there will be greater death rolls from famine. The people in the central section are already supplementing their food with the bark of trees.

ALL READY FOR WORK

Taft Refreshed Rather Than Tired After His Long Journey

Washington, Nov. 14.—President Taft is at his desk in the White House again for another winter's work, evidently refreshed rather than wearied by his 15,000-mile journey across the country.

The president thrives on travel and is able to fall asleep anywhere en route, even in an automobile or in his chair at the head of his car whenever he can see a chance to steal a few moments' rest.

"He had us all tired out many times during the trip," said one of the young men of his party, commenting upon Taft's seeming imperviousness to fatigue. All the travelers have gained flesh, owing to lack of exercise, as the secret service men explain it.

STIRS UP AGITATION FOR IMPEACHMENT

Governor of South Carolina Openly Favors Lynching

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 14.—By his indorsement of lynching in a speech at Anderson, Governor Blease has subjected himself again to bitter criticism and given impetus to a movement already on foot to impeach him at the next session of the legislature.

Governor Blease addressed farmers who had met to consider the fall in the price of cotton. He had been expected to talk about cotton, but he devoted most of his time to the lynching of a negro at Honeapath who had been accused of attacking a white girl. The lynch mob was led by Josuha Ashley, a member of the legislature.

The governor said he kept in touch with the Honeapath affair and would have been greatly disappointed if the negro had not been lynched. He went on to say that rather than use the power of his office in deterring white men from "punishing the nigger brute," he would have resigned the office, gone to Honeapath and led the mob.

FIRE AT HAMPTON BEACH

Hard Work Confines Flames to Hotel and Four Summer Homes

Hampton Beach, N. H., Nov. 14.—The entire cottage colony of Hampton Beach narrowly escaped being wiped out last night by a fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, which destroyed four cottages and one small hotel, causing a loss of $15,000.

The cottages, which were all unoccupied, were owned by wealthy people and were located on the best section of the beach. The combined efforts of two life saving crews with the Amesbury and Hampton fire departments were exerted for two hours before the fire was under control.

A MURDER A MONTH

Unsavory Average of Alabama Town For Year and a Half

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 14.—The eighteenth murder within a little more than eighteen months was committed at Lewisburg, Ala., when Constable Ellard was killed and his 8-year-old son, Ralph, was shot in the thigh.

The boy said the shooting was done by Tom Hagan and Bob Payne. Hagan appeared later at the county jail and gave himself up. The cause of the trouble is not known.

Limit to Moving Pictures

Washington, Nov. 14.—Moving picture show promoters received a blow when the supreme court of the United States decided that moving pictures, based on the scenes of a copyrighted book, may constitute an infringement of the copyright on the book or the reserved rights to dramatize.

District Court Clerk Resigns

Great Barrington, Mass., Nov. 14.—John S. Stone has resigned as clerk of the district court of southern Berkshire. He is to practise law.

No time has been lost by Coach Staff in rounding out the members of the local High school football team into the proper shape to combat the much heralded Waltham High eleven at Waltham next Saturday. The local boys have played 11 games thus far this season. Of these, they have won 8 and lost three. They have defeated such teams as Weymouth High, Brighton High, South Boston High, High School of Commerce, Boston College High, Brockton High, Melrose High and Worcester High. the members of that aggregation to be heralded far and wide as the 160 pound champions of the state. This prestige was gained principally by defeating the strong Orient Heights A. A. team, a combination, whose goal line had not been crossed for four years, according to the contention of the Boston papers, but I claim that such an assertion is a mistake, for the local boys accomplished the feat last year by playing the Noddle Islanders to a 6 to 6 standstill. It is certain, however, that Quincy A. A. was the first team to send the peninsular lads down to defeat.

With four straight victories to their credit, and with the team as a whole exhibiting better form on each occasion, it does look as if the members of the recently formed organization will create a most enviable reputation, and thus bring still greater athletic laurels to our city.

Plans are well underway for the second boxing tournament, and St. Mary's hall bids fair to be the center of added attraction for the members of the Quincy A. A. on the evening of November 20th.

FACTS ABOUT NOMINATION PAPERS

It will probably be of interest to those thinking of taking out nomination papers to know how many signatures are required for such. The number necessary is based on the total vote for Governor at the election in 1910. The vote was 4932 and as the basis is two signatures for every 100 that voted, it means that for Mayor, Councilman at Large, or School Committee at large, 98 signatures will be required. For officers to be voted by the ward alone, the number of signatures varies. They are as follows:—Ward One, 20; Ward Two, 14; Ward Three, 16; Ward Four, 16; Ward Five 18; Ward Six, 14.

He then dropped off of the board until 1894 when he was appointed as assessor from Ward Six by Mayor Hodges

Since retiring from active political life as a city official, he has served for many years as Warden of Precinct One of Ward Six, and was reappointed to that position the present year.

He was a large real estate owner in Quincy, the Pope farm at Atlantic being one of the most desirable residential sections of the city. It was not until within a few years however that the estate came into the market.

Mr. Pope was a widower, his wife having died some year ago. He issurvived by a son and two daughters with whom he resided.

BASKETBALL.

The results of the opening games of the basket ball series at the Y. M. C. A. show six teams tied for first honors with a percentage of 1000. All the games were closely played and from the performances of the different players, the struggle for the honors of supremacy gives every promise of being a warm one.

Brooks, as in most other athletic branches at the local association, takes the lead in having secured the greatest number of baskets, no fewer than 8 being credited to his name.

The percentages of the various teams, and the number of baskets given to the various players, are as follows:—

TO MAKE HOCKEY FASTER.

National Association of Canada Will Cut Out Position of Rover.

The National Hockey Association of Canada at a preliminary meeting held informally and secretly recently arranged for changes in the rules to be adopted at the annual meeting the second week in November. It was practically decided to cut down the number of players on each team and by doing away with the rover have teams of only six men.

It is considered that this will make the game much faster and will also tend to make it more open, but followers of the sport here are not of one mind on the radical change.

MORAN TO MEET DRISCOLL.

Two Clever Englishmen Will Battle In London Dec. 2.

Owen Moran and Jem Driscoll, the English featherweights, have signed articles for a twenty round bout at the Empire Skating palace, Birmingham, England, on Dec. 2. The purse is $13,000, and a gold belt goes with it, while each man will bet $2,000. The weight is 126 pounds at 2 o'clock.

If both men are at their best critics in this country believe that Driscoll will be the winner on points, as he easily outclasses Moran as a boxer.

Bronzed by foreign seas, he entered the office of his colleague, but the cashier's chair was vacant.

""Is Mr. Smith out?" he asked, anxiously. "I am an old friend of his."

"No, sir," returned the clerk. "Mr. Smith is not out. He won't be out for ten years."

Here the clerk smiled grimly.

"The firm is out, though," he went on; "$15,000 exactly."

TRIAL TO BEGIN IN TWO MONTHS

Jan. 15 Is Set Over Protest of Counsel For Richeson

ARRAIGNMENT OF DEFENDANT

Pleads Not Guilty In Response to Indictment Charging Him With Murder of Avis Linnell—Counsel Insures Rights as to Filing of Motions to Quash Indictments—Prisoner Appears Calm and Collected

Boston, Nov. 14.—Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson will be placed on trial, charged with the murder of Avis Linnell, on Jan. 15. The motion of District Attorney Pelletier for the commencement on that day of what gives promise to be the most sensational murder trial in the annals of the criminal history of Massachusetts was allowed by Judge Sanderson.

It was strenuously opposed by William A. Morse, who, by a few words which he uttered, suggested some hitherto unforeseen and important reason why this case should not be tried within two months, but should rather be postponed until at least six months have passed.

When Morse had resumed his seat, Pelletier stated that the defendant, through his attorneys, Judge Harris, Judge Dunbar and the son of the latter, already had been amply notified of the intention of the district attorney's office to ask that this case be set down for a trial in January.

"I feel that the trial of the case in January gives this defendant every opportunity to protect his rights and to fairly present his defense," said Judge Sanderson. He then said he was of the opinion that two months was a sufficient delay. "I think a trial ought to come as speedily as possible after the commission of the offense."

At a few minutes before 5 o'clock last evening Clerk Manning called out quietly: "Clarence V. T. Richeson." The door leading into the detention room was thrown open and Attorney Morse stepped into the room. Behind him, with his head held high, followed Richeson. He was dressed in dark clothes with a low turn-down collar and black four-in-hand tie. Court officers led him to the iron lattice-work dock and Manning began reading the indictment. The prisoner, with the thumb of either hand gripping the rail of the dock, listened carefully, or seemed to.

Before the clerk had finished more than two paragraphs of the first count Morse arose and interrupted him, saying: "Before this defendant is called upon to plead to this indictment, I wish to insure his rights as to filing of motions to quash the indictment."

District Attorney Pelletier said he had no objection to the defense filing the motion at a later time, so long as a motion which he would make to set the case down for trial in January was not interfered with. It was agreed any motions should be filed within ten days.

This technicality decided, Manning resumed the reading. As he finished reading, Manning looked up and addressed Richeson. "What say you, are you guilty or not guilty?" And the answer came through the intense silence of the courtroom. "Not guilty."

His voice was without a tremor as he answered the clerk. If anything he seemed by the way he answered to show scorn of the charge made against him.

Immediately after Richeson had pleaded Manning asked, "Have you counsel?"

"I have," came the response.

"Who are they?" again asked Manning.

"Mr. Dunbar, Mr. Morse, those gentlemen in front of you," quietly responded Richeson. Then court adjourned and Richeson was taken to his cell in the jail.

Poor Old Man Not at All Pleased With Bequest of $250,000

When told of his good fortune he cried out: "Why could he not live to enjoy it, and not leave it to me? I don't know what to do with so much money. I am afraid of it.

EMPIRE IS TOTTERING

Foreign Intercession Beginning to Be Discussed at Pekin

Pekin, Nov. 14.—Yuan Shi-Kai, the last prop of the throne, has reached Pekin at last. In honor of his arrival an edict was issued appointing him commander of all the troops in the vicinity of the capital. Great efforts are being made to induce him to accept the premiership, but he has given no definite answer as yet.

The opinion is held at the legations that there are serious complications in store for China and greater sufferings than she has yet endured. The prospects of foreign intervention by other powers than Russia and Japan are beginning to be discussed.

Winter is expected to terminate the massed movements of troops, but there will be greater death rolls from famine. The people in the central section are already supplementing their food with the bark of trees.

ALL READY FOR WORK

Taft Refreshed Rather Than Tired After His Long Journey

Washington, Nov. 14.—President Taft is at his desk in the White House again for another winter's work, evidently refreshed rather than wearied by his 15,000-mile journey across the country.

The president thrives on travel and is able to fall asleep anywhere en route, even in an automobile or in his chair at the head of his car whenever he can see a chance to steal a few moments' rest.

"He had us all tired out many times during the trip," said one of the young men of his party, commenting upon Taft's seeming imperviousness to fatigue. All the travelers have gained flesh, owing to lack of exercise, as the secret service men explain it.

STIRS UP AGITATION FOR IMPEACHMENT

Governor of South Carolina Openly Favors Lynching

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 14.—By his indorsement of lynching in a speech at Anderson, Governor Blease has subjected himself again to bitter criticism and given impetus to a movement already on foot to impeach him at the next session of the legislature.

Governor Blease addressed farmers who had met to consider the fall in the price of cotton. He had been expected to talk about cotton, but he devoted most of his time to the lynching of a negro at Honeapath who had been accused of attacking a white girl. The lynch mob was led by Josuha Ashley, a member of the legislature.

The governor said he kept in touch with the Honeapath affair and would have been greatly disappointed if the negro had not been lynched. He went on to say that rather than use the power of his office in deterring white men from "punishing the nigger brute," he would have resigned the office, gone to Honeapath and led the mob.

FIRE AT HAMPTON BEACH

Hard Work Confines Flames to Hotel and Four Summer Homes

Hampton Beach, N. H., Nov. 14.—The entire cottage colony of Hampton Beach narrowly escaped being wiped out last night by a fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, which destroyed four cottages and one small hotel, causing a loss of $15,000.

The cottages, which were all unoccupied, were owned by wealthy people and were located on the best section of the beach. The combined efforts of two life saving crews with the Amesbury and Hampton fire departments were exerted for two hours before the fire was under control.

A MURDER A MONTH

Unsavory Average of Alabama Town For Year and a Half

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 14.—The eighteenth murder within a little more than eighteen months was committed at Lewisburg, Ala., when Constable Ellard was killed and his 8-year-old son, Ralph, was shot in the thigh.

The boy said the shooting was done by Tom Hagan and Bob Payne. Hagan appeared later at the county jail and gave himself up. The cause of the trouble is not known.

Limit to Moving Pictures

Washington, Nov. 14.—Moving picture show promoters received a blow when the supreme court of the United States decided that moving pictures, based on the scenes of a copyrighted book, may constitute an infringement of the copyright on the book or the reserved rights to dramatize.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

No time has been lost by Coach Staff in rounding out the members of the local High school football team into the proper shape to combat the much heralded Waltham High eleven at Waltham next Saturday. This will be the final game of the year for the local boys, and they are especially anxious to emerge from the contest in triumph, and thus bring their present football season to a successful terminus.

The local boys have played 11 games thus far this season. Of these, they have won 8 and lost three. They have defeated such teams as Weymouth High, Brighton High, South Boston High, High School of Commerce, Boston College High, Brockton High, Melrose High and Worcester High. They were beaten by Medford High by the score of 23 to 0. In the opening game Cambridge Latin secured a 14 to 0 victory over the local lads, while the great Powder Point team annexed a victory by the close score of 5 to 2.

Waltham High has played 10 games to date and has won 8 and lost 2 games.

Arlington High and Quincy High are the only interscholastic teams that have played 11 games this season. The former has fared a little better than Quincy, having won 9 games, and lost but 2. Thus it can readily be seen that the local boys are to be seriously considered when the time comes for selecting the all star interscholastic teams, and if one, at least, of the Quincy players, is not given a berth, it will seem that the various critics have overlooked the calibre of the local eleven.

Waltham High is in a crippled condition, at the present time, and this fact should give the local boys the advantage. A large crowd of rooters will accompany the team to Waltham in the hope of seeing the local warriors terminate their football season in a blaze of glory.

Following is the record of the Quincy High eleven this season:

Commenting upon the game next Saturday, the morning Herald says: "Waltham High will very likely find the Quincy High team harder than it imagined. When the schedule it arranged Coach Dame will have to have all his players in their best condition to beat the Quarry City youngsters who have done exceptionally well under Coach Staff." The showing of the Quincy A. A. football team this season, has caused the members of that aggregation to be heralded far and wide as the 160 pound champions of the state. This prestige was gained principally by defeating the strong Orient Heights A. A. team, a combination, whose goal line had not been crossed for four years, according to the contention of the Boston papers, but I claim that such an assertion is a mistake, for the local boys accomplished the feat last year by playing the Noddle Islanders to a 6 to 6 standstill. It is certain, however, that Quincy A. A. was the first team to send the peninsular lads down to defeat.

With four straight victories to their credit, and with the team as a whole exhibiting better form on each occasion, it does look as if the members of the recently formed organization will create a most enviable reputation, and thus bring still greater athletic laurels to our city.

Plans are well underway for the second boxing tournament, and St. Mary's hall bids fair to be the centre of added attraction for the members of the Quincy A. A. on the evening of November 20th.

GOLF AT WOLLASTON.

In the handicap match play at the Wollaston Golf club links Saturday, Richard R. Freeman won the gross score with 85. The best net score was made by A. T. Hopkins who got 79. The prize for the second best net score went to G. J. Murphy with 80. The scores:

Active And Exciting Campaign Results In A Sweeping Victory On The Republican Ticket For Eugene R. Stone; Candidate Wall Goes On Democratic Ticket Without Contest

Republican Nominee Carries Every Ward In City But Ward 3. Results For Councilmen

DEMOCRATIC VOTE.

The contests on the Democratic ticket were few and far between Practically there was no contest over any office except in Ward Four where stickers were in circulation for Dr. Reynolds for Ward School Committee. He did not win out however, McPherson the gentleman to file nomination papers getting the honor.

For Mayor there was no contest and Mr. Wall had what might be called a walk over,

JAMES E. WALL.

In several of the wards no nominations were made, but in nearly every case names were written in and if they are found to be correct they will become the party nominees. This was especially true in Ward Six where Mr. Cunningham received 7 votes. Mr. Parlee also received some votes and he may also become one of the Democratic candidates.

For School Committee at large there was no names on the ballot, but several were written. Whether they will be counted or not depends on the question if the names and addresses were correct.

JOHN D. SMITH.

REPUBLICAN VOTE.

The result of the Republican caucuses Tuesday left no doubt but that Eugene R. Stone was the choice of the majority of those who took part in the caucus as the party candidate for Mayor. It was a rousing victory for Mr. Stone who carried every ward in the city with the exception of Ward Three, Mr. Miller's home ward. This ward gave Miller a majority of 98, Ward Two, the home ward of Mr. Stone, did well by him for he carried it by 222, Mr. Miller only getting 24 votes in the ward. In Ward One Mr. Stone also won out with a majority of 128 and in Ward Four his majority was 90. In Ward Five which it had been claimed would give Miller the vote that would swamp his opponent, it is evident that the Miller supporters were too sanguine, for the ward gave Stone a majority of 17. In Ward Six where considerable work had been done in a quiet way for Stone the ward gave him a majority of 216. Stone's majority in the whole city was 565 setting at rest any idea of a recount.

EUGENE R. STONE.

RALPH W. HOBBS

There was also quite a contest for the five Councilman at large to be nominated, six seeking the nomination. Councilman Richards and ex-Councilman Hobbs led the list with a total vote of 1633 each. The others nominated were Sandberg 1494, Abele 1485 and Murray 1448. Bass the candidate defeated received 1409.

The contest for School Committee at large resulted in the nomination of Arthur W. Newcomb, whose term expires this year. He was high man with a total of 892, with Rand second man with a total of 697 and Marsh low man with 569.

ALBERT N. MURRAY.

There were also some interesting local contests in many of the wards for Ward Councilmen. The men nominated in Ward One, were Councilmen Ericson and Ross and Thompson. The latter received 22 more votes than the next highest candidate ex-Councilman Gilson.

In Ward Two but two names were printed on the ballot, but other names were written so that there will probably be three candidates, Carruthers, Devaney and Studley.

The hottest contest however was in Ward Three where there were nine candidates seeking the three positions to be filled. Councilman Craig, Ross and Goutlier were the successful candidates.

Ward Four had no candidate on the ticket, but some names were written and the Ward may have a Republican candidate when the returns are gone over by the City Clerk.

EDWARD J. SANDBERG.

In Ward Five there was also a hot

The first official returns did not arrive at City Hall however until 11.45, when the officer came in with Ward Four votes. He was followed ten minutes later by the returns from Ward Two, but it was 2.12 before the official returns of Ward Three were received. The time of the arrival of the official returns at City Hall was as follows:

PROGRESS SHOWN BY ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY

Encouraging Reports Read At Annual Meeting On Tuesday

Things Needed To Successfully Carry On Work

Many attended the annual meeting on Tuesday of the Quincy Anti-Tuberculosis Association which was held at the office of the President, Henry M. Faxon. Great interest was displayed in the many encouraging reports. Paramount among the many things necessary for the proper development of the great work in this section is the urgent need for a new and larger "shack" for the accommodation of the female patients.

Dr. N. C. Hunting reported that the number of patients treated at the camp numbered 25 in all. His interesting record told of cures, improvements, discharges, transfers and deaths.

Expenses for the year for the maintenance of the work amount to over $3500—necessitating a monthly income of $100 from private sources. Donations of money are, therefore, always thankfully received as well as vegetables, fruit and groceries. Especially needed just now are sheets, pillow cases, bed spreads and hot water bottles.

A grateful acknowledgement was made for the good work displayed in the collection of over $200 in annual dues as well as for the donations of fruits, jellies and other articles during the year.

Acknowledgement is made as follows:—

Mrs. Herbert Pinkham, Ward 5,	$128.20
Miss M. Flora Underwood, Pres. Hill	83.50
Mrs. Jos. A. Dasha, Ward 2	42.00
Mrs. John R. Richards, Ward 3,	36.75
Mrs. Alex Hill, Ward 6	8.75
Mrs. George Abele	8.00
Mrs. Arthur Haywood	7.00
Mrs. Amos Hunting	6.00
Mrs. John L. Dow	4.00
Miss Katharine Shea	5.00

with returns from others to follow.

It was voted to push the sale of Red Cross Stamps.

The success of the work during the year was also guaranteed by the donation of $600 from six persons in sympathy with the movement and an additional $600 from societies including the Quincy Woman's Club, Knights of Columbus, Granite Mfgrs.' Assn., Mrs. Hunting's Entertainment, Unity Circle, King's Daughters, St. Margaret's Guild, Christ Church, Philathean Bible Class, Quincy Catholic Club and Wollaston Baptist Church.

The treasurer reported all bills paid and a balance of $75 in the treasury, exclusive of donations as noted above.

The following officers were elected:—

President	Henry M. Faxon
Vice Presidents,	John A. Gordon, M. D.
	Mr. Herbert W. Pinkham
Treasurer,	Perry Lawton
Secretary,	Mrs. Wilson Marsh

MEETING OF CLUB ENDS CONFERENCE

At All Soul's Church Ashmont On Tuesday

DR. TUCKER SPOKE

Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra, rector of St. Chrysostom's church and several others from Quincy were present Tuesday evening at the meeting of the Men's club of All Soul's church, Ashmont. The meeting was the climax of a most successful week's conference in which great enthusiasm was created for the foreign missions of the denomination.

The meeting opened with a banquet which was partaken of by upwards of 150. Following the banquet Rev. Simon B. Blunt, rector of the church spoke briefly and introduced as the first speaker Rev. Dr. Tucker, of the Tokio Japan mission. Dr. Tucker gave an interesting talk on the work of the mission in Japan and what it had accomplished and hoped to accomplish. He told of the difficulties that at first confronted the missionaries sent out but that they had accomplished great results. The work of the missionaries was now complete and all that remained was to make the churches self governing and supply them with local preachers.

Many, he said, had a mistaken idea of what a mission was. It was not seeking to have Japan give up its own religion, but to give the Japanese who are losing the religion, something which they are longing for. It is a question whether Japan shall become a nation without religion or with one. Our aim is first to make them realize in a practical way what christianity is, or we might call it the advertising age. This has been completed and the predjudice against christian religion has been done away with. Formerly there were no laws to protect women, but under the enlightened age such laws had been created. There are in Tokio today 75,000 students who will mould the future Japan. If the church can only reach these young men it will attract some of them to be leaders in the religious movement and well trained.

Dr. Tucker also spoke of the great advancement that had been made by Japan during the last fifty years and the question is shall it continue to become a power which can only be done through religious teachings.

Charles Field, a leading Layman of Chicago, also gave an interesting talk on Christian mission and said there was never such a time when there was the demand for christian religion as today. In five years it will be settled whether it shall be christian religion or something else. He did not share the feeling that people were not as religious today as their ancestors. History is simply repeating itself. Personality is a new and potent figure in religion today. Every dollar invested in foreign missions helps uphold christian religion and is an investment that will earn dividends long after you are dead.

Other speakers were Mr. Saville of the Massachusetts Diocese, who told of the work of the mission and what was needed to carry on the work during the present year. Joseph G. Snell of All Saint's church, who spoke of the work of the men's club of the church and urged the men to dig down deep into their pockets and give liberally toward the mission movement.

The last speaker was Rev. William E. Gardner, a former rector of Christ church in Quincy, now secretary of the State Mission, who said he came as a booster to get underneath and help booset the good work. He also said he had received many letters inquiring about the plan of the conference that has just been concluded by All Souls' church stating that they also wanted to hold such a conference.

HONOR TO RETIRING OFFICER

Wm. L. Thomas Former Supt. Christ Church S. S. Tendered Surprise

MRS. THOMAS REMEMBERED

The teaching staff of Christ church Sunday school, assembled last evening at the home of their former superintendent, William L. Thomas, 97 South street.

The object of this gathering was to tender a surprise party to Mr. Thomas to show the great esteem in which he is held by his co-workers. The gathering was composed of the teachers who served under Mr. Thomas during his seven years as executive.

Mr. Thomas was superintendent of Christ Church Sunday school for seven years, with a record that is worthy of great note. During that period, he did not miss a single session.

The Sunday school has flourished under his excellent supervision and as a whole has been greatly benefited. He worked faithfully and strenuously for the good of the school and always had a smile and pleasant word for everybody.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide received one Democratic vote in Ward One for Mayor.

More Republican ballots were cast at the caucuses, Tuesday, than the total vote of both parties at the state caucuses.

Now that the smoke of the caucus fights are over, get together and elect your man.

Candidate Stone came into City Hall shortly after 11 o'clock Tuesday night and was heartily congratulated on his victory. Gene responded by passing the smokers.

The time for filing nomination papers for candidates to be voted for at the municipal election will expire next Wednesday. It would not be surprising if there were some independent candidates.

Registration for the municipal election will close tonight at 10 o'clock. The registrars will be in session in the Council Chamber this afternoon commencing at 12 o'clock noon. Do not let the opportunity to get registered get by.

B. P. O. E.

A largely attended meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks was held Tuesday evening. After the business of the evening an adjournment was made to the club house where an oyster chowder was served.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Hats off to the victors. Everyone a good man.

Massachusetts has a Democratic governor again and the sacred cod-fish refuses to be comforted even by a baked bean supper.

Another case of "didn't know it was loaded." This time near at home. It is safe to say that the mania for pointing firearms will never cease.

As a million women will vote in the next presidential election, the candidates must take more care to have their trousers properly creased.

Mr. Taft took lots of trouble to vote, although we are not informed that he is a candidate for any position in the Cincinnati civil service.

The Republicans carried Rhode Island and Democrats carried Kentucky. Many men still take the advice of their grandfathers on how to vote.

Chicago hotel managers blame the public for the tipping practice. It is also due to the desire of the public to have luncheon served in time for dinner.

A number of reform mayors were defeated in the election. It takes a skilful politician to prepare a sugar coating for the bitter pill of good government.

Frank Hitchcock is trying to save money by having the post office department sell its old packing boxes for kindling wood, forgetting all about the needs of the Small Boy for July 4th bonfire material.

A world's plowing record of four minutes to the acre at Lafayette, Ind., is a great advance in a useful science, but if a college boy threw the hammer an inch farther than before it would awaken much more enthusiasm.

The late hour at which complete returns were available at Tuesday's election again demonstrates the necessity for the early installation of the voting machine. Here's hoping that the proper authorities will take the matter up for consideration at the first possible opportunity.

REVOLT AGAINST FASHION.

Much attention has been excited by an attack on fashions in dress, false hair and puffs, etc., contained in an address before the Michigan Federation of Woman's clubs, by Mrs. C. C. Warren, president of the New Jersey Federation.

Theoretically all that type of humanity slangily known as the highbrows advocate a return to the simple life. But the simple life seems to provide little satisfaction for that lust for competition that is in the blood of all of us. Men and women never risk their money on a game of solitaire.

The old fashioned woman satisfied this instinct by a competition in all the homely arts of housewifery. Her shelf of toothsome mincemeat, her purple hued jellies comforted her soul not merely because they nourished the body. There was the satisfaction of excelling the foolish virgin whose bare shelves showed neglect of the arts of thrift.

The shelf of jellies and preserves has ceased to satisfy the modern woman, because it is merely obtained on credit at the grocer's.

The competitive instinct, in homes where the housewifely arts have passed into the hands of servants, is now felt largely in a competition in dress and household furniture. There is a rivalry to present to the inspecting world the most perfect good form, in tasteful and original dress and household furnishing.

It is woman's function to be attractive. Many things which are counted prizes in life go to the one that wears the most chic gowns. As many of these prizes are awarded by men on the basis of pretty faces and pretty clothes, rather than on skilful hands, winsome hearts, and trained minds, it is men after all who are primarily to blame.

At this point enter the milliner and the dress maker. Originality and superiority of taste were never demonstrated with last year's hat or gown. At least so people think. These are the tools with which the game is played, and winning tools always bring a high price.

Compared with the ruthless competitions prevailing in the world of men's business, where hearts and homes are crushed as you would smash an eggshell, these rivalries of woman's field seem less fatal. But there is lacking here the great principle of combination that has produced so many economies in the world of man's business.

MORE ABOUT VOTING MACHINES.

Now that the people have ratified the constitutional amendment to permit the use of voting machines at all elections, it will be the duty of all city officials to see that the people's wish becomes a reality.

In order to conduct our public business enterprises economically it is necessary to employ modern means and not continue with the crude and expesive method of holding elections.

Every merchant uses a cash register to protect himself against dishonesty and error; every counting house employs one or more adding machines because they are more accurate and faster than human hands and brains in accomplishing computations.

Then why in the name of all the incongruities that plague a popular government, should the city not use mechanical means of securing accuracy, speed and legibility in its election returns?

If the object of elections is to ascertain the popular will, where on earth is there room for a legitimate objection to ascertaining it in the quickest, clearest and most definite form?

There is more reason for using voting machines to record and count the votes than there is for using a typewriter to inscribe the letters of public officials instead of having them in whatever sort of hand-writing clerks would use.

An electric fire system has no more advantage over the old station fire bells than a mechanical voting system has over the old, muddled plan of the clerks.

These machines will make for the purity of the ballot and will insure the voters an honest count and absolute secrecy. They will prevent the throwing out of a great number of defective ballots and will do away with the recounts which occur after almost every election. The delays, errors and recounts as were evident in the recent Maine election, emphasize the fact that these machines are the only solution to our present election troubles.

The result of an election is ascertainable immediately upon the closing of the polls. The count is of necessity accurate, thereby eliminating recounts which occur after almost every election.

Preacher Says Yale-Harvard Football Games Will Stop In Ten Years

New Haven, Nov. 15.—Rev. John Hoag of Cavalry Baptist church says Yale-Harvard football games will be stopped within ten years because of the betting they foster. He said:

"If the spirit of gambling which has characterized and destroyed the beauty of college sports continues to increase within the next five years as it has in the past five years, I venture to prophesy that within ten years there will be no Yale-Harvard games."

DEVELOPMENT OF MEDICINE IN THE STATE

Subject of Lecture By Dr. Mark W. Richardson

AT UNITARIAN CLUB

At the meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club Tuesday evening Dr Mark W. Richardson, secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Health delivered a comprehensive lecture on the "Development of State Medicine in Massachusetts."

As early as the settlement of the Massachusetts colony in 1630 epidemics of smallpox were found among the Indian tribes and typhus and yellow fever were brought fro mthe West Indies. The first quarantine was put on these ships in 1647.

In 1721, when true inoculation was instituted over one-half the inhabitants of Boston were infected with smallpox. Vaccination followed later and in 1810 the Legislature provided for vaccination.

In 1849 cholera invaded the state and a commission was appointed for a sanitary survey of the state. The recommendations of this board were very far sighted but no action was taken on the same for twenty years and some of them have yet to be worked out.

An investigation of conditions attending the slaughtering business in Brighton was one of the first duties of the state board of health. Investigations of the diseases of various localities were begun in 1874. In 1870 mortality among minors was first looked into. In 1871 the study of tuberculosis started and in 1872 infant mortality was first taken up.

The state board of health is composed of seven members one of which is appointed each year by the governor to serve for a term of seven years without any remuneration except certain necessary expenditures.

The food and drug division forms one of the chief departments and over three-fifths of its appropriation is spent in the investigation of the milk supply. Dr. Richardson had some amusing stories to tell of the attitude of the farmers in this investigation. The adulteration of foods was also gone into.

The speaker also took up in detail the state inspection of health, the territory being divided into 14 districts with an inspector over each.

The engineering department which supervises the water supply and sewage disposal of the state is a very active department.

The speaker went exhaustively into preventative medicine and told of the spread of disease through the agency of milk. The address closed with an account of the national health authorities which are under the Treasury department and in which the marine hospitals play a large part.

Many questions were asked and one brought out an interesting exposition of the manufacture of serums and anti toxins.

A roast beef supper of usual excellence was served, the blessing being asked by Rev. Carl G. Horst.

DUNCAN SPEAKS AT ATLANTA GA.

"International insurgency against aristocratic, governmental and judicial tyranny" is the way James Duncan, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, described "a craving for better conditions" before that organization at Atlanta, Ga.

This expression came from Mr. Duncan when describing labor conditions in Europe, on which he spoke for two hours this afternoon. He consumed all the morning session by reading the voluminous report of the executive council.

Forthe next two days committee work will engage the attention of the delegates. President Gompers this evening invited them to offer any resolutions they had and in a few minutes the hopper was swamped. Action must be taken on every one of them.

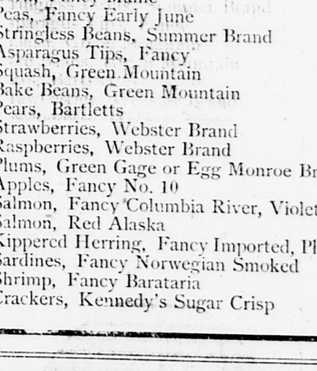

The profession of burglary is being adopted by an increasing number of young men, but it will never be really popular while it requires so much night work.

Chokes to Death at Hotel Table

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 15.—S J. Cannon, a traveling salesman, whose home is in Cleveland, choked to death in the dining room of a hotel here. A piece of beefsteak lodged in his throat, and before a doctor could reach him he was dead.

FOR THANKSGIVING
A New Dinner Set
In July we placed an order with a large English manufactory for 5 crates of Blue Willow Ware Dinner sets. They should have arrived on Sept. 1, but through some one's fault they were sent to Quincy, Ill. Fearful they would not arrive for our fall trade we cabled the manufacturers to duplicate the order. The railroad discovered the error and ordered the original 5 crates forwarded here. Both lots have arrived and to get us to accept both shipments the manufacturers have made a big concession in price. Therefore these 112-piece Blue Willow Ware Dinner Sets bought to be sold for $12.75 have been marked at $7.49
This is certainly a value you cannot overlook and the housewife or bride-to-be who really believes picking up bargains should not let this opportunity get by

D. A. R.

The Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter D. A. R. were entertained at the home of Mrs. Frederick Chase, 17 Muirhead street, Wollaston, Monday afternoon. Regent, Mrs. Walter F. Jones in the chair. Mrs. Antoinette Paige reported plans for the grand D. A. R. bazaar which is to be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, Dec. 6, 7, and 8. The Wollaston chapter together with Samuel Adams chapter and Humphrey and Sprague chapter are to have charge of the Department store table. The purpose of the bazaar is to raise money for State D. A. R. headquarters in the new Historical Genealogical building and $5,000 is the amount needed. Several Daughters of the local chapter will be in attendance each day and will be glad to welcome Quincy friends.

Mrs. Paige, chairman of the program committee after a short preliminary talk about Gov. Hutchinson introduced Mrs. J. J. Warner who read the paper of the afternoon, "Gov. Hutchinson and Milton Hill" and several letters relating to the troublous times in which he lived. Mrs. Warner's paper was very interesting and exceedingly well written.

The musical program was given by Mrs. Helen Donovan Kerins, soprano soloist at Park Street church, Boston, with Mr. J. W. Conant, organist also of Park Street church at the piano. Mrs. Kerins rendered a group of songs in her own charming artistic way. Blackbird's Song by Scott; Were my song with wings provided by Hahn; Happy Song, del Riego and The Blue Bell by McDowell.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Cort of Cambridge, Mrs. William Burrill, Mrs. Walter Field and Miss Margaret Hall.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

A large number assembled at the club house on Tuesday afternoon for the third meeting of the season. Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard presided and opened the business meeting promptly. After the usual reading of the records, the Literature committee announced that single tickets to any Literature class meeting could be obtained for 50 cents each. The Civics Committee called attention to the annual assembly at Music hall on the evening of Dec. 1st. The president called attention to the Federation meeting at Haverhill on Thursday, Nov. 16th, and urged all members who could possibly do so to attend. She also read a notice of the State Federation Art committee meeting at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, on Dec. 7 at 10 o'clock. A card with the name of bearer and the club to which she belongs will admit any member of a federated club to this meeting which promises to be very interesting and instructive.

Brief notes of the Federation Conference at the Hawes Unitarian church, South Boston, on Oct. 28 were read by the secretary as follows: This conference, having as its subject, The Ideal President from the viewpoint of the club and from the view point of the federation brought out the usual descriptions of perfectly impossible Presidents in that they would have to be more than human—but we were reminded occasionally that the ideal was essential to growth—and that seemed a sufficient reason for trying to apply some of the ideas presented. Many of those who spoke seemed to put upon the President the responsibility of everything pertaining to the club life and work, but it seemed to me that the most practical view was expressed by one who said the president should know first, the needs of her own club, and the needs of her own community, in its relation to the club work—should be thoroughly familiar with her own club by-laws and that her chief duty should be to preside wisely and well, for that the actual club work should be done by the appointed committees, under the supervision of the whole executive board, and that in regard to taxing the President with overseeing the different lines of work—she believed the loyal members would prefer to say with one of Shakespeares characters, "that the President" had better be done to death with rust than scoured to death with perpetual motion." She spoke also of the importance of loyalty to the club president as a means of unity of thought and purpose. From the federation standpoint the idea was principally that a club president should know the aims and plans of the federation, and bring them before the club, that she should, in a way, be the point of contact between her club and the federation, and always bring to the club some of the uplift and inspiration of the federation meetings

A committee ofthree having been appointed by the president at the last board meeting, to consider and bring before the club the appeal of the General Federation to all federated clubs for money to establish a permanent fund, Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, chairman of the committee, made a spirited appeal to the members in its behalf. She presented a plan whereby every member could give whatever sum she chose, leaving the matter of giving entirely to the will of the individual and trusting to the sense of loyalty to club and federation for results. Boxes had been prepared for these offerings, to be placed at either door as the members passed out. The club voted to adopt the plan submitted by Mrs. Pinkham.

The executive Board recommended to the club that the annual musicale of this year be a public meeting and that the public have the right to purchase guest tickets at twenty-five cents each. After a short discussion, the club unanimously voted in favor of this.

The program was in charge of the Education committee, Mrs. Charles R. Safford, and was opened with songs, "Chant de Paschante" by Bemberg, "Peasant's Lullabye" by Gideon and "Ecstacy" by Runnel, all beautifully sung by Mrs. Mary Hastings Slade, with Miss Mabel Adams Bennett at the piano. Following these, came a delightful program of Bulgarian Folk songs, by May Sleeper Ruggles and Echoes from the Balkans by Rev. W. W. Sleeper. In his brief description of the natives and their customs, Dr. Sleeper brought the spirit of the race very vividly before his audience; and the songs, which he accompanied at the piano, sometimes singing a second part, were all a very delightful part of the interesting whole. Mrs. Ruggles has a rich contralto voice and her interpretations were artistic and imbued with the warm coloring of the race she was presenting. The last number on the program was the National song of the Bulgarians, "Shumi Maritsa" and in response to Dr. Sleeper's request the audience stood while it was sung. An informal reception to the artists closed the meeting.

Among the guests of the afternoon were two from the distant states of Florida and Georgia, and members from the Women's clubs of Worcester, Townsend and Dorchester.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Yellow chrysanthemums and red berries added their cheerfulness to the parlor of First church, for the meeting of Quincy Alliance on Monday afternoon. The president Mrs. George G. Saville presided conducting the devotional and business sessions. Interesting reports were given by Mrs. Isabelle Davis and Mrs. Chas. H. Johnson, secretaries, and on Religious Intelligence by Mrs. John Christiansen. Mrs. Saville told of the success of the flower and lemonade booth of the Quincy Y. P. R. U. at the bazaar in Boston last week, also called attention to the operetta to be given in the chapel, Nov. 24. The withdrawal of support from Morgan Memorial in Boston was explained more fully and the reasons were such as to make the decision seem a wise one. Mrs. Pfaffmann read a letter from Snow Hill in response to the barrel of clothing recently sent, showing how much it was appreciated.

In beginning the afternoon's program Mrs. Saville expressed her pleasure at seeing so many neighbors from Wollaston Alliance present. Music followed, Mrs. Henry Tirrell being the soloist, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. John F. Hunt, both receiving appreciative applause.

The speaker Rev. Samuel R. Maxwell of Greenfield took as his subject "Church Unity" which he handled in a broad way. Mr. Maxwell was also the preacher Sunday morning in the church bringing to the people a message which he made so vital that he created a most favorable impression, an impression further continued by his talk to the Alliance. His idea of one church in the future to enter into the social work of the community instead of many denominations as at present is what many hope to see some day. Co-operation is the keynote of future religious development. It is years ahead, but will surely come as the trend of thought and books of eminent writers voiced that sentiment There is an unconscious getting together in religious and social unity

There was so much food for thought in Mr. Maxwell's talk that it is impossible to do him justice in a brief quotation, the whole being necessary to give the right interpretation of his thoughts on "Church Unity." The afternoon closed with the usual social and tea, the pourers being Mrs. Edward B. Marsh and Mrs William B. Nichols.

QUINCY YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

There was a large audience Saturday evening at the regular meeting of the Young Women's club to hear Dr. McCausland the speaker of the evening.

The club president, Miss Marie Bass presided and a short business session was held.

Dr. McCaulsand gave an interesting and instructive address on "Minor Infections—their prevention and treatment."

At the close Dr. McCausland was given a rising vote of thanks by the club after which dancing was enjoyed to music furnished by Miss Litchfield and others.

The next meeting promises to be a very jolly one for it is to be a poverty party, and all the members are asked to come in appropriate costume.

STATE FEDERATION.

The meeting at Haverhill Thursday promises to be of great interest. The general subject of civics is an appropriate one to be presented at this place, since the hostess club, Hannah Dustin, is distinctively a civic betterment club. The speakers, President Hyde of Bowdoin, Rev. Frederic W. Perkins, D. D., of Lynn and John Nolen of Cambridge, insure a fine programme. Mrs. Ethel Frank Brigham of Roslindale, who has recently returned from study abroad will be the soloist, and Clarence A. Jones will be the pianist. It will be a Liszt programme. Those attending from Boston and vicinity will find special cars attached to the 8.55 A. M. train from the North Station and can buy special round-trip tickets on the train from members of the meetings committee.

STEREOPTICON STORY FOR SATURDAY

The third Saturday morning meeting at the Y. M. C. A. will take place Saturday morning at 9 o'clock sharp. Tickets are to be distributed among the school children on Friday and these will be taken at the door. If any of the boys between ten and fourteen years of age are unable to secure tickets and want to come they can be fixed up all right at the building, Saturday morning. The subject of the stereopticon story for this week is "The Other Wise Man," one of the most interesting tales of recent years that has been made into a stereopticon drama. Forty beautiful colored slides are used to illustrate the story and the boys may be sure of a rare treat. The attendance at the first two meetings has been in the neighborhood of a hundred. This Saturday the interschool contest will be resumed and that will probably bring the attendance to the 150 mark.

RED CROSS STAMPS.

Red Cross Christmas stamps will be placed on sale in all cities about Dec. 1. For the first time sale of the stamps will be permitted this year in all post-offices. You need the Ledger every day.

2nd ANNUAL DANCE OF ROSEDALE CLUB

The Rosedale Club, composed of a number of employees of the local telephone exchange, will give its second annual dance, next Friday evening, in Alpha Hall. The committee in charge has been using every effort during the past two weeks to make the coming occasion a gala one, and from present indiations it looks as if the coming event will eclipse the affair of last year.

The "hello" girls will be in great evidence that night, and it is expected that large delegations will be present from other exchanges in and about Boston. A special feature of the event will be the "telephone glide waitz," a novel introduction. A concert will be in order from 8 o'clock until 9, and dancing will conclude the affair at midnight. Special cars have been arranged for after the dance.

FINE CONCERT SERIES.

The music committee of the Milton Education Society announces three concerts for this season, to be given in the Town hall of Milton, at 8.15 o'clock, the first Nov. 18, Flonzaley quartet, second, Jan. 10, Elona Gerhardt soprano; third, April 12, concert of choral works by a volunteer chorus of Milton people of over 100 voices, under the direction of Arthur H. Ryder of Boston. The chorus will be assisted by soloists. The Flonzaley quartet is so well known that it is hardly necessary to enlarge upon its distinguished playing of chamber music. Elona Gerhardt makes her debut at Carnegie hall, New York Jan. 9. She is undoubtedly the world's greatest lieder singer and will be one of the most colossal successes that America has ever had the privilege of hearing.

Subscriptions at $2.00 each are being received by John Balch, 162 Adams street, Milton, for the series.

Q.—Are we to understand that the children and the heathen who have died in the past will, in the coming age during the reign of Christ, be developed to maturity; physically, and mentally, and that then they will have their time of probation or trial for eternal life?

Answer.—There are many Scriptures which teach that the world's trial time is in the future and that only the Church of Christ is now on trial for eternal life. During that future time of trial, when all the world has been awakened from the grave, it is declared that the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, even as the waters cover the great deep, and all shall know Him from the least to the greatest, and to such an extent that then it will not be necessary to say unto one's neighbor—"Know thou the Lord," for the way of salvation will be so plain that a wayfaring man though a fool shall not err therein. This means that children will have to develop to maturity, and that the heathen will come to an intellectual comprehension of the truth. The world of mankind is to be lifted up to full human perfection, and this perfection will be gained by faith and obedience to the gracious arrangements established in the earth by the Lord Jesus Christ.

In localities where there are now no jobs at recounting votes, the politician is confronted with the imglorious necessity of facing up to some one's desk and doing a few day's work.

Need a Receiving Line?

"A receiving line? Why, that's an additional telephone at about half price.

"It was this way: I had reached the point where my regular telephone couldn't take care of all the calls for my number. When I found I was losing trade I decided that it was time to do something. I told the telephone people I didn't want to go to the expense of another full service telephone if I could avoid it, and they suggested a telephone for incoming calls only.

"It works to perfection. I list the receiving line in my book and hold my regular telephone for outward calls and for the overflow of incoming calls that cannot be cared for on the receiving line.

"Costs me $3 a month and is just as good for my use as a line giving inward and outward service."

DID NOT KNOW GUN WAS LOADED

And East Weymouth Girl Is Terribly Injured

NO ARREST MADE

While merry revels were in progress at a social gathering at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Orr, 53 Middle street, East Weymouth Tuesday evening, Miss Ethel Bowker a church choir singer, was frightfuly injured by the accidental discharge of a shotgun in the hands of her companion, Charles Kilburn, who playfully aimed the weapon at her, not knowing that it was loaded.

A full charge of bird shot struck her in the mouth, breaking nearly every tooth and causing a compound fracture of the lower jaw.

She was treated in the Orr house by two doctors. At midnight her condition was serious and tomorrow morning she will be taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

TAKES UP HIGH COST OF LIVING

President Will Consider Problem In His Message

Washington, Nov. 15.—President Taft is planning to take up the high cost of living in a special message to congress when he transmits the report of the tariff board's investigation of the wool and cotton schedules. It is also said the president will vigorously renew his recommendations for a parcels post.

The tariff board's findings will show, it is declared, that much of the high cost of living is due to the middleman rather than the tariff.

President Taft met the cabinet Tuesday for the first time in three months. Secretary Stimson, who is in Kansas City, was the only member absent.

The reassembling of the president's official family gave recurrence to the rumors that Secretary Wilson is soon to resign. This is generally believed to be true, and in official circles it is stated that the secretary of agriculture is only delaying the announcement of his resignation until President Taft decides upon another man for his place. It is said that the portfolio has been offered to at least two men prominent in scientific agricultural work and declined.

Aside from a consideration of the many questions which have accumulated during the summer, the meeting was largely devoted to consideration of the president's message to congress and the official reports of the cabinet officers.

The president's recommendations to congress for supplementary anti-trust legislation, probably along the lines of a federal incorporation act, will be formed after thorough conference with Attorney General Wickersham.

It is understood the president's advisers pointed out the work of the coming congress would centre upon two main issues—the tariff and the trusts.

With Democratic leaders declaring for some readjustment of the Sherman law and the Republican insurgents declaring for some affirmative legislation to point out the paths for the legal conduct of big business, the president's closest counsellors seem to favor some legislation which will permit business to go ahead and know where it stands.

WEYMOUTH FAIR.

At the annual meeting of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society, the following officers were elected: President, Ralph P. Burrell; vice-president, Thomas V. Nash; secretary, A. Francis Barnes, and treasurer, Daniel F. Daley. The directors for the coming year will be Theron L. Tirrell, James F. Young, Jo Taylor, Bradford C. Wilder, Lot Lohnes, William F. Callahan, Daniel W. Hart, A. S. Marsh, N. R. Ells, Joseph A. Haley and E. J. Pitcher. The treasurer reported that the society has a balance in the bank for the first time in several years.

PRIZES FOR INVENTIONS.

Substantial Rewards for Those Who Devise Humanitarian Appliances.

The inventors of guns and those who have exercised their talents in improving destructive war materials have often been richly rewarded in this and other countries. But, if anyone in our own country has received a reward for the invention of perfection of apparatus to lessen the sufferings of sick and wounded in war, no one has ever heard of it. Naturally, therefore, progress in this direction has not been as notable as it might have been. To their honor, be it said, that this condition of affairs has never operated to deter the medical officers of our army and navy from doing, without hope of material reward, all in their power to improve existing apparatus and to invent new appliances. Conditions in other countries have been similar to ours.

Some years ago, in order to better conditions in this respect, the Dowager-Empress of Russia, established a prize fund consisting of $50,000. This is for the purpose of encouraging inventions having for their purpose the amelioratios of the sufferings of sick and wounded in war. Every five years, on the occasion of the quinquennial International Red Cross Conferences, the interest on the fund, amounting to about $10,000, is disbursed in prizes. The first awards were made in London in 1907. No Americans competed, nor was the exhibition given much publicity in this country. Next year, in May, the International Red Cross Conference will be held in Washington, D. C., when the following prizes will be offered:

One 1st prize of $3,200.

Two2d prizes of $1,500 each.

Six 3d prizes of $500 each.

The subjects of the competition will be:

1. Organization of the methods of evacuation of the wounded on the battlefield, comprising as complete an economy as possible in litter bearers.
2. Portable (surgeons') washstands for war.
3. Methods of packing dressings at the aid stations and in the ambulance.
4. Wheeled stretchers.
5. Carriage of stretcher on mule-back.
6. Easily portable folding stretcher.
7. Transport of the wounded between war vessels, hospital ships and the shore.
8. The best method of heating railroad cars by a system independent of steam from the locomotive.
9. The best model of a portable Roentgen apparatus, permitting utilization of X-rays on the battlefield and at first aid statioss.

No particular prize is allotted to a special subject; but the best exhibition, as decided b ythe judges, irrespective of the subject, will be awarded the maximum prize, and so on. Though this is a new field of endeavor for most American inventors, the substantial monetary rewards should result in many exhibits being entered by them. They have not fallen behind the inventors of other countries in fashioning the destructive agents of warfare, and now that an opportunity is given them to compete with other countries in minimizing the horrors of war, it is certain they will not be found wanting.

Anty Drudge Advises the Fireman.

Fireman—"Morning, Anty Drudge! You had better go over to Mrs. Slims; she's terribly burned."

Anty Drudge—"How did it happen?"

Fireman—"Over-heated stove. Trying to get the fire hot enough to boil her clothes. My wife was badly burned last week doing the same thing."

Anty Drudge—"Yes, I'll go right over. But look here, young man! Get your wife Fels-Naptha. Then she won't have to boil the clothes. Just use lukewarm or cool water; let the clothes soak for half an hour; that's all there is to it."

Friendship begins with acquaintance. All Fels-Naptha wants is an introduction and it will become your boon companion in laundry and kitchen.

We are advertising to get Fels-Naptha that introduction into new homes.

Then we depend on the soap itself to keep it there.

If Fels-Naptha wouldn't do what we claim; if it wouldn't wash clothes quicker and better in cool or lukewarm water without hard labor or boiling; if it wouldn't save time, work, fuel and health—would over a million women use it every washday?

Not much.

But Fels-Naptha will do these things and more; has done them and is doing them for more and more progressive women every year.

Follow the easy directions on the back of the red and green wrapper.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES — NO SLATE — NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

"Ten fella three times, Billy," Sheldon said encouragingly, though there was a certain metallic rasp in his voice.

Billy scowled, looked up and looked down, but did not move.

"Billy!"

Sheldon's voice exploded like a pistol shot. The savage startled physically. Grins overspread the grotesque features of the audience, and there was a sound of tittering.

"S'pose you like too much lash that fella Arunga, you take him fella Tulagi," Billy said. "One fella government agent make plenty lash. That um fella law. Me savvee um fella law."

It was the law, and Sheldon knew it. But he wanted to live this day and the next day and not to die waiting for the law to operate the next week or the week after.

"To much talk along you!" he cried angrily. "What name, eh? What name?"

"Me savvee law," the savage repeated stubbornly.

"Astoa!"

Another man stepped forward in almost a sprightly way and glanced insolently up. Sheldon was selecting the worst characters for the lesson.

"You fella Astoa, you fella Narada, tie up that fella Billy alongside other fella same fella way.

"Strong fella tie," he cautioned them.

"You fella Astoa take that fella whip. Plenty strong big fella too much ten fella three times. Savvee?"

"No," Astoa grunted.

Sheldon picked up the rifle that had leaned against the rail, and cocked it.

"I know you, Astoa," he said calmly. "You work along Queensland six years."

"Me fella missionary," the black interrupted with deliberate insolence.

"Queensland you stop jail one fella year. White fella master fool no hang you. You too much bad fella. Queensland you stop jail six months two fella time. Two fella time you steal. All right, you missionary. You savvee one fella prayer?"

"Yes, me savvee prayer," was the reply.

"All right, then you pray now, short time little bit. You say one fella prayer quick, then me kill you."

Sheldon held the rifle on him and waited. The black glanced around at his fellows, but none moved to aid him. They were intent upon the coming spectacle, staring fascinated at the white man with death in his hands who stood alone on the great veranda.

SHELDON HELD THE RIFLE ON HIM AND WAITED.

"Astoa," Sheldon said, seizing the psychological moment, "I count three fella time. Then I shoot you fella dead, good by, all finish you."

And Sheldon knew that when he had counted three he would drop him in his tracks. The black knew it, too. That was why Sheldon did not have to do it, for when he had counted one, Astoa reached out his hand and took the whip. And right well Astoa laid on the whip, angered at his fellows for not supporting him, and venting his anger with every stroke. From the veranda, Sheldon egged him on to strike with strength, till the two triced savages screamed and howled while the blood oozed down their backs. The lesson was being well written in red.

When the last of the gang, including the two howling culprits, had passed out through the compound gate, Sheldon sank down half fainting on his couch.

"You're a sick man," he groaned. "A sick man."

"But you can sleep at ease tonight," he added, half an hour later.

CHAPTER III.

THE JESSIE.

TWO days passed, and Sheldon felt that he could not grow any weaker and live, much less make his four daily rounds of the hospital. The deaths were averaging four a day, and there were more new cases than recoveries. The blacks were in a funk. Each one, when taken sick, seemed to make every effort to die. They believed they were going to die, and yet, believing this with absolute conviction, they somehow lacked the nerve to rush the frail wraith of a man with the white skin and escape from the charnel house by the whale boats. They chose the lingering death they were sure awaited them rather than the immediate death they were very sure would pounce upon them if they went up against the master. That he never slept they knew. That he could not be conjured to death they were equally sure—they had tried it. And even the sickness that was sweeping them off could not kill him.

With the whipping in the compound discipline had improved. They cringed under the iron hand of the white man. They gave their scowls or malignant looks with averted faces or when his back was turned. They saved their mutterings for the barracks at night, where he could not hear. And there were no more runaways and no more night prowlers on the veranda.

THREAT OF MACLAURIN

Cambridge May Not Get Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 15.—President Maclaurin of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology last night threatened to move the college to Springfield, unless the opposition ceases, which is being manifested by Cambridge manufacturers and others.

At a joint conference of the Cambridge city council and board of aldermen, Maclaurin stated that he could state authoritatively that the institution would not come to Cambridge unless it was entirely welcome, and declared that land and money had been offered in Springfield as an inducement to remove to that city.

HONOR RETIRING OFFICER

It was with a great deal of hesitancy that he resigned, but owing to a pressure of church duties he was unable to maintain the position. It is needless to say that he is greatly missed in the Sunday school but his interest is still there and he is working vigorously for the good of the church.

The party gathered between 7.45 and 8.00 o'clock and Mr. Thomas and the rector Rev. R. E. Armstrong arrived on the scene at 8.30. When they entered all was silent, but this did not last long. Mr. Thomas's first words were "Oh! my goodness, what a crowd." He was greeted with round after round of applause. When the first excitement had subsided, the happy party gathered around him. The rector delivered an address in which he spoke very highly of the esteem in which Mr. Thomas is held. He told of the great work which he had accomplished and expressed the deep regret of all of the teachers as a result of his resignation, and wished him to look upon all of the teachers as his friends and that they would always regard him as such.

The rector then presented a handsome picture, "The Children of the Shell' which is an exact reproduction of the original painting by Murillo, which now hangs in the Art Gallery at Madrid.

Mr. Thomas was so completely surprised that it was with difficulty that he responded to the great applause which greeted him. He thanked the teachers one and all and told them that he would always look upon the painting with great respect.

It was now Mrs. Thomas's turn to be surprised. Mrs. Charles Chase made the presentation, saying that all of the teachers greatly appreciated her valuable assistance to Mr. Thomas in his clerical work connected with the Sunday school and desired to remember her also. She was presented with a handsome gold thimble. She too was surprised, but expressed her great appreciation.

Salads, coffee and candies were served and the evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner. Those present were:—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Thomas, Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Chase, Mrs. Walter E. Burke, Mrs. Haslett, Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. George H. Brown, The Misses Hobart, Mary Pollock, Emily Moyle, Florence Ford, Cora Barnicoat, May Veale, Mildred Crowley, Edith Fox, Ruth Gardner, Julia Thomas, Louise Mandigo, Lizzie Curtis, Alice Findlay, Gertrude Jones, Annie Smith, Olive Smith, Lizzie Dickie and Mabel Dickie. The Messrs. Robert King, E. J. Townsend, Arthur Newton, Arthur Thomas, Henry Hallowell, B. Vanduren, Roy Prout, Henry Boutilier and James Smith.

NEHEMIAH D. SPERRY

One of the Grand Old Men of Connecticut

LONG THE OLDEST MEMBER

Sperry Served Many Years as Congressman From Connecticut

New Haven, Nov. 15.—The funeral of former Congressman Nehemiah D. Sperry, whose death occurred at his home here, will be held Thursday afternoon. Expressions of grief at his death are heard on every hand and many messages of sympathy have been received at the Sperry home. The end came quite unexpectedly, although many intimate friends knew that he was in very feeble health.

Mr. Sperry died from hardening of the arteries and infirmities incident to advanced years. He was born in Woodbridge, Conn., July 10, 1827, coming to New Haven when 14 years old. He took an active interest in politics and held office in the city and state governments.

In 1894 he was elected to the Fifty-Fourth congress, and was re-elected for each succeeding term, finishing his services in the Sixty-First congress. He was for many years the oldest member of congress.

Abraham Lincoln and Sperry were close friends. Sperry was a delegate to the national Republican convention that renominated President Lincoln, and was made a member of the national committee.

Mr. Sperry was twice married. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

ASKED $500,000 IN SUIT FOR DAMAGES

Small's Case Against Soden Is Settled Out of Court

Boston, Nov. 15.—The $500,000 suit for the alienation of his wife's affections brought by Frederick L. Small, a stock trader, against Arthur H. Soden, the former baseball magnate, has been privately settled out of court. The amount paid is said to be about $15,000.

The ad dammum named in this alienation suit is the largest by many thousand dollars in the history of Massachusetts courts.

Because of the character of the charges Small made against Sodon Judge Brown refused to hear the suit in the superior court last spring. Ex-Judge Robert Harris was appointed to hear the evidence in private.

Judge Harris recommended that Small should receive the sum of $10,000 from Soden, in full settlement.

This report, and Judge Harris' resume of the evidence was to have been read to a jury when the case came up for trial again, and after hearing such additional evidence as the court might consider proper in rebuttal, the jury was to have brought in a verdict as it believed was warranted.

ONE TO THREE YEARS

Sentence Imposed Upon Bank Treasurer Whose Accounts Were Short

New Haven, Nov. 15.—George M. Lucas, former treasurer of the City Savings bank at Meriden, charged with embezzlement of funds of that institution, pleaded guilty to the charge in the criminal side of the superior court and was sentenced to state prison for a term of from one to three years.

The shortage in his accounts was about $15,000 and the peculations had extended over a period of ten years.

Charged With Causing Fire

Gloucester, Mass., Nov. 15.—Charged with being responsible for the fire which damaged Reed's block here Harry Goldman, proprietor of the clothing store in the building, was arrested. It was in Goldman's store that the blaze started that caused a damage of $8000 to the structure. Goldman was held in $2500 bonds.

ARRANGE FOR COMIC PLAY

"Deestrict Skule" Will Be Given At Parochial School Hall

NOV. 27-28

The "Deestrickt Skule" a comic play, whose origin dates back a half century, is the next attraction to be offered in Parochial school hall. Two nights will be devoted to the affair, November 27 and 28, and if the anxiety that is already awaiting the first performance can be taken as any assurance, then the Phipps street hall should be taxed as never before.

Andrew Dinegan, whose fame in minstrelsy is too well known to need any further pronouncement is in charge and is being ably assisted by a cast of 30 players, headed by Matthew Fay, another well known local comic artist.

The girls' parts will be portrayed by a number of young ladies who have already gained proficiency in amateur theatricals and as the play itself is one which will evoke laughter, it should prove the mecca of attraction for all local theatregoers.

MEMORIAL CHURCH FAIR.

The annual fair given by the Ladies' Benevolent society of Memorial Congregational church was held in the vestry of the church Tuesday afternoon and evening and will be continued this afternoon and evening. All of the booths looked very pretty, the principal decorations being of crepe paper. Lunch was served in the afternoon and evening and the ice cream tables were well patronized.

The China table had a fine display and the Christmas Novelties had many suggestions for the coming holiday. At the apron table was an abundance of aprons and the candy department did a prosperous business. The embroidery and fine needlework as shown in the infants' garments made a very attractive table by itself and the useful table had a great variety of saleables.

The ladies of all the committees deserve much praise for their untiring effort during the months they were preparing for the fair, and it is hoped the financial results will be gratifying to them.

FIRST SNOW OF SEASON.

Quincy in common with other cities and towns of the state was treated to a genuine snow storm Tuesday evening. It began to snow shortly before 10 o'clock and for an hour the snow fell thick and fast. Then it turned to rain and with it came the slush. It rained during the greater part of the night the wind increased in violence before morning. Just about daylight the wind blew a gale for a few minutes and it seemed as though it would uproot things generally. The wind subsided but the rain continued until shortly after 8 o'clock when it cleared and the sun came out for a fine day.

Writ of Ouster Issued Against International Harvester

CORPORATION FINED $50,000

Supreme Court of State Finds That Anti-Trust Law Was Violated by Organizing Selling Concern When Trust Was Refused License Because of Its Enormous Capitalization—Had Monopoly on Sale of Binders

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 15.—The supreme court of the state of Missouri issued a writ of ouster against the International Harvester company, and assessed a fine of $50,000 for violation of the anti-trust law.

The International Harvester company, in September, 1910, was found guilty of violating the Missouri anti-trust laws by a commissioner appointed by the state supreme court. The case was submitted to the supreme court for affirmation last April.

The effect of the decision is to prevent all the companies which make up the International company from conducting further business in the state.

The taking of testimony in the suit began in May, 1908, and continued over a year. Judge Brace of Paris, Mo., was the special commissioner appointed by the state supreme court to take the testimony. The taking of testimony was conducted by Governor Hadley, then attorney general. The testimony covered 1600 typewritten pages.

One of the witnesses was George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co. Perkins was the guiding spirit in the organization of the International Harvester company.

The ouster suit against the company was brought under the common law and the Missouri anti-trust law, which are broader than the Sherman anti-trust law.

The International company was organized in 1902. It absorbed successively the McCormick, Deering, Warder, Bushnell & Glessner, Plano, Milwaukee, Keystone, Minnie, Altman & Miller, Buckeye company and the D. M. Osborne company.

The International Harvester company, Brace declared in his report, by reason of its enormous capitalization, $120,000,000, could not obtain a license in Missouri, so the International Harvester company of America, a selling agent, was organized and obtained a license. This concern, Brace said, was organized simply to evade the laws of the state.

The commissioner found that the International Harvester company practically had a monopoly on the sale of binders in Missouri.

Disease Makes Great Headway While Being Treated For Typhoid

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Nov. 15.—Sixty cases of smallpox are reported in several towns west of this place. The situation assumed serious aspects when Dr. Hilton of Brattleboro, secretary of the state board of health, ordered the schools, churches and all public places closed in the towns of Greensboro, Craftsbury, Hardwick and Walden.

The nature of the disease was not learned until yesterday, many of the cases having been treated for typhoid fever. The wholesale expcsure, resulting from ignorance of the disease, causes great consternation.

contest, although the rumor that the voters were after the scalp of Councilman Bailey did not materialize. Councilman Bailey is one of the best men this ward has ever sent to the City Council and the voters would have made a mistake had they retired him. The result of the vote, however, bore out the fact that the voters did understand his worth, all reports to the contrary, for he led the list of candidates to be nominated. The other successful candidates were Barker and Gilliett.

In Ward Six there was also a contest, Councilman Jenkins was low man of the candidates seeking the nomination. Councilman Parlee, an exceptionally good Councilman, was retired for some fancied wrong in the Norfolk Downs district. The men nominated were Cunningham, Beeman and Councilman Sodergren.

In Ward Six Dr. Bruce had no opposition for School Committee. Ward Four nominated no candidate but as Dr. Reynolds name was written in, he will probably get the Republican nomination.

MAKARIA DINES WITH EXCELLENT MENU AND STIMULATING SPEECHES

Seventh Annual Banquet of Prosperous Fraternity Held Wednesday Evening at Bethany Church

Well Known Orators Voice Sentiment of Brotherly Love

The seventh annual banquet of the Makaria Fraternity was held Wednesday evening at the Bethany church and like the six previous banquets proved to be a very enjoyable occasion. The room where the banquet was served, was very prettily decorated with flags and bunting, the large red flag with the letters M. F. occupying a position as a background for the speakers of the evening.

From 6 to 6.30 there was a reception in the chapel, in which President Richard Jones, Rev. William B. Ayers the speaker of the evening and Mrs. T. King received. At 6.30 the signal was given to adjourn to the dining room where long tables had been made ready for the feast by the caterer.

The menu was a pleasing one and included the following:

Grape Fruit with Cherries
Roast Turkey Cranberry Sauce
Baked Ham Boiled Tongue
Mashed Potatoes
Escalloped Oysters
Banana Fritters Sauce
Cream Fritters Salads
Chicken
Fancy Creams
Vanilla, Strawberry, Chocolate, Frozen Pudding
Sultana Roll Sauce
Strawberry Mousse
Sherbert:
Lemon Orange Raspberry
Cake:
Almond Pound Frosted
Macaroons Lady Fingers Kisses
Rolls and Coffee

Dinner over, President Jones briefly welcomed the guests of the evening. He was pleased to know that the Fraternity had so many friends and the look of contentment on your faces, he said, shows that you have enjoyed the good things that have been put before you. The Makaria was started eight years ago by D. King. He then spoke briefly of its early conception and growth and of the great interest there was in the Sunday noon hour meetings. Makaria is a Greek word, meaning happiness, and it is through helping others that we obtain real happiness. He also spoke briefly of some of the work at Christmas, giving baskets to the poor and how much pleasure it had given him to see the happy look that came over the faces of those to whom baskets had been given. He regretted that Mr. Grassick, one of the popular members was absent on account of illness. The incoming President of the Fraternity, he said, was the only man on the team that had played on all, and was still a young man. For him he wished a successful year. He then introduced T. King as the "Grand Old Man" who would be the toastmaster.

Mr. King's word to the Fraternity was "Attention, Front Face." We should have our attention riveted on something, Front Face means there is always something to do in the front ranks. These are the words that come from the Master of men to every human being. The attention to material things, so that we shall know how best to achieve the best in life. The great religious thought that should be in all our hearts is the Lord's call to the front. The word God means attention and my word to you tonight is "Attention, Front Face."

Don't Try To Deceive Yourself

$20 spent in Boston won't buy you a better suit or overcoat than $15 spent in this store.

Don't try to deceive yourself into thinking that you are getting a full $20 worth because your coat has a pretty silk label under the collar. That tag costs $5 and is your tribute toward the Boston store's big expenses.

High rents and page advertisements do not make the clothes, but they do add to the price you are asked to pay. For the man who is looking for something around $15—you'll find it here, and it will be a full $20 value. Why not drop in and see if it isn't so?

BOOMING BUSINESS IN A BIG CITY SUBURB

AS SUGGESTED BY WILLIAM HASTINGS IN PRINTER'S INK

Successfully Carried Out at East Liberty A Suburb of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania

CAN you imagine a spectacle that is more distressing to the average retail dealer than to see carload after carload of shoppers shooting gayly past his attractive store to a shopping district five miles away?

There goes money—real money, slathers of it—money that should be his, and would be his if only it were not for the fact that these shoppers did not want to spend it with him.

This is a problem that arises in every large city. The residence section outgrows the business center and spreads over a constantly widening area. Then at certain favored points in this area stores spring up; first, the corner grocery, then the drug store, and finally stores of all kinds. And the owners of these stores want business. They want it badly, but all they get are the petty picking and leavings of a rich trade. For if there is any actual shopping to be done, any considerable sum to be spent, downtown is the place the shoppers go. Local stores? Not if it can be helped.

But East Liberty, a business district in the residential section of Pittsburgh, has refused to be satisfied with the crumbs of business. A few years ago it woke up and decided that it was going to have its finger in the big pie. There is a great deal in its favor for it is the logical center of a large and prosperous territory; it has excellent trolley and railroad facilities and broad, handsome streets.

The question once definitely put, "How can we get our share of the business of the people that live in our territory? The answer was easy: "We must make these people want to deal in East Liberty instead of going into the city. And being live men and willing to show that they had the courage of their convictions, the East Liberty dealers put time, work and money into creating this particular "want."

Advertising was of course the weapon to be used, and into the advertising business the local Board of Trade plunged bodily. Its methods are worth recounting because, in the first place, they can be imitated by any business community similarly placed, and, secondly, they are resulting in success.

The first step was to arrange a series of Red Letter Days. About twice a year a week is set aside during which all the stores offer special bargains. These events are widely advertised before hand. The stores are decorated, streamers are hung from the guide wires of the trolley lines, and the whole district assumes a holiday aspect. Prizes are sometimes offered for the best window displays and every clerk is keyed up to the occasion.

As a result, hundreds of shoppers, especially women, are drawn to the stores and discover excellent stocks, thoroughly satisfactory service, and in many cases prices that are lower than those downtown.

One of the features of the advertising of these Red Letter Days is the use of large newspaper space. Part of the space is devoted to the general advantages of East Liberty as a shopping center, and the rest is taken up by the different stores.

A number of painted signs have also been placed which perpetually admonish the reader to "Save time and money"; "Shop in East Liberty."

The latest movement in the campaign was the opening of a local exposition. Almost all the local dealers were interested and the cooperation of a number of national advertisers was secured. A large unoccupied store, five stories high, was filled with booths, orchestras and bands were hired, and several attractions were engaged.

The result surprised even the most sanguine of the promoters. The building was crowded every day of the week that it was open and the local dealers secured an immense amount of advertising.

During the exposition week, the stores held Red Letter Days. An extensive line of bargains was offered, many of the stores giving ten per cent discount on everything on which prices were not fixed. Many of the stores had manufacturers' demonstrators to aid in pushing their goods. The affair was, in fact, a general mercantile carnival.

The program, which contained a list of the special bargains of the East Liberty stores, was widely distributed, being mailed to every obtainable name in the East Liberty district.

The exposition is too recent to show results, but there is no question as to the success of the entire movement. Since the campaign was inaugurated it has become evident that East Liberty has "waked up." The difference is obvious to everyone. All the stores report increased business, many are able to carry more extensive stocks, and some have been forced to build larger quarters.

LARGE NUMBER WERE PRESENT

At Regular Meeting of Clan McGregor At Doble's Corner

90 NEW MEMBERS

A large number of Clansmen were present at the regular meeting of the Clan in Clan McGregor hall, Dobles corner, Monday evening last.

The occasion was signalized by a surprise, which Chief Alfred O. Diack and his membership committee handed out to those present. It was understood that the Chief and his committee had been unusually active during the last month, but no one dreamed that ninety new names would be offered for acceptance into the order.

The announcement of such a big batch of candidates fairly took the meeting off its feet and an ovation to the Chief and his committee followed.

At the next meeting, Monday 27th, the names of the new candidates will be taken up for further action, and because of the large number the meeting decided to assemble at 6.30 o'clock, sharp, instead of the usual hour 7.30.

In addition to ordinary business, Dr. John A. Gordon will be present and address the Clan.

WHIST PARTY OF QUINCY CATHOLIC CLUB

Twenty-six tables were in play Wednesday evening at the second of the series of whist parties under the auspices of the Quincy Catholic club at Colonial hall. All who participated report a very enjoyable evening. Those to assist in scoring were Miss Agnes Reardon, Miss Carmel Brogan, Miss Emily Dinnegan, Miss Stella Brown and Miss Lillian McDonnell.

Handsome souvenirs for the best scores were awarded to Helen H. Gavin, Gertrude Carroll, Alice Clare, George A. Cahill, Joseph McGilvray and Michael T. Sullivan. Frappe was served during the evening. The last of the series will be held Nov. 29.

WHIST AT GRANITE CITY CLUB.

REGISTRATION FOR CITY ELECTION CLOSED WEDNESDAY

List Shows a Total Of 6,278 Voters Against 6,059 For 1910

65 Males And 11 Females Registered Yesterday

Registration for the municipal election closed Wednesday night. During the day the names of 65 males and 11 females were added to the lists. Much interest seemed to be taken by the new female voters, for while they at present can only vote for candidates for school committee, they desired to learn all there was about the men nominated for office and some thought that the candidates should appear before the female voters and tell of their platform. The total number of male names on the lists is now 6,278 an increase of 94 over the state election and 219 over the municipal election last year. The following table shows the number of registered voters by precincts at the municipal election in 1911, in comparison with the registered voters at the municipal election in 1910:

	1910	1911
Ward 1, Pre. 1	569	575
Ward 1, Pre. 2	706	734
Ward 2, Pre. 1	341	350
Ward 2, Pre. 2	516	526
Ward 3, Pre. 1	589	621
Ward 3, Pre. 2	457	491
Ward 4, Pre. 1	487	505
Ward 4, Pre. 2	489	497
Ward 5, Pre. 1	604	619
Ward 5, Pre. 2	469	508
Ward 6, Pre. 1	473	482
Ward 6, Pre. 2	359	379
	6059	6278

The number of female voters on the lists is 59 as against 43 for the municipal election last year.

WHIST PARTY BY DORCAS SOCIETY

The Dorcas Society of the Universalist church held a whist party at the home of Mrs. George W. Wheeler of Hancock street, on Wednesday evening.

Eight tables were in play, souvenirs being awarded to the following: Bertram G. Barnes, Mrs. R. M. Keene, Mrs. George W. Gragg and Mrs. Frank Hobart.

MR. HOBB'S LARGE VOTE.

There was a slight typographical error in the tabulation of Tuesday's caucus vote for Councilmen-at-Large in the case of the vote of ex-Councilman Ralph W. Hobbs. The vote he received in Ward Six, his home ward, was a phenomenal one, as he received 261 votes instead of 161 as stated. This would make his total vote 1,773 and high man among the five nominated.

REDISTRICTING PLANS.

Congressman James M. Curley appeared before the special Legislative Committee on Congressional Redistricting at the State House yesterday. The Congressman discussed the general situation with the committee at some length and made several propositions.

He was willing, as far as his own district was concerned, to give up Quincy and Milton. With these places out of his district it would leave his territory within 1000 of the required population. His willingness to yield Quincy and Milton was stated by the Congressman in reply to certain questions put by Representative Roger Wolcott.

The Congressman was also willing to swap Ward 13 for Ward 18. He had little objection to a combination of Wards 20 and 21.

Towards the end of his conference with the committee Congressman Curley remarked with a smile that he wouldn't object to any combination from Ward 13 to Ward 21. He suggested that he could carry any district carved out for him by the committee. "The only thing is," he added "if the committee gives me a district composed largely of Republican territory I will simply have to go out and win."

No one else appeared and the committee closed the hearing for the day.

MR. MILLER EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

In an interview with John L. Miller this morning he expressed his appreciation to the 954 voters who went to the polls and voted for him, without help of any heelers, and when all the machine men were working him. "It is," said he, "surely a vote to be proud of, that it was more than half the regular Republican vote at the caucus."

PIERCE—JOHNSTONE WEDDING.

In All Souls' church, Braintree, Wednesday evening Miss Rachel Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Pierce of Oak street, was married to Alfred S. Johnstone, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnstone of Roxbury, by the pastor, Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman. The chancel railing was banked with white chrysanthemums and laurel.

The maid of honor was Miss Edith T. Wood of Dorchester, and the groom's attendant was Roger G. Pierce of Dorchester. The ring bearer was Miss Dorothy Pierce, a sister of the bride, and the ushers were Percy Moorehouse of Marblehead, Anton Hitti of Boston, Robert Farrington of West Roxbury, Harold Pierce of Dorchester, William Barnard of Holbrook and Franklin Low of Roxbury.

The bride wore a wedding gown of ivory white satin with trimmings of Chantilly lace. Her veil was caught up and fastened with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore pink marquisette over messaline and carried Killarney roses and the ring-bearer wore white muslin over white silk and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

A reception at the bride's home, 48 Oak street, followed the church ceremony. The newly wedded couple was assisted in receiving by the parents of the bride and groom.

—The State Board of Health finds 45 jails in the Commonwealth unfit for human occupancy. They are unsanitary and not properly managed. Such jails should be reformed forthwith. The community have no desire improperly to punish its offenders, and locking them up in dirty cells is doing just that. Law breakers should not be mollycoddled—there is too much of that as it is—but they are entitled, no matter how bad they may be, to human treatment. Having been shown its fault, the State will now apply the remedy to the jails in question.—Lowell Courier Citizen.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Over in the Celestial empire they are doing a land office business at turning live chinamen into dead ancestors.

Virtuous New York delivered a slap at Tammany election day as a reminder that the ring of graft takers must be somewhat enlarged.

The Chinese rebels want to get into the Forbidden City, but would they settle down any more contentedly to the ironing board if they were permitted to come in?

Andy Carnegie has turned over $25,000,000 to an education fund, but he needn't get mad just because there is no town left that will take a library.

Madame Curie is to receive the Nobel prize of $40,000, but it might be a good idea to pay it in installments so she would not be tempted to spend it all for a ball gown.

President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard says prize fighting is preferable to foot ball, but if he whispers the fact that it is safer the public will never get interested in it.

HELP THE GOOD CAUSE.

Successful work is being accomplished by the Quincy Anti-Tuberculis Society and it is safe to say that any appeal, in order that the work may be extended, will receive the instant support of an interested public. It was said at the annual meeting of the association, held on Tuesday, that the building for the accommodation of the female patients is inadequate and the urgent need is felt for a new and larger "shack" for female patients.

So much has been willingly donated here by earnest helpers in an interested community that it is felt that the proper advertising of the necessity of a larger working "plant" will be all that is necessary to secure funds for the fulfilment of the idea.

It is gratifying to report the successful work of the year and to feel sanguine in anticipation of the extended work that will be carried out in the months to come by this important organization.

HOME TRADE.

Suggestions that might in any way improve local conditions and add to the income of home merchants are always in order and should receive earnest consideration by those selected to look after the proper development of the city, along mercantile lines.

Recently our attention was drawn to an article that appeared in Printers' Ink, the well known advertising journal, outlining a plan that proved successful in stimulating trade in a community, with conditions much the same as here at Quincy. We print the article today, in full, giving it a preferred display position, trusting that the publicity may assist in devising plans to help trade here.

East Liberty, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, is in reality a part of a big city, and a hustling one too, with magnificent stores and up-to-date trade methods. The suburb had the disadvantages of strong competition from the great shopping district of the metropolis and local trade was hurt. At last the Board of Trade got active, schemed and framed some ideas that brought the home merchants together. In a comparatively short time, business increased and money that had been taken out of town was used to increase stocks and improve trade facilities.

It is merely a suggestion but shows what can be done by cooperation.

GENEROUS BUT NOT JUST.

The story of Dr. Grenfell's heroic and self-sacrificing work among the Newfoundland fishermen has stirred the entire English-speaking world. . . . n physicians are as proud of him as are his English confreres, since science is international and knows no boundaries. The fact that this noble physician won an American girl as his wife has only increased the sense of pride and proprietorship which all America feels in him. Nor has our enthusiasm limited itself to applause. An American business man, Mr. George B. Cluett of New York, has donated a fine new schooner as an auxiliary to Dr. Grenfell's hospital ship. Two auxiliary yawls have been presented by American college students. Many American dollars have gone to help Dr. Grenfell in his noble work. This is right, and it is to be hoped that means for this purpose may never be lacking. Yet the amazing fact has recently become known in an editorial in The Journal of the American Medical Association that while America has been helping generously to provide hospital ships and surgeons for the fishermen of Newfoundland and Labrador, our own American fishermen, from Cape Ann and Gloucester and Marblehead, have been dependent for aid in time of need on the charity of a French hospital ship. It is not gratifying to our sense of pride and independence to know that at the very time we were giving with a lavish hand to our heroic neighbor on the north, our own sailors were forced to accept from a foreign vessel the aid our own country had withheld. Such neglect of our own is due only to ignorance and surely, now that the facts are known, there will be no lack of money and men to supply this shameful lack. If Congress does not make provision for a United States hospital ship for our fishermen, private philanthropy should see to it that we no longer suffer under the charge of being unjust and neglected of our own, at the same time that we are generous with our neighbors.

MAKARIA BANQUET

C. W. GANZEL.

The first speaker was Charles W. Ganzel, coach of the ball team and treasurer of the Fraternity. Mr. Ganzel said that for all the time he had given he had enjoyed every minute. He was proud and honored to be enrolled a member of the Fraternity. To be honored and respected is the greatest asset we can have. Keep your character clean and honor will stand by us. He had been connected with the fraternity for three years and had enjoyed every minute. We have banquets and ladies' nights but the best of all was the one hour every Sunday. Here we touch the practical side of life and it does us good. Speaking of the ball team he said an article in the Ledger said that the team deserved as much credit as the coach. I simply showed them and they took hold. We have never come from a field in disgrace. He felt proud of the team and it will not be long before some of the young men on the team will make their mark in base ball. He hoped they would. It was an honorable and clean profession. He also said a good word for the new president. He will be a worker and we want to support him. It is up to you boys to have a better year than even this.

MATHEW NICOL

was introduced as a young man who had made good and who would be the next president. He said the Fraternity did so much for fellows to have strong hearts and minds we must labor.

GUS B. BATES.

was introduced as one who through his son had done much for the ball team, he hoped that the Fraternity would continue successful and live for many years. There was another meaning to the word Makaria besides happiness, it was "Make a career."

A. S. BROMLEY

secretary of the Y. M. . A. said there was nothing that so adorned the face as cheerfulness. Cheerfulness depends on the state of our health and health depends on the condition of our stomachs. Because so many have such long faces is because they had food that did not agree with them. If we had good cooking at home, we would be more cheerful. Find out the things that agree with you and you will have good health. Take care of your health and you will have cheerfulness.

HARRY BROOKS

was introduced with the sentiment that "the pleasure of doing good is a pleasure that never wears out." In responding, he said that Bro. Jones has proved himself a man, during his term of office. He was glad to be present with so many friends of the Makaria Fraternity. He saw many new and many old faces, but there were two faces that he greatly missed, those of Bro. Grassick and of Dr. Hardy. These two added in many ways to the success of our banquets, The thought uppermost in his mind was, help the other fellow, think of the fellows not situated as you are, never be ashamed to say that you are a Makaria and a member of Bethany church, always act so as to bring no discredit to it.

D. KING.

The toast to the founder of the Fraisis the fairest creation, never out of ternity was, "To the ladies, Woman edition. I hope every one will get a copy." In responding to the toast given by the father, the son said that he had recently become a suffragist. Next year, only 46 days off, is leap year and he had great hopes that something might happen then. Many of the good times we have had this year are due to Dick Jones. The decorations were due to the good work of Glover, Ganzel, Jones, Jenkins and McKenzie. Speaking of Dr. Hardy he said he always felt gratified at the class. He proposed that we give our rearty greetings to him by rising. This was done. This greeting, Mr. King said, he would telegraph. He also read a telegram of regret of inability to be present, from Melvine T. Hayward.

R. D. CHASE.

said some suppers were not safe but this one had been. Give a man a good education and fine principal and he will find his way in the dark. Such a man was Abraham Lincoln and James A. Garfield. How came they by their equipment? Education and principal is a great equipment.

J. E. MUNDIE

brought the greetings of the Davis class. He spoke of the need of a federation among the men's clubs and the great good that would follow.

WILLIAM WALKER

President of the Galahad Brotherhood brought its greetings. This was his last year as president of the brotherhood.

He spoke of the bond of friendship that had grown up between the organizations and we want it to grow until we come closer together. The time is coming when the workers of these organizations must work together. We must work for "No License" and the " Man and religion movement" in which your church is taking part. He hoped before long to see the Makaria, Davis class and Galahad brotherhood in one class. They would be a force for good in Quincy. Let us grow to be a force, not only in the church but in the community at large.

The last speaker of the evening was Rev. William B. Ayers of the Park and Downs church. Rev. M. Ayers took for his subject "Woman's place in the modern world." He spoke for an hour and gave a masterly address, that was followed by his hearers with the greatest closeness. He said in part.

Mr. Ayers took up the problem of the young man's attitude toward, his mother, his sister and his wife; and through their relationships: His attitude toward all women.

Beginning in the dim periods of legend and folk-lore, he traced woman's influence in the great questions of faith and character, manliness and heroism. Her influence upon Greek and Roman character and achievement, her direct influence upon many of the great figures of history, the influence of woman as felt in chivalry developing finally into the type of modern gentleman.

"As antiquity produced heroes, christianity is producing gentlemen the influence of whose respect for woman will be felt as long as the world lasts."

He spoke of the modern American man as being a type "in which are richly blended valor, loyalty, generosity, courtesy, a sense of personal selfishness."

He gave tribute to Jesus of Nazareth: "While Augustus was reigning over a hundred millions of mortals and over a great variety of religions there took place, in an obscure corner of the Roman Dominion, an event, the importance of which could not possibly have been foreseen.

This was the birth of the child Jesus who grew to be a man of such exquisite tenderness and charm; and of such personal purity and excellance, but millions have since been led to acknowledge Him as their Lord and Master, and uncounted millions, who withhold their worship, cease not to do him reverence and concede Him love.

So has He impressed His personality upon the life of mankind that His claims to allegiance have been everywhere accepted. His teachings have been everywhere taken up and woven over into nature's laws and the customs of society.

He brought to us a conception of woman such as the world was not willing to concede before.

By His great and abiding tenderness, by his boundless reverence and infinite love he taught us to look at woman through His eyes and behold in her a thing of reverence.

At the close of his life, when, through most awful suffering, he looked out at the silent throng, who waited His death, His eye lighted on her who in this life he had known as Mother and in the suffering and yearning in her eyes he descried the soul of all womankind, which is motherhood (Mary at that moment stood for the women of all time.) Turning to His dear friend, the love companion of his earth's pilgrimage, he said: "John, behold thy mother." "Woman behold thy son."

"Those words contained the truth that woman is synonymous with motherhood, that each man is to look upon every woman as he looks upon his own mother.

Jesus is the eternal friend of woman. He beheld woman as mother of the race. Mother of its virtues; as she who could give birth to its defects. Such was His reverence for all womankind that one day when a poor bedraggled fallen creature, rushed madly down the temple aisle and fell at his feet, as a ravenous mob closed round her to take her life the Son of man would not even add to her embarrassment by looking at her but shielding her from the crowd by his stooping figure he leaned over and wrote in the sand while he said to the leaders of the mob: "Let him who is without sin amongst you cast the first stone at her."

The lession he annunciated was simply that any man who permitted a condition to exist that endangered the purity of woman was a party to her crime: be that condition of lax laws or low wages; or direct moral indifference or culpability." "The crowning glory of our country has been the creation of new ideals of civic righteousness and the growing sense of moral responsibility among men and women. This is what will forever characterize our epoch as illustrious.

Slowly but certainly the material forces of society are beginning to be consecrated to the interest of the poor and weak, as well as to the strong and affluent. And the great strong men and women of our age are allying themselves with the needy and ignorant toilers of the earth. No longer is scholarship monopolized by rank or genius subsidized to wealth. The finest talent the world ever beheld is consecrated to the uplifting of the slow moving masses of mankind.

The greatest poetry and literature is produced directly to the people and genius has been for a century toiling in the interests of the down trodden.

In former periods one man stood for an epoch—today the reformers and the soverigns of thought both among men and women shine like stars in the night. In other centuries those who would reform and ameliorate the lot of the down trodden went the way of abuse and contempt, persecution and lies. But today the popular hero and the public idol is he who excells and continues in reform.

Not those who strive for self but those who toil for others wear today the crown.

An old poet, once inspired, wrote: "I will lift up mine eyes to the hills from whence cometh my help".

And in this exalted moment he meant to say that he would look only to the highest source for his help and his ideals.

Should that not be the purpose of every young person entering any field of human endeavor.

There are always the two ways: "I will enter this trade, this business, this profession for the money it brings, for its social prestige, for notoriety and fame." That is the low way. The low purpose invariably opens into fields of evil.

In the name of selfishness, sin thrives. Here is your work. This one great task you seem singled out to accomplish. What will be your attitude as you enter in at its gates.

As opportunity gathers richly round you your success will depend on whether you turn to the valleys or to the heights for your incentives and purposes.

How the world feels the greatness of the man who will let none but the highest satisfy.

What a difference between he who toils for self with no higher object than money and ease and luxury. And he who toils for humanity. In him humanity seems to live its best life. The highest for each one of us is God's purpose and plan for us.

When we lay hold of anything short of this we are entering those dark places where fear lurks, and perplexity and stumbling. What we are, men may in the goodness of their hearts forget, but what we do lives on after we are gone.

What we do for others continues eternally in never ending cycles of influence. Supremacy does not come in this world through falling in with the easy currents that you may be swept on with the multitude to wealth and fame. But it comes through holding aloof from the interests of selfishness and policy and adhering strictly to the principles of womanhood and beneficent service.

If you have gifts or wealth, knowledge or beauty let these sing to you not of ease and luxury but of the crowning glory of service and unselfish devotion to those great principles of life which find their fulfillment and expression in the life of Him who went about doing good.

Professor—The history of the race shows that shoes or some covering for the feet have been worn from early times. Medical men tell us that the covering of the feet helps to keep the body at its normal temperature.

"I don't know," mused the young thing. "Have you tried everything else?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Really modern couples are just as apt to be truly mated as the old-fashioned sort of which we read about in the romances. A young Clevelander who is often described as a "man about town" became engaged not long ago, and he spoke as follows to the lady who had honored him:

"I don't want to have anything that I must hide after we are married, dear. So I may as well tell you that I play poker, I smoke cigarettes, I drink, I stay out late, and I bet on the races."

"I'm glad to hear you say so," said the up-to-date girl, brightly. "I was so afraid that you and I wouldn't be perfect companions!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

REAL CLASS.—"You are not going to jilt the duke?"

"Yes; I think I'll marry an American."

"But think of the duke's fine old castle and his moated grange."

"All very well, but the other fellow owns a garage."—Exchange.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

On Saturday, Nov. 11, Quincy High journeyed to Worcester and defeated Worcester High School by a score of 8 to 0.

Larkin, Quincy's right end, got the touchdown in the third quarter of the game. Page kicked a neat goal from field making final score Quincy 8 Worcester 0.

The Quincy boys played well against the Worcester team which is a picked one from three high schools.

Saturday, Nov. 18, at Waltham, Quincy plays its last game. This will be the "big game" of the season. Quincy High's cheering section is now practising its cheers and songs and intends to turn out in large numbers to 'boost' the team.

L. White, Quincy's big right tackle injured his ankle in a practice scrimmage and will be out of the game for a few days. It is hoped he will be able to play in Saturday's game. With this exception the team is in fine condition.

The cross country track team is practising for a meet which is expected, on Thanksgiving Day.

The first issue of the school paper, The Golden Rod, will come out shortly.

The second period was omitted at the school Monday to enable Headmaster Howlett to give a talk to the students on the reports and on athletics.

From the sentiment that prevailed, a large number of the students will attend the Waltham High—Quincy High game at Waltham next Saturday.

A collection will be taken in the school Friday to help defray the athletic expenses of the season.

Miss Mary Cahill has returned to school after a five weeks' vacation in New York city.

All the students met in the hall Monday morning and listened to a talk given by Mr. Howlett. He spoke only words of praise for the good work done by the boys of the football squad. At the close there was loud applause, showing hearty appreciation for the good work done by the team.

The last football game of the year will be played at Waltham Saturday afternoon. It is hoped a large number of students will accompany the team.

A collection is to be taken Friday morning for the benefit of the Athletic association.

Classes 1911, 1912, 1913, and 1914 have been invited to attend the football reception to be held Friday evening, Dec. 15th, in High school gymnasium.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Parents' and Teachers' Association will take place at the home of the president, Mr. Sidney Smith, next Tuesday evening.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

Mrs. W. H. Bentley of this city and her father, Mr. W. E. Morrill of Haverhill, visited the school Wednesday.

Ida Cascario, a pupil of the seventh grade, has left the Willard school, having removed to Milford to reside with her sister.

Miss Katherine Coughlin, a teacher of the seventh grade, is out on account of sickness. Her place is being taken by Miss Gleason, a newly appointed assistant in the Willard school.

Mrs. William Dunston, of Lynn, was a visitor at the school Tuesday.

Dr. J. Gardner Smith, the physical director, met the teachers of the building one day this week, to discuss the games played at recess. He brought out many interesting and helpful points, while placing special stress on the the moral value of having the pupils "play square" and of having them maintain at all times a true sportsmanlike attitude. The teachers, in general, agreed that the opportunity given the pupils to let off, in a natural way, some of their pent up energy, made the discipline of their rooms an easy matter.

GRIDLEY BRYANT.

Miss Kapples a member of the teaching staff was absent yesterday. Her place was taken by Miss Sheehy.

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

Miss Margaret Taylor of the Sophomore class is expected back to school next week. She is just recovering from an attack of appendicitis.

The class of 1913 held a practice game last Friday after school.

A handsome picture, named "The Boyhood of Sir Walter Raleigh" has been donated to room 2 by the class of 1911.

NIAGARA FALLS.

As a result of the efforts which the cities of Niagara Falls, Ont., and Niagara Falls, N. Y., and the various power companies are making to enhance the scenic beauty of the shore lines near the falls, visitors to the Canadian side will be treated to a remarkable new spectacle. For the first time it will be possible to get a bird's eye view of the famous Horseshoe falls.

Until now tourists have had to content themselves with looking at the Horseshoe and the American falls from shores which, in the immediate vicinity of the gorge, are flat and almost on a level with the falling waters. The alternative was to descend into the gorge and gaze upward at the falls from the deck of the Maid of the Mist, or else to climb to the top of the ramshackle barracgs known as the Table Rock house, a relic of the days when the neighborhood of the falls was perverteed into a sort of countr y picnic ground, and gaze down from a puny height of 35 feet. Now, however, a splendid new view point has been provided.

Through the cooperation of the commissioners of Queen Victoria park and a Canadian power company, the highest point of the hill nearest the falls has been leveled and prepared for the accommodation of visitors. Winding roadways bordered with shrubs, evergreens and trees lead to the plateau, which will accommodate from 400 to 500 sightseers, standing.

Work on this look-out point is now completed. The only reason it is not thrown open to the public at once is because building operations along the pathway leading to the summit might endanger pedestrians. Work on the buildings will be rushed throughout the winter and by the middle of next season visitors will be able to ascend to the top of the hill in perfect safety and gaze down 100 feet upon the falls.

SPENCER IN A FRENZY

Unable to Control Himself When "Electric Chair" Is Mentioned

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 16.—Shrieking in frenzy as he hurled himself against the steel grating of his cage in the superior court yesterday afternoon, Bertram G. Spencer brought to a sudden dramatic halt his trial for the murder of Miss Bertha B. Blackstone as the words "electric chair" were spoken while the last witness for the government was on the stand testifying against him.

"Why don't you tell the truth? Why don't you tell the truth?" screamed Spencer, and then fell backward, sobbing and moaning, in his seat.

State Policeman Bligh was closing his testimony with a conversation he had had with Spencer the day of his arrest, a week after Bertha Blackstone met her death.

"He told me he did not want to go to the electric chair. He said do anything with him but that," Bligh had stated.

A world's corn record of 112 bushels per acre has been made at Collinsville, Ct., but the newspapers give more space to the condition of the foot ball half back's little toe.

GAME TO DECIDE CHAMPIONSHIP

Of Soccer Between Schools Postponed Until Monday

BATTLE FOR CUP

The soccer football game, to decide the championship of the grammar school league, and which was scheduled for this afternoon between the Washington and Hancock schools, has been postponed till next Tuesday, on advice of physical director Smith, owing to the unfavorable condition of the grounds. Besides playing for the league championship, the team will contest for a cup, valued at $100, which has been donated by the Fore River soccer football team.

This fact should make the contest all the more close and exciting and a large following of both teams is sure to be in attendance.

The game will be played on the Water street grounds.

The soccer football season in the local grammar schools this year has been a marked success, due mainly to the tireless efforts of physical director Smith. The game itself has proved a source of pleasure to all the schools throughout the city, and great benefits have been derived in its indulgence. Great anxiety now prevails with regard to the outcome, and the present state of affairs seems to attest greatly to the success of the project.

The Washington, Hancock, Wollaston and Lincoln schools, were each winners of their respective districts. Elimination games were then played, the Washington school defeating the Wollaston and the John Hancock defeating the Lincoln.

Monday's game will be one for blood, as both teams are of even calibre, for the youngsters seemed to have acquired a splendid knowledge of the different points of the game.

WINNERS AT MAPLE LODGE WHIST PARTY

Field, Mrs. Alberta Hewson while the consolation prize went to Mrs. Conway. The mystery box was won by Mrs. Susan Hewson and the shirt waist by Mrs. Alberta Hewson.

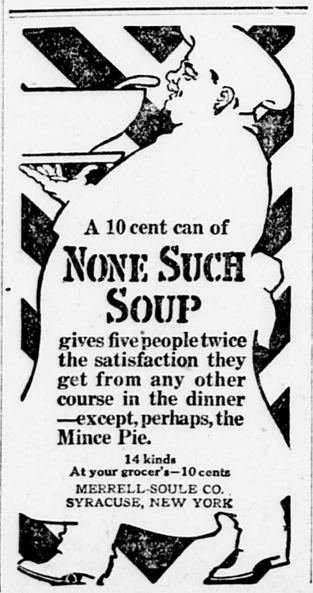

FOSS' ELECTION EXPENSES

They Are Being Itemized So as to Conform to the Law

Boston, Nov. 16.—Governor Foss' secretaries are preparing an itemization for Secretary of State Langtry of the "traveling expenses" item in the governor's statement of his campaign expenses. The governor put down "traveling expenses, $345."

Secretary Langtry ruled that this item does not conform to the law requiring the date of every payment and the name of the person paid.

The New York law firm of Littlefield & Littlefield, of which ex-Congressman Charles E. Littlefield of Maine is senior member, has asked Langtry for a certified copy of the governor's statement. The copy has been forwarded.

WEDDED TO CLERGYMAN

Miss Catherine MacLeod Bride Of Rev. Angus B. MacLeod

WILL RESIDE IN CANADA

A very pretty home wedding was solemnized on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock, when Miss Catherine MacLeod, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John MacLeod of Independence avenue became the bride of the Rev. Angus B. MacLeod, A. B. D. D., a leading clergyman of Cornwall, Ontario.

The ceremony was performed at the bride's residence which was artistically decorated with palms and chrysanthemums Rev. Mr. MacLeod of Hyde Park officiated. Newton MacLeod brother of the bride was best man.

The bride looked charming in a gown of light blue messaline over silk marquisette. She carried a large bouquet of white roses. Her attendant was Miss Flora MacKenzie of Boston who was beautifully attired in a gown of yellow silk.

Many beautiful and useful gifts were received, among them a purse of gold from the members of Mr. MacLeod's church in Cornwall.

Following the wedding supper the couple left for an extended honeymoon which will include New York, Washington and Niagara Falls. They will reside in Cornwall.

TAFT IN MARYLAND

Lays Wreath on Tomb of Author of the "Star Spangled Banner"

Frederick, Md., Nov. 16.—President Tatt came over into the Frederick valley to advocate his arbitration treaties in a speech before the Associated Boards of Trade of Maryland and to lay a wreath on the tomb of Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star Spangled Banner."

It was the biggest day this little town has had since Barbara Frietchie waved her flag at Stonewall Jackson's men and prompted a poem by Whittier.

The president's speech was substantially the same advocacy of the treaties which he made in speeches in the 10,000-mile trip just finished.

STRIKE VIRTUALLY OVER

Nearly Four Thousand Men Cleaning Streets of New York

New York, Nov. 16.—The first week of the garbage collectors' strike ended last night. During the last three days an increasing number of strike-breakers has made a great impression on accumulating garbage, and with a force of nearly 4000 men, work is going on without interruption. In a week the city will be normally tidy.

The authorities consider the strike thoroughly broken. Many of the strikers are said to be begging for their old jobs.

Q.—Are we to believe the Bible story of Jonah and the whale?

Answer.—There should be no doubt in the minds of any as to the truthfulness of the story of Jonah and the great fish. We need not necessarily suppose that it was a whale that swallowed the Prophet, as the Greek word ketos signifies a "huge fish." There have been discovered the fossil remains of animals and fish that were gigantic in size: far longer than any in existence at the present time. Some of these monsters, skeletons of which may be seen in prominent museums, measured more than a hundred feet in length, and their other measurements were in proportion. The Lord who created these would certainly have no difficulty in preparing a great fish to hold the Prophet for the period of three days. However, the principal reason why this story should be accepted, is that our Lord Jesus vouched for it. (Matthew xii, 40.) And twelve good men and true, the Apostles, vouched for the teachings of Christ. If we are disposed to reject this testimony then, to be honest in the sight of God and men, we should cast aside the Bible and join the ranks of those who have no hope, no faith, and who regard with suspicion every line of good and reliable testimony.

Q.—Where is the principle of justice manifested in the Divine statement made in Exodus xx, 5, which declares that the iniquity of the fathers should be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation? Does it not seem an injustice to the children that they should suffer for the sins of the parent?

Answer.—Is it considered an unwise arrangement in the natural order of things for a stream of clear water that has been temporarily muddled and befouled, to clear itself having run a certain distance? On the contrary, would it not be an unwise and an unpleasant arrangement for the stream to continue soiled all the way to its mouth? So it is with the human race. There are certain established laws of heredity which, if we could understand them fully, would reveal to us God's infinite wisdom and justice in greater degree. Viewing the matter rightly, we are grateful to the Creator for arranging that the taint in the blood, in the line of descent, brought about by the parent's disobedience to the wise, and just moral laws which He has established, is removed in a natural way in the course of three or four generations, and not permitted to run the entire course of the existence of the race. Recognizing the operation of this law of heredity, does it not increase the responsibilities of parenthood; and would it not be a further inducement for one to desire to keep himself pure and undefiled, that his offspring might enjoy a clean and wholesome existence! An individual whose blood is contaminated by some loathsome disease is committing a crime against society, and violating all the laws of decency and honor by bringing children into the world to suffer for his sins. Let such a one not charge the Deity with the results of his own transgressions!

—Western apple growers advise people to eat five apples a day. That advice, if taken, would certainly increase the demand for the fruit. But it would be rather expensive with apples at fruit stand prices. However, the advice is good, even if it can be followed only in part, as apples are very wholesome food.—Framingham News.

COURT'S HARVESTER DECISION LEAKED

Judges Wrought Up Over Unauthorized Publication

Kansas City, Nov. 16.—Judges of the state supreme court are much wrought up over the fact that the International Harvester company ouster decision became known in New York and elsewhere in advance of the court's sitting.

Chief Justice Valliant and Justice Lamb have begun an inquiry in an effort to fix responsibility for the "leak." Newspaper correspondents, clerks and other court attaches were questioned. The inquiry will go on until the judges learn how their finding was given unauthorized publication.

The report that the Harvester company had been ousted was circulated in New York at 10 o'clock Monday morning. The court did not convene until 10:50, and it was 11:07 when its decision was handed down.

Scranton Woman Meets With Great Trouble When She Yawns

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 16.—When Miss Nina Frailey arose she yawned so hard that she dislocated her jaw. Members of the family heard Miss Frailey groaning and rushed to her room. Miss Frailey could not explain. She could only groan and point to her extended jaw and wide open mouth. A doctor reset the jaw.

As Miss Frailey was recovering from the effects of the anaesthetic she again attempted to yawn, with a similar result. The physician performed the second operation.

. . . The Newest Gowns In Paris . . .

Colors for evening gowns this winter are soft and flattering. When a decided shade is employed, mousseline in the same tone or in white is put underneath so that a soft result is given, and the picture is always a pretty one. So much lace and so much mousseline are used that the gowns are one layer after another of this lovely material.

All the evening cuts are Empire, and from the waist down the effect may be as tight as one desires, though the couturiers suggest that everything be close fitting, and since every one's neighbor is wearing a tight cut, it would appear out of date, and one would be more conspicuous in a full-cut skirt than in one that followed the form religiously. It is all very odd and comical, this air of the fashionable woman with her ungainly shape and the little train that "swishes" around at every step. Surely it is not beautiful but it is chic, and that is the great thing.

To be modish, a dress must fit the wearer as does the plumage a bird. And the outline and general picture must be just as neat, just as regular as is the down and the tiny feathers of the bird. Not a particle of fullness that would form a fold, not a bit of stiffness, not the least gathering, and not too generous use of the goods, no matter what it be. This idea must be carried out not only in tailor and half severe gowns, but in evening frocks as well.

Things may be soft and they may appear a little loose, but such is not the case. The most billowy frock is made over a very tight lining, and the silhouette that is gained is only after much pulling in and cutting off corners and edges to fit the lining, which is like a sheath. Necessarily a tiny bit of fullness is put in the high waist under the arms, especially at the back, but this is done so that the drapery may not be too close over the dress lower down.

The new satins are like crepe de-chine, though, if possible, far more soft. They wrap themselves about the body, producing the desired effect of bandaging or swathing. Yet when the body is in repose the material is seen to best advantage, for it is most lovely and attractive. In a play put on the boards recently the young widow is decked out in black satin, and she appears most interesting and to great advantage, for the blackness tells sorrow and heartbreak in every fold, and the drapery does the rest.

There really seems nothing like the long lines and graceful looping to portray the grief and utter despair of the character. Maybe it was these gowns, with their suggestions, that brought the hero of the play to her feet at the end.

The French are wonderful in portraying emotion in their clothes. At plays to be given, the couturiere in charge studies every part and the people who are to present them. No doubt the dressing has as much weight on the audience as the lines and the acting. Debutantes are frocked to appear full of life, gayety, and purity in their raiment of white or ravishing tones of rose, yellow, or coral. Then these frocks are always made fluffy and frivolous. The wraps and clothing of the other parts are fully as much taken into consideration. In fact, the designer of the cuts and drapings gives suggestions as to how the hair should be dressed and what ornaments to wear in the coiffure.

But it is in sorrow or mourning that the French couturiers most of all show their talent, and I may say their morbidness, for they all appear to delight in lugubrious and tragic effects. The very air of the black dresses is laden with woe, and to look at a beautiful young person across the footlights gowned in mourning is almost enough to make the tears start. All the black gowns are intended to convey sadness, and they never miss the mark. But materials are never stiff. The softest, most clinging of effects is chosen, and generally only one material is used.

Returning to colors, the all purple gowns is increasing in favor. Half the dresses ordered this week have been of purple, but it is of a deep, deep shade, like the first violet in spring. The color is fine in all materials, but it seems particularly rich and luxurious in meteor, satins and chiffons. Serges and zibelines are less attractive in it. Striped zibelines are employed a great deal just now. And the stripes are put together marvelously. Built diagonally, or straight up and down, or across, the ensemble is stunning. It is hard to make a dress of striped goods handsome, for unless used in but one direction, the effect is apt to be like patchwork. used in but one direction, the effect is apt to be like patchwork.

The tea gown is the thing just at present in Paris. It is high priced and picturesque, but not dainty. Most of them are of dark tones and quite Oriental in effect. They are generally made short, with high waist and skirts that wrap around the body. The sleeves pass beyond the wrist and are plain and tight fitting. The very low neck is supposed to be worn over a guimpe of deep cream or a shade predominant in the gown, for the white guimpe is not popular. The great majority of women go upon the street with dresses that are almost decollete, with nothing whatever in the neck.

With the tea gown, unless a guimpe is worn, it looks too much as though one was borrowing an evening dress for the day function. Tea gowns are composed of soft silks or velvets much draped in mousseline. Before long we are sure to see tea gowns in the afternoon at the big hotel dining rooms, the wearer having worn her long coat of fur or plush to cover the festive dress beneath. There is no reason why such a garment should not be worn. It is but little different from the half mousseline afternoon frocks we see everywhere.

With tea gowns and evening frocks are worn the new-fashioned slipped. This is of almost any dark shade, often bronze, with high heel, and is cut very low over the instep, having a tiny flat bow there. Flowers are painted or marked on the shoe, and a cluster of vines generally begins at the heel and runs up the back. The slipper is lovely, but nearly every one corresponds to a certain dress, else the mingling will not be desirable. Very young girls wear the delicate satin slipper of a light tone, with darker flowers. But the older woman chooses the soft skin slipper in a dark color.

Ratine in purple, black, and white, black and gray, chocolate brown, navy blue, and a snuff shade called tillenl is the leader for tailor-mades. The same colors are seen in dressy effects, such as satins, meteor, ottoman, and fine serge silk. Taffetas continue to be worn, though winter struck Paris some time ago. But there is no reason why taffetas should be given a back seat when light satins and mousselines continue in favor. Taffetas for the last months have been soft and shiny unlike the crackly, stiff sort worn in other years.

Petticoats are of jersey satin, and fit the figure like a glove. They come in all colors, but those in tans, old rose, and china blue are best, because harmonizing with many dress shades. Black and white always hold their own in every department of woman's dress this season, and some fine petticoats are of wide black and white striped satin, the big flounce almost veiled in black fringe the same length of flounce. There is no warmth in such garments, but that is about the last factor women seek in winter clothes at present.

The latest thing for trimming hats is narrow fringe. The "night caps" made of black velvet and perched on the back of the head have no other finish than a big metal rose of deep hue at the side, while to edge the cap there is a fall of fringe. The latter is of beads and rather stiff. It is anything from an inch to two inches in width. Of course, it is found wider, too, but such fringe is not distinguished, and will be worn only by the frequenter of the exterior boulevards of Paris. The narrow fringe is pretty and dainty.

The more one holds to the automobile bonnet the more modish is a hat for day and street wear. They are made of velvet, brocade, gold tissue, of moire, and have very little trimming. Generally a clump of roses or a buckle is sufficient. They almost conceal the head, too, and the newest almost strike the neck at the sides. We see some of the bonnets with strings, and while these are quaint, are not worn by ladies. Hair is dressed lower and lower, and before the close of the season it is probable that little neck curls will be in order.—New York Times.

AFTER TRUST MAGNATES

Henry Would Have "Commercial Pirates" Put Behind Bars

Washington, Nov. 16.—"Felons' stripes," as a punishment for "trust criminals" in the United States to end "commercial piracy under benevolent 'rules of reason,'" are proposed in a bill amending the Sherman anti-trust law drafted by Representative Henry of Texas, to be introduced in the house upon the opening of congress next month. Its introduction probably will mean its passage in the house.

The bill specifically defines just what constitutes a trust, legislates from the present statute the "rule of reason" as interpreted by the supreme court in the Standard Oil and tobacco company case decisions and provides as punishment for violation of the law imprisonment from two to ten years in the penitentiary.

BEEF TRUST SUITS TO SUPREME COURT

Chicago Packers' Move May Delay Their Trial For Years

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Chicago packers will escape trial for many months and perhaps years as the result of the unexpected move of their attorneys in suing out writs of habeas corpus for the release of nine of the indicted men who were expected to go to trial for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law next Monday.

It became evident when United States District Attorney Wilkerson and lawyers for the packers announced that no matter how Judge Kohlsaat might rule on the writs sought by the packers, asserting that the Sherman law is unconstitutional, the case would be immediately appealed to the United States supreme court.

Upon the final decision of the supreme court depends the life of the biggest club which the United States has in dealing with the trusts.

STRANGE BONES ARE FOUND

Remains of Animal More Than Eighteen Feet Long on Beach

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Nov. 16.—Bones of a strange animal found on Grand Tracadie beach are so unfamiliar and puzzling to residents here that they will be placed in the hands of a scientist to determine the identity of the strange skeleton.

Some scientists who have seen the animal believe that it may be the remains of a sea serpent. It is thought that the find, which was caused by the shifting of sand during the recent heavy gale, may prove of great historic interest.

The animal measures more than eighteen feet in length.

TO KEEP EYE ON WAR IN CHINA

American Regiment of Troops Going From Manila

NO MOVE FOR INTERVENTION

Incumbent Upon United States to Perform Duty Which Has Heretofore Fallen to Lot of Other Nations—Soldiers to Supplement Marine Guard Near Place Which Imperial Family May Choose as Haven

Washington, Nov. 16.—The state department has practically decided to send a regiment of troops from Manila to Chin Wing Tao, a seaport in China about 250 miles from Pekin, on the Gulf of Pechili. The purpose is to perform an international duty under the Boxer treaty in keeping open the line of communication between Pekin and the sea.

Jehol, where the imperial family will take refuge, is within the territory to be looked on by the United States troops.

It is said at the state department that the request for troops has not yet been made of the war department, but it is momentarily expected. The officials are careful to make it appear that the dispatch of these troops to China will be absolutely without any political meaning, and the movement is not to be construed as intervention.

Under the treaty which terminated the Boxer troubles, the United States, with other powers, was granted the privilege of maintaining a military force along the line of railway between Pekin and the sea to guard against such an event as the siege of the legations during the Boxer uprising.

Beyond the maintenance of a marine guard of 100 men (only recently and temporarily increased to 200) the United States has never availed itself of the permission, and it has fallen to the lot of other nations, principally Great Britain, France and Japan, to maintain small garrisons along the line of the road from Tien Tsin to Pekin. It is felt that it is now incumbent upon the United States to perform its part of this duty, hence the decision to employ some troops to supplement the marine guard.

The main consideration that prompted the state department to act is said to be the fact that the ports of the Gulf of Pechili are closed by ice about this time of year, and it will be necessary to land the troops now if they are to be employed at all during the winter in China.

As Tien Tsin lies forty miles up the river from the gulf, and is thus certain to be cut off from water communication by ice early in the season, the American regiment will probably be landed at the port of Shingwingtao, which is said to be rarely ice bound. This port is on the railroad which passes through Tien Tsin coming from Pekin, and is about 250 miles distant from the Chinese capital. It is also about 100 miles southeast of Jehol, which place will probably be chosen as a refuge by the Chinese imperial family, if the dynasty is overthrown by the revolutionaries.

The transport Sherman is now lying in Manila harbor, having been detained there on the suggestion of the state department. She could land a regiment at Chingwingtao within four days after she received sailing orders. Rear Admiral Murdock is commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet.

Queueless Are Beheaded

Shanghai, Nov. 16.—A veritable reign of terror prevails at Nanking, according to dispatches from that city. Under the dominance of General Chang Jen-Chun, the viceroy, who has cast restraint to the winds, a systematic search is being made for Chinese who have discarded their queues and all so found are beheaded. The revolutionaries in Shanghai are making vigorous preparations to attack Nanking.

Yuan Wants Free Hand

Pekin, Nov. 16.—Yuan Shi-Kai has accepted the premiership and will assume office probably today. Yesterday's Official Gazette contained an expression of thanks from him to the throne for his appointment, but the truth is that he did not undertake the task before him without receiving guarantees that he would have practically a free hand in conducting affairs while he retained his official position.

BRYAN STILL IN POLITICS

Says He Intends Going Deeper Into the Religious End

Chicago, Nov. 16.—William J. Bryan announces he is going into politics with renewed vigor, but that he will keep away from the worldly angle of political machinations and devote himself to cultivating a religious factor in the striving for office.

"I do not expect to take any less interest in politics in the future," said Bryan; "but I intend going deeper into the religious end, and believe it will be better.

"The church has had a monopoly on religion too long. I am against monopoly of any kind. Rivalry in religion is a good thing, for competition means prosperity."

He was speaking before the Winona Lake assembly of the Presbyterian church.

DEVEREUX'S WARNING

Cement Sidewalks In Zion City Will Bar Christ's Second Advent

Zion City, Ills., Nov. 16.—Cement sidewalks will be the means of denying to residents of Zion City a visit from Christ on his approaching second advent.

So runs the warning of Rupert Devereux, champion of the old Dowie theories, who filed a formal complaint with the board of aldermen. Christ walked on the water, but he never would walk on a hard cement pathway, declares Devereux.

Devereux and his fellow believers expect Alexander Dowie to pay them a visit at the same time they have announced Christ will appear, and the founder of Zion City also would be greatly offended by modern flagstones, they declare.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 500 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

Down of the third day after the whipping brought the Jessie's white sails in sight. His partner was on board, vigorous and hearty from six weeks recruiting in Malaita. He could take charge now and all would be well with Berande.

Sheldon lay in the steamer chair and watched the Jessie's whaleboat pull in for the beach. He wondered why only three sweeps were pulling, and he wondered still more when, beached, there was so much delay in getting out of the boat. Then he understood. The three blacks who had been pulling started up the beach with a stretcher on their shoulders. A white man, whom he recognized as the Jessie's captain, walked in front and opened the gate, then dropped behind to close it. Sheldon knew that it was Hughie Drummond who lay in the stretcher, and a mist came before his eyes. He felt an overwhelming desire to die. The disappointment was too great. In his own state of terrible weakness he felt that it was impossible to go on with his task of holding Berande plantation tight gripped in his fist. Then the will of him flamed up again, and he directed the blacks to lay the stretcher beside him on the floor. Hughie Drummond, whom he had last seen in health, was an emaciated skeleton.

"Black water fever," the captain said. "He's been like this for six days, unconscious. And we've got dysentery on board. What's the matter with you?"

"I'm burying four a day," Sheldon answered, as he bent over from the steamer chair and inserted a thermometer under his partner's tongue.

Captain Oleson swore blasphemously and sent a house boy to bring whiskey and soda. Sheldon glanced at the thermometer.

"One hundred and seven," he said. "Poor Hughie."

Captain Oleson offered him some whiskey.

"Couldn't think of it—perforation, you know," Sheldon said.

He sent for a boss boy and ordered a grave to be dug; also, some of the packing cases to be knocked together into a coffin. Having given the orders, Sheldon lay back in his chair with closed eyes.

"It's been fair hell, sir," Captain Oleson began, then broke off to help himself to more whisky. "Contrary winds and calms. We've been driftin' all about the shop for ten days. There's ten thousand sharks following us for the tucker we've been throwin' over to them. They was snappin' at the oars when we started to come ashore. We got it from the water—water from Owga creek. Filled my casks with it. How was we to know? I've filled there before an' it was all right. We had sixty recruits—full up, and my crew of fifteen. We've been buryin' them day an' night. The beggars won't live, dash them! They die out of spite. Only three of my crew left on its legs. Five more down. Seven dead. Oh, h——! What's the good of talkin'?"

"How many recruits left?" Sheldon asked.

"Lost half. Thirty left. Twenty down, and ten tottering around."

Sheldon sighed.

"That means another addition to the hospital. We've got to get them ashore somehow. Viaburi! Hey, you, Viaburi, ring big fella bell strong fella too much."

The hands, called in from the fields at their unwonted hour, were split into detachments. Some were sent into the woods to cut timber for house beams, others to cutting cane grass for thatching and forty of them lifted a whale boat above their heads and carried it down to the sea. Sheldon had gritted his teeth, pulled his collapsing soul together and taken Berande plantation into his fist once more.

"Have you seen the barometer?" Captain Oleson asked, pausing at the bottom of the steps on his way to oversee the disembarkation of the sick.

"No," Sheldon answered. "Is it down?"

"It's going down."

"Then you'd better sleep aboard tonight," was Sheldon's judgment. "Never mind the funeral. I'll see to poor Hughie. If you can see your way to it, come ashore tomorrow and lend me a hand. If you can't, send the mate."

"Right O. I'll come myself. Mr. Johnson's dead, sir. I forgot to tell you—three days ago."

Sheldon turned to his partner, calling for boys to carry him into the house. But Hughie Drummond had reached the end. His breathing was imperceptible. By mere touch Sheldon could ascertain that the dying man's temperature was going down. It must have been going down when the thermometer registered one hundred and seven. He had burned out. Sheldon knelt beside him, the house boys grouped around, their white singlets and loin cloths peculiarly at variance with their dark skins and savage countenances, their huge ear plugs and carved and glistening nose rings. Sheldon tottered to his feet at last and half fell into the steamer chair. Oppressive as the heat had been it was now even more oppressive. It was difficult to breathe. He panted for air. The faces and naked arms of the house boys were beaded with sweat.

"Marster," one of them ventured, "big fella wind he come, strong fella too much."

Sheldon nodded his head, but did not look. Much as he had loved Hughie Drummond, his death and the funeral it entailed seemed an intolerable burden to add to what he was already sinking under. He had a feeling—nay, it was a certitude—that all he had to do was to shut his eyes and let go and that he would die, sink into immensity of rest. His weary body seemed torn by the oncoming pangs of dissolution. He was a fool to hang on. He had died a score of deaths already, and what was the use of prolonging it to twoscore deaths before he really died? Not only was he not afraid to die, but he desired to die.

But his mind that could will life or death still pulsed on. He saw the two whaleboats land on the beach and the sick, on stretchers or pickaback, groaning and wailing, go by in lugubrious procession. He saw the wind making on the clouded horizon and thought of the sick in the hospital. Here was something waiting for his hand to be done, and it was not in his nature to lie down and sleep or die when any task remained undone.

The boss boys were called and given their orders to rope down the hospital with its two additions. He remembered the spare anchor chain, new and black painted, that hung under the house suspended from the floor beams and ordered it to be used on the hospital as well. Other boys brought the coffin, a grotesque patchwork of packing cases, and under his directions they laid Hughie Drummond in it. Half a dozen boys carried it down the beach, while he rode on the back of another, his arms around the black's neck, one hand clutching a prayer book.

THE BLACKS GAZED APPREHENSIVELY AT THE DARK LINE ON THE WATER.

While he read the service the blacks gazed apprehensively at the dark line on the water, above which rolled and tumbled the racing clouds. The first breath of the wind, faint and silken, toyed with life, fanned through his dry baked body as he finished reading. Then came the second breath of the wind, an angry gust, as the shovels worked rapidly filling in the sand. So heavy was the gust that Sheldon, still on his feet, seized hold of his man-horse to escape being blown away. The Jessie was blotted out, and a strange, ominous sound arose as multitudinous wavelets struck foaming on the beach. It was like the bubbling of some colossal caldron. From all about could be heard the dull thudding of falling cocoanuts. The tall, delicate trunked trees twisted and snapped about like whiplashes. The air seemed filled with their flying leaves, any one of which, stem-on, could brain a man. Then came the rain, a deluge, a straight, horizontal sheet that poured along like a river, defying gravitation. The black, with Sheldon mounted on him, plunged ahead into the thick of it, stooping far forward and low to the ground to avoid being toppled over backward.

"'He's sleeping out and far tonight,'" Sheldon quoted as he thought of the dead man in the sand and the rainwater trickling down upon the cold clay.

So they fought their way back up the beach. The other blacks caught hold of the man-horse and pulled and tugged. There were among them those whose fondest desire was to drag the rider in the sand and spring upon him and mash him into repulsive nothingness. But the automatic pistol in his belt, with its rattling, quick dealing death, and the automatic, death defying spirit in the man himself made them refrain and buckle down to the task of hauling him to safety through the storm.

Wet through and exhausted, he was nevertheless surprised at the ease with which he got into a change of clothing. Though he was fearfully weak, he found himself actually feeling better. The disease had spent itself, and the mend had begun.

"Now, if I don't get the fever," he said aloud and at the same moment resolved to go to taking quinine as soon as he was strong enough to dare.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choices small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

Governor Will Not Interfere In Case of Wife Murderer

GOES TO CHAIR ON NOV. 24

Chief Executive of Virginia Has No Doubt of Guilt of Condemned Man, Who Had Fair Trial Before Impartial Judge—Believes Best Way to Prevent Murders Is to Inflict Speedy Death Penalty

Richmond, Nov. 16.—Henry C. Beattie, Jr., must die Nov. 24—the day originally set for his execution by Judge Watson of the Chesterfield circuit court.

Governor Mann has flatly declined to interfere in the case of the young Virginian convicted of killing his wife while automobiling on the Midlothian turnpike last July. He would neither commute the prisoner's sentence to life imprisonment nor allow him a day's respite.

The governor declared his belief that the condemned wife murderer is guilty and that he should die at the time fixed when the lower court pronounced sentence.

The governor's statement follows:

"In the decision of every question which was presented to the able and impartial judge who presided at the trial he was careful to give the benefit of every reasonable doubt to the prisoner; his instructions were as favorable as the counsel for the prisoner could have expected; that he did not err in the admission or exclusion of evidence, or in his instructions given to the jury, is shown in the refusal of the supreme court of appeals to grant a writ of error.

"That Beattie is guilty of the wilful, deliberate and cruel murder of his young wife I have not the slightest doubt, nor is it insisted that there shall be any greater relief offered than the commutation of his sentence to imprisonment for life.

"In the administration of the duty of my office I am not required to consider the wisdom of legislative enactments, but am required to see to it that criminal laws are executed unless there shall be some facts or circumstances arising since the action of the court or some important evidence existing, but not presented to the court, tending to create in the minds of a reasonable man a substantial doubt as to the guilt of the prisoner, and I do not think the affidavits of Paul Beattie printed in the papers or any other evidence or consideration brought to my attention sufficient for that purpose.

"Nor do I question the wisdom, I might add, of the necessity of capital punishment in cases where human life has been wickedly and deliberately taken. On the contrary, I believe that this punishment is necessary for the protection of society.

"I have been asked to respite the prisoner and to allow him thirty days at least from the decision of the supreme court. His appeal to the court was his own act, taken to avoid the judgment based on the verdict of his fellow citizens constituting the jury, and, I must think, with the purpose, if possible, of avoiding the consequence of a crime of which he knows he is guilty.

"I believe the best way to prevent such crimes as this is to punish them adequately, certainly, speedily. Therefore the judgment of the circuit court of Chesterfield will be carried into effect without interference from me."

RELIGION AND POLITICS

Each Figures In Convicts' Race For Christian Endeavor Office

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 16.—Curt Jett and Henry Youtsey, probably the most notorious of the life term prisoners in the Kentucky penitentiary here, are both earnestly seeking election as president of the prison Christian Endeavor society. The names of both figured in the Goebel trials. Much partisan feeling has been worked up.

Youtsey has the support of the Republicans and disgruntled Democrats and Jett has all of the Democrats and the progressive Republicans.

EDITORIAL JUSTIFIED

Judgment of $50,000 Against St. Louis Newspaper Is Reversed

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 16.—The supreme court of Missouri reversed a judgment of $50,000 which Sam B. Cook, formerly secretary of state, had obtained against the St. Louis Post-Dispatch for alleged libel.

The suit grew out of an editorial publication commenting on the failure of a bank, and criticising Secretary of State Cook for delaying to close the institution because of its insolvent condition.

The court held that the editorial was pertinent and justified, and that it was printed in good faith and in the interest of public service.

The postoffice department has given the Boston Association for the relief and control of tuberculosis permission to sell Red Cross Christmas seals in every postoffice in Massachusetts.

Five or six large automobiles containing a party of Ancients passed through Quincy this morning, bound for Plymouth for dinner. They stopped long enough to take aboard Sergt. George H. Wilson.

The strong wind the first of the week was too much for the large flag pole at the birthplace of John Adams and it toppled over. It was erected only a few years ago and was recently painted and repaired.

SOME REASONS WHY.

Do your Christmas shopping early." That should be the slogan of a campaign for early Christmas shopping in Quincy. All the retail stores, if the intention of the more prominent ones were carried out, would join this movement for early shopping. The following are some reasons why:

"The interests of the public, the employer and the employee concur in this movement.

"1—Stocks will be more complete and fresher, giving better selection.

"2—Early shopping means prompt deliveries. Don't wait.

"3—You will get what you want now. It may be gone later.

"4—The salespeople will have a happier Christmas.

"5—Delivery people will have a happier Christmas.

"6—It is your gift to hundreds of workers."

AMERICA'S DAVIS LAWN TENNIS CUP TEAM

At no time since the Davis cup team was picked to represent America in the international play were tennis enthusiasts throughout the country as happy as they are now. And it was all because that William A. Larned, the national champion, is going to Australia. Some weeks ago the national singles champion said that he would not go to Australia as a member of the challenging team. Larned changed his mind, however, and arranged his business affairs so that it was possible for him to go.

This was welcomed by every court player, for without Larned on the team America's chances to bring back the famous Dwight L. Davis international cup looked rather slim. With Larned, Beals C. Wright and Maurice McLaughlin as United States representatives the challengers appear to have the best chance in years to bring back the coveted trophy. The challengers' chances for victory are made twofold by the fact that the Australasians this year are not as formidable as in years past.

Photos by American Press Association.

MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN TEAM.

For several years American tennis players have tried to persuade Larned to make the trip to the antipodes, but each year he refused to go. The reason why he couldn't go was because of business pressure. The American team is scheduled to arrive in Australia Nov. 22. Larned will be the singles player and the other two doubles men.

MUCH JOY IN FAMILY REUNION

Mrs. Mary Pollock Has All Her Children Together For First Time In 26 Years

HER 80th BIRTHDAY

It was a happy gathering of children and grandchildren that gathered about the festive board at the house of Mrs. Mary Pollock on Bigelow street, this noon, to help her celebrate the pasing of her eightieth birthday anniversary. Mrs. Pollock who is the widow of Andrew Fletcher Pollock has passed her life in Quincy, and has seen the many changes that have taken place which have transformed the struggling town to a hustling city.

Her family has been a large one, but growing to manhood business called the sons to other states so that it is seldom that opportunity has been had for them all to be together at one time. They are all present today however, her five sons and three daughters for the first time in 26 years. With them are their wives and husbands and grandchildren making a party of 21, and as noted above it is indeed a happy day for all.

Mrs. Pollock's children who are present today are: Allan F., Walter B., James B., and Fred L., of New York city, Frank of East Weymouth, Miss Madeline M., who resides at home with her mother, Alice, widow of Frank Cobb, and Mabel, wife of George H. Brown.

The children and grandchildren did not come empty handed and many were the gifts with which Mrs. Pollock was showered. It was a very happy day for her and although she has reached a ripe old age, her health is remarkably good and she hopes that there may be a similar gathering a year hence.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The General Electric team will be the next opponent of the Quincy A. A. eleven. The game will take place Saturday at Merymount Park and as both teams are of even calibre, a warm contest is sure to be in order. Only recently the Lynn team secured a victory over the much heralded Cunningham Gymnasium aggregation of Milton and the local boys will certainly have to go some to hold fast to their claim of champions of the state.

Yet captain McDonald feels that his team mates can perform in the same manner as was noticeable in the last four games and he claims that the Lynn team will be made to succumb the same fate as the Orient A. A. received. The game is sure to prove a great drawing card and a record breaking crowd should be in attendance at the local grounds next Saturday.

Coach Staff is putting the local High school players through their last practice of the season this week and he is exerting them more than ever. He realizes that Waltham High is a foremost contender and a victory from the Watch City lads will add great glory to the work of the local boys this year and thus enable them to bring their football season to a successful conclusion. The work of the local team this year, as a whole, is worthy of commendation, and if Quincy High can only make Waltham High taste the spoils of defeat, the praises of Coach Staff and his players will surely be sung far and wide and there will be no doubt but what this Granite City will be ably represented on the all interscholastic teams that are to be selected in the near future by the different sporting writers.

A number of roller skating races have been billed at the Coliseum this week and a struggle for blood is bound to ensue when Hennessey and connors come together Saturday evening in a one mile special.

HAWLEY'S IRE IS AROUSED

Governor of Idaho Bitter Over Pardon of Embezzler

CONDEMNS ACTION OF TAFT

National Bank Bookkeeper Who Stole Funds and Was Sentenced to Ten Years In Prison Never Entered Upon Service of Sentence—State Has Been Injured by Special Prosecutors—"Unspeakable Action"

Boise, Ida., Nov. 16.—Governor Hawley has given out a signed statement addressed to the people of Idaho in which he condems the action of President Taft in granting a pardon yesterday to Clarence W. Robnett, bookkeeper in the Lewiston National bank of Lewiston, Ida. He was convicted of embezzling funds of the bank and was sentenced in the federal court at Idaho Springs to ten years' imprisonment. He never entered upon service of his sentence.

"I feel that the pardon of Robnett is a fitting sequel to the proceedings in the United States court during the last four years. For more than four years, in every important case in which the United States was interested, the regular prosecuting officers have been retired and these special assistants to the attorney general have been given full control," the statement sets forth.

"Without the slightest interest in our state, caring nothing for our people, simply desirous of establishing a reputation in the department of justice, these special prosecutors have done more to injure Idaho and retard its development since the fall of 1907, than all other causes combined.

"The injustice of this action of President Taft, inspired without doubt by the special prosecutors, will long rankle in the minds of our citizens, and will inspire them with a wholesome contempt for such disgraceful methods.

"It is probably unfair to severely blame President Taft directly for this unspeakable action, as he undoubtedly acted at the request of Attorney General Wickersham, who evidently had been in collusion with his associates in charge of this prosecution."

TOUCHES ON TARIFF LAWS

President of Home Market Club Argues For Adequate Protection

Boston, Nov. 16.—"Adequate Protection" was the chief point made by W. H. B. Dowse, re-elected president of the Home Market club by practically a unanimous vote yesterday, in his inaugural address.

He gave it as his opinion that high or low tariff mattered little, so long as adequate protection was provided. In his conclusion Dowse said it was not new legislation that the country was in need of so much as improved legislation.

"If inequalities exist in our tariff laws," said he, "let them be amended in a spirit of justice to all parts of the country and to all sections of our citizenship."

They are of the opinion that he was thrown from the channel steamer by enemies. They are positive that the letter addressed to the captain of the boat is a forgery, and that Mix had no inclination to end his life.

QUARTERBACKS PLAY BIG ROLE.

Coaches Still Believe Good Pilot Important to Team.

MUST PICK RIGHT PLAYS.

Confidence of Eleven In the Man Giving the Signals Is Essential to Gridiron Strength—Deceiving the Enemy Is the Secret of Success.

Although a number of football coaches believe a quarterback is not of the importance to an eleven that he was under the old regime, the mentors of the teams which have been successful in the past and who now are developing strong aggregations are those who still believe a good quarterback is one of the chief cogs in a machine and that victories or defeats are due largely to his judgment in the selection of plays.

Under the old rules it was a common occurrence for the captain to change the signal of his quarterback, and it also frequently occurred that the captain shouted the signals and the quarterback had to abide by his dictates whether he thought they were right or wrong. As a result arguments frequently took place between the quarter and captain, and in the majority of cases the leader of the eleven was in the wrong in changing the original signal.

As the new game permits of so much strategy and scientific play, it is essential that the players have every confidence in the player who is directing the play. The coach should impress this point upon the minds of the members of his eleven, for if the team does not believe certain plays should be used it will not enter into the formation with the dash and drive necessary for success.

Deception Secret of Success.

Deception in the present game is one of the secrets of success, and in handling the ball the quarterback in a large measure is responsible for the success or failure of plays because he can do a lot of deceiving work by feints to give the ball to certain players and then toss it to others. A varied attack should be the aim of every coach. He should evolve plays in which the oval is passed direct to one of the backs, while he should have others in which the quarterback handles the ball from his regular position.

The most prominent coaches have instructed their players, especially the captains, never to interfere with the quarterback's judgment in the selection of plays. Criticism of the general on the field of play by other members of an eleven is one of the easiest ways to disorganize a team, and the mentors should make it imperative that the quarter's judgment never should be questioned except by the captain when the team is in a bad hole.

In changing signals the play is slowed up, which gives the defensive team plenty of opportunity to get set to meet an attack. It also gives a defensive eleven encouragement, and the members of such teams will fight a great deal harder than they would if the play were snapped with quickness and dash.

Teams Slow In Plays.

Play of teams this season has been much slower than in former years. The players have not been coached to get in their positions after scrimmages with the quickness of teams of other years. So far this season members of the offensive teams have not helped the man who carried the ball to his feet, and the quarter has not shouted the signal for the next play while the members of the team were scrambling to their respective positions. Catching opposing players off guard is a cardinal football point, but in the perfection of plays of this caliber the members of the offensive team should make greater efforts to get into position before their opponents. The quarterback can help matters by shouting signals in a clear voice while some of the men are still on the ground.

In a contest where a large, yelling crowd is present it is of great benefit to have series plays. If separate signals are given for every play before a large crowd the quarter invariably has to shout signals to the forwards and then to the backs. If series plays are used the formations can be snapped with quickness and concentration of attack which should result successfully.

As a general rule, the present day quarterbacks take too much time in getting their plays started, and as a result many opportunities are overlooked. If the forwards of the offensive team can get the charge on their opponents and the backs hit the attacking spot at the same time the play is certain to be successful, but if the defensive forwards get the jump on the offensive linemen it is a mighty hard proposition to make any headway.

BEAN SENTENCED TO LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Vermont Youth Admitted Killing His Mother and Sister

Maidstone, Vt., Nov. 16.—Without betraying the least sign of emotion Arthur Bean, 19 years old, who confessed that he murdered his mother and sister, Mrs. George Bean and Miss Nina Bean, heard himself pronounced guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor in Windsor jail in the superior court here.

Judge Butler said the most charitable view he could take of the affair was that the defendant's mind had dwelt upon the loss of property that his father had willed to him and had been excited and controlled by passion.

"This condition," the judge continued, "was stimulated by the use of intoxicating liquor furnished by his own brother. The evidence was clear beyond question of doubt that a double murder like this must have premeditated."

FAIR FRIENDS OF GRANITE CITY CLUB ENTERTAINED IN A DELIGHTFUL MANNER

Members Of Popular Club Provide Delightful Program At Annual Ladies' Night Thursday

Club Rooms Appropriately Decorated

It has often been said that the Granite City club never does anything by half. This was again proven true Thursday evening, when the club entertained the fair friends of the club. The entertainment provided by the committee was on an elaborate scale. It was largely attended and likewise greatly enjoyed by all.

The attractive rooms, looked even more so on this occasion for Derringer, who had charge of the floral decorations had done his work well. Chrysanthemums in varied colors were used extensively, their colors being brought out prominently by quantities of green, included some very handsome potted plants and ferns.

The ladies and members began to arrive shortly after 7.30, among the early arrivals being the club's venerable and honored member, James T. Penniman, who was warmly greeted by all. As each lady entered the rooms she was presented with a white pink, while the usual attractiveness of the gentlemen was augmented by a yellow chrysanthemum. An opportunity was then afforded the ladies to inspect the well appointed rooms of the club, and the unanimous sentiment was, that the men could not be blamed for desiring to spend some of their evenings "at the club."

A little after 8 o'clock, an entertainment was given in Colonial hall. Here the florist had also been at work and had worked out an attractive scheme of stage decoration with palms and chrysanthemums. The members and guests were welcomed by the club's president, Eben W. Sheppard, who assured the ladies that the club was pleased to have them present, as it gave them an opportunity to see what called their husbands out evenings.

The opening number on the program was given by Scott and Bayard, the two men minstrel company. This is the same company that appeared at the annual banquet in April and it was evident from the familiar way in which they handled the names of some of the members, that they had profited by that visit. There was the usual opening chorus, and songs by the end men and between these an abundance of the end men's jokes. As a rule all of the jokes were pointed at club members, but their shafts were not poisoned and they created much laughter. Many of the members came in for these good natured jokes, but they were all taken in the spirit in which they were given. One particular timely joke was in reference to the recent municipal caucus where Stone and Wall were the winners. The joke wound up by Scott saying to Bayard, that next December there would be a Stone on the Wall in Quincy. Candidate Stone, who is a member of the club, was present and appreciated and enjoyed this joke. Mayor Shea was also present, but the end men were very kind to him.

For their second part, the end men sang a topical song written for the occasion which brought down the house.

Another number on the program was Edward Reed, who calls himself Majai the Hindu magician. He performed a number of tricks in full view of the audience which were very mystifying. In fact they might be called wonderful, especially so were $20 spent in Boston won't buy you a better suit or overcoat than $15 spent in this store.

Don't Try To Deceive Yourself

Don't try to deceive yourself into thinking that you are getting a full $20 worth because your coat has a pretty silk label under the collar. That tag costs $5 and is your tribute toward the Boston store's big expenses.

High rents and page advertisements do not make the clothes, but they do add to the price you are asked to pay. For the man who is looking for something around $15—you'll find it here, and it will be a full $20 value. Why not drop in and see if it isn't so?

"THE SISTERHOOD OF BRIDGET"

Enjoyable Farce Given In Aid of Wollaston Kindergarten

THE CAST

In the Wollaston Unitarian vestry, Thursday evening, the opening night of "The Sisterhood of Bridget" the play given by the Wollaston Dramatic club for the benefit of the Wollaston Free Kindergarten took place.

Wollaston society attended in large numbers to support its favorite activity and many pretty gowns were in evidence.

The play was a farce in three acts and was well staged the scenery being especially made for the production by Willis Henry and Hawes M. Sweet the well known illustrator. The action takes place in the drawing room and dining room of Edward Mason a wealthy stock broker.

The plot hinges on the whim of Mrs. Mason a woman of socialistic tendencies who, in order to acknowledge the equality of her servants, plans a dinner party for their friends in her house.

Bridget, the cook, is to preside and undertakes to train the other servants in social customs and polite demeanor while Mrs. Mason and her daughter Eleanor cook and serve the dinner.

Ward Leighton, a lieutenant in a regiment leaving for the Philippines, is in love with Eleanor who returns it. As her mother wishes her to marry an English lord Leighton is forced to see Eleanor in disguise and attends the dinner party as Bridget's nephew.

The English lord appears at this point and Mr. Mason is compelled by circumstances to introduce Bridget as his wife. The play runs through a number of incongruities occasioned by the reversal in the position of mistress and maid.

In the last act the true character of Lord Custon, who is a fake, is discovered and Eleanor and Leighton are happily reunited. The play was a merry one and held many opportunities for clever acting.

As Edward Mason, Willard E. Keyes aptly portrayed the excitable head of the house and man of business while Louise Fleming as Mrs. Mason was as cultured and aesthetic as the occasion demanded.

Ernest W. Arnold had the part of Ward Leighton a dashing lieutenant of the 178th regiment. As Lord Custon, an adventurer in search of a wife with money was well taken by Frank Fenton.

In the dual role of Timothy Rouke, a house painter, and William, the butler at Mason's, Alymer N. Hatch was to be commended. In the former part his broad dialect was good, while as a butler he was as pompous an Englishman as walked the stage.

In makeup, speech and action Leon D. Brown was a typical Mike McShane, a milkman, and received applause for his good work. Maynard Hatch had the part of Jimmy Macrae, page at Mason's.

Mildred H. Sweet as Eleanor, the daughter was as sweet a herione as her name implied. Lucy D. Luard and Grace A. L. Parker assumed the parts of housemaids in a praiseworthy manner.

Theodora A. Luard was perfection in the comical character of Bridget the cook, of Irish descent and auburn tresses. The feminine members of the cast were the recipients of floral tributes at the close of the second act.

An orchestra consisting of Ninou Lacey, 'cello; Lucien H. Thayer, flute; Everett Rhodes, violin; Arthur W. Rohn, violin; and William Weston, played during the evening.

The ushers were well known Wollaston misses: Miss Gertrude Lacey, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Frances Jones, Miss Caroline Sprague, Miss Helen Seavey and Miss Carolyn Lewis.

COMMITTEE ON VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Held Its First Meeting On Thursday Night

NEEDS OF BOYS AND GIRLS

The committee appointed by the School Committee at its last regular meeting for the purpose of making a survey of the needs of boys and girls in this city in the way of vocational education held their first meeting yesterday. The committee to consider the problem from the girls' side consists of Mrs. John D. Mackay, Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth, Mrs. Walter H. Pinkham, Mrs. W. Ward Whitcher, Mrs. John Walsh and Superintendent Albert L. Barbour.

Its meeting was held at the school committee rooms at four o'clock and was attended by all but one of the committee, as well as by Mr. Charles H. Prosser, Deputy Commissioner of Education. No organization was perfected at this meeting, but the afternoon was spent in talking over with Mr. Prosser the avenues of approach to the subject and the various classes of girls for whom opportunities in a vocational line might be provided. The committee adjourned to meet Monday, November 27, at 3 P. M. at which time it will organize and proceed to take up in a logical and detailed way this important task.

The committee to consider the vocational needs of boys and the possibilities of providing industrial training for them met at the High school in the evening. This committee is made up of Chairman John L. Miller, Superintendent Albert L. Barbour, Mr. Herbert S. Barker, representing the School Committee and Mr. H. Gerrish Smith, Mr. Frank Burgess, Mr. Alexander W. Russell, Mr. Henry A. Marr, Mr. Frank W. Hibbett representing the industries and trades.

One vacancy on the committee caused by the inability of Mr. Fred B. Rice to serve, is to be filled later.

The purpose of the investigations made by this committee, is to ascertain what provision may be made for training the boys who are entering the industries, into greater and more highly skilled efficiency as well as to provide opportunities for boys, who now by accident or necessity, find their way into unskilled occupations to make their way into skilled industries.

The committee organized with Mr, H. Gerrish Smith, chairman and Mr. Albert L. Barbour, secretary. Dr. Prosser was present at this meeting as well as Mr. M. J. Murray who is making a study of past-time schools for the State Board of Education and both spoke at considerable length, describing methods by which this problem has been attacked successfully in other cities, notably Cincinnati, Fitchburg and Beverly and they answered many questions giving light on the Quincy situation. The meeting was an extremely enjoyable one not adjourning until nearly 11 o'clock and the interest in the problem was decidedly keen. Regular meetings will be held hereafter and a plan or plans will be reported later for the school committee to consider with a view to recommending for incorporation into the city's educational scheme. It may be said that in this work of developing the educational facilities of Quincy on the industrial side, the expense will be shared by the state equally with the city.

FIREMEN'S BALL.

The annual ball of the Quincy Firemen's Relief Association will be held tonight at Music hall and gives promise of being one of the most successful affairs that the association has ever held. Invitations have been sent to the Chiefs of departments in surrounding towns and cities and many visiting firemen are expected. A fire alarm tapper has been installed in the hall so that the merrymakers may receive prompt word in case of an alarm.

DEMOCRATS ARE ACTIVE

Open Permanent Headquarters In Hancock Building

CAMPAIGN OPENS WITH RUSH

Determined to conduct a campaign such as has never before taken place in local municipal politics, the democrats of the city, under the leadership of Councilman John D. Smith, chairman of the Democratic city committee, launched forth in the Hancock chambers last evening and established permanent headquarters in that building. Everything is being put in readiness for the interest of James E. Wall, democratic candidate for Mayor and all others seeking municipal offices on the democratic ticket and from now on, no efforts will be spared to make this coming year a most successful one.

The two large rooms are situated on the top floor of the building and are very spacious, being especially adapted for political headquarters. A piano has been secured, a desk and other suitable furniture have been obtained and a telephone installed, and the headquarters as a whole present a most favorable appearance.

Rallying committees have been formed and executive committees in the various wards have been appointed to carry out details. Chairman Smith intends to form a permanent organization and expects to have a large number of voters enrolled before the coming election.

An invitation to visit the headquarters is extended to all. The rooms will be open every evening, and those who inaugurated the movement are looking forward to the most successful year that the Quincy democracy has ever entertained.

BLAZE WAS QUICKLY EXTINGUISHED

The alarm from Box 26 at 5.10 Thursday evening, was for a fire in the awning in front of the clothing store in the Hancock Chambers. The wind evidently blew the awning against a gas light and in a minute it was gone. The front of the building also took fire but a stream from an emergency hose in the building quickly extinguished the blaze. Loss $50.

"MISSING LINK" AGAIN RECEIVES CONSIDERATION

Ward Four Improvement Association Hears About Meeting Of Committee With Railway Officials

Auditor Fairbanks Speaks About City Finances

Each succeeding smoke talk of the Ward Four Improvement Association seems to elicit greater success and the one last evening, in St. Jean's Hall, eclipsed any meeting that the prominent West Quincy body has ever entertained. The principal feature of the event was a very instructive discourse on "The manner of financing the city of Quincy," which was ably delivered by Auditor Henry O. Fairbanks, which, coupled with the very promising reports that were presented concerning the question of the so called "missing link" caused the many present to pronounce the meeting to have been about the best ever.

Stephen B. Little, president of the association, was in charge of the gathering and called it to order shortly before the arrival of ex-mayor Fairbanks. He confined his remarks mainly to a discussion of the "missing link" and told of the meeting held yesterday morning with General Manager Goffe and other officials of the Boston Elevated street railway company. Mr. Little said that he represented the Ward Four Improvement Association in the matter, in company with Rev. Henry T. Grady, Overseer of the Poor James H. Elcock, Joseph Walker, Wilbur Lakin, and Robert Newcomb, all of whom were present at the hearing.

The Board of Trade was represented by William H. Teasdale, Councilman John R. Richards, Councilman Edward J. Sandberg and Charles J. Austin.

Mr. Little stated that the meeting with the railway officials continued for over an hour and a half. He said that the committee presented a petition eight feet in length to the officials, containing hundreds of names of West Quincy residents and residents of the immediate vicinity, who would be benefited by the extension of a car line from East Milton to the Granite street bridge.

Mr. Little then went on to tell of the arguments that were put before the officials, stating all the benefits that would be derived in the granting of the request and the advantages that would accrue in the establishment of the same. The officials seemed, he said, to take the matter very considerately and felt pleased that the petition was presented before the middle of December, for at that time the annual budget of the corporation was being put into effect, and any delay on the part of the local organization would mean much to the entire membership.

The matter will be brought before the directors of the railway company and action will then be taken by them. No definite action was reached in the matter, but Mr. Little seemed to feel that the proposition had been so ably presented as to warrant the request being granted.

He was followed in his remarks by ex-representative Peter T. Fallon, who asked a few questions relative to the hearing and also endeavored to add a few points with reference to the Milton side of the question. He urged the members of the association to get the people of Milton interested and said that their co-operation would be of inestimable advantage when the railway officials were disposed to give out their answer.

He was followed by James H. Elcock who also talked upon the meeting with the railway officials. Mr. Elcock spoke in the same strain as the chairman, but in addition asserted that the railway officials had informed the committees appointed to wait on them, that they had at present numerous petitions of a similar nature, involving an expenditure of some three millions of dollars. He said that the residents of West Quincy had been waiting for ten years to secure an interview in regard to the matter of the "missing link," with the proper railway authorities, but that the opportunity had never presented itself until yesterday.

He said that the only obstacle that the railway company seemed to encounter was the so called Shield's Crossway. Mr. Elcock then went on to explain how a tressle could be built over this point and showed how it could be done without entailing much expense. He thanked the members of the Board of Trade for their efforts in behalf of the movement and said that the combined efforts of both organizations were sufficient to cause the rail-

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Mr. Taft talked to 5,000,000 people on his trip, but that's nothing compared with the job of making 391 congressmen listen to you.

A few of the colleges report that recitations are still being held, in spite of the fact that the climax of the foot ball season is here.

When Mr. Taft got back to the White house, he probably went out to look at the old oaken bucket he used to drink from long ago when he was there before.

Mrs. Harriman is giving money to start a school of public business, but the graduates must learn the art of hand shaking before their diplomas will give them any job.

If the Chinese rebels would give the Emperor a comfortable clerkship in the custom house on condition that he abdicate, it would look like a good trade for His Majesty.

In the race to give away money, Carnegie is now ahead of Rockefeller by $46,089,000. If John D. will advertise in the newspapers for people to come and cart his money off, he might possibly reduce Andy's lead a little.

The trust magnate who was trembling for fear the courts would cut him up into 33 little pieces now finds all he has to do is to walk into Solomon Isaac's and buy a new suit of readymade clothes tagged with a judicial O. K.

The band of Indians from Glacier park that visited the New York stock exchange looked comparatively civilized. At the worst they never removed anything but a fellow's head covering, while the gang on the floor is never satisfied with less than a whole pelt.

In the East Weymouth shooting horror as the affair was purely accidental no arrest was made. Seems about time, however, that some penalty, and a severe one too, should be put in force for the punishment of the "joker" who takes delight in the mere pointing of firearms, loaded or otherwise.

THE MISSING LINK.

The "missing link" in the trolley traffic between East Milton and Boston still holds the centre of attention and many things in its favor were again heard at the meeting of the Ward Four Improvement Association on Thursday night. Nothing against the improvement was reported. In its favor and a step forward in its accomplishment was the report of the committee deputized to interview the railway officials.

Naturally, an affair requiring the outlay of a large amount of money will be required to be passed upon by the Board of Directors of the Corporation. A little hint, possibly a suggestion, that the scheme was thought of favorably, came with the remark that it was fortunate that the matter was taken up before the middle of December, when the Company's budget is completed.

At any rate it is a gleam of hope. There can not be the least doubt that the inhabitants of Ward 4 desire the extention, think it necessary for the improvement of their section of the city and will do everything possible, if the plea is granted, to assure the Company a satisfactory income on the necessary investment.

LECTURE ON "SOLAR HEAT"

At Monthly Meeting Wollaston Methodist Club

MR. MURRAY SPEAKS

A lecture on "Solar Heat" by Chas. H. Pope, an authority on the subject was enjoyed by the members of the Wollaston Methodist club at their monthly meeting Thursday evening.

For many years the speaker has been experimenting with the subject and has written books and holds several patents along this line.

The speaker referred to the parallel direction of the sun's rays as the hopeful point in their practical application for heat and power.

It is a well known fact that by the concentration of several rays by the use of a magnifying glass a greater heat may be developed than from a single ray. In like proportion according to the power of glasses and reflectors used enough heat may be created for practical purposes.

Years ago in California, with the aid of a locomotive headlight reflector, Mr. Pope constructed an apparatus which actually boiled eggs, baked bread and roasted meat with heat generated from the rays of the sun.

At present he has nearing completion, an engine with power supplied from the same source, which he expects will revolutionize certain processes of manufacture.

With this principal in use, Mr. Pope's prophecy was that the future would see New Mexico, Nevada and other localities of extensive sunshine as the manufacturing centres rather than Massachusetts or Rhode Island.

The novel subject was followed with great interest by those present and the speaker was greeted by hearty applause at its close. Many questions regarding the matter were answered by Mr. Pope.

A short business meeting opening the evening during which some of the usual pleasantries were passed among the members of the club.

One of the brightest and breeziest numbers of the Wollaston Herald was read by the new editor Wesley Rhodes. Many local hits and some clever poetry were among the contributions.

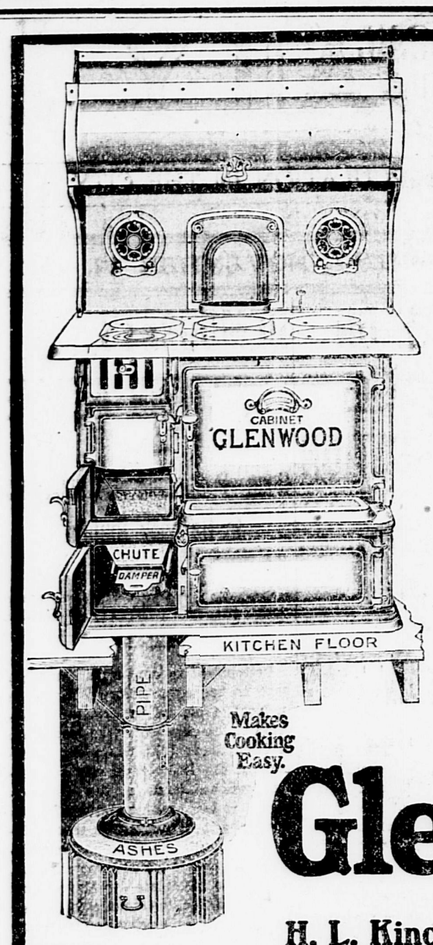

Albert N. Murray a Republican candidate for Councilman-at-large was requested to speak and said a few words along general lines.

Cases of Smallpox In Pawtuxet Valley Now Number 118

Warwick, R. I., Nov. 17.—When the list of smallpox sufferers in the Pawtuxet valley totalled up to 118 the authorities believed that the high mark had practically been reached. Although a few straggling cases may be located, it is thought that the number will not be very materially increased. Business is almost at a standstill; the electric cars are carrying but few passengers and an exodus of people from the valley is noticed.

The health authorities have issued a statement that any person caught violating the quarantine regulations will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

MORRISON—GALLAGHER.

Thursday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock Miss Amy Gallagher daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Gallagher of Roxbury was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mr. Alva Morrison, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. Elmer Morrison of Braintree. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents at 346 Walnut avenue, Roxbury and Dr. James DeNormandie, pastor of the First Unitarian church of Roxbury was the officiating clergyman.

The bride attractively gowned in white was given away by her father and in the bridal procession was preceded by her sister, Miss Emily Gallagher who becomingly attired in pink silk served as flower girl. Joseph C. Morrison of Exeter, New Hampshire, brother of the groom served as best man. The ushers were Dr. Samuel Ellsworth, Dr. George M. Sheahan and Lewis Bass, Jr., of Quincy, Albert Kent and Lowell T. Hayden of Boston, Mr. C. M. Bill and Mr. W. H. Gallagher of Braintree and Morill A. Gallagher of Roxbury. B. L. Whalpley of Boston presided at the organ and as a wedding march played the march from Atala.

After the wedding ceremony the young couple held a reception and were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Gallagher, parents of the bride and by Mrs. H. M. Faxon of Quincy and Mrs. J. D. Ellsworth of Bronxville, N. Y., sisters of the groom. After their return from their wedding journey Mr. and Mrs. Morrison will reside for the winter at Bexley Hall, Cambridge, returning to Braintree for permanent residence in the spring or summer of next year.

Mr. Morrison is a popular young man of Braintree and comes of an old and highly respected Braintree family. He is the president of All Souls' Men's club of this town and is noted both for his executive ability and his clear and comprehensive way of introducing the speakers who address the members at the monthly meetings.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor Ledger:

Thanking you in advance for space in your valuable paper, I wish to say a word relative to the new Court House.

As one walks up Washington street he cannot fail to notice the unequal height of the two chimneys on the building, one being about three courses of brick higher than the other.

This is a serious defect as it spoils an otherwise symmetrical appearance. They should both be the height of the lower one.

I can hardly believe that they were intended to be as they are but as no move to change them has been made, I wish through your paper to call attention to matter to the end that it may be remedied before the building is completed.

Wm. F. Sidelinger.

Q.—Will you kindly explain Hebrews vii, 3, and tell who Melchisedec was—"Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a priest continually?"

Answer.—Throughout this and connecting chapters, the Apostle was contrasting the Aaronic priesthood with that of our Lord Jesus. Remember that this letter was addressed to the Hebrews, and that in their Law arrangements none could serve as a priest unless he was a member of the tribe of Levi, a descendant of Aaron. The Apostle explains that the priestly office of the Christ is not of the Aaronic order; it does not trace its lineage to any human source. This is strikingly typified in the priesthood of Melchisedec, whose lineage and death are not recorded. He was a priest without having inherited the office from his father or mother—thus typifying Christ's priesthood, which came not of the lineage of the flesh, as did the Aaronic priesthood, which Israel thought to be the real. Neither was Melchisedec's death recorded nor a successor named (Hebrews vii, 3), that thus might be typified the continuity of Christs priesthood. The Apostle, reasoning with the Jews, refers to the prophecy of David (Psalm cx, 4) and argues that the Levitical Priesthood must pass away that the greater priesthood, after the order of Melchisedec, should be established. Melchisedec was King of Salem, and Priest of the most high God, and as far as his lineage in the priesthood was concerned, he was without father, without mother, and without descent.

THE HOMESTEAD.

Floyd D. Raze.

Not much unlike the ragged nest
In yonder winter tree,
And e'en as empty and forlorn
The old house seems to be—
Yet 'twas my home in years gone by,
And memory glids it bright
With ruddy, glare of blazing hearth
And flick'ring candle-light.

Dark and forsaken now it stands
Deep ridged with winter snow
Which, sifting through the broken pane,
Has quenched the ruddy glow;
And all abroad from vale to hill
The whitened mound appears
Piled strangely o'er the bloss'ming heath
I knew it other years—

For I remember how the leaves
Made summer's sweetest bower,
And how with joy I used to pluck
Each fragrant perfumed flower.
The lily red upon the plain,
The rose within the dell
That sheltered graciously the bee
Within its cloistered cell.

The oak once green above it
Is desolate and lone,
The wind howls through the barren boughs
With sad and mournful tone,
And I but wonder as I stand
Knee deep in winter snow
If summer e'er can bring again
The bloom of long ago.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

"BEN-HUR"

With the use of every device known to modern stagecraft to produce a pageant the like of which has never before been seen in this country "Ben-Hur" is on its way to scoring the greatest success at the Boston Theatre that has yet been known in that historic playhouse. Painters, stage artisans and costumers have accomplished wonders in this line before, but it has been the unanimous verdict of the thousands who have seen Klaw & Erlanger's new and greater production during the past two weeks that the high water mark has been reached and that it will be many years before a spectacle even approaching it in grandeur will ever be seen again. In fact it may be truly said that the real atmosphere of the Holy land in the time of the Messiah has been faithfully reproduced and that every detail of the book, with the exception of the Crucifixion chapter, has been followed out exactly as laid down in Gen. Lew Wallace's wonderful tale. The chariot race has been so improved that it is wonderfully realistic and it is hard to imagine that the 20 horses in 5 quadruple spans rushing madly on the stage are not in truth engaged in a neck to neck race in the Antioch arena, and that the shouts from the multitudes are not in reality those of the mingled Romans, Jews and Egyptians cheering their respective champions on to victory. In fact it is difficult for those in the audience when the race is over and Ben-Hur is proclaimed the winner that they have not been in truth present at one of the soul-stirring exhibitions in the time of the Caesars. Particular pains have been taken with the scene in which the sinking of the galley occurs and the rescue of Ben-Hur and Arrius by the Roman galley which opportunely appeared on the scene. It has been made ever more realistic than before.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of the strongest vaudeville bills of the year is announced for next week at B. F. Keith's Theatre, headed by Harry Von Tilser and Taylor Granville's "The Hold Up." Mr. Von Tilzer is one of the cleverest and best known composers of popular songs in the world. He comes to Boston with a repretoire of brand new selections that have never before been sung in this city. The spectacular feature of the week will be supplied by Taylor Granville's great drama of railroad life in the Southwest, entitled "The Hold Up." This production is one of the big things of the year in vaudeville. The action takes place in a lonely telegraph station on the Denver and Rio Grande R. R. located in the heart of the Arizona desert, and sixty miles from the nearest human habitation. The scenic effects are simply immense. A huge cyclorama representing the alkali desert by moonlight is introduced, and the train effects showing 150 ton freight mogal crawling across the desert with a long string of freight cars and the mile a minute rush of the roaring, dust-enveloping limited express past the station where two men are engaged in a desperate hand to hand struggle for life, surpass anything of the kind ever seen on the stage. Only three players appear in the piece, but no less than thirty stage hands are required to manipulate the great effects. Other big features will be Edmund Hayes & Co. in "The Piano Mover;" Howard's Ponies; Those French Girls; Kaufmann Brothers; Grace Freeman; and others.

THE END OF THE BRIDGE.

On its revival at the Castle Square, "The End of the Bridge" lacks nothing of the immediate popularity that was its reward last spring. Therefore Mr. Craig announces its second week, beginning Monday, with the same cast and every feature that contributed to its first success. "The End of the Bridge" is now a play of national reputation, and Boston should be proud of having given it to the world. As will be remembered, it won the first John Craig Harvard prize, and it achieved a run of no less than nine weeks at the Castle Square last spring, breaking all records at that house. And the acting contributes no small share to this triumph. Mr. Craig's Dr. Garret has been proclaimed far and wide as a masterly impersonation of a real physician, and Miss Young as the wife, George Haswell as Felix Marriott and Henrietta McDannell as Peter share in his success. Miss McDannel, indeed, by her acting of the little boy makes "The End of the Bridge" a play in which the children, as well as their elders, can take the keenest delight.

"POMANDER WALK."

"Have you seen 'Pomander Walk?'" is the question that is being asked by those who have witnessed this delightful and exquisite comedy now running at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. Beginning next Monday the play will enter upon the fourth week of its engagement at Boston's newest and most modern playhouse. That it has established itself in the hearts of the theatre-goers as one of the most delightful and charming plays that Boston has seen in a long time, is evidenced by the crowded houses at every performance. It is well for you not to miss this captivating comedy. "Pomander Walk" is not a comedy of the slam-bang, rapid-fire variety, but one of the most delicate fibre. It is as sweet and refreshing as a whiff of newly mown hay. From the rise of the curtain until the close of the performance you dwell in the land of happiness. It routs you out of the busy today and sets you a-dream in a veritable fairyland of romance and charm. It is one of those plays that sends you from the theatre thinking, that, after all, life is worth living. "Pomander Walk" will surely please you or nothing on earth can please you. Inspired by the quaint atmosphere of the play, a well-known Boston attorney, after witnessing "Pomander Walk" petitioned the Boston Board of Street Commissioners to have the street in which he resides renamed "Pomander Walk." "It resembles so much the 'Pomander Walk' of the play" says the eminent lawyer.

The management has set aside Thursday November 23, as "Parker Night" in honor of the playwright's ancestors, who were prominent in the affairs of the state, among them being Hon. Isaac Parker, the author's grandfather, who was at one time chief justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts. The occasion will be marked by the presence of Mr. Parker, who will deliver a short address.

CORONATION PICTURES.

Week after week goes by, and still the Coronation pictures remain at Tremont Temple, assured of the constant appreciation of the public. In addition to the processions and ceremonies portrayed by the Kinemacolor motion picture process, there are other features of no less interest, and the entire entertainment has a wide-spread educational value that is being taken advantage of. The special Saturday morning performances, at 10 o'clock, for schoolchildren, parents and teachers, are now a regular feature of special attraction and value to the younger portion of the community. Each Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, Dr. Roland Dwight Grant displays some of his own special views, in addition to the regular program. Performances are given twice a day every day in the week.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

And now comes the annuoncement of another extension of the engagement of that delightful spectacle and fantasy by Maeterlinck, "The Blue Bird," at the Shubert Theatre. The Boston run has already been extended beyond its allotted three weeks, until November 25th, next Saturday night, and notwithstanding the fact it was found necessary to add two extra matinees for the past week and the coming week, on Monday and Friday afternoons, but still the craze of the theatre-going public of Boston and New England for "The Blue Bird" did not fade in the least. The cry has always been for more, and more the public will have.

On Tuesday morning next, seats will go on sale for an additional week of this wondrous spectacle—the week beginning Nov. 27th. These additional performances include an extra matinee on Thanksgiving day, but during that week there will be no matinees on Monday and Friday afternoons—simply the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees and holiday matinee.

PARK THEATRE.

In the dull humdrum of every day life, with its manifold cares and perplexities it is indeed refreshing to revel in the delights of dreams that come true. "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford," in its eighth week of record-breaking patronage at the Park Theatre, Boston, considered as a comedy is a classic, but as a modern fairy story for grown-ups—is a veritable masterpiece, and, most delightful entertainment. Small wonder that "Wallingford" ran nearly two years in New York and over a year in Chicago; and now has literally taken Boston by storm. Mr. Cohan has taken the famous "Wallingford" stories by George Randolph Chester and cleverly woven them into a coherent, cohesive comedy that is indeed a rare delight. Filled to overflowing with honest, hearty laughs it is absolutely clean and wholesome humor withal, and yet has a touch of sentiment that gives it body and moving force. The play tells the story of J. Rufus Wallingford and his pal "Blackie" Daw and has to do with their dreams of sudden wealth by means of which they play upon the gullible rubes. They arrive in the one-horse town of Battlesburg and industriously begin to corral the "easy money" of the credulous investors. These fake financiers promise to make the little city a thriving metropolitan centre, they promise to erect a modern hotel; a large department store; a theatre; to build trolley lines and anything else the town needs, but their crowning effort is to be the erection of a great plant to manufacture "covered carpet tacks." The magnetic grafters successfully "trim the boobs" to the extent of half a million dollars and are planning to "make a quick getaway" before the "boom" subsides and the hubble bursts. But in this effort to "make good" in the eyes of a girl he loves, Wallingford's dream comes true, in that he actually accomplishes all he has promised. The "carpet covered tack" develops into a real commercial sensation, the fake real estate boom becomes an accomplished fact, the mythical trolley line becomes a reality, and the audience sees the trolley cars scooting through the town, in the last act. Everybody makes money, everybody has money and best of all the crooks become honest men and love reigns supreme.

"EVERYWOMAN."

"Everywoman," with its brilliant cast, its unique series of stage pictures, its exquisite symphonic music, and its novel costuming, will remain in possession of the Majestic Theatre for many days to come. It is safe to say that the present engagement at this house will scarcely suffice to enable the patrons of the Majestic to enjoy and appreciate this noble drama. "Everywoman" as everyone knows, is a reincarnation of the ancient morality play of the fifteenth century. But in spite of the fact that it is a fantastic allegory, and all of the characters are symbolic types, the play makes a distinctly modern appeal. It hits the bulls eye of popular success because it is essentially up to date. The author, the lamented Walter Browne, utilized the formula of suggestion and symbolism of the most primitive form of dramatic art. But he certainly possessed the stagecraft of the most expert playwright of today, in reproducing such contrasting types as Beauty, Vice, Wealth, Greed, Age, Youth, Passion, Modesty, Conscience and Truth.

All of these types are personified with the highest degree of histrionic skill by players of rank and distinction. "Everywoman" is marked by the most exquisite touches of dramatic imagination and it has aroused a rare enthusiasm among people who seldom, if ever, visit the theatre.

KILLED HIS YOUNG WIFE

Merchant Declares That He Mistook Her For a Burglar

Pittsburg, Nov. 17.—The stage was set here for what promises to be one of the most sensational legal battles in the criminal History of Alleghany county. The defendant, George Golden, a merchant of Wickboro, will be called to answer for the death of his young wife, whom he shot to death at their home, believing she was a burglar.

The prosecution claims Golden, who had been a trustee in bankruptcy, had been guilty of practices not altogether in accordance with the law, and these facts coming to the attention of his wife, she used them in an attempt to have him deed to her certain of his property.

According to testimony at the preliminary hearing, they quarrelled and the shooting followed. The principal witness, Mrs. Jerry Small, has disappeared.

"MISSING LINK"

way officials to feel inclined to comply with the request of the petition.

Mr. Elcock said that he recently had a conference with Superintendent Gammon, of the local railway company, with regard to having a car line extended to the vicinity of the Baker Chocolate Mills, where a number of west Quincy people, and others of the immediate environs were employed. He said that a five cent fare should cover the matter and portrayed the advantages that would be derived in the event of the project being put into force. He asserted that Mr. Gammon likewise said there were three or four propositions of a similar nature, yet at the same time seemed to be favorably inclined towards the idea. All the speakers were heartily applauded at the conclusions of their remarks, and from the sentiment that prevailed at the meeting no efforts will be spared to bring the matter to a successful erminus.

A discussion then prevailed in reference to seeking the co-operation of the Milton people; and a motion was made to the effect that the secretary confer with the East Milton Improvement society, otherwise known as the Thursday Evening Club, asking it to lend a hand in bringing about the extension of a car line from East Milton to the Granite street bridge.

At this point City Auditor Fairbanks entered the hall, and was accorded a great ovation. In his introductory remarks, Chairman Little outlined the political life of the speaker, of the prominence he has gained in local circles, and of his achievements as councilman, president of the council and Mayor, to which latter office he was the first one of the city to enjoy the distfnction for three successive occasions. Prolonged applause greeted the speaker as he arose.

Mr. Fairbanks started out by thanking the voters of the fourth Ward for the confidence they had expressed in him on past occasions and for the loyalty and support that he had received at all times. He then went on to explain the matter of bonds and premiums and his discourse on the whole was very instructive to the many present, and most especially to those who were not familiar with the system in vogue. Mr. Fairbanks told of the meeting of the government officials held in Washington and also outlined the various drastic laws that were enjoined upon a city, especially when it came to a question of borrowing money. He told of the methods adopted by the Old Colony Trust company, when a borrowing sum was at stake, and he also outlined the stringent policy that was put into effect in fixing the validity of the borrowing capacity, in order that there would be no doubt but that the amount loaned was forthcoming legitimately.

He told of the recent visit made by one of the government's foremost auditors. The speaker then went on to outline the close scrutiny of the City of Quincy books that was made by the same man. He stated the position of the City Council in the matter of financing and showed the prominent part the orders of the council played in the matter of city finances. Mr. Fairbaks stated that a survey and examination of the City's books had not been previously made for fifteen years, and considered it a source of gratification when no error could be detected in them by the Washington expert during that lapse of time.

He then went at length into the system used in the matter of borrowing and expending money. He said that all bills went through the Mayor's office as the last resort, and in this way, all the proper officials were informed as to the progress being met with in the performance of their duties. He told of the monthly meeting of the different officials and depicted the manner in which the closest touch could be obtained in regard to the outlay of the different departments.

He produced many facts and figures dealing with the remarkable growth and development of the city during a period of fifteen years. He compared the expenditures of this city with those of other cities, and showed where the city of Quincy, far outclasses other cities of a much larger territory in the matter of finances.

He predicted great strides for this city in the near future and produced many interesting facts dealing with taxes, sewerage, water supply and other such departments. Mr. Fairbanks confined much of his discourse to figures alone and showed where no city had proved more faithful to its trust than "The city of Presidents."

He was heartily applauded when he said "The City of Quincy is a very large city, covering an area of some 16 miles and containing a population of 34,000.

When we consider, he said, the many advantages that are before us, most noticeably the water front opportunities which provide ample means of development, and when we consider the beautiful surroundings that envelope our city, together with the results that will inevitably follow when our electric facilities are fortified and our grade crossing questions are settled to satisfaction, there is no reason to believe but what the City of Quincy will become a flourishing Metropolitan City of its own, and not, as some would have it, a mere ward of a large city.

The speaker also dealt with the various outlays of the city and was given a rising vote of thanks at the conclusion of his remarks. An intermission of ten minutes was observed at the conclusion of his remarks, and Mr. Fairbanks again presumed in order to answer many interrogations with segard to the city finances, which were put to him by the different members. When he finished speaking he was again applauded and all present were especially pleased with the addresses.

Refreshments were in order at this period and the committee on arrangements passed out ice cream, coffee, cake, sandwiches and cigars in abundance.

William H. Teasdale, chairman of the committee appointed by the Board of Trade to work on the extension of the "missing link," was the next speaker. He also confined himself to a great extent to the hearing with the railway officials, and advanced the same arguments in tht matter as were presented by the previous speakers. He said that he had waited on the officials of N. Y. N. H. and H. Railroad in regard to the 7.19 train from West Quincy, which is invariably late. Mr. Teasrale asked the officials that the said train be scheduled at another time, because it inconvenienced all by the present arrangement. Mr. Teasdale said he urged that an extra train be put on or else that the 7.19 P. M. train be scheduled earlier. He said that the matter was taken under advisement and that there is every promise of his request being granted.

He urged the committee on transportation of the Improvement Association to take the matter under careful consideration and to lose no efforts until the present state of affairs was remedied. He also asserted that there was no train running from 6.12 in the evening to 7.22 from Quincy with the exception of Saturday. Mr. Teasdale thought that this was a most unfavorable circumstance, for he saw no reason why the train that stops at Norfolk Downs at 7.07 could not also make a stop at Quincy. The committee on transportation decided to take immediate steps to bring about the desired action.

The last speaker of the evening was Councilman John D. Smith. He instructed those present to keep in constant touch with the councilmen from the district, in an effort to obtain these improvements which were desirable. He advocated a still larger membership for the organization and predicted that it would be a powerful influence in wielding together the sentiment of the people of the district and eventually in accomplishing those things which were needed.

He too dwelt somewhat on City matters, and showed how the arrangements in the different departments had great influence to bear on the transactions of the citizens on the city. He also told of the responsibility that rested upon those in city hall, and urged that the residents of the section keep an alert eye on all the movements that were being pushed forward. He told the members not to be reticent in questioning city officials for any information desired and stated that inasmuch as they were the servants of the people, they were in turn bound in justice to comply at all times with the will of the citizen, in furnishing any information, or in advancing those enactments which were presented for the betterment o fthe city as a whole.

He told of the many maters that had come up before the present council and also outlined a few policies that would in all probablity be adopted this coming year. He adduced some very valuable information to the many present and was roundl applauded at the conclusion of his remarks.

—The Brockton canal project still continues to show traces of vitality, and the matter will be brought before the Rivers and Harbors Congress in Washington, early next month. The project calls for an expenditure of about $50,000,000, and would be 52 miles long. Brockton may yet be a seaport, but it will doubtless be some years before the consummation of her desires in that line.—Old Colony Memorial.

MAN KILLED AT MILTON.

William D. Ballard, a member of thec rew of the barge Binghampton, was instantly killed on Thursday while unloading coal at the wharf of the Neponset Coal Company, Granite avenue.

Ballard was standing over the hatchway looking down into the hold to aid in guiding the steam shovel when the shovel came up unexpectedly, hitting him on the head and sending him spinning across the deck. As the bucket swung back it again struck the man on the head.

Dr. Joseph O'Brien of Dorchester Lower Mills was summoned, but said that death had been instantaneous, and Medical Examiner Sturtevant of Hyde Park was notified.

LATEST IN LIFEBOATS

Makes Better Time on Land Than It Does In the Ocean

New York, Nov. 17.—A boat that travels over the land even faster than it travels in the water is being offered for sale to the United States government by General Howell as a lifeboat to be used on parts of the coasts where the surf is high and shoals are numerous.

This curious craft resembles nothing ever before presented as a life-saving device and is said to be the first practical invention of a land-and-water boat.

It is equipped with a powerful engine, will accommodate more than a dozen persons, and should it touch a shoal while riding out into the sea it would amble over it at the rate of ten knots an hour. In open water it makes eight knots.

—"Sorry sir," was the apology of the drug store attendant, "but we are not permitted to sell you soap on Sunday." As the would-be customer turned to leave the brilliantly lighted store, he noted a dozen men buying various brands of cigars and cigarettes. A young woman pricing the boxes of candy and other customers sampling hot chocolate, bouillion and cold sodas. In the expressive slang of the hour: "What is the big idea?"—Boston Record.

NOT AN OGRESS AS PICTURED

Mrs. Vermilya Says She Will Prove It on Witness Stand

TALKS TO NEWSPAPER MEN

Does Not Know How Those Who Died on Her Hands Got Poison—Declares They Were "Pretty Well Done For" When They Came to Her Home—Denies Attempt to Commit Suicide With Arsenic

Chicago, Nov. 17.—In the first public statement she has given out since she was placed in jail on charges of poisoning Arthur Bissonette, Mrs. Louise Vermilya denied guilty knowledge of the ten deaths that have occurred beneath her roof in the last eighteen years.

She received newspaper men in the county jail hospital, where she is recovering from the effects of poison said to have been taken by her while under surveillance. She denied that she had poisoned herself or any of the three men, Bissonnette, Richard T. Smith and Frank Brinkamp, in whose viscera arsenic has been found in abundance.

She disputed statements by persons to the police that she had other than business relations with Undertaker Boysen. She also classed as false stories that she had posed as Smith's fiancee or wife and declared herself the victim of a peculiar chain of circumstances which she did not create.

"I never poisoned any one," said Mrs. Vermilya. "All those who died came to my home when they were pretty near done for, and then died on my hands. How they got poison, I don't know. I didn't give it to them. Smith simply was a boarder. I was engaged to marry Bissonette and I never heard that Miss Lydia Rivard was engaged to him till after his death.

"I didn't try to commit suicide. I didn't know the pepper box brought to me contained arsenic. I asked the nurse to bring me some white pepper, never thinking she would bring the box of roach poison. In fact I forgot the roach poison was in the pantry.

"All stories about my having a fondness for the dead are false and when I go on the witness stand, as I shall insist on doing, I will have no difficulty in proving I am not the ogress I have been pictured, but a victim of ghastly circumstances."

HANDWRITING IDENTIFIED

Evidence Tends to Show That Aeronaut Mix Committed Suicide

Calais, France, Nov. 17.—No doubt is now entertained that Edgar W. Mix, the American engineer and aeronaut, committed suicide by jumping from a mail boat during the passage from Dover to Calais Sunday night.

Mix's secretary, Pierre Hablizig, has arrived here and had no hesitation in identifying as Mix's handwriting of the letter addressed to the captain of the steamer. In this letter Mix expressed his intention of jumping overboard.

The two letters mentioned in the note to the captain were duly mailed as requested, but the captain has no exact recollection of the addresses. He believes that one of them was addressed to a firm of lawyers in London and the other to some one in New York.

EIGHT MILLION HUNGRY

Twenty Russian Provinces Are Threatened With Famine

St. Petersburg, Nov. 17.—Eight million persons are in need of immediate relief, owing to the failure of the crops in twenty Russian provinces. This startling announcement was made in the douma by Premier Kokovzoff in reply to questions concerning reports that famine threatened a wide area.

The necessary measures for relief would require, the premier said, the expenditure of $60,000,000, of which amount the imperial exchequer would have to find $44,000,000. Half of the total was necessary at once to defray the cost of supplies already dispatched.

LEMONS WITHOUT SEEDS

They Are Produced From Bud Wood Labelled "Citron of Commerce"

San Bernardino, Cal., Nov. 17.—The seedless lemon, to produce which experts had unsuccessfully labored for years, has been discovered.

The bud wood from which the trees now bearing the seedless lemons have been grown, came from a sample labelled "citron of commerce." Fruit growers believe that the character of the fruit was changed through budding.

Operator Says Sherman Law Injures Small Producers

Washington, Nov. 17.—Control of the coal mining industry by a national commission, with power to authorize trade agreements, was proposed before the senate committee on interstate commerce by Taylor Vincent, a West Virginia coal operator and attorney. Vincent said the enforcement of the Sherman law with its demand for competition between large and small operators is rapidly driving the small producers into bankruptcy.

"Do you think similar commissions should be established for other lines of industry?" asked Senator Cummins.

"I do," replied Vincent. "Each industry should be under control of a commission that could determine how far agreements could be made without a violation of the law."

ABUSED WHEN A BOY

Mrs. Spencer Testifies That Mind of Her Son Is Disordered

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 17.—William L. L. Spencer, accused by his wife of dealing the blows in the childhood of Bertram G. Spencer which, she declared, affected his mind, is in Springfield to take the stand himself in behalf of his son, accused of the murder of Martha B. Blackstone.

The accusation of the husband by his wife, the story of cruelty which she said her son suffered at the hands of his father, the tale of the house divided against itself, came into the drama enacted at the Hampden court.

For the major part of the court day the woman in black stood and sat at the witness stand, pleading through her tears for the life of her son. The home environment of the accused was unmasked through her story.

HAVE ECONOMIC VALUE

Woman Doctor Tells Why Girl Babies Are the Best

New York, Nov. 17.—Dr. Anna von Sholly, formerly of the Babies' hospital, New York, declares the value of girl babies is rising. She says:

"One thing that has raised the estimate of the economic loss through infant mortality is the increased value of girl babies. It is my observation and belief that mothers generally prefer girl babies, other things being equal. Girl babies are sweeter, more responsive to affection. It's the fathers that want the boys.

"And now the girl baby has an economic value of her own. She is likely to prove just as good a breadwinner as the boy, and far more liable to provide for her aged parents."

"SHAKERS" GIVE UP WORK

One Attempts to Offer His Child as Living Sacrifice

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 17.—Upon the upper river Indian reserve on Lake Winnipeg there is a great commotion, due to the teachings of "Apostolic Saints," or, as they are called, "Shakers."

A section of the band has given up work, saying "God will feed us." One of them, Fred Thomas, attempted twice to offer one of his children as a living sacrifice, but on each occasion, after he had the child bound and ready for death, he was persuaded to offer in its place a calf.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Young "Gacky" of Baroda and Harvard Grins Amiably and Discusses Football in Americanese Slang—Coffee High in New England but Nothing so Distrastrous as Germany's Sauerkraut Shortage—Hub's Art Colony to See Ghost Walk—BostonWants Electric Express Service and Wants It Badly.

Boston, November 17, 1911.—"Gacky" is a living refutation of the contention that the English (or American) language is difficult for foreigners to assimilate. Jaisint Gaekwar, commonly called "Gacky", son and heir of the Gaekwar of Baroda, East India, joined the crowd gathered in the grill room of a downtown hotel after the Harvard-Carlisle game. "O, well, it was only a substitute team. The " Varsity would have walloped those Redskins easily," he remarked. At this juncture a new group entered, and greeted the prospective Gaekwar by pulling his hat down over his ears and similar demonstrations of regard. "Gacky" grinned at them amiably and drawled in purest American: "Say, what do you guys think you've got here—an easy mark?" The facility with which the oriental student has mastered the idioms of the American language indicates that slang will be all the rage at Baroda when Gacky returns home to help spend dad's four million per annum.

Boston and New England matrons who are bewailing the high price of foodstuffs and the scarcity of certain staple necessities may feel that they have still to be thankful—for there's a sauerkraut shortage in Germany! according to the Consular Report which comes daily to the Boston girl's desk. Before this desperate condition of affairs the local difficulties fade into nothingness. Incidently how unintentionally humorous Uncle Sam's representatives abroad occasionally are!

The Hub's artists so seldom see the ghost walk that very naturally they will throng the ghost party to be given by their own Copley Society, the latter part of the month. Whatever this organization does is always done white and the horde of painters, sculptors and illustrators who are going to be just onlookers know that their fellow professionals will produce a ghost party weird and awe—some in its effects. A picturesque feature of the affair will be a Jack-o-lantern drill, participated in by many of the people who are some pumkins in the social sets. A few non-members of the Society will be admitted and will doubtless ejaculate over the bewitching ghostliness of Yankee Bohemianism.

Women shoppers of towns north of Boston are glad to learn that the agitation for allowing electric express cars in the Hub has been renewed. This service as it has been built up in Brockton, Quincy, Taunton and other places to the southward has proved the greatest possible convenience. Only a Boston terminal is needed to extend the system over parts of New England which have not had it previously. People who have already experienced the benefits of its prompt and efficient delivery are expected to testify before the Railroad Commissioners on November 24. The scheme has twice been turned down by the city fathers, but on insufficient understanding, according to a gentleman familiar with the whole subject, who says:

"Many Bostonians, if I am correctly informed, have an idea that electric express cars will dart through the streets over all lines at all hours, and make sidewalk deliveries, perhaps even house to house deliveries. Now what actually would be done, supposing the Boston service is similar to that south of the city, would be no more of a nuisance to the public than the employment of a few post office cars on the lines, which nobody ever thinks of resenting. Somewhere in downtown Boston, presumably on or near Atlantic Avenue, there would be a freight terminal at which a few express cars would unload and load at certain hours of the day. The distribution in the city streets would be by teams and motor trucks, just as now. Having a capacity of 20 or more tons a small number of these cars can do a surprisingly large business in the small parcels which make up the bulk of the traffic. It would not be necessary to run the cars at the busiest hours over the most crowded routes. Elsewhere a favorite time of arrival and departure in the morning between six and eight, before the passenger traffic becomes heavy. In the centre of the city three routes would presumably accomodate the express traffic—one for the cars from points south of Quincy, one for those that might be run in connection with the Boston and Worcester and one making an outlet to the Bay State Company's territory north of the city. In a system of nearly 500 miles of track the problem of routing the cars so as to avoid even the possibility of an interference with the passenger traffic ought to be easy. The Bay State Company operate electric expresses in more than 100 cities and towns. We have had several years' experience in Providence, Fall River, Taunton, Brockton and Quincy, all good sized cities. We have never had a complaint of express cars interfering with passenger cars. We maintain sidewalk delivery in some of the smaller villages through which the passenger cars run on long headway. In no city, however, do we operate except by means of terminals from which parcels are delivered to and received from the local expressmen, whom by the way we have not put out of business."

MISS BRAZIER A WITNESS

Said to Have Seen Richeson and Miss Linnell Dining Together

Boston, Nov. 17.—The Post says that Miss Marion H. Brazier, journalist and author, is the mysterious person whom the police have had as the witness to the luncheon of Avis Linnell and Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson in the Trinity Court cafe on the afternoon of Saturday, Oct. 14, the day the girl died.

Miss Brazier admitted the fact at a luncheon of the Professional Women's club at the Lenox yesterday afternoon, and told of having gone before the grand jury to describe what she had seen.

Chief Inspector Dugan, who has charge of the case, admitted last night that Miss Brazier had been among the government's witnesses before the grand jury.

TAFT WILL ADVOCATE DOWNWARD REVISION

Trusts and Alaska Problem to Figure In Message

Washington, Nov. 17.—In President Taft's annual message to congress on Dec. 5 consideration will be given principally to trust legislation, tariff and the Alaskan problem. The president again will advise adoption of a federal incorporation act.

In addition he will ask legislation supplemental to existing anti-trust statutes with a view to making it necessary in prosecution of combinations to go back to time of organization to prove a whole case of restraint of trade.

The tariff board's report, which will accompany the message as an exhibit, will allow the president to recommend tariff action towards downward revision on both the raw and manufactured product of wool and cotton.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal, mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 500 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

He crawled out on the veranda. The rain had ceased, but the wind, which had dwindled to a half gale, was increasing. A big sea had sprung up, and the mile long breakers, curling up to the overfall 200 yards from the shore, were crashing on the beach. The Jessie was plunging madly to two anchors, and every second or third sea broke clear over her bow. Two flags were stiffly undulating from the halyards like squares of flexible sheet iron. One was blue, the other red. He knew their meaning in the Berande private code: "What are your instructions? Shall I attempt to land boat?" Tacked on the wall between the signal locker and the billiard rules was the code itself, by which he verified the signal before making answer. On the flagstaff gaff a boy hoisted a white flag over a red, which stood for, "Run to Neal island for shelter."

That Captain Oleson had been expecting this signal was apparent by the celerity with which the shackles were knocked out of both anchor chains. He slipped his anchors, leaving them buoyed to be picked up in better weather. The Jessie swung off under her full staysail; then the foresail, double reefed, was run up. She was away like a race horse, clearing Balesuna shoal with half a cable length to spare. Just before she rounded the point she was swallowed up in a terrific squall that far outblew the first.

All that night, while squall after squall smote Berande, uprooting trees, overthrowing copra sheds and rocking the house on its tall piles, Sheldon slept. He was unaware of the commotion. He never wakened, nor did he change his position or dream. He awoke a new man. Furthermore, he was hungry. It was over a week since food had passed his lips. He drank a glass of condensed cream thinned with water, and by 10 o'clock he dared to take a cup of beef tea. He was cheered also by the situation in the hospital. Despite the storm there had been but one death, and there was only one fresh case, while half a dozen boys crawled weakly away to the barracks. He wondered if it was the wind that was blowing the disease away and cleansing the pestilential land.

By eleven a messenger arrived from Balesuna village, dispatched by Seelee. The Jessie had gone ashore halfway between the village and Neal island. It was not till nightfall that two of the crew arrived, reporting the drowning of Captain Oleson and of the one remaining boy. As for the Jessie, from what they told him, Sheldon could not but conclude that she was a total loss. Further to hearten him he was taken by a shivering fit. In half an hour he was burning up. And he knew that at least another day must pass before he could undertake even the smallest dose of quinine. He crawled under a heap of blankets and a little later found himself laughing aloud. He had surely reached the limit of disaster. Barring earthquake or tidal wave, the worst had already befallen him. The Flibberty-Gibbet was certainly safe in Mboli pass. Since nothing worse could happen things simply had to mend. So it was, shivering under his blankets, that he laughed until the house boys, with heads together, marveled at the devils that were in him.

CHAPTER IV.

JOAN LACKLAND.

By the second day of the northwester Sheldon was in collapse from his fever. It had taken an unfair advantage of his weak state, and, though it was only ordinary malarial fever, in forty-eight hours it had run him as low as ten days of fever would have done when he was in condition. But the dysentery had been swept away from Berande. A score of convalescents lingered in the hospital, but they were improving hourly. There had been but one more death—that of the man whose brother had wailed over him instead of brushing the flies away.

On the morning of the fourth day of his fever Sheldon lay on the veranda, gazing dimly out over the raging ocean. The wind was falling, but a mighty sea was still thundering in on Bernade beach, the flying spray reaching in as far as the flagstaff mounds, the foaming wash creaming against the gateposts. He had taken thirty grains of quinine, and the drug was buzzing in his ears like a nest of hornets, making his hands and knees tremble and causing a sickening palpitation of the stomach. Once, opening his eyes, he saw what he took to be a hallucination. Not far out and coming in across the Jessie's anchorage he saw a whaleboat's nose thrust skyward on a smoky crest and disappear naturally, as an actual whaleboat's nose should disappear, as it slid down the back of the sea. He knew that no whaleboat should be out there, and he was quite certain no men in the Solomons were mad enough to be abroad in such a storm.

But the hallucination persisted. A minute later, chancing to open his eyes, he saw the whaleboat, full length, and saw right into it as it rose on the face of a wave. He saw six sweeps at work, and in the stern, clearly outlined against the overhanging wall of white, a man who stood erect, gigantic, swaying with his weight on the steering sweep. This he saw, and an eighth man who crouched in the bow and gazed shoreward. But what startled Sheldon was the sight of a woman in the sternsheets between the stroke oar and the steersman. A woman she was, for a braid of her hair was flying, and she was just in the act of recapturing it and stowing it away beneath a hat that for all the world was like his own "Baden-Powell."

The boat disappeared behind the wave and rose into view on the face of the following one. Again he looked into it. The men were dark skinned and larger than Solomon islanders, but the woman, he could plainly see, was white. Who she was and what she was doing there were thoughts that drifted vaguely through his consciousness. He was too sick to be vitally interested, and, besides, he had a half feeling that it was all a dream.

"Good boatmen," was Sheldon's verdict, as he saw the boat leap forward on the face of a huge breaker, the sweeps flying swiftly to keep her on that front of the moving mountain of water that raced madly for the shore. It was well done. Part full of water, the boat was flung upon the beach, the men springing out and dragging its nose to the gate posts. Sheldon had called wildly to the house boys, who, at the moment, were dosing the remaining patients in the hospital. He knew he was unable to rise up and go down the path to meet the newcomers, so he lay back in the steamer chair and watched for ages while they cared for the boat. The woman stood to one side, her hand resting on the gate. Occasional surges of sea water washed over her feet, which he could see were incased in rubber sea boots. She scrutinized the house sharply, and for some time she gazed at him steadily. At last, speaking to two of the men, who turned and followed her, she started up the path.

Sheldon attempted to rise, got half up out of his chair and fell back helplessly. He was surprised at the size of the men, who loomed like giants behind her. Both were six footers, and they were heavy in proportion. He had never seen islanders like them. They were not black, like the Solomon islanders, but light brown, and their features were larger, more regular and even handsome.

The woman—or girl, rather, he decided—walked along the veranda toward him. The two men waited at the head of the steps watching curiously. The girl was angry. He could see that. Her gray eyes were flashing and her lips were quivering. That she had a temper was his thought. But the eyes were striking. He decided that they were not gray after all, or, at least, not all gray. They were large and wide apart and they looked at him from under level brows. Her face was cameolike, so clear cut was it. There were other striking things about her—the cowboy Stetson hat, the heavy braids of brown hair and the long barreled 38 Colt's revolver that hung in its holster on her hip.

"Pretty hospitality, I must say," was her greeting, "letting strangers sink or swim in your front yard."

"I—I beg your pardon," he stammered, by a supreme effort dragging himself to his feet.

His legs wabbled under him, and with a suffocating sensation he began sinking to the floor. He was aware of a feeble gratification as he saw solicitude leap into her eyes; then blackness smote him, and at the moment of smiting him his thought was that at last and for the first time in his life he had fainted.

BIGGEST FIGHT OF REVOLUTION

Will Probably Be Fought Very Soon at Nanking

CHANG IS WELL INTRENCHED

Head-Chopper Believes That He Can Reconquer China For the Throne—Yuan Casts His Influence Against Free Government—Will Endeavor to Win Revolutionists to New Allegiance—Forms New Cabinet

Nanking, Nov. 17.—General Chang, commander of the imperialists, is preparing to receive the reformers' army, which he confidently asserts will meet its Waterloo before Nanking. Imperialist troops have moved out of the city and are distributed to strategic points to check the advance of the revolutionaries from Chinkiang. The defenses at Pukow are formidable.

General Chang sent thirty-five mountain guns and 2000 men across the river, and a large body moved down the main road in the direction of Chinkiang.

Chang is strongly intrenched with 15,000 Manchu troops. He has massacred most of the progressive Chinese population and is so proud of his record for head-chopping that he fancies that he can conquer China for the throne.

In the meantime, according to consular advices, an army of 30,000 men, aided by a fleet of warships, is moving on the town. A fleet of foreign vessels is in the river in front of the town awaiting events.

Revolutionaries continue to come into Chinkiang in thousands. The scene there is marvellous in its confusion. The troops are disorganized but not disorderly.

The forward movement of the revolutionaries has not yet begun, but large numbers have been taken aboard the gunboats and transports, which are proceeding up the river in the direction of Nanking. It is presumed that a flank movement is planned to hold Chang's troops in Nanking or to cut them off if an attempt is made to advance.

There is some evidence of discontent among the reformers, but the pervading spirit seems to be "do or die." A big battle is not expected for several days, but there may be some preliminary engagements.

Yuan Shi-Kai, the new premier and military dictator at Pekin, is found supporting the Manchu dynasty as against the demand of the Chinese people for self-government. For the second time in recent Chinese history he has thrown himself across the pathway of those who would destroy the corrupt regime that had fastened itself upon the empire.

It may be that he believes, as perhaps was the case in the other instance, that China is not ready for self-rule, but the fact remains. According to Yuan's announced plans he will not seek to crush the revolted provinces at this time by force of arms, but will send out commissions in an effort to win back to their allegiance to the throne. The premier announces a new cabinet, which contains several Manchus, though no nobles are included.

Wu Ting-Fang, foreign minister in the southern republic, opposes Yuan's scheme, and calls for the abdication of the throne.

PACKERS FIGHTING HARD

Want Ruling on Criminal Clause In Sherman Anti-Trust Law

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Pitting a question of fact against a question of law, and advocating the public welfare against an allegation of selfish pecuniary motives, lawyers for the indicted Chicago packers' fought the government's counsel in an effort to obtain a final ruling on the criminal clause in the Sherman anti-trust act from the United States supreme court before the packers go to trial.

The courtroom of United States Circuit Court Judge Kohlsaat was the battleground for the clashing forces of legal knowledge and experience. When the court day ended, both sides claimed the advantage. The arguments will be resumed today.

his pop corn and chrysanthemum tricks. In the former, corn placed in a sheet held by two club members, was made to pop by waving a wand over it, the corn piping hot being passed among the audience. In the chrysanthemum trick a pot of earth was covered with a sheet and a minute later, when the sheet was removed a large plant of growing chrysanthemums was exposed to view.

The other entertainer of the evening was Mr. Mardelin, the musical winder. He was a whole band in himself and his number was greatly enjoyed and called forth several encores.

During the numbers on the program Brook's orchestra gave a number of selections and also played in the club rooms after the entertainment, while refreshments were being served.

Salads, cake, ices, coca and coffee were served after the entertainment and then there was a social hour. Some enjoyed the billiard and pool tables while still others indulged in cards or social intercourse. By far the greater number, however, again sought Colonial hall where there was dancing until midnight.

The affair was in charge of the energetic entertainment committee, consisting of Thomas G. Smith, John H. Johnson and Charles C. Hearn, who were assisted by the officers and members, each one of whom constituted himself a committee of one, to see that the ladies had a pleasant evening, and it was the general consensus of opinion that they did.

FOSS STOCK IS ADVANCED

Bryan Praises Governor as Presidential Possibility

COMMENT OF THE COMMONER

Bay State Man Should Be Considered Because of His Endorsement at Polls—Says Harmon Is Falling Behind and Underwood Is Not In Harmony With Progressive Spirit of the Day and Cannot Win

Lincoln, Neb. Nov. 17.—Praise of Governor Foss of Masaschusetts as a presidential possibility and criticism of Governor Harmon of Ohio and Congressman Underwood of Alabama is the feature of the first page of Bryan's editorial comment in Thursday's issue of The Commoner.

Of Foss, Bryan says: "The re-election of Governor Foss on a radical platform advances his stock on the presidential market. He was elected a year ago and is now re-elected on a platform that leaves no doubt as to his positive and aggressive stand for remedial legislation. If you are a progressive Democrat, read the Massachusetts platform and the election returns, then ask yourself: 'What's the matter with Foss?'

"The Commoner is not attempting to express an opinion as to the relative availability of the various progressives who are being discussed, but it takes pleasure in calling attention to the fact that Governor Foss is not only one of the men to be considered, but to the further fact that his claims upon the party have been materially strengthened by the endorsement just given him by the voters of Massachusetts."

In Bryan's judgment the Harmon strength is showing signs of shifting to Underwood, concerning whom Bryan says:

"His nomination would, however, be unfortunate for the south, for his defeat would be wrongfully charged to his location instead of being charged, as it should be, to the fact that he is not in harmony with the progressive spirit of the day. If the south wants the candidate, and there is no reason why that section should not have him, it should select some one who will appeal to the progressive element in all parties. It is hard enough for a Republican to be a standpatter now; a Democratic standpatter is more lonesome still.

"If any Democrat has expected to carry the east with plutocratic Democrats, he might as well give up the idea. There is no possible chance of the Democrats getting the Wall street support. If they win they must win with the aid of the progressive Republicans, and they cannot hope for that unless their candidate is a man about whose progressiveness there is no doubt.

"Let the Democrats gird themselves for the fight and from now on demand a platform and ticket in harmony with the progressive sentiment of the country."

"OLD TIMERS" AT REUNION

Friends Of Warren Dunbar Help Celebrate 80th Birthday

THOSE PRESENT

A birthday party which took the form of a reunion, was held Thursday at the home of Mrs. Frank McNeil, on 90 Pleasant street, in honor of Warren Dunbar, one of the most widely known and highly respected residents of this city, who has just rounded out 80 years of life. The occasion was marked by the presence of a number of old timers, all of whom have been actively and intimately associated with the man who was tendered a fitting observance of the event.

The vigor which charaterized the many enjoyable evenings spent by those present in their balmy days, was henewed to a still greater degree last evening, and the affair was prounced one of the best ever enjoyed. Warren himself was the eldest of those present and it certainly was a pleasure to him to be able to talk with ten of his comrades about the glowing scenes of old and the many daring and hazardous feats that were accomplished. Henry O. Studley, himself an old time performer, had his banjo with him and kept things alive all the while.

George L. Phillips, in his usual pleasing manner, entertained those present with a number of stories and likewise recited a number of pieces which touched upon an acutely sensitive nerve.

Those present and their ages were; F. P. Loud, 79, James W. Pearce, 76, John D. Williams, 73, David Dunbar, brother to Warren, 73, George L. Phillips, the noted deep sea driver, 73, Henry O. Studley, 73, Luther Parrott, 71, H. M. Bird, 68, and C. P. Casper, 64.

Their ages, added to the age of the man in whose honor they were gathered, totaled 730 years, so trat it could readily be classed a grand old reunion.

Mrs. Frank Elkins, of Newton Lower Mills, the daughter of Mr. Dunbar, was also present. She is in her 45th year and has been the mother of 14 children, 11 of whom are now living. Mrs. Agnes Flockhart of this city assisted at the piano.

Mr. Dunbar is most familiary known because of his long association with the fire department of this city and the activity he displayed with the crew of the famous "Granite" hand pump. He delights in telling of the methods used in fighting the flames years ago and he was the object of great attraction on the observance of the last Fireman's playout. Mr. Dunbar was a famous athlete in his day and from his present condition bids fair to attain the century mark in years.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR MISS TAYLOR

Miss Ruth Taylor of Beach street, teacher of the eighth grade of the Massachusetts Fields school, was given a pleasant surprise Wednesday evening, when over two score of her pupils trooped in upon her.

Games followed in which those present joined with a great deal of enthusiasm, Miss Annie M. Bennett, Miss Florence C. Gammons and Miss Martha E. Jenkins, all teachers in the school, attended and enjoyed the occasion. Refreshments were served.

The pupils present included: Velma Haskins, Edwin Rennigan, Louise Tuttle, Erington Bradshaw, John Fay, Ada Nelson, Leslie Miller, Miriam Addison, Lillian Maginnis, Mildred Hill, Walter Thayer, Celia Greenleaf, Hazel Webster, Gertrude Halgren, Maria Purdy, Carroll MacTear, Ernest Doring, Edwina Hunter, Clarence Miller, Frances Greenleaf, Sadie Wheeler, Merrill Oswell, Edward Sadlier, Ralph Lyons, Clarence Ralph, Ross Whitehead, Olive Axberg, Townsend Hingston, Joseph Barbour, Anne MacTear, Helen Turner, Bertha Kennerie, Ermine Baker, Marie Poland, Dorothy Wetmore, Paul Brown, George Whitcher, Roy Brown, Howard Bower, Herbert Hildebrand, Rebecca Bird, Lewis Northrup, Marion Hardy.

"GENERAL ALARM" FOR GOOD TIME SOUNDED BY FIREMEN AT ANNUAL PARTY AND BALL

Many Enjoy Festivities Friday Evening In Music Hall

Grand March Led By Chief And Mrs. Williams

A general alarm was sounded at 8 o'clock, Friday evening, which summoned hundreds of firemen with their ladies to Music hall. It was not an alarm for a fire, however, but a call to participate in the twentieth annual concert and ball of the Quincy Firemen's Relief Association, an organization composed of active and retired firemen of Quincy's department.

The attendance was very large, in fact it seemed as though it was even larger than last year, which was a record breaker. The balcony was packed full of sightseers, while on the floor of the hall were hundreds who came to take an active part in the festivities.

It was but a few minutes after the hour of eight when the guests began to arrive and although early, they found the energetic reception committee in their natty blue uniforms on hand to receive them. The suits were set off with bright silver buttons and red carnations, the latter being the gift of William Patterson the well known florist. The reception committee was headed by Chief Peter J. Williams, the others being Vice President Herbert Griffin, Assistant Chiefs, Daniel J. Nyhan and Frank C. Packard, Capt. Charles P. Costa, Treasurer Edmund G. Hayden, Clerk James Gallagher, Samuel P. Hanson, Fred L. Bent, and Arthur G. Pinel.

CHIEF WILLIAMS.

The hall looked very attractive especially about the platform. The front of the platform was decorated with handsome potted plants, ferns and pine tree boughs, while in the centre was a fire hydrant, from which ran two lines of hose one of which was attached to a Hunt gun, apparently all ready for service, and had there been a fire in the hall, one would have expected to have seen water spurt from its brass nozzle. Behind this bank and fernery was Wilson's orchestra which furnished music for the promenade concert from 8 to 9 o'clock and for the dancing which followed. The concert program included the following numbers:

March—"Hand of Fellowship" Tobani

Overture—"Romantic" Keler Bela

Concert Waltz—"Vienna Tales" Strauss

Selection—"The Red Widow" Gebest

Cornet Solo—Selected
Mr. J. J. Crowley

Finale—"Two Larks" Leschetizky

At the left of the stage on the wall, was a large fire alarm gong, which had been cut into the fire alarm circuit and had the services of the firemen been required the box would have sounded on it.

Fortunately, however, the only use to which the gong was put, was to sound the Chief's call, three blows, at 9 o'clock, which was a signal for the grand march and which opened the ball. The march was a very pretty affair and well executed. It was given under the direction of Leo J. McMaster, who stood at the head of the hall and saw to it that the couples as they approached, turned in the right direction.

At the head of the line was Chief Williams, with Mrs. Williams. Then came District Chief Daniel J. Nyhan, president of the association with Mrs. Nyhan, Councilman Charles E. Cherrington, chairman of the Council committee on Fire Department matters, with Mrs. Cherrington, Vice President Herbert Griffin with his daughter, Miss Agnes Griffin, Superintendent of Fire Alarm, Mihcael P. Barry, with daughter, Miss Alice Barry, Treasurer Edmund G. Hayden and Mrs. Hayden, Chief of Aid, M. A. McDonald and Mrs. McDonald and Arthur G. Pinel and Mrs. Pinel.

These eight couple made a pretty picture as they came down the hall, sixteen front, and the applause that greeted them was evidence that it had been well done.

There were 64 couples in the grand march and among them was noticed two veterans, who have passed the three score and ten years, yet apparently as lively and light on their feet as many of the younger generation. These two veterans were Warren Dunbar of the Old Tigar company, who celebrated his eightieth birthday anniversary Thursday, and Benjamin King a veteran Boston fireman. These two veterans did not confine themselves to the march but took an active part in the other numbers on the program.

The march over, general dancing was in order until 2 o'clock when the all out was sounded. The dance program included twenty numbers, arranged in such a manner that all tastes were looked after. There were the quadrilles, for those who did not care for the more modern dances, while for the younger generation were the waltz, duchess and two-step. At midnight there was a brief intermission, during which lunch was served by Seiller in the annex.

The invited guests many of whom were present included: Mayor Shea, City Treasurer Curtis, City Clerk McGilvray, Tax Collector O'Hara, Commissioner Bainbridge, Overseer Elcock, City Messenger Tirrell, President Bryant of the City Council, Councilmen Cherrington, Craig, Ross, and Sodergren of the Fire Committee, John G. Whitman of the Water Department, ex-Chiefs John W. Hall, Walter H. Ripley, Amos L. Litchfield, Chief Whitmarsh of Braintree, Fire Commissioner Daly of Boston, Brooks Adams, President Bowles and Gen. Manager Smith of the Fore River Co., Representative Thomas and Langelier, Benjamin King, Warren Dunbar and Edward Richardson, veterans, Fred F. French of the W. M. French Hose association, James F. Conway and Gammon of the street railway, James T. Penniman and A. D. Wheeler of the Gamewell Co. Also the chiefs of the Fire Departments of Boston, Brockton, Milton, Braintree, Holbrook, Weymouth, Hingham, Newton, Chelsea Somerville, and Cambridge, City Solicitor McAnarney, Robert Williams, Exalted Ruler of the Elks and William Patterson.

Those in charge of the floor and the reception committee were as follows:

MANY HELP TO CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY

A large number of the friends of Master Samuel T. Drew, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Drew of 38 South Central avenue, Wollaston, gathered at his home Friday evening to help celebrate his thirteenth birthday anniversary. Master Drew is particularly popular with a large circle of acquaintances and that the evening was merrily spent goes without saying. "Goodies" were provided in abundance, a large birthday cake in celebration of the event being cut by the young host. After an evening pleasantly spent the young people departed at a late hour wishing "Sam" many happy returns of the day.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held Monday evening.

FIFTH ANNUAL SMOKER OF FORE RIVER DRAUGHTSMEN

Much Mirth At Enjoyable Affair On Friday Night

Wit And Mirth Handed Out Galore

The draftsmen of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., gathered about the festive table last evening at the Quincy House, Boston, for their fifth annual banquet and smoker. Covers were spread for some 53 representatives of the Hull & Engine Departments, who swooped down upon the main dining room with keen appetites and an abundance of ready with and jovial fellowship.

While the naval experts of the local company have had some memorable gatherings in past years, last evening's event must go down in the annuals of Fore River smokers as by far the most successful and enjoyable in every way. Designs of American Dreadnoughts and Argentine Battleships were forgotten in the merriment of songs, speeches and good natured banter. In the latter respect the chief draftsmen, Mr. E. C. Bennett, Hull Dept. 4, Mr. Wesley Rhodes, Engine Dept., were in a class by themselves. In fact they were the life of the gathering and their humorous stories, live jokes, interspersed with laugh producing "knocks" never failed to keep the meeting in an uproar.

Proceedings opened with the taking of a flash-light photograph by Mr. Lord, the Official Works Photographer. The same gentleman gave an encore later in the evening, when the fumes from his first effort had blown away.

Mr. G. E. Green of the Hull department was chairman. Mr. Green, the victim of a "frame up," had this honor unceremoniously thrust upon him at the last moment, but arose to the occasion with all the versatility characteristic of the evening. He acquitted himself admirably, in spite of the handicap, and presented the speakers of the evening in appropriate and witty fashion.

His first broadside at his fellow draftsmen was after this style. Two of the fellows meeting recently, inquired concerning each other's health. The first answered, "Why! I feel like the top of Mr. Senior's head." Pressed for an explanation, he replied, "Pretty smooth!" (Mr. Senior has a shiny bald spot.) The second retal-

"HEART AND ARROW DANCE"

Proved Popular at Annual Party of Rosedale Club

AT ALPHA HALL

The anticipations of those who had eagerly looked forward to the annual dancing party of the Rosedale club, were fully realized last evening when about 75 couples held forth in Alpha Hall in observance of the event. The members of the club are all well and familiarly known in local circles, and being composed of the employees of the commercial department of the local exchange, the "hello" girls themselves, delegations of whom were present from Dorchester, South Boston, Braintree and Randolph presented themselves in large numbers and helped add great success to the occasion.

Twenty numbers were on the dance program and Carey's orchestra played a repertoire of music that added a great charm to the event, causing the party itself to be termed one of the prettiest and most enjoyable ever entertained in Alpha Hall. The most interesting feature of the evening was the eighth number on the program, a novel innovation, termed the "heart and arrow" dance.

Every gentleman in the hall was presented a red colored arrow, with a number inscribed on it in black letters. The hearts of the same color, with corresponding numbers, were distributed among the ladies. Each gentleman had to go about the hall, seeking the lady who had a heart with a number corresponding to the number on his arrow and finally after much struggling in quest of partners had taken place, the couples came together and danced to the tune of "I'm all alone." Dancing was enjoyed till midnight.

The floor was in charge of David K. Dackers, assisted by Edward F. Graham, as assistant floor director and the folowing corps of aids:

Marcella L. Little, Bessie T. Miller, Alma L. LeClair, Florence G. Buckley, Anna F. L. Farrell, James A. Doyle, Michael M. McDonald, George F. Crotty, Eliot C. Johnson, John E. Greene.

Among those present were:—

Mr. and Mrs. George Holt, Belle Robinson, Nellie Cronin, Kittie Cronin, Nellie Duggan, Gertrude Kennedy, Rita Kennedy, Kate McLean, Annie Corcoran, Evon Bouchard, Minnie Childs, Grace Ferguson, Josephine Curran, Alice Harkins, Helen Farrell, Lillian Lyons, Catherine Callahan, Margaret Costello, Kittie Burns, Mrs. John Greene, Corine Picard, Ethel Barnicoat, Margaret Mense, Margaret Scanlon.

HUMOROUS LECTURE IN AID OF DAY NURSERY

Emery L. Crane's Talk Enjoyed By Large Audience In Alpha Hall

Receipts For Worthy Cause Will Be Large

A large and appreciative audience welcomed the lecture on "American Wit and Humor," delivered last evening in Colonial hall, by Emery L. Crane, in order to help defray the expenses entailed in the furtherance of the work of the Quincy Day Nursery. Mr. Crane has already acquired an enviable reputation as a monologue artist, and as a participator in various entertainments of a minstrel nature, and on that account he readily adapted himself to such a topic, even though his endeavors in the lecturing field have not existed for any great length of time.

Previous to the opening of the lecture, a musical program was in order which consisted of the following repertoire:—

Piano Duet—Mr. W. Weston, Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith.

Songs—

A. Little Oh Dear DeKovan

B. Sleep Little Tulip Nevin
Mrs. Frank Page

Quintette—

Wynkin, Blynkin and Nod Nevin
Mrs. Slade, Mrs. Hunting, Mrs. Turner, Miss Litchfield, Mrs. Frank Page.

The speaker of the evening was introduced by Colonel Edward E. Anderson, who officiated as presiding officer during the lecture. The Colonel himself seemed to be able to launch forth with great effectiveness into the etymology of the subject that was about to be considered at length, and adduced instances where he himself had personally been affiliated with one humorist, James Field, by name, at the same time relating many of the renowned gentleman's experiences.

Colonel Anderson portrayed to the audience some interesting anecdotes and he depicted numerous occasions where the aesthetically abortive, the surprise, the disproportion and the disharmony indicative of the subject itself were forcibly exemplified.

He showed the disparity between humor and pathos as typefied in Field's himself. The Colonel asserted that he was affiliated with the man in question, while a resident of the city of Chicago. He stated that Fields would invariably frequent the stores in the heart of the city, all the while exhibiting his effusions in a comic strain, but that when occasion prompted him to avocate, the same Fields would usually depart in company with a five dollar bill requested by a kindly friend, whose acute nerve had succumbed beneath the comic strain of magnanimity.

The speaker of the evening was then introduced and proceeded to deal with his subject in a chronological order descrying the lack of wit and humor in the early ages, and showing its remarkable prominence in the present day literature.

He showed the publicity of wit and humor previous to 1860, and immediately gave a brief resume of its progressive advent. Mr. Crane said that in endeavoring to cover so much ground in his talk on the subject, he felt like a historian who had been given fifteen minutes to write a complete account of the history of the British Empire. He felt that the subject contained such an abundance of material that it was more than could be expected that he should touch even on its salient features.

He dwelt at length upon the writings of Artemus Ward, "Bill" Nye, and "Gene" Field, and spoke highly of their works and their efforts to raise the comic form of literature on a par with the colloquialism of the times.

He gave an account of Ward's coming to Boston, of the impression he created, and of the many experiences which he encountered. The speaker likewise paid a high tribute to Joshua Billings, not only in commenting upon his works, but in reading his travels throughout the different states and in supporting the reputation that had been acquired. He quoted various passages from the author referred to, and depicted several of his writings in their original style. Much of the time of Mr. Crane's lecture was consumed in an expose of the humorous work of Billings.

Coming down into later years, the works of Holmes, Twain and John Godfrey Saxe, quoting passages from each of them, and showing the different styles that they had adopted.

The speaker then went on to show the part wit and humor played in theatrical enterprises and said that the sentiments derived from wit and humor were largely responsible for the inauguration of such a play as the "Chantecleer," and others.

The humorous side of newspaper work and the important features developed in the art by the press, were next discussed. "Abe" Martin and "Mr. Dooly," were the conspicuous figures that commanded the attention of the auditors at this moment, and such treatises were considered from their standpoint of value according to a philosophical basis, as well as their humorous standard.

Mr. Crane said that the appearance of Ward and Billings on the lecture rostrum at the present time, would bring them before audiences of the gaiety volgus, but that such attractions as Holmes, Twain and Saxe, would be numbered among the role of the high class drama artists.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

A good deal of talk is made about New Hampshire's Advertising day, although the newspapers are on the job of advertising the state every day in the year.

While the Congressmen are preparing their speeches on the trust question, what the people really want to know is whether they will vote to make the mountain laurel the national flower.

The courts having accepted the reorganization, we are waiting to see if the cigars of the Tweedledum Tobacco Company sell any cheaper than those of the Tweedledee Tobacco Company.

That was an entertaining, as well as encouraging talk of Auditor Fairbanks the other evening before the members of the Ward Four Association. Public work, well done, is an honor to the community-at-large as well as to the person who performs it. It is gratifying to know that the accounts of the city are faithfully and systematically kept. Among other things, Mr. Fairbanks stated "that a survey and examination of the City's books had not been previously made for fifteen years, and considered it a source of gratification when no error could be detected in them by Washington experts during that lapse of time." Such a recommendation of a competent official speaks for itself.

OVERDRAFTS.

Within a few years overdraft in the banks of the country have mounted as high as $53,000,000 while the lowest in the last five years showed $23,000,000. Practically all this overdraft was in the south and west.

New England National banks are indirectly paid a compliment by the Comptroller who says that the evil in that section is at a minimum. That is so, for the last report of the banks in this section one had an overdraft of $3 and another only $15.

Says an exchange: In this part of the country the overdrawing of a bank account is regarded as a sign of pending financial collapse and almost in the light of repudiation of a promissory note. It is the practice of all banking institutions—in this section to require a depositor to keep a stipulated minimum balance, and his failure to do so is likely to result in the closing of the account. This is considered good business and that overdrafts are bad business. It is almost inconceivable here how banks are permitted to do business in such a loose fashion as in some other sections, and the Controller of the Currency, who now is lacking in power to compel national banks to cease honoring overdrafts, should have authority given him by Congress to take drastic action against institutions tolerating this practice.

50 BOYS AT MEETING ON SATURDAY

About fifty boys braved the rain storm to attend the Saturday morning meeting at the Y. M. C. A. "The Other Wise Man," a steropticon story, illustrated with forty colored views, was well received by the audience and was listened to with the most intense interest. Artaban's search for the King, and his failure to find him because of delays in ministering to the sick and needy, were brought out very effectively by picture and story. Next week, Quo Vadis will be given in the same way, and on Dec. 2, Mr. Gumb, will come up from Brown University to talk to the boys.

ELECTRIC EXPRESS SERVICE.

A business man in a city on the lines of the Bay State Street Railway Co. where the Electric Express service is in operation, ran unexpectedly short the other day on some supplies very essential to his business. He telephoned the manufacturer in another city on the same lines 12 miles away. Just an hour and a half after the telephone message the supplies were delivered at his office. This is but one of the many instances that are coming up every day demonstrating the advantages of the electric express service. A machine may break down and a new part wanted at the earliest possible moment a certain line of stock may be suddenly sold out in some store or various kinds of articles vitally needed in various businesses may require speedy replenishment to avoid waste of time or money. The combination of the telephone and Electric Express will reduce the number of lots minute, which mean lost dollars, to a minimum and save many an unpleasant business embarassment.

NO RECOUNT.

The time for petitioning for recounts of votes cast at the municipal caucuses last Tuesday, expired Friday evening. No petitions were filed however, and the names of those nominated at the caucuses will go on the official ballot, unless there should be some withdrawals. The time for withdrawing expires Nov. 24.

MILTON

The musical season of the Milton Educational society opened Thursday evening in the Town hall by the Flonzaley quartet. The quartet was founded in 1903, and an enviable reputation has been acquired since that time. Tours have been made through Holland, Germany and France and European fame has been attained. A large gathering was in attendance and the concert was undoubtedly the best ever given under local auspices. Members of the quartet were: Adolio Betti, first violin; Alfred Pochon, second violin; Ugo Araviola, and Iwan d'Archambeau 'cello. All are Latinians and they certainly lived up to all the good things that had been said about them, as was evidenced by the frequent applause that their various renditions merited.

Miss Helen F. Duncan well known in local circles, has been appointed teacher of grades 5 and 6 of the Tucker school. She will start teaching at the beginning of the winter term. Miss Duncan is a graduate of Milton High school and Bridgewater Normal. Since her graduation from the latter institution she has taught in Compton, Rhode Island and Needham, Mass. Her friends are pleased at her new appointment.

Judge Harvey W. Baker will talk on "Juvenile Courts," before the meeting of the Woman's club on Monday afternoon.

"The Christian and Petition," was the subject of the second of a series of sermons given in the Evangelical church last Sunday.

The Brookline gym girls are to give an exhibition of fancy drills and dancing in Cunningham gymnasium, Wednesday evening.

It is expected that Governor W. Cameron Forbes of the Philippine islands, who is ill with fever at Manila will return to Milton for a vacation in the near future.

Robert L. Raymond is to occupy the house of Dr. Charles L. Minot, on Brush Hill road, this winter.

George Driscoll of Brook road and Walter Sherlock of Brush Hill are engaged in exterminating gypsy moths throughout this section.

Michael McCue is erecting a house on Reedsdale road.

Harold Trisbee of Dyer avenue has accepted a position as New England agent for the E. C. Stearns Hardware Company of Syracuse, New York.

Sunday afternoon Nov. 26 at three o'clock Bishop Lawrence is to visit the Church of Our Saviour in East Milton and administer the rites of confirmation and preach the sermon.

Jesse B. Baxter of the Blue Hill National Bank spoke on banking on Wednesday afternoon to the pupils of the Vose school.

"The Noblest Element in Service" will be the subject of the sermon tomorrow morning at the East Milton Baptist church.

J. P. Fenno is building a large coal shed for the Wollaston Coal Co., at Wollaston, also a garage.

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

At the annual fair of the Ladies' Benevolent society of Memorial church on Tuesday and Wednesday the interest was above any ever held in Atlantic, and being the first fair in the new church it manifested what could be done by having a definite aim. The trimming was done under the leadership of Mrs. Alfred W. Jelenik, and her artistic taste was most delightfully seen in the beautiful festoons of roses draped from corners and sides of vestry to the center. The useful table of which Mrs. Jelenik was chairman presented a mission rocking chair to the Ladies Society for the church parlor. This was solicited by Mrs. Lucretia J. Fuller and the price of chair was raised by popular subscription for the benefit of useful table. Mr. Davison made the presentation speech for the table and Mrs. Sarah Butler responded. At the close of the sale the reports of money thus far received from the fair was put on the black board by Kenneth Blake. Mr. Davison gave a few words of appreciation of the work of all chairmen and commitees stating that even the table which might have the smallest amount had done valuable service and that the larger amounts would be according to opportunity and goods which were sold, and exhorted all to rejoice in what had been accomplished, and in the self denying lives which made new pipe organ possible. The following ladies acted as chairmen and the amount indicates what they turned over to the treasurer. Mrs. James Geekie, lunch table $23.04. Mrs. Burkhardt, baby table $16.05. Mrs. George A. Deans, ice cream $38.10, J. N. Anderson, tickets $46.25, Mrs. Roger Wilde, candy $47.61. Mrs. Robert Harding, apron $52.25. Mrs. W. F. Cummings, Christmas gifts $93.80. Mrs. Alfred W. Jelenik, useful, $300.08. Mrs. T. W. Davison, china $571.10. The Men's table was not worked, but received $13.34. When the figures were completed some one called for applause for Mr. and Mrs. Davison for their part, and requested a speech from the minister, but the only response received from Mr. Davison was that the people made things successful, and that he and Mrs. Davison appreciated their love and loyalty. The amount of $1201.62 from a fair was something of a surprise to Atlantic, and several chairmen reported to the president, Miss Sarah Butler, that the full proceeds were not all in. The ladies will meet Wednesday and give full reports of extra money received.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES — NO SLATE — NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS
THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

Anty Drudge Tells How to Make Housecleaning Easy.

Mrs. Hardwork—"I certainly do detest housecleaning time. Here I've been scrubbing and scrubbing until the skin is all off my knuckles, and I just can't get the floors and paint clean."

Anty Drudge—"All the elbow grease in the world won't clean things if you use the wrong soap. Get Fels-Naptha and the grease and dirt on floors and paint-work will disappear like magic."

Fels-Naptha is better than an extra pair of hands in housecleaning.

It makes dirt fly from walls, floors, woodwork, linoleum, windows, porcelain fittings and anything else that's cleanable, just as it does from clothes.

No scrub-brush or hot water is necessary, mind you.

Just Fels-Naptha, cool or lukewarm water, and a soft cloth.

Fels-Naptha dissolves the dirt in a jiffy so it can be rinsed away; it doesn't have to be scoured off.

As Fels-Naptha is also a germicide, it is a good sanitary precaution to do your housecleaning with it.

Did you ever try washing dishes with Fels-Naptha in lukewarm water?

It cuts the grease quick as a wink and makes the glasses shine.

Directions for all uses of Fels-Naptha are printed on the red and green wrapper.

DRUMMER BOY AT Y. M. C. A. ENTERTAINMENT

Fine Program Prepared by Bugler H. E. Howard

SUCCESSFUL FINANCIALLY

H. E. Howard, the Bugler and Drummer Boy of the Army of the Potomac, entertained a hall full of people at the Y. M. C. A. Friday evening. Mr. Howard proceeded to captivate his auditors from the first and those who were not present certainly missed a good thing. His songs and instrumental music received the heartiest of applause and his imitations on the drum were nothing short of wonderful.

For a man over sixty years of age to show such dexterity with the drum sticks, was surely unexpected, but when it came to playing the bugle, bass drum and snare drum, all at the same time the audience was veritably taken by storm. Comic songs and monologues added greatly to the amusement of the children and the old bugle calls found a responsive chord in the hearts of old and young alike.

Mr. Howard gave a brief account of his experiences in the war, told of the horrors of Andersonville, his escape from prison and hardships which followed. It was of interest to the boys to hear of his enlistment after running away from home, at the age of twelve. Mr. Howard is touring New England, giving these entertainments in all the Y. M. C. A. buildings of the six states. He has been received everywhere with greatest enthusiasm.

Emery L. Crane delivered a brilliant lecture last night at Colonial hall before a most appreciative audience. A musical program added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

GEORGE M. COHAN.

Better Than Ever

When you buy a Jewett you bring into your home a distinctly modern piano—one that is up to the standards of today.

The Jewett has been famous for over fifty years but its quality never remains at a stand still. Every year it takes a step forward. So remarkable has been its improvement that the Jewett has come to be known as the Progressive piano.

The JEWETT for 1912

Appeals to careful buyers more strongly than ever before. Every point of construction has been made a feature. There are definite improvements in details throughout. The tone shows rare refinement. The durability of the new pianos is guaranteed by still further care in making and greater expense for materials. The beauty of the new models is enhanced by finely figured veneers on cases of really artistic design No matter in how high esteem you have held the Jewett, we believe you will be delightfully surprised with the beauty and the exquisite musical quality of the latest Jewett models. If you are considering the purchase of a piano you owe it to yourself to inspect the new styles for 1912.

A JEWETT PIANO AFTER A TRIP AROUND THE WORLD.

Gentlemen:—You will remember that I purchased from your house in 1903, a Jewett Upright piano. It was shipped to China and returned to America in the fall of 1908, having travelled about 27,000 miles. Upon its arrival in America it was carefully examined, and found to be in such good condition that only slight repairs were necessary in the way of overhauling. It is an unusually well-built piano, and has come through an experience of more than a year in the tropics and the voyage around the world almost unscathed.

I prefer the Jewett to any piano of approximately equal cost.
(Copy of complete letter sent on request.)

New Models May Be Seen Here

We should like to show you the new styles of New England's favorite pianos. We should like an opportunity to explain to you their many superior features and points of merit. Notwithstanding the increased cost of construction the price will remain the same as last year. If you cannot call soon, send us the coupon and we will send at once an illustrated catalog.

We ship pianos anywhere, taking all risks if pianos are not satisfactory. Our guaranty gives you full protection in ordering from us no matter where you live. Liberal allowance on old pianos in exchange. Moderate monthly payments can be arranged if you wish.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

The ringing of the big bell aroused him. He opened his eyes and found that he was on the couch indoors. A glance at the clock told him that it was 6, and from the direction the sun's rays streamed into the room he knew that it was morning. At first he puzzled over something untoward he was sure had happened. Then, on the wall, he saw a Stetson hat hanging and beneath it a full cartridge belt and a long barrelled 38 Colt's revolver.

The slender girth of the belt told its feminine story, and he remembered the whaleboat of the day before and the gray eyes that flashed beneath the level brows. She, it must have been, who had just rung the bell. The cares of the plantation rushed upon him, and he sat up in bed, clutching at the wall for support as the mosquito screen lurched dizzily around him. He was still sitting there, holding on, with eyes closed, striving to master his giddiness, when he heard her voice.

"You'll lie right down again, sir," she said.

It was sharply imperative, a voice used to command. At the same time one hand pressed him back toward the pillow while the other caught him from behind and eased him down.

"You've been unconscious for twenty-four hours now," she went on, "and I have taken charge. When I say the word you'll get up, and not until then. Now, what medicine do you take—quinine? Here are ten grains. That's right. You'll make a good patient."

"My dear madam," he began.

"You mustn't speak," she interrupted, "that is, in protest. Otherwise you can talk."

"But the plantation—"

"A dead man is of no use on a plantation. Don't you want to know about me? My vanity is hurt. Here am I, just through my first shipwreck, and here are you, not the least bit curious, talking about your miserable plantation. Can't you see that I am just bursting to tell somebody, anybody, about my shipwreck?"

He smiled. It was the first time in weeks. And he smiled, not so much at what she said, as at the way she said it—the whimsical expression on her face, the laughter in her eyes, and the several tiny lines of humor that drew in at the corners. He was curiously wondering as to what her age was, as he said aloud:

"Yes, tell me, please."

"That I will not—not now," she retorted, with a toss of the head. "I'll find somebody to tell my story to who does not have to be asked. Also, I want information. I managed to find out what time to ring the bell to turn the hands to. And that is about all. I don't understand the ridiculous speech of your people. What time do they knock off?"

"At 11—go on again at 1."

"That will do, thank you. And now, where do you keep the key to the provisions? I want to feed my men."

"Your men!" he gasped. "On tinned goods! No, no. Let them go out and eat with my boys."

Her eyes flashed as on the day before, and he saw again the imperative expression on her face.

"That I won't. My men are men. I've been out to your miserable barracks and watched them eat. Faugh! Potatoes! Nothing but potatoes. No salt. Nothing. Only potatoes. I may have been mistaken, but I thought I understood them to say that that was all they ever got to eat. Two meals a day and every day in the week.

He nodded.

"Well, my men wouldn't stand for that a single day, much less a whole week. Where is the key?"

"Hanging on that clothes hook under the clock."

He gave in easily enough, but as she was reaching down the key she heard him say:

"Fancy niggers and tinned provisions."

This time she really was angry. The blood was in her cheeks as she turned on him.

"My men are not niggers. The sooner you understand that the better for our acquaintance. As for the tinned goods, I'll pay for all they eat. Please don't worry about that. Worry is not good for you in your condition. And I won't stay any longer than I have to—just long enough to get you on your feet and not go away with the feeling of having deserted a white man."

"You're American, aren't you?" he asked quietly.

The question disconcerted her for the moment.

"Yes," she vouchsafed, with a defiant look. "Why?"

"Nothing. I merely thought so."

"Anything further?"

He shook his head.

"Why?" he asked.

"Oh, nothing. I thought you might have something pleasant to say."

"My name is Sheldon, David Sheldon," he said, with direct relevance, holding out a thin hand.

Her hand started out impulsively, then checked.

"My name is Lackland, Joan Lackland." The hand went out. "And let us be friends."

"It could not be otherwise"— he began lamely.

"And I can feed my men all the tinned goods I want?" she rushed on.

"Till the cows come home," he answered, attempting her own lightness, then adding, "that is, to Berande. You see we don't have any cows at Berande."

She fixed him coldly with her eyes.

"Is that a joke?" she demanded.

"I really don't know—I—I thought it was, but then, you see, I'm sick."

"You're English, aren't you?" was her next query.

"Now that's too much, even for a sick man," he cried. "You know well enough that I am."

"Oh," she said absently. "Then you are?"

He frowned, tightened his lips, then burst into laughter, in which she joined.

"It's my own fault," he confessed. "I shouldn't have baited you. I'll be careful in the future."

"In the meantime go on laughing and I'll see about breakfast. Is there anything you would fancy?"

He shook his head.

"It will do you good to eat something. Your fever has burned out and you are merely weak. Wait a moment."

She hurried out of the room in the direction of the kitchen, tripped at the door in a pair of sandals several times too large for her feet and disappeared in rosy confusion.

"By Jove, these are my sandals," he thought to himself. "The girl hasn't a thing to wear except what she landed on the beach in and she certainly landed in sea boots."

Uncensored Report of Assessors Banquet at Houghs Neck

MANY PATHETIC SONGS

There were ten in the party. Mayor Shea, the three tax raisers, known as assessors, the four vote recorders, known as Registrars of Voters, who included the City Clerk, the City Engineer and of course the City Messenger, for no party of city dignitaries would be complete witrout Harry. They met at Norteman's at Houghs Neck to celebrate the fact that the tax rate had been made as low as possible this year and that all who desired had become enrolled as voters. Norteman set out one of his best. Anyone who has ever eaten one of Norteman's, knows what that means.

Henry French of the Registrars, was the toast master of the after dinner exercises. Presiding at affairs of this kind is Henry's long suit. An air of informality prevailed however, although it is said that there were some toasts. Reporters were told to stay outside, so that an authenticated account of what transpired can not be told.

It is said, however, that His Honor responded to the toast "You will miss me when I am gone" and that the ever smiling City Clerk responded to "Wonder how I will fit with Stone" and that Assessor Duggan's toast was "Who will wear my shoes next year." The Chairman of the assessing board told how he thougrt he might squeeze a little more out of tax payers next year by jacking up assessments.

In addition to the speechmaking there was some vocal selections. Harry Tirrell, whose deep bass voice is often heard about the Hall, rendered, with touching effect, a little song entitled "Mayors may come and Mayors may go, but Harry stays on forever." Registrar Geary sang a parody, original by the way, which brought in each member of the party and Tac Mitchell also an assessor, told of the many pleasant hours he had passed in room 11 before he was moved to a room up stairs. Zeke declared that the line separating Houghs Neck from the city started nowhere and ended in the same place.

It was 10.30 when the party came to an end by all rising and joining in singing "When shall we ten meet again" led by the inimitable French.

FIFTH ANNUAL SMOKER

iated "Well! I feel like Mr. Bergvall, —Immense!" (Mr. Bergvall pushes the scales close to 300 lbs).

Toastmaster Green then fittingly introduced Chief Draftsman E. C. Bennett, Hull Dept., as the first speaker. Mr. Bennett entertainingly retraced previous Fore River smokers noting the gradual improvement up to last evening's notable affair. He warmly congratulated the committees in charge on their efforts and the results obtained. In the course of his remarks he commended the men upon their loyalty to the company and wound up with some humorous stories that put the men in good trim for what followed. Mr. Bennett was warmly applauded.

Mr. Wesley Rhodes, Chief Draftsman of the Engine Dept., was next introduced. Mr. Rhodes made an eloquent speech, bringing the pipe experience of 20 previous smokers, both in this country and in Europe.

He called upon the men to show breadth and toleration, to do away with pettines and meanness, and to be loyal to their Chiefs. He emphasized the necessity of a larger spirit of fraternity and good fellowship in the drawing office.

Quarter century of experience in shipbuilding and interspersed several good stories and recitation. He was a whole program in himself, and made a decided hit as an orator, philosopher and humorist. He was applauded to the echo. Several encores were equally witty and entertaining.

Mr. L. Brath assistant chief draftsman, Hull Dept. was the next speaker and expressed his pleasure in this and past smokers. Mr. Brath commended the committee on their achievement. Toastmaster Green then introduced Mr. Larkin, ass't. Eng. Chief draftsman, who responded in well chosen words.

In response to the chairman, the following men contributed stories, toasts musical selections etc, Messrs. Debes, Wood, Senior, Schmeltzer, Barnes, Crosby, Lagergren, Wellings, Lord, Bayley and Floyd.

Mr. Barnes read an entertaining selection from Blatchford's "Tales for the Marines" which was well received. He wound up with some real live humor.

Mr. W. H. Wood contributed in a very large degree to the success of the evening. He was complimented by several of the speakers on the very artistic program he had designed. In addition he played violin selections, related stories in an acceptable manner, and finished by singing coon songs. Everybody was delighted with his versatility, and with the judgment pronounced by Mr. Rhodes, to the effect that he was a fine artist and violin player, but he certainly couldn't sing!

Mention must here be made of Mr. Gilbert Booth, who officiated at the piano. He is a capable performer, who doesn't mind hard work. He contributed accompaniments and selections.

Toastmaster Green then called upon Mr. Crosby of the Hull Dept. Mr. Crosby made a neat speech, touching upon affairs of interest to his fellow men and handed them a good story in conclusion. He was warmly received and his remarks endorsed.

Chairman Green contributed an impersonation of a short and stout German who fell into a barrel, while setting eggs for hatching. It was a hit in every way and was skillfully presented.

The meeting broke up shortly after 11 o'clock to a round of cheers and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." The whole affair was a great success, the committee are to be heartily congratulated on the happy outcome of their efforts, and the men on the whole-hearted good fellowship of their co-operation.

GAME POSTPONED.

Owing to the inclement weatehr, the football game, scheduled for today between Quincy High and Waltham High at Waltham has been called off. A conference of the managements of both teams was held this morning shortly before noon and the above agreement was reached.

Whether a game will be later arranged between the two teams is not definitely known. Today's game was to be the last one of the season for Quincy High.

The Ledger will contain a full account next week of the work of the team this season and a comparison will be made of certain players, who should be seriously considered for all interscholastic honors.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL.

A hearing was held before Judge Avery in the district court, this morning, in the case of Peter Cassette of Weymouth, who was charged with manslaughter in causing the death of his brother Nicholas at East Weymouth, Oct. 3. Assistant District Attorney Katzman represented the government and Frank Zottoli looked after the interest of the defendant, offered no testimony and after the hearing was remanded to jail without bail to await the action of the grand jury.

The principal witness was Francisco Cassette the father of the two men, who dragged Peter away from his brother and worked over him trying to bring him back to life. The two men got into a dispute and it was alleged that Peter struck his brother down and then forced his knees into his stomach.

HUMOROUS LECTURE

tion were considered in detail, and a local inference was adduced when Mr. Crane asserted that he had discovered a woman humorist in our midst who was constantly determining the condensity of midnight oil in an effort to produce a book that would merit the keen attention of those who indulge in the so-called humorous writings.

Even the humorous reports in the newspapers, the speaker asserted, had brought "Brother Bill" into prominence, fir his meritorious work had been recognized long before the widening of Hancock street. Mr. Crane then summed up in a manner characteristic of his humorous attitude and was accorded thunderous applause when he had concluded.

SOCIETY HAS ENJOYABLE MEETING

St. Chrysostom's branch of the Girls' Friendly Society met Friday evening for the second social evening of the season at the home of the Branch Secretary, Miss Nellie M. Weeks of Grand View avenue, it was an exceptionally enjoyable evening for the members and their friends who much appreciated Miss Weeks' hospitality. After a few laughable games, Miss Bertha Robbins of Somerville charmingly sang "The Rosary" by Nevin, Miss Ross accompanist, Miss Ellen McNiff of Somerville pleasingly recited "The passing of the white swan," Miss Robbins sang "Roses, roses everywhere" by H. Trotere, Miss Lillian Prohaska of Boston gave a humorist selection entitled "Her first call to the butchers," Mrs. Morgan J. Walker recited "Papa's letter."

All were heartily encored and responded with short and to the point encores. The program was arranged by Mrs. Walker who introduced those taking part.

Refreshments of cocoa and delicious home made cake were served by Miss Anderson, Miss Atkins, Miss Brown Miss Belyea, Miss Parker and Miss Wheelen. Miss Weeks made these announcements, Miss Whittier of Cambridge, vice president of Eastern Massachusetts Diocesan Council will give a talk at the next meeting on Friday evening in the parish room. A reunion of the members who were at the holiday house "Broadview" will be held at St. Paul's chapel, Boston, Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Tramping over the golf links, it is said, makes women flat footed. But our wife used to interpose a flat footed veto to our suggestions long before she learned to play golf.

BENEFIT DANCE SUCCESSFUL

Given in Aid of Fellow Members by St. Mary's C. T. A.

COMMITTEE IN CHARGE

A benefit dance, given in the interest of a fellow member, who recently underwent a serious operation, took place in St. Mary's Hall last evening; and was attended by nearly 200 couples. The affair took place under the auspices of St. Mary C. T. A. and M. R. society, and was pronounced a success in every way.

Joyce's orchestra furnished the music for the occasion, and 20 numbers composed the schedule of the dance order. The dancing concluded at midnight.

The following committee was in charge:

Daniel E. Duggan (chairman, Geo. Reinhalter, Thomas J. Shortle, Thomas F. O'Brien, Joseph McGilvray, William E. Duggan and James McLaughlin.

FINE BOXING PROGRAM ON MONDAY EVE.

The members of the Quincy Athletic Association will hold forth in St. Mary's hall next Monday evening, with their second amateur boxing tournament, and if the records of the various artists who are to participate, can be taken as any assurances, the coming series will be about as good as one would desire to witness. There are now over 600 members enrolled in the association, and the initial events were of such high calibre that this second endeavor is sure to bring out an exceptionally large number of the members.

Two special events, in connection with the 115, 125 and 135 pound classes have been carded, and these of themselves should prove an especial attraction to the members ofthe Quincy A. A. who like to view clever fistic artists in action.

In the first special, Harry Archung of Salem, will be pitted against Robert Gerstel, the well known local artists, a member of the Glover A. C. of Atlantic. Gerstel recently secured a win over the Salem lad, in connection with the Armory A. A amateur bouts. The contest was a warm one and as both men are versed in all the fine points of the game a vigorous struggle is sure to be in order.

Harry Carlson, the clever Brockton lad who created such a sensation at the opening bouts, will be seen in action with "York" O'Connell of Charlestown, and this bout alone, if the performances of the two men in the past can be taken as any criterion, will be indicative of everything that goes to please an ardent boxing fan.

The list of entries is as follows:

115 Pounds Class Open—Harry Marshall, Terminal A. A., Milton Flewelling, Revere St. A. A., Alex Aronson, Brooks A. A., Lindsay A. Belknap, Bellows Falls, Vt., John Gleason, Boston, Perry Chisholm, Brockton Y. M. C. A., Jack Noonan, Dorchester A. A., Eddie Graham, Quincy A. A., Henry Morley, Boston, William Duggan, East Boston, Arthur Taylor, Lowell, Mass., Michael Rose, Boston, Al Daley, Quincy A. A.

125 Pounds Class Open—Martin Zeolie, Clapp Memorial A. A., Frank Zeolie, Clapp Memorial A. A., John Cooper, Everett, Peter J. McKinnon, Boston, Nelson Jameson, Roxbury, John Maryin, Roxbury, Walter H. Ochs, Dorchester A. A., Eddie Murphy Linden A. C., Harry McGuire, Riverside A. C.

135 Pounds Class Open—Harold Stewart, Byers Gym., Billy Quinn, South Boston, Joseph Maggio, Terminal A. A., John Camp, Clark A. C., Joseph Hendricks, Hamony club, McCarthy, Riverside A. C., Robert Lloyd, Roxbury, Joe White, Marion A. C., C. H. Samuelson, Hillside A. C.

Special 135 Pounds Class—Harry Archung, Salem, Mass., Robert Gerstel, Glover A. C.

Special 115 Pounds Class—Harry Carlson, Brockton Y. M. C. A., R. J. "Yorke" O'Connell, Charlestown.

Association football is being played by the schools to a greater degree than ever before. On Wednesday, Washington Street school beat out the Adams by 1 goal to 0. It is a good game to play boys, but learn to play it clean.

Don't Try To Deceive Yourself

$20 spent in Boston won't buy you a better suit or overcoat than $15 spent in this store.

Don't try to deceive yourself into thinking that you are getting a full $20 worth because your coat has a pretty silk label under the collar. That tag costs $5 and is your tribute toward the Boston store's big expenses.

High rents and page advertisements do not make the clothes, but they do add to the price you are asked to pay. For the man who is looking for something around $15—you'll find it here, and it will be a full $20 value. Why not drop in and see if it isn't so?

BIG LOSS AT AERO MEET

Managers Issue Statement Showing Loss of $11,222.58

ADMISSIONS DROPPED 40,000

Judging from the financial report just given out by the managers of the last Harvard-Boston Aero meet at Atlantic, aviation is not a paying sport. The loss to the managers of the meet this year was $11,222.58.

Had it not been for arrangements made on Labor Day at Nashua, Worcester and Providence, where some of the flyers were seen the loss would have been twice as much.

The gate receipts at Atlantic during the entire meet amounted to $39,220.85. The receipts from Nashua, Worcester and Providence on Labor Day were $11,428, and the receipts from concessions, advertising, etc., was $4,716.25, making the total receipts for the meet $55,365.10. The total expenses were $66,587.68.

There was a great falling off in the attendance at the meet this year at Atlantic as compared with last year's. In 1910 there were 67,241 admissions and in 1911 there were 26,808, a difference of 40,433 in paid attendance.

The gross receipts in 1910 were $128,267.17, as against $55,366.10 this year, but the total operating expenses in 1910 were $151,414.43 as against $66,587.68 this year.

Adams D. Claflin, manager of the meet, says:

"If the receipts in Boston had been only one-half of those of last year, the meet would have been a financial success. The Boston patronage this year was discouraging and had it not been for our arrangements in Nashua, Worcester and Providence the financial showing would have been deplorable.

"Of course, the weather handicapped us somewhat, but still we should have been able to make a better showing than is indicated by the figures in view of all the publicity given to the meet and the prestige of our meet of the last year.

"We at least had the satisfaction of having had two large meets without having the shadow of a bad accident cast over our efforts."

WEST QUINCY MAN DIED ON SUNDAY

James M. Conway, one of the well known and popular young men of West Quincy passed away Sunday after an illness extending over several months. He was a stone cutter by trade but had not followed that occupation for some time. He was at one time a special policeman having been appointed as such in 1905. He was in his 48th year.

"I dreamed last night," said Mr. Filkins, "that I heard opportunity knocking at my door."

"And of course, replied his wife, "you slept right on, as usual."—Chicago Record-Herald.

IS LOGICAL CANDIDATE

Ralph W. Hobbs Out For President of Council

HAS THE EXPERIENCE

Ex-Councilman Ralph W. Hoobs who received such a flattering vote for the nomination of Councilman-at-large at the caucuses last week, is the logical candidate for President of the new Council. He received the highest vote of any of the candidates at the office and his election is practically assured. After the caucuses Mr. Hobbs when seen, said that he would be a candidate for the office of President of the Council. It will be no new duty for him for he has already served three years in that position.

RALPH W. HOBBS

His first term as Councilman from Ward Six was in the Council of 1906. He was reelected in 1907, '08, '09, and '10. He was elected as president of the Council in 1908 and served as president for three years. This year he is running at large on the Republican ticket, which as noted above, practically insures his election.

Although there are several councilmen nominated who have served several years of service in that body, Mr. Hobbs is the only one who has ever been elevated to the office of President. As far as known there is no other candidate seeking the office.

ELECTRIC EXPRESS IS THRIVING

As an indication of how the business of the Electric express has grown since it was started a few weeks ago, it has been found necessary to put on three delivery teams in Quincy. Saturday an additional team was put on at the Boston end, so that the company now has five teams in Boston, picking up, and three in Quincy making deliveries.

MR. STONE TAKES OUT PAPERS.

Nomination papers were taken out Saturday nominating Eugene R. Stone as Independent Citizens' candidate for Mayor. They are being circulated in all wards of the city. In order to have his name on the official ballot under that designation 98 signatures are necessary.

There was once a man from Toledo, Ohio, who, while having " a good time" in the Tenderloin district, was, according to Simeon Ford, "held up" by an individual who suddenly darted out from a dark corner and presented a pistol at the head of the Westerner.

"Give me your money, or I'll blow out your brains!" observed the footpad.

Without flinching, the Toledo man calmly surveyed the highwayman. "Blow away," said be. "I'd rather be without brains in New York than without money."—Lippincott's.

GALAHAD DEBATES ON HISTORY

That history be eliminated from the studies in the public schools was discussed by the Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church, Sunday. Mr. A. McLeod vigorously maintained the affirmative, while Roy Prout, B. C. Miller, J. Spargo took the negative. Every member took a lively part in the general discussion.

Mr. McLeod said: It was a waste of energy to discuss past events in history where two opposing armies are considered nothing more than so many pounds of human flesh. It often happened that victory in such cases was not on the side of the right and that the cause for righteousness and justice is crushed by might. We are too often instilling into the minds of the young, tradition that we cannot vouch for as authentic. That bloodshed depicted in history has and always will create race prejudice. It takes a life time to live down the success and brutal force transmitted to the child in school from the teaching of history.

The negative said: History gave a country its orgin and the ideals of great men of the past. The creation of a flag, a national emblem that floats over any country is developed from history. History brings forth leaders of such fine character which is an incentive for the pupil. It is something to look back upon and an inspiring study to the scholar.

SHIPMENTS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Of the total amount shipped West Quincy forwarded 16,990,125 pounds and Quincy Adams 6,254,008 pounds.

PRESIDENT TAFT INDISPOSED

Necessary To Cancel His Richmond Engagement

CONFINED TO WHITE HOUSE

Washington, Nov. 20.—President Taft is suffering from a severe cold, which has confined him to the White House. His condition, although not at all alarming, is such that his physicians have ordered him to take care of himself.

As a result the president has cancelled his engagement for Richmond today, where he was to have addressed the National Good Roads congress.

The president contracted a bad cold shortly after his return from his transcontineatal trip. Against the advice of his physician, Major Dulaney, he filled an engagement at Frederick, Md., last week, where he addressed a big crowd. At that time he apologized for his hoarseness, which was not lessened by his efforts.

In view of his condition Dulaney imperatively ordered last night that Mr. Taft must remain indoors for the time being. The president has not left the White House since Friday, but he has attended to pressing business. Obeying the physician's commands, Mr. Taft accordingly telegraphed his regrets to the Richmond congress.

There were rumors that Mr. Taft was threatened with pneumonia, but these were emphatically denied at the White House.

MR. ELCOCK IS REPORTED SERIOUSLY ILL

Thomas M. Elcock of Marsh street is seriously ill at his home and but little hopes are entertained for his recovery. He was overcome by the heat last summer and his health has been failing ever since. On account of the seriousness of his illness, his daughter, a school teacher in the west was summoned home and arrived Saturday. Mr. Elcock is a brother of James H. Elcock the Overseer of the Poor.

HUSTLERS' GET PRIZES.

A large crowd gathered on Saturday night at the Quincy Department store to see the prizes awarded to the "hustlers" who were winners in the recent exciting S. and H. voting contest.

Mr. Flood of the Stamp Co., awarded the watches and explained his company's plans. He desired to emphasize the fact that the stamps voted in the contest were still good for premiums.

STEAM COLLIER SAILS.

The steam collier Newton which was recently launched at the Fore River yard, sailed today on her maiden trip to Newport News, for a load of coal for her owners, The New England Coal and Coak Co. She is the largest of the fleet of sixteen steam colliers owned by this company and is commanded by Capt. Abbott formerly of the Everett.

INTERESTING LECTURE AT MENS' CLUB

An interesting address will be delivered this evening before the Men's Club of St. Chrysostom's church. Mr. F. W. Dethridge will be the speaker and will take for his subject "Capital Punishment." For six years Mr. Dethridge was electrical executioner at the Massachusetts State's Prison at Charlestown. He has thought very deeply upon the subject of capital punishment, and has arrived at strong convictions. These convictions he will bring out at the meeting. It is a subject that should call forth a good lively discussion, as there are doubtless things to be said on both sides.

HOUSES WITH LOW RENTALS IN DEMAND

Seldom has there been more building going on in all parts of the city than at the present time. New dwellings are going up rapidly, especially in the Atlantic and Norfolk Downs section, as well as in that section in the vicinity of Park lane, Butler road and Putnam street. Yet for all this, there is a great demand for houses with reasonable rentals. It is quite a hardship for many men with large families to pay from $30 to $40 a month for a house, yet if good houses could be obtained for a rental in the vicinity of $20 and $25 they would let as rapidly as they could be put up and doubtless Quincy would grow much faster in population than at present. All over the city there is a demand for houses with reasonable rentals but they are as hard to find as gold dollars.

Some enterprising man with money will some day realize this, and build a number of these houses and he will be assured that they will be taken as fast as built.

CARRIAGE AND AUTO IN MIXUP

Mrs. Williams Thrown When Horse Is Frightened

REP. THOMAS IN AUTO

Representative Thomas was an occupant of an automobile that figured in an accident on Sunday. Four persons were thrown out of a carriage which was overturned after being in collision with an automobile on Quincy avenue Bridge Braintree, in a runaway accident. Mrs. William R. Williams of 120 Liberty street, Quincy, who was in the carriage, was injured.

The horse was driven by Mr. Williams and was attached to a two-seated democrat wagon in which besides Mr. and Mrs. Williams were their child and another woman who did not give her name. The wagon, an electric car and an automobile came on the bridge all at the same time.

The horse became frightened at the sudden crowding of the roadway and started to plunge and rear. He caused the wagon to strike the automobile, bending one of the mudguards and turning the carriage over. The occupants were thrown out, but the horse was grabbed before he had a chance to drag the overturned carriage.

Mrs. Williams sustained a sprained ankle and was taken to her home in Quincy. Tre others suffered only a shaking up.

PLANS FOR TWO MONSTER BATTLESHIPS

A dispatch from Washington says:—Rough plans for two huge battleships will be laid before Congress when it convenes. The projected ships are to be of 30,000 tons displacement; armed with 10 14-inch rifles, each nearly 70 feet long, with broad belts of the highest type of hardened armor and with steaming capacity enough to carry them back and forth across the Atlantic. It is in this point of coal capacity that the American battleship will excell those of other nations.

Admiral Dewey, head of the naval general board, has no use for the so-called cruiser-battleship, evolved by some of the European continental powers, and the general board does not regard them as meeting the needs of the American navy, which may be obliged to operate several thousand miles away from home basis.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Surgeon's Congress at Philadelphia should give due consideartion to the amputation of the patient's pocket book.

Mr. Taft went to Kentucky to see a statue unveiled, bnt as Congress is now coming on, it will be useless for anyone to try to get him for a fireman's ball.

It is said Thanksgiving turkeys will be lower this year. Of course the trusts can't be expected to play the game of modern business without making an error now and then.

The Lorimer investigation causes great indignation among the politicians that any legislator should be mean enough to hurt business by selling his vote at cut prices.

It is very strange that courts will continue to butt in on matters of private business when they were put into office merely to keep the common people off the cross-walks.

The commercial travelers are saying things again against tipping, but what will they do when hungry, with a train to catch, and with a thundercloud growing on the face of the waiter?

House-keepers who want newspapers to lay under the carpets will find the December issues, containing another 15,000 word message from Mr. Taft, will cover a lot of floor space.

After a long search through their pockets to see if they could find any part of the tariff taxes there, the workers of Massachusetts's industrial cities declined to be scared by the tariff reduction bogey.

It is claimed that the tobacco reorganization is a farce. As they failed to present us with a share of the stock of any of the four new companies, we feel convinced that this is the truth.

MR. HOBB'S CANDIDACY.

Assuming that his election is certain and little short of a cyclone could keep it from being so, Mr. Ralph W. Hobbs announces himself as a candidate for the office of President of Council. Mr. Hobbs' candidacy has the backing of a well seasoned career in the duties of that important office, for he was the successful executive of the august body when he was a former member. His career is too well known to go into detail. Having a charming personality, being a hard worker and above all a "good mixer" it would seem, with his previous experience, that he at once becomes the logical candidate for the office.

BOY FROM THE CABIN HOME.

There was dedicated Nov. 9 at Hodgenville, Ky., the great granite memorial hall in which is enclosed the little log cabin in which Abraham Lincoln was born. Veterans of both Union and Confederate armies joined in this tribute.

And now this primitive home, scarcely more than a defence against rain and frost, the only floor of which was the chill earth, which could hardly have cost over $25 at day labor, is enshrined in a magnificent building erected at an expense of $112,000.

The lowly origin and subsequent achievement of Abraham Lincoln and many other Americans, ought to bring a message of hope to many young fellows of today who are discouraged because their start in life is from unpropitious surroundings.

Really the squalid cabin that sheltered young Abe Lincoln had much to make his mind and heart grow, with its Bible, Pilgrim's Progress, Aesop's Fables and the Life of Washington. It is common to find a luxurious home today stuffed with oriental rugs and silken draperies, with nothing in the way of books but show volumes on the parlor table, in which the flotsam and jetsam of literature is confined in gilt edges and morocco bindings that are never opened. The modern business man often pays down money in order to buy the good taste which he lacks, and his home may be a harmonious symphony of color values. But if it contain none of the work of the wise men of the world, its wisdom is only of dollars, and dollars are the most transient thing on earth.

What is called the slum home of today has more of physical comfort than Abe Lincoln had, save as the herding of people in great cities deprives the growing boy of fresh air.

To those of us who live amid scenes of physical well being, there ought to be a glow of pleasure in helping up the boy of the slums who shows a desire to rise. Don't elbow the news boy out of your way so carelessly, Mr. Business Man! His ragged clothes and the slovenly scenes of his home may conceal a heart that is full of the desire to climb. Look for the gleam in his eye rather than at the dirt on his face.

WHERE SCIENCE HAS FAILED.

The story of the frightful tornado that killed eight people, injured many more, and tore up $1,000,000 in property like waste paper, in Rock county, Wisconsin alone, is a reminder of the complete failure of modern science in dealing with dangerous winds.

Even the earthquake, long supposed to be a Titan whose contumacy and power was beyond human control, seems to be getting ready to obey its human master. A San Francisco man told us the other day that it has been clearly demonstrated that the buildings whose foundations were anchored after a certain fashion withstood the strain of that city's disaster, and there is confidence out there that future shocks can thus be controlled.

The hurricane at sea can usually be avoided by the wary seaman, who is taught in every book on navigation that in the danger zone when a wind blows from directly behind his back and increases in strength without veering, it is mighty good time to dodge out one side, and he usually has time enough to avoid the worst of the blow.

The damage and loss of life wrought by tornadoes is a heavy toll in our country, with dozens of them every year having fatal results, and sometimes running up to the proportions of a tragedy like that at Gainesville, Ga., in 1903, where 100 were killed and 200 seriously injured.

Some years ago the attention of scientists was attracted by a consular report describing how the wine growers of France and Italy, where hurricanes are numerous, protect their lives and growing crops by firing explosives into the advancing storm, which has a tendency to break up the rotation of the funnel shaped terror.

Probably the tornadoes so familiar in our Southern and Western states come too quickly for any such defence. A Kansas weather bureau observer reports seeing the very start of a hurricane as he was unharnessing his horse in his yard. At first it was a little dust whirlwind just powerful enough to blow straw about his yard, but in five moments it had acquired a power that wrecked some of his neighbors' farm buildings.

About the most practical suggestion we ever heard of is to run for the south west corner of the cellar, the direction from which wind storms usually come, and hence is the least likely to suffer from falling timbers.

THE BASKET BALL SEASON.

The closing of the foot ball season used to bring a period of dull lethargy and somnolent inertia to the sportively inclined. But the creation some years ago of the game of basket ball saved our young athletes from the necessity of becoming absorbed during the winter time with such inglorious pursuits as work and study.

The story of the development of basket ball is a curious illustration of the eccentricities of the American temperament. The game was devised by the Young Men's Christian Association people, to put a little more life into their gymnasium doings.

They were prepared to offer their boys a mild tempered ginger wafer as a reward for the routine of gym work and study. But they never dreamed that they were handing out to them a whole jar of the most peppery and undiluted kind of ginger. For basket ball offers even more chances of rough play than foot ball.

As the years have gone on, the game has become a money maker, and the business can be played without capital. The dead broke sport, who could not get trusted for a yeast cake, can hire his hall, and pay the bill next morning out of his receipts at the door.

The game is concentrated in such space that the players are very closely bunched, and play has to be almost instantaneous. This provides a spectacular rapidity of action that appeals to the American temperament.

While the greater part of the basket ball players are fine fellows who play the game according to amateur and sportsmanlike standards, there is a constant temptation to dirty work, to play the game solely to win and particularly for the promoters of professional games to engage players who can and are determined to win at all costs.

In spite of abuses, however, the game has made gymnasium work in the winter infinitely more attractive. It takes a Spartan love of athletic development to pull the lifeless and soundless chest weight. But when you can match your wit, alertness, and strength, against a human antagonist, and at the same time gain as strong a back, as strong arms, strong legs, and strong wind, as if you had taken a West Point course at setting up drill, the thing appeals profoundly to our young men.

ACCIDENTAL DISCHARGE OF GUN INJURES MAN

While duck shooting on the old Quincy reservoir in Braintree, Saturday afternoon, Ambrose Levangie, aged 17 years, of Franklin street was dangerously wounded by the firing of a shot gun. Levangie and Joseph McKeough had been duck shooting on the reservoir and had just landed from their boat when the accident occured.

Levangie reached into the boat and took hold of the gun by the muzzle and pulled it toward him. Something struck the trigger and the charge went into Levangie's right arm, shoulder and armpit. McKeough placed Levangie in the boat and rowed him across the reservoir to the West street side and took him to the nearest house on West street. Dr. Henry L. Dearing was telephoned for and extracted the shot from young Levangie's body. He was later taken to his home.

The young fellow was unable to rally from the shock and died on Sunday afternoon at his parent's home.

One Cell Animals.

Only one cell animals which have no differentiation are immortal and never grow old. Physical immortality, deathless youth, is possible, but you must be an infusorian or a yeast plant to attain it, and one wouldn't even be a clam or a jellyfish for the price. The process has no limits any more than it has beginnings. Life is just that, one third dying that two thirds may live, whether it be the single cell, or the body.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Hampton's.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!

The accompanying cut is that of ex-Councilman William E. Badger, one of the prominent residents and business men of West Quincy. He is a son of Louis Badger who in 1855 founded the present business of Badger Bros. Mr. Badger was born in Quincy Nov. 20, 1855 and todoy is therefore his natal day. He received his early education in the public schools of Quincy. Leaving school at the age of 16 years, he learned the machinist and engineer's trade and for fifteen years had charge of that branch of the firm's business, being an acknowledged expert in that line. He is also well versed in the granite line, although he never learned the trade of a granite cutter. In 1882 he was made a member of the firm and is so at the present time. In politics he is a Republican and served in the City Council as Councilman at Large during the years 1898, 1899 and 1900. He also served for several years on the local Board of Health.

He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and a man who is universally liked by all.

A strapping German with big beads of perspiration streaming down his face was darting in and out the aisles of a Philadelphia department store.

His excited actions attracted the attention of all the salespersons, and they hardly knew what to make of it, says Lippincott's. A hustling young man of the clothing department walked up to him and asked, "Are you looking for something in men's clothing?"

"No," he roared; "not in men's clothing; in vimen's clothing. I can't find my wife!"—New York Herald.

PRINCETON IS CHAMPION

Her Football Players Have Downed Dartmouth, Harvard and Yale

New Haven, Nov. 20.—Princeton swung itself into the American intercollegiate football championship by defeating Yale, 6 to 3, finishing the greatest of gridiron seasons for the wearers of the Orange and Black, who have in turn won from Dartmouth, Harvard and Yale.

As in all the other Princeton victories against her big university rivals her victory was due to seizing and turning to her own advantage the mistakes of her opponents. The solitary touchdown scored was a sixty-yard run by Sam White, who snatched the ball and shot into an open field for the score.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 20.—Playing on Soldiers field, which never has been so soft and soggy, Dartmouth and Harvard slipped and scudded in a fight over an elusive football, which had the historic slippery, slimy octopus beaten forty different kinds of ways. For a full hour the water-soaked elevens shoved each other about, neither being able to rush the ball across he other's goal line, but Harvard secured a touchdown on a blocked Dartmouth kick, and the team from Hanover scored on a field goal.

This 5 to 5 score measures well the respective strength of the two teams.

YOUNG "KING" GETS SOUND SPANKING

Administered by Princess' Dad After Their Elopement

Chicago, Nov. 20.—One spanking, soundly administered, interrupted the romance of Walter Graham, "King of the Kedzie Avenue Band," and his "fairy princess," Hazel Davidson, the 15-year-old daughter of Henry Davidson.

Davidson was the destroyer of their youthful dreams. The young couple fled to Hammond, Ind., to wed, and Davidson overtook them in the railway station there. He promptly took Graham across his knee and gave him one of the soundest thrashings that probably ever fell to his unhappy lot. The "King" screamed and howled, but the spanking kept on until Davidson was tired, then he dropped Graham on the floor of the station.

Then the angry father seized the luckless "king" and half carried, half dragged him to the door. There he poised one foot gracefully for a second and kicked the youth into the street.

Then the father placed the weeping "princess" in an automobile and took her home, where it is rumored there was another spanking bee.

PERHAPS SET BY BURGLARS

Attempt Was Made to Rob Safe In a $10,000 Bakery Fire

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 20.—Burglars were the cause of the $10,000 fire in the bakery of Oscar Peterson early Sunday morning, in which two firemen were injured, one seriously, in the opinion of the Cambridge police and firemen.

An investigation revealed in the office on the second floor of the building that the dials on the safe had been wrenched off by a hammer, and the office had been ransacked. A key was also found that was used to enter one of the doors of the building.

As a result of the investigation and discoveries, Chief Bunker of the Cambridge fire department notified the fire marshal's office this morning and asked for an investigation.

THEFT OF WOMAN'S SOUL

Preacher Says It Does Not Amount to Much In Boston

Boston, Nov. 20.—"I'd rather see my daughter burned to death," said Rev. Herbert S. Johnson in a sermon at the Warren Avenue Baptist church last evening, "than to know that she had been in some of the hotels licensed by the excise commission. The theft of a woman's soul in Boston apparently doesn't amount to as much as the theft of a ham.

"As we lose girls from our own congregation through these so-called second-class hotels that the commission licenses, don't you think it is time we should visit the governor and see what can be done about it?"

Gift of $100,000 to College

Elkins, Va., Nov. 20.—The trustees of Davis and Elkins college announce a gift of $100,000 by ex-United States Senator Henry G. Davis, one of the founders, as a permanent endowment fund.

Insane Man Captured

Newburyport, Mass., Nov. 20.—Frank Leighton of this city, who escaped from the Danvers insane asylum last week, was arrested here last night. He will be sent back to the asylum.

Sequel to Domestic Trouble

West Kennebunk, Me., Nov. 20.—Despondency from family troubles, it is believed, caused Greenleaf Maddox, aged 38, to commit suicide by shooting.

The church is primarily a religious institution. Its success is not measured by its wealth or social position, but by its actual contribution to the religious life of the community, and that contribution depends upon the spiritual earnestness and religious zeal of its members.

The Wollaston Y. P. R. U. will attend the Boston Federation meeting at Hyde Park Sunday afternoon and evening, Nov. 26. The speaker for the evening is Rev. Joseph Henry Crooker, D. D., of Roslindale.

"Worldliness does not consist in the things we seek and use, but in the spirit in which we use them and the purpose to which we put them."

Rev. Carl G. Horst brought to his congregation, Sunday morning, a message of practical worth, taking as his text "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and mind and thy neighbor as thyself." Religion is a trinity; heart, head and hand, in which emotion, intellect and deed each play an important part. Without reason sitting aloft to temper and govern the emotions, religion is apt to become blind supersition or sickly sentimentalism.

Religion must be calm, a deep emotion kindling the heart and brain and nerving the hand to do the bidding of each in turn. God is not always in the wind nor in the fire nor in the earthquake—but in the still, small voice; and under a deep serenity of aspect often lies profound religious conviction.

Today, with its restless haste and many names in religion, has great need of a sustained and rational thought about the real issues of life. Our religion must be a heart emotion, controlled and uplifted by an active and consecrated mind and a ministering hand ever ready to reach out to the needy brother.

CRAZY KING LOUIS

His Part in the Pitiful Tragedy at Lake Stranberg.

SLEW HIS FRIEND AND DIED.

The Mad Bavarian Monarch Beat Faithful Dr. von Gudden to Death Before Heart Disease Stopped His Own Dash For Liberty.

For months preceding the tragedy on June 13, 1886, that ended his life King Louis II. of Bavaria had revealed many unmistakable signs of mental derangement. He heard mysterious voices in the air around him and believed that he was constantly pursued by dangerous enemies. He withdrew entirely from the world, his cabinet ministers were unable to obtain access to him, and his domestic servants were forbidden to look at his face, being compelled to approach him with averted eyes. The old valet Meier was obliged to don a mask to cover his features whenever he went near the king, and many other strange things happened at the magnificent palace which Louis had built for himself with reckless extravagance.

Wearing his crown and purple royal mantle, with the scepter of sovereignty in his hand, King Louis would wander through the rooms of his castles at night, conversing with imaginary guests, for the most part with the ghosts of King Louis XIV. of France and Queen Marie Antoinette. Frequently places were laid at his table for their disembodied spirits.

The king's debts brought matters to a crisis and necessitated the intervention of the Bavarian government. Most of the royal liabilities had been contracted through the construction and decoration of the famous three castles, and several creditors threatened to initiate proceedings to recover their money. King Louis requested the government to introduce a bill in the Bavarian legislature granting his property immunity from seizure for debts, and when his ministers refused this unreasonable demand he tried to borrow money from all sorts and conditions of people.

In April, 1886, the Bavarian chamber refused to sanction the payment of the king's debts from the public treasury, and a few days later the cabinet addressed a respectful petition to Louis to curtail his expenditures. King Louis responded by dismissing the whole cabinet and nominating a new ministry, at the head of which he placed his own barber.

This irresponsible act brought matters to a head. A commission of medical experts, under the presidency of Dr. von Gudden, pronounced the king to be incurably insane and incapable of ruling, and a deputation under Baron von Crailsheim was dispatched from Munich to the castle where Louis was in residence to inform his majesty of his dethronement. The king had Baron von Crailsheim and all the members of the deputation arrested.

Then Dr. von Gudden proceeded to Neuschwanstein castle, where to all outward appearances he succeeded in persuading the king to submit to his dethronement and to retire to Berg castle, near the shores of Lake Stanberg, where the final tragedy was enacted. The king was escorted to Berg castle by Dr. von Gudden, another medical man, Dr. Mueller, and several trained attendants, and he seemed to acquiesce in the arrangement that he should remain there for a year under close supervision.

Dr. von Gudden, misled by appearances, telegraphed to Munich that his royal patient was "as obedient as a child," and at dinner that evening he promised to take the king for a walk in the park. His assistant, Dr. Mueller, warned him that it would be dangerous to go alone with the king and urged him to allow an attendant to accompany them, or at least to follow them at a discreet distance, but Dr. von Gudden disregarded the younger man's advice and paid the penalty with his life. It was a Sunday evening, and a general feeling of uneasiness prevailed among those who had remained at the castle when the king and Dr. von Gudden failed to reappear after an hour had elapsed. Search parties were organized, and during the night one of the royal footmen found the king's hat, coat and overcoat close to the bank of the lake and Dr. von Gudden's umbrella close by on the ground. The bodies of the king and his physician were found not far from the shore of the lake, in shallow water, both heads projecting above the surface. Dr. von Gudden's face and head bore the marks of heavy blows which the king, a man of immensely powerful build, had showered upon him.

The position of the bodies and the articles of clothing found near them made it possible to surmise, with probable accuracy, the details of the tragedy. It is likely that the king intended to escape from his prison—for as such he regarded the castle in which he was kept as a madman—and that he divested himself of overcoat and coat to swim across the lake. Dr. von Gudden, it appears, closed with him at the water's edge and tried to prevent his flight, but the king killed him and died from heart disease at the moment when he was on the point of beginning his swim for liberty. The postmortem examination revealed that neither had died from drowning, but the king from heart failure and Dr. von Gudden from the injuries inflicted on him in the struggle.—Berlin Cor. St. James' Gazette.

NEW YORK WINTER FASHIONS.

Narrow Skirts—Striking Color Contrasts—Elaborate Trimmings—Fur Galore.

It needs only a touch of sharp weather to bring out all the luxury of velvet and fur in every variety of make from dainty small cravats and reveres, to all enveloping garments cosy and warm but supple as satin and clinging in effect.

COMBINATIONS ENDLESS.

Combinations of odd color, and differing materials are so much the rule that a garment self trimmed is noticeable. A dash of contrast cleverly used, lends distinction to many a suit or coat that would otherwise be flat and lacking in style. Linings are more apt to differ than to match the outer material and endless plays are made on the idea of the coat that may be worn with either side out.

EVENING COATS.

A magnificent long wrap, fit for an Empress, was shown recently at C. C. Shayne's. The pure white fur was used for the garment, and worked up into a bordered effect at the foot, the lines emphasized here by a graceful draped fringe made of the ermine tails. The lining of soft heavy white satin, trimmed with narrow pleated quillings and the fastening at the left side made with an elaborate ornament of white passementerie.

Another long coat shown was of smoke colored embossed velvet lined with moleskin, worked up so that it gave a blocked effect. The collar and cuffs were of costly fox in matching tone, the garment being reversible. So elegant was the effect with either the mole or velvet outside that it was difficult to decide which one preferred.

FOR DAY WEAR.

For more general wear there were coats of caracul, broadtail or dyed muskrat that is so exactly like seal in texture and color that only an expert can tell the difference. This is sold under various names, and in many varying qualities but the high class furriers now prefer to use the exact names of the pelts they handle. Even skunk has dropped its masquerade as "Alaska Sable" and under its own name holds a high place in fashionable favor.

A NOVEL COMBINATION.

A novel combination new this season is fitch trimmed with skunk, made up most attractively in sets of stoles and muffs that are set off with soft floppy bows of black messaline satin. Broadtail and ermine make a most distinguished contrast. The long scarf stole of the black fur with ends of ermine and trimmings of narrow ball fringe. The muff of the same furs has Vandyke points that are very new and smart. Muffs are all very large, very flat and flexible that they can be crumpled up in any direction. Stiffness of any sort is a thing of the past in making up furs, and weight has disappeared with the stiffning. Many of the new muffs have pockets on the outside.

INEXPENSIVE PRICES.

Sets for young girls and for wear with tailored suits are of Civet cat, Lynx, Raccoon, Muskrat and American Fox. These all wear well and lend a very fashionable air to the plainest get up, or go well with more elaborate clothes.

CORONATION BAGS.

The huge bags of elegant materials that were carried by peeresses at King George's coronation to hold all the various fixings that might be needed during the long hours in Westminster Abbey, have set the style for elaborate bags this year. All sorts of brocades and upholstery materials, embellished with beads, gold or silver galoons and embroideries are used for these huge pockets, and one sees them quite as much on the street as at the theatre where they seem more in keeping with the surroundings. Bags to match the hat, muff or stole are what all the girls desire and these made up with velvet and fur are most coveted bits of elegance. Leather bags are said to be growing smaller, but one sees huge flat ones still on every side in the shops and with the shoppers.

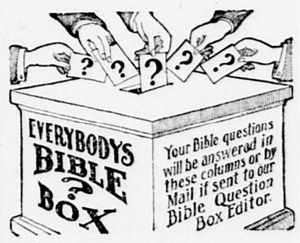

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

VELVET AND RATINE.

Velvet and ratine are two favorite materials for winter suits. Both were on the carpet last year but are increasingly worn at present. Combinations of velvet with woolen materials are most modish, and the cloth dress with a velvet coat is reckoned very smart, especially if the coat is one of the models cut off at the waist line in front and prolonged in long coat tails at the back. The soft woolen surface of the ratine makes very stylish trimmings for suits and coats of serge, velvet, corduroy or other materials. White is the favorite tone for these, but one sees any amount of yellow, tans, soft warm reds, greens and the various purple tones used in this way.

Q.—Is the present condition of discontent and unrest outlined in the Scriptures; and if so what will be the ultimate outcome?

Answer.—The Bible clearly outlines the conditions that would be developed in the closing days of this age, the Christian Era. Nearly all of the Sacred Writers foretold a severe time of trouble for the last days, when there would be a condition of unrest such as the world had never known in all of its previous experiences. The nations would be gathered together for the battle of the great day of God Almighty; and because of this affiliation of the governments and the kingdoms of the earth, the struggle would be world-wide. The "unrest" was graphically portrayed by the Lord Jesus in the following words: "Upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves (the restless, discontented) roaring: men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking forward to the things coming upon the earth (society)." The Apostle Peter also referred to the coming trouble, "The elements (labor, capitalistic, socialistic, etc.) shall melt with fervent heat." (The friction existing between these elements is daily increasing and will finally become so intense as to produce an open flame or "heat" which will destroy them.) The outcome will be a season of lawlessness or anarchy which will result in the absolute destruction of all of the existing institutions and governments which are largely based upon selfish principles. When these have been swept aside, then a perfect, Universal Government will be established in the earth based upon the principles of the Golden Rule—justice and love. This Government will be recognized as "The Kingdom of Heaven," and it will be "The desire of all nations."—Haggai ii, 7.

Hired Crowns.

To economical minds there must be a certain waste implied in the making of a new crown for every queen. Yet this has been the rule. Queen Alexandra and Queen Victoria both had crowns made for them, and it was Queen Adelaide who was the first to rebel against a hired crown. "I will not wear a hired crown," she said to the minister who was discussing matter with her. "Do you think right I should?" "Madam, the king (George IV.) wore one." will not. I do not like it. jewels enough to make one self." "In that case," interking, "they will have to setting." "No, no," replied "I will pay for it all myself." this was the course adopted Chronicle.

Young lawyer (on his first case) "I'd give anything to win this but I don't see how it is possible clear you."

Prisoner (modestly suggesting)— "I don't sp'ose ye'd like ter swear yer committed the crime yerself, would yer?"—Tit-Bits.

SKELETON OF INDIAN FOUND

A reminder of days gone by, when Indian tribes roamed this section of the country, came to light Friday, when some workmen employed by the city unearthed a human skeleton on Squantum street, Montclair, where they were digging a trench for a water pipe.

The bones were gathered together by the workmen and placed in a large tool box for safety. Medical Examiner Dr. Fred E. Jones after a brief examination announced that, in all probability, the bones were those of an Indian boy of about 16.

The old records of this city show that some 200 years ago there was a large colony of Indians very close to the spot where the bones were discovered.

BRIEFS

Gentlemen's night of the Quincy Catholic club at Colonial hall tonight.

Regular meeting of the City Council tonight. There is considerable important business to come up.

The success of the ladies' night at the Granite City club last week will probably result in more parties of a similar nature being held in the future.

Sunday was an ideal day to be about. The air was not too cool but just right for walking. Many took advantage of a stroll through the Blue Hills to admire the fall scenery.

The Meadow Brook Ice company have their ice pond all cleaned and flooded ready for snapping cold weather, that it may freeze up thick enough for them to fill their ice houses.

RIFLE WAS CARELESSLY HANDLED

The careless handling of a rifle came near ending seriously at Braintree, Saturday afternoon, when a shot fired at the sidewalk rebounded and went crashing into the store of Edward Watts nearrowly missing several boys gathered there. John Lyons of North Weymouth, aged 19 years, came to Braintree to purchase some cartridges for his rifle thinking to find out if they were the right calibre he fired a shot at the sidewalk.

Unfortunately he aimed his rifle a little high and bullet went through the store window. Lyons paid the damage for the broken window and Chief Loring took the rifle for safe keeping.

QUINCY MAN IN FIRM.

Dover's latest industry the Dover Machine Works, is fast developing into a most healthy business concern says the Daily Democrat of Dover, N. H. Notwithstanding the fact that this new concern has been in operation only a few weeks they now have as many skilled mechanics in their employ as was in the employ of the old company previous to their moving to Manchester last June.

The proprietor is Joel F. Sheppard, 2d, of Quincy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard who has had considerable experience in the line of work which is being conducted in this new plant. He is a graduate mechanical engineer of Cornell University and for the past year or more has been connected with the old company. Mr. Sheppard has well known hustling ability, full of energy and push and those who know him best are sure that he will make this new plant one of the most prosperous of the many in the city. Before coming to this city he was in the employ of the Blake & Knowles steam pump works in East Cambridge, Mass., where he had charge of one of the largest and most important departments in this large plant and the firm deeply regretted his departure when he came here.

The new concern at the present time have much special work on hand. The real business will be to manufacture standard wood working machinery and with the experience that the men in this concern have had it will be possible for them to produce a line of machinery up to date and unexpected by th best manufacturers.

Mr. Sheppard and his superintendent George H. Mills, have already completed designs for the most of the machines which they are to manufacture and the designs are in the hands of competent pattern makers, who will turn them out as soon as possible and have been very fortunate in closing a contract with machinery dealers in Massachusetts to handle their goods exclusively.

ADMITS ABUSING SON

Spencer Sr., Says His Boy Was Wild and of Ferocious Temper

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 20.—That he believed he had been justified in brutally treating his son, Bertram G. Spencer, who is on trial for his life, charged with murder, because the boy was "disobedient, wild and of a ferocious temper," was the declaration made on the witness stand in the superior court by Wilbur L. L. Spencer, upon whom the defense has sought to place a large burden of responsibility for the prisoner's alleged condition.

Spencer, Sr., made no effort to deny any of the abuses which were called to his attention as having been committed by him upon his son.

It is expected that insanity experts will begin to testify today. There are four experts for the prosecution and three for the defense.

DECAPITATES HIS SON

Insane Man Then Takes His Own Life by Cutting His Throat

Reading, Pa., Nov. 20.—Becoming suddenly insane, Charles H. Melcher, aged 36 years, a boss machinist, killed his 10-year-old son, attempted to kill his wife, and then ended his own life by cutting his throat with a razor.

He was a man of exemplary habits and appeared to be in good spirits when he retired Saturday night.

Mrs. Melcher was awakened by hearing her husband excalm, "O God, have mercy on my soul." When she opened her eyes she saw him with a bloody razor in his hand. The terror-stricken woman seized the body of her son and dashed from the room.

When the police reached Melcher's home they found the boy decapitated in the hall and Melcher with his throat cut from ear to ear in an upstairs room.

ARRESTED ON SOIL OF TEXAS

Reyes is Taken into Custody by United States Marshal

NEUTRALITY LAW VIOLATED

Mexican Leader and Friends In Conference When Arrests Are Made on Indictments by Federal Grand Jury —Revolution In Northern States of Mexico Organized by Refugees— State Department Takes Action

San Antonio, Tex. Nov. 20.—General Bernardo Reyes was arrested here by United States Marshal Nolte on warrant issued by United States Commissioner Edwards, who acted upon a telegram from the federal authorities at Laredo saying that Reyes had been indicted there by a federal grand jury.

The complaint, sworn to by H. L. Thompson, chief of the investigation bureau of the department of justice, alleges that "Bernardo Reyes, within the jurisdiction of the United States, did, on Nov. 15, 1911, begin and set on foot and provide and prepare the means for a military expedition to be carried on from the United States against the republic of Mexico."

A second count charges conspiracy with persons unknown to invade a nation with which the United States is at peace.

Marshal Nolte and Deputy Dibrell interrupted a conference of prominent Mexicans at the Reyes home. Reyes appeared to treat his arrest as a joke. Commissioner Edwards held the prisoner in $5000 bonds for his appearance today. F. A. Chapa, a member of Governor Colquitt's military staff, furnished bonds.

Besides Reyes, sixteen others were indicted on the same charge. One of the defendants is the sheriff of a border county of Texas. It is said the grand jury is investigating the action of some United States customs and other treasury officials with reference to the passing of arms and ammunition across the Rio Grande.

Governor Colquitt has information that Mexican refugees in in Texas have organized a revolution in the northern states of Mexico. Arms and ammunition have been smuggled across the Rio Grande for months. It is not believed here that the arrest of Reyes will stay the trouble.

Three companies of Texas rangers have gone to the border for patrol duty in the enforcement of the neutrality laws. Adjutant General Hutchings is in charge. Brigadier General Duncan, commander of the department of Texas, had orders fro mthe war department to hold troops in readiness for an immediate move toward the border.

State Department Watchful

Washington, Nov. 20.—Evidence of a well defined revolutionary plot which appears to have its base in the northern part of Mexico has come to the state department. Agents of the department of justice and the American troops along the border have been ordered to closely watch for and prevent any violation of the neutrality laws.

Should the department of justice agents discover that any plots are being hatched on this side of the line they will immediately make efforts to discourage them.

There will be no necessity for reinforcing the American troops now in the border states, although it is not deemed prudent to diminish the force there. The Sixth cavalry will be retained at Fort Huachuca until the situation clears up, notwithstanding strong pressure to have the organization returned to Fort Des Moines.

El Paso and San Antonio appear to be the centres of trouble just now, according to the information of the war department. The Mexicans in those places show great unrest and signs of political activity.

WIN TIME FOR APPEAL

Delay of Two Days Is Granted Packers by Circuit Court Judge

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Counsel for the Chicago packers, indicted under the Sherman anti-trust act, succeeded in getting a delay until next Wednesday of the criminal trial which was scheduled to begin today in the United States district court.

The delay was granted by Judge Kohlsaat in the United State circuit court when he agreed to enter his order quashing the writ of habeas corpus until Wednesday. An appeal to the United States supreme court was allowed by Kohlsaat on his decision.

ROOSEVELT FAILED TO REGULATE TRUSTS

But He May Be Active In 1912, According to Bryan

New York, Nov. 20.—William J. Bryan, before sailing for a vacation in the West Indies, was asked whether he thought the last Roosevelt article in the Outlook indicated that the ex-president intended to take an active part in the campaign of 1912.

Mr. Bryan said he preferred to let Roosevelt speak for himself, but that the editorial might be so construed, though not necessarily so. Bryan said that Roosevelt's defense of his part in the Tennessee Coal and Iron and steel trust deal would not stand, and added that Roosevelt was president for seven years and did not regulate the trusts.

CANNOT RUN CITY MARKET

Lynn's Plan to Cut High Prices Declared to Be Unconstitutional

Lynn, Mass., Nov. 20.—Arthur G. Wadleigh, city solicitor of Lynn, advised the municipal council that the city could not run a public market. The East Side Improvement association recently petitioned the city to buy and sell necessaries of life in order to reduce the cost of living. At a public hearing many persons favored the idea. The city solicitor decides that it would be unconstitutional, though he says the city may build a market house or allow a street to be used as a public market place provided the abuttors consent.

In view of the opinion, it is believed the council will reject the petition.

TWO BARGES LOST

Eight Persons May Have Been Swept Away to Watery Graves

Block Island, R. I., Nov. 20.—A mile-a-minute gale that thrashed the waters in the vicinity of Block island into boiling seas crushed two barges of the Scully Transportation company of New York into smithereens and, it is almost certain, carried to watery graves from six to eight persons.

The barges were the three-masted schooner barge Helen A. Wyman, which carried, it is believed, a crew of three men besides Captain Lund, and the smaller barge Vermont, which carried a master and one hand.

The list of probable victims is augmented by the fact that the masters are believed to have had their wives aboard with them.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE THANKSGIVING TURKEY.

A TEN pound turkey is amply large enough for the ordinary household. One of that size is more apt to be tender and well flavored than a larger bird. In looking over the marketman's stock of turkeys prefer one that is plump and has smooth, dark legs.

Remove the Tendons.

Try the cartilage at the end of the breastbone. It should be soft and pliable. Ask your dealer to remove the tendons from the turkey's legs before sending it home, as in cooking these become hard and bony; also ask him to remove the head with care, pushing down the skin of the neck and making the cut close to the body so that the skin may be drawn up and cover the incision when the turkey is to be cooked.

When it is sent home the turkey should be cleaned and singed. The fastidious housewife scrubs off her turkey with soap and water, using a small brush which she keeps especially for poultry.

THANKSGIVING MENU.

Oysters.
Celery. Radishes. Olives.
Cream of Celery Soup.
Roast Turkey, Chestnut Dressing.
Cranberry Jelly. Cold Slaw.
Mashed Potatoes. Fried Egg Plant.
Creamed Cauliflower.
Pumpkin Pie. Fruit Pudding.
Raisins. Nuts. Fruit.
Cider.
Coffee. Cakes.

Making the Stuffing.

A good, plain stuffing may thus be mixed: Grate up a small loaf of bread and rub into it a piece of butter the size of an egg. Add pepper and salt to taste and some powdered sage. Rub all together and fill the turkey's breast with it. Sew up the breast so that the stuffing will not cook out. Put the fowl into the dripping pan. Place the giblets under the side of the turkey and rub salt and pepper on the outside.

Put a teacupful of water into the pan and place it in the oven, basting frequently. The more the turkey is basted the nicer and juicier it will be. The fowl will not be done until it is brown all over. Three hours is the regular time for baking a turkey of this size. After taking the turkey out of the oven put a tablespoonful of flour into the gravy and stir until brown.

Mince the giblets and mix them with a little of the stuffing, which should be saved after the turkey is filled. Put the giblets into the gravy boat and pour the gravy over them.

Wife Murderer Apparently Unmoved by His Coming Electrocution

Richmond, Nov. 20.—The gloom of impending death has had no apparent effect on Henry C. Beattie, Jr., who reads light literature and smokes cigarets in the death house of the state prison, unmoved by the fact that he is to be electrocuted next Friday for the murder of his wife.

Numerous letters have come to the executive office protesting against the refusal of the governor to grant a respite to the convicted wife slayer.

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETTES
NO SLATE NO CLINKERS

ROOSTER COAL BRIQUETS

THE NEW ANTHRACITE COAL

ROOSTER BRIQUETS are made from the choicest small Scranton Anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania, called TWENTIETH CENTURY CHESTNUT size

Just consider for a moment what we offer here in this 20th CENTURY CHESTNUT.

First, 2000 pounds of clean, pure, hard coal without a rock or a piece of slate.

Second, fuel that cannot form into a clinker, by any known method of firing, consequently the linings and grates last indefinitely.

Third, they are made in nut size, being equally convenient for furnace heaters, open grates, as well as stoves; therefore, only one storage bin is necessary.

Fourth, and very IMPORTANT, the quality of this fuel is the SAME EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, not a good ton today, and nothing like it the next time, in other words, when you once learn how to regulate your drafts you have nothing more to learn about burning BRIQUETS.

Fifth, no more sifting ashes these Briquets burn out clean. They require less wood to kindle.

Be sure to ask for "ROOSTERS" and get the Briquet made from pure Scranton Coal, from the largest Briquet plant in the country. They are better than coal, will last as long and cost less.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.
He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

CHAPTER V.

SHE WOULD A PLANTER BE.

SHELDON mended rapidly. The fever had burned out, and there was nothing for him to do but gather strength. Joan had taken the cook in hand, and for the first time, as Sheldon remarked, the chap at Berande was white man's chop. With her own hands Joan prepared the sick man's food, and between that and the cheer she brought him he was able after two days to totter feebly out upon the veranda. The situation struck him as strange, and stranger still was the fact that it did not seem strange to the girl at all. She had settled down and taken charge of the household as a matter of course, as if he were her father or brother or as if she were a man like himself.
"It is just too delightful for anything," she assured him. "It is like a page out of some romance. Here I come along out of the sea and find a sick man all alone with 200 slaves"—
"Recruits," he corrected. "Contract laborers. They serve only three years, and they are free agents when they enter upon their contracts."
"Yes, yes," she hurried on; "a sick man alone with 200 recruits on a cannibal island—they are cannibals, aren't they? Or is it all talk?"
"Talk!" he said, with a smile. "It's a tride more than that. Most of my boys are from the bush, and every bushman is a cannibal."
"But not after they become recruits? Surely the boys you have here would not be guilty."
"They'd eat you if the chance afforded."
"Are you just saying so, on theory, or do you really know?" she asked.
"I know."
"Why? What makes you think so? Your own men here?"
"Yes, my own men here, the very house boys, the cook that at the present moment is making such delicious rolls, thanks to you. Not more than three months ago eleven of them sneaked a whaleboat and ran for Malaita. Nine of them belonged to Malaita. Two were bushmen from San Cristoval. They were, fools, the two from San Cristoval, I mean; so would any two Malaita men be who trusted themselves in a boat with nine from San Cristoval."
"Yes?" she asked eagerly. "Then what happened?"
"The nine Malaita men ate the two from San Cristoval, all except the heads, which are too valuable for mere eating. They stowed them away in the stern locker until they landed. And those two heads are now in some bush village back of Langa Langa."
She clapped her hands and her eyes sparkled.
"They are really and truly cannibals. And just think, this is the twentieth century! And I thought romance and adventure were fossilized!"
He looked at her with mild amusement.
"What is the matter now?" she queried.
"Oh, nothing, only I don't fancy being eaten by a lot of filthy niggers is the least bit romantic."
"No, of course not," she admitted. "But to be among them, controlling them, directing them, 200 of them, and to escape being eaten by them—that, at least, if it isn't romantic, is certainly the quintessence of adventure. And adventure and romance are allied, you know."
"By the same token, to go into a nigger's stomach should be the quintessence of adventure," he retorted.
"I don't think you have any romance in you," she exclaimed. "You're just dull and somber and sordid, like the business men at home. I don't know why you're here at all. You should be at home placidly vegetating as a banker's clerk or—or"— "A shopkeeper's assistant, thank you."
"Yes, that—anything. What under the sun are you doing here on the edge of things?"
"Earning my bread and butter, trying to get on in the world."
"'By the bitter road the youngest son must tread ere he win to hearth and saddle of his own,'" she quoted. "Why, if that isn't romantic, then nothing is romantic. Think of all the younger sons out over the world, on a myraid of adventures, winning to those same hearths and saddles. And here you are in the thick of it, doing it, and here am I in the thick of it, doing it."
"I—I beg pardon," he drawled.
"Well, I'm a younger daughter, then," she amended; "and I have no hearth nor saddle—I haven't anybody or anything—and I'm just as far on the edge of things as you are."
"In your case, then, I'll admit there is a bit of romance," he confessed.
He could not help but think of the preceding nights and of her sleeping in the hammock on the veranda under mosquito curtains, her bodyguard of Tahitian sailors stretched out at the far corner of the veranda within call. He had been too helpless to resist, but now he resolved she should have his couch inside while he would take the hammock.
"You see, I had read and dreamed about romance all my life," she was saying, "but I never in my wildest fancies thought that I should live it. It was all so unexpected. Two years ago I thought there was nothing left to me but"— She faltered and made a moue of distaste. "Well, the only thing that remained, it seemed to me, was marriage."
"And you preferred a cannibal isle and a cartridge belt?" he suggested.
"I didn't think of the cannibal isle, but the cartridge belt was blissful."
"You wouldn't dare use the revolver if you were compelled to. Or," noting

AGAIN AND AGAIN SHE FIRED.

the glint in her eyes, "if you did use it to—well, to hit anything."
She started up suddenly to enter the house. He knew she was going for her revolver.
"Never mind," he said, "here's mine. What can you do with it?"
"Shoot the block off your flag halyards."
He smiled his unbelief.
"I don't know the gun," she said dubiously.
"It's a light trigger and you don't have to hold down. Draw fine."
"Yes, yes," she spoke impatiently. "I know automatics—they jam when they get hot—only I don't know yours." She looked at it a moment. "It's cocked. Is there a cartridge in the chamber?"
She fired, and the block remained intact.
"It's a long shot," he said, with the intention of easing her chagrin.
But she bit her lip and fired again. The bullet emitted a sharp shriek as it ricochetted into space. The metal block rattled back and forth. Again and again she fired, till the clip was emptied of its eight cartridges. Six of them were hits. The block still swayed at the gaff end, but it was battered out of all usefulness. Sheldon was astonished. It was better than he or even Hughie Drummond could have done.
"That's really good shooting—for a woman," he said. "You only missed it twice, and it was a strange weapon."
"But I can't make out the two misses," she complained. "The gun worked beautifully too. Give me another clip and I'll hit it eight times for anything you wish."
"I don't doubt it. Now I'll have to get a new block. Viaburi! Here, you fella, catch one fella block along storeroom."
"I'll wager you can't do it eight out of eight—anything you wish," she challenged.
"No fear of my taking it on," was his answer. "Who taught you to shoot?"
"Oh, my father at first and then Von and his cowboys. He was a shot—dad, I mean, though Von was splendid too."
Sheldon wondered secretly who Von was, and he speculated as to whether it was Von who two years previously had led her to believe that nothing remained for her but matrimony.

Counterfeit Detectors.
"Few men carry a bigger roll than the professional detector of counterfeits," said a receiving teller of one of the big banks recently. Each of these counterfeit detectors has a special license from the treasury department at Washington which permits him to carry about 150 samples of counterfeit money. It is a felony to have counterfeit money in your possession without proper authority. For each bogus bill the counterfeit detector carries a genuine note of the same kind and denomination for the purposes of comparison. The total value of this good money that is carried side by side with the bad is between $40,000 and $50,000. The bills run from a dollar up to $1,000 in denomination."—New York Sun.

CASTRO'S ARMY MEETS DEFEAT

Former Ruler of Venezuela Heads Revolutionary Force

BATTLE NEAR SAN CRISTOBAL

Erratic Former Ruler Has Been Plotting While Holding Forth on His Estate In Colombia, Close to Venezuelan Frontier—Has Been Keeping "Under Cover" For Past Several Months—Censors on the Job

London, Nov. 20.—The Venezuelan consul here has received cable advices from Caracas, informing him that ex-President Castro, at the head of a considerable body of revolutionists, has met with a disastrous defeat near San Cristobal.
Castro's whereabouts has been a matter of considerable uncertainty for several months. The Venezuelan censors have allowed little news of him or of the present revolutionary movement to sift through. Dispatches from neighboring countries have made it evident that a revolt of some seriousness was either brewing or already launched, but most of the advices have carefully insisted that Castro had no part in the proposed uprising.
The most recent news on the subject came from Willemstad, Curacoa, on Thursday last. This was that Castro was residing on his estate at Cucuta, Colombia, on the Venezuelan frontier. Curcuta is less than fifty mils from San Cristobal, where Castro's defeat is reported.
The moment that Castro crossed the frontier he would find himself face to face with serious opposition. President Gomez has had 3000 men mobilized near the border, ready to fall on Castro as soon as opportunity offered.

Last Heard of on Steamer
Washington, Nov. 20.—The last word from ex-President Castro received at the state department was delivered last summmer, when it was reported that that erratic former ruler was aboard a steamer bound from Spain for some Venezuelan port.
The report of his being in battle at San Cristobal, near the Colombian frontier, has not come to the department officially, but the officials have all along suspected that Castro had taken up headquarters at his old plantation near Cucuta in Colombia, near the border line, and they are inclined to believe the London report that he has resumed his activities against the government of President Gomez in Venezuela.

POLICE SHORTEN SHOW

Yale Students Are Dissatisfied, and Start Riot In Theatre

New Haven, Nov. 20.—At the close of a performance in the Hyperion theatre, in which Gaby Deslys was the leading attraction, there was a riot in which a number of Yale men were arrested.
By order of the chief of police the performance was shortened Saturday night. The house was filled with students, who protested against the shortening of the play. A number of them climbed up on the stage and attempted to raise the curtain. The stage hands lost their heads and turned the fire hose into the audience.
A panic ensued in which a number of people in the audience were beaten by the clubs of the police and injured in the stampede.
The riot was the most serious one that has ever followed a football game here in New Haven.

HAWSER CUTS OFF LEG

Barge Captain Bleeds to Death Before Doctors Reach Him

St. John, Nov. 20.—Captain Robert Welsh, master of a Pejepscot Lumber company barge, bled to death after his right leg had been cut off by a hawser.
The barge had broken adrift and Welsh was making fast a steel hawser to the bark when the barge sagged back and the donkey engine aboard the barge started to haul in the line.
Captain Walsh's leg was caught in a loop in the hawser, which cut the limb off just below the hip. He bled to death before doctors could reach him. A wife and large family survive.

FOREIGNERS MASSACRED

Slaughter Said to Have Occurred at Mission Station In China

London, Nov. 20.—A report received here says that the French colonial minister has issued a communication reporting that a massacre has occurred at the Legrange mission, in Lolos territory, south of Su Chwan.
The principal foreigners in Hsianfu, which has been taken by the rebels, are Scandinavians and English Baptist missionaries.

Quake In Mexico City
Mexico City, Nov. 20.—An earthquake here caused some alarm, but no serious damage was done.

RESIGNS HIS OFFICE AFTER LONG SERVICE

Hub Institutions Registrar Never Accepted His Salary

Boston, Nov. 20.—Having served Boston twenty-two years as institutions registrar, and never having accepted the $3000 salary which goes with the position, William P. Fowler tendered his resignation to Mayor Fitzgerald, who accepted it with regret.
The department in which Fowler has served investigates all questions relating to the commitment of the insane, the settlement of paupers and to the agency for discharged prisoners, and reports the results of investigations to the departments interested. It also deals with the statistics, collection and registration work relating to the children's institutions department, the penal institutions department and that of the Boston infirmary.

STATE FUNDS IN A TANGLE

Attorney General of Mississippi Wants Vardaman to Explain

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 20.—Alleging that when he retired from office in 1908 several thousand dollars in state funds were not fully accounted for, suit was filed in the chancery court of Hinds county seeking to have ex-Governor, now United States Senator, Vardaman, make explanation. The suit was filed by Attorney General Hudson.
The Mississippi Bank and Trust company, now suspended, as the institution in which Vardaman kept his personal as well as official deposits, is made co-defendant.
The bill alleges that the former governor made overcharges and double charges in rendering expense accounts for visits to state institutions and that public moneys and his private bank accounts were mixed.

ALLEGED VOTE BUYING

Evidence Said to Be Ready For Presentation to Governor Foss

Boston, Nov. 20.—Following an expose of the alleged vote buying at the last state election in the city of New Bedford, a conference is to be held with Governor Foss today and the evidence which is in the hands of the state police will be carefully gone over with him and a plan of action is to be outlined to bring the offenders to justice.
It is alleged that there are 4000 purchasable votes in the city of New Bedford; that political ward heelers turned 2000 of these against Foss; that the price at the election for votes against Foss was $5; that while, in some cases, $5 was promised before election only $3 was paid after election; that certain liquor men paid money after election.

MAN HUNT IN MAINE

Crowd Looking For Man Who Wandered Away In Scant Raiment

Columbia Falls., Me., Nov. 20.—Although half a hundred residents of the town have searched the woods for two days, dragging the mill pond and the river, no trace has yet been found of Wilbur L. Peterson, who wandered away from his home before daylight Saturday clad only in night clothes and stockings.
Peterson had been in ill health for some time. Citizens from neighboring towns have taken up the search, and today a big party went into the wood at daylight.

City of Lynn Raises Salaries
Lynn, Mass., Nov. 20.—The municipal council voted to raise the pay of all members of the fire and police departments $100 a year. This new scale of wages will go into effect Jan. 1. The increased salaries represent about $13,000.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL NOTES.

By Teri Bus.

The Eagles travelled to Fall River November 11th. The result was a draw with the Oaks.

The game was one full of exciting plays, and many rough knocks were given and taken by the players.

In the opening stage of the game the Eagles were given penalty kick. J. McDonald missed it.

In a mix up between D. McDonald and Foley the home back, the spectators broke into the field. The little difference between these two playrs could have been taken care of all right by the referee, but the interference of the crowd made this impossible. The police had to be called.

We are sorry that such was the case, but not only were the players to blame, but the spectators were sadly at fault. When excitement runs high, as sometimes it does in Fall River, it would be well for committees to use stern measures to prevent the spectators breaking into the field of play.

A good idea, and one we would suggest to the various clubs, is to have the revised rules of the game printed and hung up in their club houses, so that the knowledge of these rulings may be read by and known by players. By this means we will have that unanimity in decisions on the field by referees, while players knowing what is what on these dubious points, will bow gracefully to the referees rulings, and play the game.

The McGregors had a fine win over the Boston Americans on the ground of the latter November 11th. The final result—2 goals to 1—gives a good idea of the game.

At a meeting of the American Football Association held at Newark, the draw in connection with the American Cup was as follows:

Second Round

J. & P. Coates vs. West Hudsons
Patterson Rangers vs. Caledonians, Trenton.
Phila. Victors vs Celtic Phila.
Fall River Rovers vs. Brooklyn.
Wisananion vs. Thistle, Phila.
Jersey, A. C. vs. Willierforce.
Collingswood, Phila. vs. Fore River Eagles.
Howard & Bullough vs. Olimpia.

The ties to be played on the ground of the first named club.

The Eagles have the luck to play again away from home. The game will be played on Nov. 25, more than likely. We believe that on their return from Philadelphia arrangements for a game are being made in New York.

The Eagles may lodge a protest against the referee of last week's game. The ground on which they make their claim is that he was not "capable as a referee." The Referee's lot is certainly a hard one.

The Eagles' membership cards will soon be out of the hands of the printer.

The club house has been ordered opened and to be kept open all winter. Card tables, checkers, and dominoes will be added so that members may enjoy a social hour, and become acquainted with one another, and also to know the players. The idea is a good one.

HOME TRADE WILL HELP QUINCY AND EVERYONE IN QUINCY.

EIGHT TEAMS IN BASKET BALL LEAGUE

Meeting On Saturday Night To Arrange Schedule

GAME DEC. 7th

It was at first thought that the Greater Boston A. A. U. Basket Ball league would be composed of 12 teams but the failure of 4 teams to be represented at the various meetings, caused the directors to form final plans and draw up a schedule for an eight team circuit. A meeting was held Saturday evening in the rooms of the St. Mary's Club, on Cooper street, North End.

The teams represented were—Quincy A. A., Cathedral Y. M. C. A., St. Joseph's of the West End, Madison A. C. of Charlestown, St. Alphonsus A. A. of Roxbury, St. Mary's of the North End, Cunningham Gymnasium of Milton and Lynn Y. M. C. A. All the above associations will be represented by fast combinations, and from the present outlook, the project, to raise the game of basket ball to a conspicuous position, bids fair to meet with great success.

Quincy A. A. will be represented by one of the fastest teams in the state, as the quintet will be composed of former High school stars who have attained a most enviable reputation in interscholastic ranks. "Bill" Manning who is conceded by all to be about the best all round athlete ever turned out at the local High school, will cover one of the forward positions, while he will have an able copartner in "Butus" Chapman, who played in the same position for Quincy High last year.

The remainder of the team will be comprised of other Quincy High stars, namely, Prout, who will hold down the pivot position, Harmon and "Mill" Chapman backs. A number of others will be given a tryout, and it is expected that a very formidable five will represent the local association when the first home game of the season is played on the evening of December 7th, with the Cunningham Gym team from Milton.

The local games will be played either in St. Mary's Hall or in the Coliseum, the exact place to be announced later. It is a long time since basket ball has been the mecca of enthusiasm for local sporting bloods, but the games referred to give every promise of resurrecting the old time spirit of rivalry At any rate a large crowd is sure to be noticable on every occasion.

The schedule for December for the eight teams of the Greater Boston A. A. U. basket ball league is as follows:—

Dec. 6—St. Mary's at Cathedral Y. M. C. A., St. Alphonsus at St. Josephs.

ATHLETIC MEET AT Y. M. C. A.

Over 100 enthusiastic lovers of athletic sports gathered at the Y. M. C. A. gym on Saturday night to witness the monthly handicap meet, which was the first event of this season.

Every event was closely contested and the marks set up in the various ones were very creditable. The star event of the evening was the 1000 yd. run and "Bill" Cranshaw upset all the "dope" by running away from all his competitors in the last two laps and winning the remarkably fast time of 2 min. 27 2-5 sec.

The running high jump was also a very closely contested event, but the scratch men were unequal to the task of over coming the liberal handicaps of the two winners. Philip Wood made the best jump of the contest when he cleared the bar at the hight of 5 feet 2 7-8 inches.

The summary of the events follows:

15 yard dash.

FOUR IN OLD PERU.

The Mystic Number About Which Centered All Their Beliefs.

The Peruvians cared nothing for any of the supposed mystic properties of either three, five or seven. To them the four was sacred, and around it they intwined the main features of all their religious ceremonies and queer beliefs. They believed the earth to be a square divided into four parts and suspended from the heavens by four cords, one at each of the four corners. All of their cities were quartered by four principal streets running from a square in the center. They held four annual feasts in honor of the moon, the "sliver sister of the sun."

To them eternity was to be divided into four periods of time, each composed of four times 4,000 years, and at the end of each of these cycles the sun was to be blotted out of existence. They prayed to the four winds, or to "ye gods that dwell at the four corners of the earth." To them the rains came from four enormous heavenly turtles that vomited dampness, and the four winds from the lungs of the four gigantic caryatids which stand at the four cardinal points of paradise. The above are but a small portion of the fours alluded to in the legends of the Incas.

OLD SAMOAN MATS.

Precious Heirlooms That Are Treasured by the Natives.

Among the curious customs of the Samoans is that of making heirlooms of mats. By some simple process of reasoning the mat has come to be identified with the family, as the hearthstone is traditionally sacred among the Saxon race.

The Samoan mats are really fine specimens of art. The people esteem them much more highly than any article of European manufacture, and the older they are the more they are regarded. Some of them have names known all over the Samoan group. The oldest is called Moe-e Ful-Ful, or "The man that slept among the creepers." It got this title by reason of the fact that it had been hidden away for years among the creeping convolvulus that grows wild along the seashore. It is known to be 200 years old, as the names of its owners during that period can be traced.

The possession of one of these old mats gives the owner great power—in fact, it is a title deed to rank and property, from the Samoan standpoint, says Harper's Weekly. It is no matter if the mats are tattered and worn out. Their antiquity is their value, and for some of the most cherished of them large sums of money would be refused.

A Bitter Controversy.

The Shakespeare-Bacon controversy formed the subject of debate at a well known theatrical school not long ago. On both sides the orators were would be actresses, and pro and con the discussion was feminine and furious. It seemed at first that the ardent partisanship of the fair opponents would preclude the possibility of harmonious conclusion. But the last speaker, in the nervousness of her first public speech, suggested common ground.

"Ladies," she said, speaking rapidly, "I think there has been much misapprehension as to the real truth of the Baconian theory. I stand ready to show that the great plays we know so well were written not by Shakespeare or by Bacon, but by Bacon and Shakespeare in collision!"

Amid laughter and applause the debate was declared a tie.—New York Tribune.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

As was announced exclusively in Saturday's Ledger, the football game scheduled for that day between Quincy High and Waltham High, was called off, as a result of a conference held between the managers of both elevens shortly before noon time. This action was brought about by the inclement weather, and it certainly proved a great disappointment to the number of local rooters who had planned on journeying to Waltham to see the local High school football warriors terminate their season for the present year.

Waltham High and Quincy High have not played together for a long time and the announcement that athletic relations had again been resumed, caused a great feeling of rivalry to immediately become evident.

The local boys had practised hard for the game and were exceedingly anxious to secure a victory over the Watch city lads, for such would not only add laurels to their work of this year, but it would enable Captain Johnson's boys to end their season in a blaze of glory, and at the same time allow Coach Staff to rest satisfied in the conviction that his efforts to round out a fast agregation were fruitful.

It was at first hoped that a game could yet be agreed upon by both elevens. The only open date on the Waltham schedule is December 2d, and this has been offered to Quincy High. It is felt by the local management that this is a rather inconvenient date, coming as it does after Thanksgiving, the day upon which the greater number of interscholastic teams bring their season to a close, and also because of the fact that it comes in the midst of the time allotted as the Thanksgiving vacation, a time when the members of the eleven would feel indisposed to engage in a pigskin conflict. It has not yet been decided just what action will be taken, but it is highly improbable that Quincy High will play any more football games this year.

Such being the case, we have only to review the work of the local boys this season and concentrate our attention on the relative merits of the player, or perhaps players, whom we deem qualified for a position on the all interscholastic elevens that are soon to be chosen by the sporting writers of the various newspapers.

Newton High is especially anxious to take on Waltham for December 2d, for Waltham only defeated the Newton team by a 2 to 0 score. Unless the Quincy management accepts the game by tomorrow, Newton High will be billed for the occasion.

The morning Post says:—"An amateur show will satisfy the Quincy sports this week but there is a rumor that there will be something better out that way in a short time. Three special bouts and open matches will be held tonight."

The statement sounds strongly equivocal, yet in its brightest aspect, its fulfillment can conceive of nothing that would be too good for the local sporting bloods.

Captain "Webb" McDonald and his galaxy of 160 pound championship claimants of the state, wre sadly disappointed when the General Electric eleven of Lynn failed to put in an last Saturday. A number of fans were present on the field, and contrary to what might be expected, the condition of the gridiron itself was good for a game of football.

E. T. Marceau, a well known local runner will compete in the A. A. U. Intercollegiate championship cross country run, to take place in Brookline next Saturday. He will wear the colors of the Institute of Technology.

Champion Letter Sorter.

Grove M. Torre, a clerk in the San Francisco main postoffice, is the champion letter distributer of the world. In an exhibition Torre broke the record by sorting 2,346 cards with no errors in thirty-seven minutes. This is an average of 63 4-10 cards a minute. This mail was thrown into seventeen different compartments. When Torre had finished the judges found that Torre had not even one card in a wrong compartment.

Wanted Regular Work.

A farm hand had worked in the field from dawn till darkness, doing the chores by lantern light. "I'm going to quit," he said to the farmer at the end of the month. "You promised me a steady job."

"Well, haven't you got one?" was the astonished reply.

"No," said the man; "there are three or four hours every night that I don't have anything to do and fool my time away sleeping."—Success Magazine.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

At the Wollaston Methodist church Sunday, a large audience greeted Miss Alice L. Miles, the Deaconess of Boston who represented the Deaconess' work. Miss Miles spoke of the growth of the work, of the present needs and of the future outlook, she described the different kinds of workers and their special work. She told how the visiting deaconess entered the home of the poor and needy to carry comfort and words of cheer. She spoke of the district deaconess and the Evangelistic deaconess. She also spoke of the training school and the hospltal. At the close of her talk she sang her solo which was greatly enjoyed by all present.

There was a large attendance at the Sunday school. Mr. J. A. Sedgwick, the superintendent, summed up the lesson by the use of the blackboard, making prominent the thought that the cure for worry was in the hand of God—Miss Miles sang a solo.

Miss Nevers, the deaconess, had charge of the Junior League which was well attended.

At 4.45 o'clock the first vesper service of the season was held with a good audience. Mr. George Critchley was the cornet soloist, Miss Margaret Brown the soprano soloist, and Mrs. F. G. Bennett was the organist. The pastor spoke on "The Vision of God Invigorates Life." Miss Sadie Teed of Allston, formerly of Wollaston, led the Epworth League service. J. A. Sedgwick led the praise service. The subject of meeting was "Giving Jesus the Right of Way." Miss Teed handled the subject in a most interesting manner. There were 70 present to enjoy a most helpful service.

The choir will meet in the vestry, Monday at 8 o'clock for rehearsal.

The committee for the Men and Religion Movement will meet at the parsonage Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Ladies' Aid will hold an all day sewing meeting in the vestry Wednesday.

The Ladies' Aid will hold their fair in the new store, corner of Beale and Newport avenue, December 7, 8 and 9.

Monday night's session of City Council was a short one, 23 minutes being sufficient to transact the business of the evening.

The meeting was called to order at 7.35 by Councilman Nowland, in the absence of President Bryant. On motion of Councilman Bailey it was voted to elect a president pro tem by roll call.

On roll call Councilman John D. Smith was elected as President pro tem. Councilman Smith presided with the dignity of a veteran, and as noted above the business of the evening was quickly dispatched.

JOHN D. SMITH.

The absent members were Councilmen Bryant, Jenkins, Leslie and Studley.

WATER WASTE.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Commissioner of Public Works stating that the recent survey "for water waste and leakage shows conclusively that something should be done at once to check the great loss of water which is going on continuously." He therefore asked for an appropriation of $1,500 from the water receipts for this work. Referred to joint Committee on Finance and Water Supply.

ELECTION OFFICERS.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing the following election officers:

John A. Duggan to act as Warden of Ward Six, precinct one.

Francis J. Mullen to act as Deputy Warden, Ward Six, precinct one.

These changes are made necessary by the death of Frederick C. Pope, Warden of this precinct. Confirmed.

METROPOLITAN ASSESSMENTS.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the City Solicitor, stating that at the time the matter of apportioning the expense of the Metropolitan parks, boulevards and Charles River basin for the next five years was pending before the commission appointed by the supreme court, the representatives of Quincy, Milton, Hyde Park, Weymouth, Hull, Hingham and Braintree made a special effort to resist being obliged to bear any undue or considerable portion of the Charles River basin expense, "and we did so with quite satisfactory results." At that time, the matter was placed before the finance committee of the City Council of 1910, who authorized him to proceed in the matter in behalf of the City of Quincy. Toward this sum Lynn and Brookline, although not parties to the agreement, voluntarily contributed $200 each. The balance was apportioned between the City of Quincy and the towns named, on a basis of valuation for 1910. Quincy's share is $767.16 and he asks that the Council appropriate that sum for the purpose of paying its share of said expenses. Referred to Committee on Finance.

An application for Soldiers' Relief was referred to the Committee on State Aid.

The floor was in charge of Frank M. Chubbuck, assisted by Peter Cummings, and the following aids: Edward M. Fletcher, William J. Talbot, Guy T. Baker, John B. Farrell, Charles French and Leonard M. Bradlee.

THOMAS M. ELCOCK PASSED AWAY THIS MORNING

Thomas M. Elcock whose serious illness was noted in Monday's Ledger, passed away at his home on Marsh street this morning. Mr. Elcock was a tool sharpener by trade, but poor health prevented his doing active work for some months. He had been ill since last summer when he was overcome by the heat. Added to this he sustained a shock and his health has been failing ever since. He was a man well known in South Quincy and highly respected. He leaves four sons and three daughters, his wife having passed away several years ago. Of his daughters one is a teacher in the public schools of Braintree and another a teacher in a public school in a western city.

He also leaves two brothers, James H. Elcock, Overseer of the Poor, and George F. Elcock.

POLITICIANS ALERT.

The political slate makers have already begun to get busy and one hears many persons who are slated for this or that position, in the event of the election of Stone or Wall. As far as known, however, neither gentleman has given out any information on the subject. As a matter of fact all the talk about city officials is premature. It will be time enough when the election is over for the slate makers to get to work.

From the way the wild horses of Congress are cavorting around already, Mr. Taft needs to be a better broncho buster than any he saw in Wyoming.

DEMOCRATS WILL FIRE FIRST GUN

In Local Campaign At Big Rally Wednesday Evening

AT ST. MARY'S HALL

St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, has been selected as the place in which the first big rally in the interest of James E. Wall, candidate for mayorty honors, and others seeking municipal honors in conjunction with him, will be carded. The rally will take place Wednesday evening, and from the efforts already exerted by the committee in charge the event promises to develop into one of the most interesting rallies ever scheduled in the Ward Four section.

The gathering will be addressed by many prominent and well-known local citizens, the candidates for Councilman-at-large on the Democratic ticket, and the aspirants for municipal offices from Ward Four.

The committee in charge is prepared to have a number of business men appear on the platform and speak in the interest of candidate Wall, and it is expected that the full list of speakers will be announced at the meeting of the past and present members of the Democratic City Committee, which has been called for this evening in the Democratic headquarters in the Hancock Chambers.

WINS MUCH APPLAUSE AT RECITAL

Roscoe R. Ricker of Quincy was prominent on the programme of a pupils' recital given at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Saturday, which was largely attended. Mr. Ricker is studying in the violin department and on this occasion, assisted by Evelyn Tozier of Concord, N. H., and Ora Larthard of Malden, rendered Mozart's Trio in C major (Kochel 496) for pianoforte violin and violon-cello. Mr. Ricker's performance was greeted with applause and commendation by the audience, composed of critical music lovers who attend the Saturday recitals regularly.

NEW PARISH HOUSE WANTED BY MEN'S CLUB

St. Chrysostom's Society Vote Substantial Amount

MR. DETHRIDGE SPEAKS

At the meeting of the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's parish Monday evening a substantial amount was voted toward the proposed parish house. If feasible, it is the intention of the vestry to purchase the present edifice of the Park and Downs society upon their establishment in the new building now nearing completion.

In the discussion of the club it was the unanimous sentiment that a parish house was a desirable and a necessary institution. Many arguments pro and con were brought up concerning theadvisability of securing the proposed building.

Upon motion a committee from the club was appointed to confer with the vestry later in the week.

The speaker of the evening was F. W. Dethridge, for six years chief electrician in the Massachusetts States Prison at Charlestown. His argument against "Capital punishment" was a strong and instructive one.

In opening the speaker corrected the impression that he was chief electrocutioner at the prison instead of electrician.

Mr. Dethridge went into the history of punishment in the early English and Puritan times, proving conclusively that terrible punishments and tortures instead of decreasing crimes put life at a lower value and increased their number.

The average layman doesn't seem to think a murderer is punished sufficiently unless hanged or electrocuted, said the speaker, as he described what the loss of liberty meant under the best of conditions. His review of the monotony of a prison discipline did not sound inviting.

Many anecdotes gathered from personal contact with the prisoners were given, some of which showed the men at the present day a benefit instead of a menace to society.

What possible benefit does society gain in sending a man to the gallows instead of imprisonment for life? The only thing in favor of capital punishment is the expense attached to caring for the prisoner and the average prison should, could and will be in time self-supporting.

I cannot believe that two wrongs make a right and when the Commonwealth assigns one man to kill another for the benefit of human society, if you please, it is not only putting a blot on the state but bringing humanity down to its lowest standard.

Questions followed the address of Mr. Dethridge and refreshments were served.

FINAL GAME.

The final school game of soccer will be played this afternoon at 3.45 on the Old Colony Grounds, Water street. The contestants will be the Hancock and Washington Schools. The fine cup offered as a trophy means a spirited and hard fought contest.

—"The complaints of Massachusetts newspapers about juvenile villainy in their respective localities are unpleasantly numerous," says an exchange. And the significant part of the feature centres in the fact that these complaints are not growing less in volume. A Boston judge attributes youthful crime to lack of home influence, and this particular lack, the point is raised, is traceable in turn to "the substitutes provided for it by a paternal government." After the academical discussion has exhausted itself, there are hopes that something practical will be done to teach juveniles of fifteen years, or thereabouts, that wanton transgressions call for punishment. There is too much of this "boys-will-be-boys" fol-de-rol, when juvenile crime is in question, and it is responsible for not a little of the exasperating outbreaks.—Salem News.

LADIES CHARMING HOSTS AT GENTLEMEN'S NIGHT OF QUINCY CATHOLIC CLUB

Audience Convulsed With Laughter By the Successful Comedy, The Suffragette

Following Refreshments Evening Ends With Dancing

The annual gentlemen's night, given by the ladies of the Quincy Catholic club was held Monday evening, at Colonial hall, and like previous occasions of the kind, proved to be a most enjoyable evening to the gentlemen fortunate to be numbered among the friends of the club.

Miss Mary L. Gavin, the club's first and only president, in opening spoke briefly of the work of the club and extended a cordial welcome to the gentlemen and members, trusting that they would have a pleasant evening. She then turned the program over to the entertainment committee.

Part one opened with a piano and violin duet by Misses Teresa and Ruth Keating. Miss Margaret Heaney, the club's talented elocutionist, gave a reading and was called upon for an encore. In fact all the numbers on the program were encored and the artists gladly responded.

Little Miss Pauline Lamonreux gave an exhibition of fancy dancing in Highland costume and part one closed with another piano and violin duet by the Misses Keating. The accompanist was Miss Mary McConarty.

Part two, was a one act comedy entitled "The Suffragette" and it was certainly a successful comedy, for the audience was convulsed with laughter from the time the curtain was drawn aside, disclosing a room in Mrs. John Wilson's home, until the scene was at an end. The comedy abounded with funny situations and even the young ladies who impersonated the several characters were often convulsed with laughter.

Tre story was a simple one, yet one with a moral. Mrs. Wilson, whose characer was impersonated by Miss Mary R. Lyons, was the suffragette, who declared that all men were tyrants, and that the cause of womankind would not succeed without a martyr and she was the one who would be such. The way to do this was to get arrested.

Mrs. Wilson's daughter, had fortunately married Herbert Mallory a police commissioner, and he, it was, who was called upon to make the arrest. He was informed that Mrs. Wilson was going to the capitol to deliver her speech and she wanted to be arrested. Unfortunately she did not succeed in getting arrested but most everybody else did.

A plan was undertaken between Mrs. Mullory and her husband to arrest Mrs. Wilson at her home and lock her up just to give her a scare. But the plan failed.

A visit was expected from Aunt Eliza, a supposed eccentric person, whom Mrs. Mallory, unfortunately had never seen. The result was, that when a professional thief made her appearance at the door, she was mistaken by the maid and Mrs. Mallory for Aunt Eliza and received with open arms. The thief was shown Aunt Eliza's room and begun to lay her plans to make way with the jewels of Mrs. Mallory, the hiding place of which had been made known to her by a discharged servant. Several times she came near getting "tripped" up while playing her part, but eventually got out of the house only to fall into the hands of the policeman who had been sent to arrest Mrs. Wilson.

In the mean time the real Aunt Eliza arrives and is immediately taken

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It is not true that Mr. Taft had to hire a guide to find his way around Washington.

Our old friend Doc Cook is coming home and the reporters are examining him critically to see if he bears any souvenirs of the European hen.

The meat packers say the Sherman law is void, and we fear there will be be a void in Uncle Sam's pocket book before he lands them in jail.

Queen Mary has started a crusade against the deadly hat pin. Why not get some revenue for the government by fining the women $2 for every eye they scratch out?

Uncle Sam is requested to recognize China as a republic, but the old gentleman seems to think it shows better qualifications for the Anarchy club.

In the good old days Congress would never have dared open up Dec. 4 without running down to Wall street and taking out a license to do business.

Henry Reuterdahl says the navy is only an empty shell, and the tax payers also have a shelled out feeling after cashing up for the dreadnoughts.

The library of Harvard university has 1,590,000 volumes and as every Harvard student has read them all through, some one should supply them with a lot of new books to keep them out of mischief.

There is a protest against night collection of garbage in New York. We never realized that anyone was sleeping at those hours in the metropolis, except Uncle Josh when he comes in to sell his potatoes.

Now Mr. Taft, when you write your message, just imagine you were a newspaper reporter again, with the city editor howling for copy. The public read your stuff in those days when you boiled 'er down!

Our hearts go out with fond anticipation with the Congressional committee on the "money trust." Surely the day will soon come when the accursed money power being throttled, we can all get trusted instead of having to work.

Apparently the call for the great ex-President will not down. The following few lines from Ohio speak volumes:

"Who shall be our standard bearer?" "Shall it be Taft?"

Of the nearly 300 Republicans present many yes."

"Shall it be LaFollette?" shouted the toastmaster. There were answering cries of "yes," but a great volume of cheers followed his query: "Shall it be the foremost citizen of the world, Theodore Roosevelt?"

AN ACTIVE CAMPAIGN.

Advertising day in New Hampshire is taking hold in great style and from all sections of the state come reports of active campaigns to make the affair a success. One of its most active champions, as it is, in fact, of all other matters of a "forward" nature is the city of Portsmouth. Here is a letter being sent out by a state society. One cannot read it without feeling the deep rooted interest that is being taken in the affair, as well as the success that is guaranteed by such earnest cooperation.

Here's the letter:

Portsmouth, N. H.
Nov. 27, 1911.

This is advertising Day for New Hampshire and I am asking you and your friends to come to New Hampshire the Switzerland and Belgium of America. Come to Portsmouth the home of the great and busy navy yard and other large industries; the center of one of the great summer resort regions of New England; an ideal city in which to reside, to invest capital and for business; with a live Board of Trade and a clean city government: fine churches and good schools with an excellent fire department.

Portsmouth ought to change its name to "Opportunity" for she certainly offers greater opportunities for all kinds of business and especially to the commerce of this country, because of her commodious harbor, than any other city in the country.

Correspondence solicited.

Portsmouth wants you!

THE PANAMA CANAL TOLLS.

The agitation headed last year by Admiral R. D. Evans, for making the Panama canal toll free to American ships, got indorsement in high quarters a few days ago, when Secretary of War Stimson spoke to the Kansas City Commercial club. He advocated tha the United States refund all tolls collected from American ships.

The belief is held in many quarters that the canal should be as free to American ships as the Mississippi river. But the railroads will say that this is essentially a subsidy to steamship owners.

Of course Uncle Sam wants to get back the $375,000,000 he has put into the canal. Admiral Evans says he should give this up as a forlorn hope, and seek rather to get low freight rates.

An English shipping authority in the Contemporary Review declares that the canal will get no business between Europe and Asia and Australia, because Suez is 1,200 miles nearer Sidney, and 2,000 miles nearer Melbourne, etc. He admits, however, that it will get the bulk of the Europe—New Zealand trade. At a figure two-thirds of the Suez toll rates, he calls the yearly revenue $11,500,000, cost of operations, $5,000,000 leaving a yearly profit of $6,500,000, which at two per cent on $375,000,000 would not quite pay the interest on the bonds.

Yet one should recall that the Suez canal, which had the most dismal kind of financial outlook at first, has proved a gold mine. The new shipping routes that will be created by Panama will make new business along the way, just as house building follows a trolley into a city suburb.

As the railroads are said to have once paid the Panama Railroad Company $75,000 a month to suppress its competition, they will no doubt try to control canal shipping.

It is a portentous fact for the railroads that a 16 knot fruit steamer like those plying in the West India trade will be able to make New York from Los Angeles in 14 days. The freight train ordinarily takes 20 to 60 days. It is said that such a ship would make a profit on each easterly run of $360,000.

The Eastern Consumer long ago gave up hope of seeing again any part of the $375,000,000 cost of the canal. But as a reduction of freight rates seems within his reach, he will be likely to favor liberal treatment on the matter of tolls to any ships that offer real competition.

SOME ECHO.

An American and a Highlander were walking one day on the top of one of the Scotch mountains, when the Scotchman, wishing to impress his boastful "cousin," produced a famous echo to be heard in that place. When the echo returned clearly after nearly four minutes, the proud Scotchman, turning to the Yankee, exclaimed: "There, mon, ye canna' show anything like that in your country." To which the other replied: "I guess we can better that some, stranger. Why, in my shooting lodge in the Rockies when I go to bed I just lean out of my window and call out, 'Time to get up; wake up!' and eight hours afterward the echo comes back and wakes me.' "—Truth.

NEEDED.

A young minister had obtained a kirk in a mining district in Scotland. After a deal of difficulty he managed to secure lodgings.

The first morning following his arrival the landlady knocked at the door with the rather unusual query as to whether he had washed himself.

"Yes," he said. "Why?"

"Because," she replied, calmly, "I'm gaun to mak' a dumpling for dinner, an' I wad like the len' o' the basin!"—Tit-Bits.

"Shooting iron, the boys out my way call firearms," said Representative Gregg of Texas, "and I never read of a death by this route that I am not reminded of an inscription which can be found on a tombstone in one of the churchyards in the state of Arkansas. It reads:

This stone is sakred to the mem'ry of William Hardy who came to his death by fooling with a Colt's revolver, one of the old kind, brass mounted, and of such is the kingdom of heaven.

LADIES CHARMING HOSTS

for a thief by Mrs. Mallory, much to the aunt's surprise and indignation. The result was that she left the house in anger only to be arrested by a real policeman at the instance of Mrs. Mallory.

The telephone wire to the police headquarters was kept hot for a few minutes by Mrs. Mallory, trying to get the thief released and the real Aunt Eliza arrested. Of course what Herbert said could not be heard but judging from the one end of the talk he was getting somewhat disturbed and had expressed his private opinion of suffragettes in general.

The situation was becoming somewhat strained when Mrs. Wilson returned, very much wrought up because she had not succeeded in being arrested. She was not slow in giving her opinion of policemen and men in general. Then the real Aunt Eliza, who had been released, came in and the situation cleared, although it took considerable telephoning to get the real thief re-arrested and the jewels recovered.

A reporter appears on the scene looking for news of the plan made to get Mrs. Wilson arrested, but he met with a cold shoulder, even though he threatened to print a sensational story. The reporter, who was also a suffragette, knew Mrs. Wilson and admired her stand. The speech which she had failed to deliver at the capitol, was handed to the reporter for publication and was read for the benefit of the audience. It was a local skit, in which it was told how women would fill the places of our firemen and policemen.

But all ends well and the comedy ended with a chorus by the entire company. The complete cast in the comedy was as follows:—

Mrs. Herbert Mallory (Young married woman) Josephine Collagan
Susie (Her daughter, aged ten) Gertrude Crowley
Mrs. John Wilson (Her mother, who lives with her. The Suffragette.) Mary R. Lyons
Mrs. James Wilson (Her aunt and Mrs. Wilson's sister-in-law) Aunt Eliza Helen L. Galvin
Maggie Conroy (A professional thief) Helen H. Gavin
Miss Gates (Reporter for the Quincy Telegram) Anna J. Walsh
Katie (Mrs. Mallory's maid) Lulu Crowley

The entertainment closed with a vocal solo by William Healey and a piano and violin duet by the Misses Keating.

An adjournment was then made to the rooms of the Knights of Columbus club where refreshments were served. The evening which had been a most enjoyable one closed with dancing at Colonial hall until 11.30. Music being furnished by Jerf's orchestra under the direction of Miss Eva Hubert.

The entertainment was in charge of the Dramatic committee, Miss Anna J. Walsh, Miss Mary R. Lyons and Miss Helen H. Gavin.

BEYOND.

It seems a little way to me,
Across that strange country, the Beyond;
And yet not strange, for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am so fond,
They make it seem familiar and most dear,
As journeying friends bring distant countries near.

So close it lies that when my sight is clear
I think I see the gleaming strand;
I know I feel that those who've gone from here
Come near enough to touch my hand.
I often think but for our veiled eyes
We should find heaven right round about us lies.

I cannot make it seem a day to dread,
When from this dread earth I shall journey out
To that still drearer country of the dead,
And join the lost ones so long dreamed about;
I love this world, yet I shall love to go
And meet the friends who wait for me, I know.

I never stand about the bier and see
The seal of death set on some well-loved face,
But that I think—one more to welcome me.
When I shall cross the intervening space
Between this land and that one over there—
One more to the strange Beyond more fair.

And so, to me, there is no sting in death,
And so, the grave has lost its victory;
It is but crossing with abated breath,
And white, set face, a little strip of sea,
To find the loved ones on the other shore
More beautiful, more precious than before.

OBLIGING CRABS.

Present Their Claws to Fishers Who Shake Hands With Them.

Visitors in Seville see women carrying baskets full of crabs' claws. The claws are cooked, and people nibble them more for fun than sustenance, not as Russians nibble sunflower seeds. What becomes of the rest of this crustacean, especially if he is a crawfish, of his tail?

As a matter of fact the crawfish has no part in the business. The claws are taken from a salt water crab which lives along the shores of Morocco, Spain and Portugal. Each little crab, with its one little mate, has a cave for a home, and, adopting the eastern estimate of the other sex, he usually keeps his wife shut inside the cave, meanwhile staying about the threshold himself and making a brave show with his big claws.

When the tide runs out the crab fishers prowl along the beach looking for crab holes. Either the crab is stalking up and down seeking what he may devour and thus showing whether he has fine claws or he is still at home, and the size of his doorway indicates the size of the householder. In one case the fisherman cuts off his retreat by blocking his front door with mud; in the other case he digs him out. Anyway, he deprives him of his pincers and sets him at liberty to grow some more.

Right here appears the quaintest feature of the whole affair, for the pincers are not torn away from the crab at all. Instead he presents them to the fisherman, perhaps even with his compliments. It is a fact easily demonstrable that the crab can detach his claw by muscular effort, thus making no hemorrhage, but leaving the stump in such condition that a new claw is soon grown. The fishermen simply take the crab by the hand, whereupon it lets go, leaves the claw with them and romps off home without it.—Chicago Record Herald.

PERSONAL TALK WITH BISMARCK

Subject Of Address Before Walther Men's Class

BY DR. HOWARD B. GROSS

"A personal interview with Bismarck," was the subject of Dr. Howard B. Gross of Boston, before the members and friends of the Walther Men's class Monday evening.

Dr. Gross is editor of "Missions," a Baptist publication and while on a trip abroad in 1892, was privileged to visit Prince Bismarck in his home.

His description of the visit and the dinner which followed was very realistic and his outline of the character of this grand old man at close range was most enlightening. Bismarck, the speaker described as a man genuinely religious at the core, but with a heart that craved for power. A man really great and who had accomplished wonderful deeds but in all a man absolutely modest. He had a certain kindliness and a twinkle in his eye. He was perfectly human—perfectly genuine.

Vocal solos by Charles A. Kempton accompanied by Professor J. H. Marcean were enjoyed during the evening and refreshments were served at the lecture's close.

WHY HE LOST HIS JOB

A youth whose journalistic aspirations finally landed him in a position on a local newspaper is now wondering why he is out of a job.

He wasn't "there," as the saying goes. The late Austrian consul was responsible for it all. The day the consul died a friend of the city editor of the paper employing the youth called him up by telephone and told him the flag on the consul's office was at half mast.

"Go down there right away," said the editor. "Find out what's the matter. Maybe the emperor is dead. If he is, let me know at once."

The youth trotted out on his first big assignment, and returned in half an hour with a look of disappointment on his face.

"Well, what was it?" the city editor asked.

"Oh, nothing," said the youth. "The emperor isn't dead at all. It's only the consul."

"Did you get the story?"

"Why, no; you—"

"Beat it!" shouted the city editor. —Philadelphia Lerger.

He Was Observant.

The supervisor of a school was trying to prove that children are lacking in observation. To the children he said, "Now, children, tell me a number to put on the board."

Some child said "Thirty-six." The supervisor wrote sixty-three.

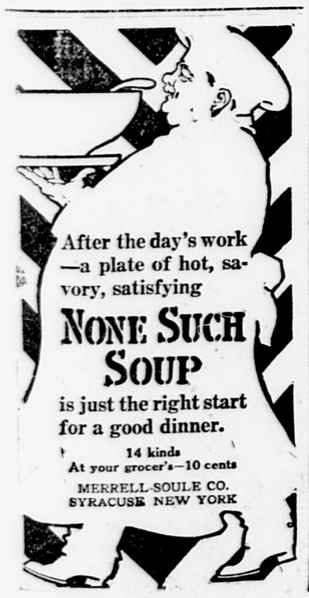

He asked for another number, and seventy-six was given. He wrote sixty-seven.

When a third number was asked a child who apparently had paid no attention called out:

"Theventy-theven. Change that, you darned faker!"—Everybody's.

Fish at Billingsgate.

Fish is sold in London shops at a stated price per pound, but the retailer in getting his supplies from Billings gate has to purchase each kind by a separate weight or measurement. He buys soles by the pound, plaice by the stone, mackerel by the sixty, cod by the box, eels by the draught, haddocks by the steamer trunk, crabs by the barrel, lobsters by the score, whitebait by the quart and periwinkles by the hundredweight.—London Globe

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Importance of Accessories—New Footwear—Muff, Scarf and Bag Sets—Long Coats and Trimmings.

Smart accessories go a long way toward accounting for the style noticeable wherever a crowd of Knickerbocker women get together. Given a fairly presentable suit and a stunning matched up set of muff, scarf and bag or hat, and a much more expensive get up without such up-to-date finishes, and honors will rest with the first wearer. Nothing changes the appearance of a costume so completely as the small fixings worn with it, and a woman who aims to present an attractive ensemble can not be too particular about the gloves, boots, neckwear, muff, etc. that complete or spoil the effect of any costume.

NOVELTIES.

Never were there more novelties to select from than this season, in fact their variety is somewhat bewildering, unless one keeps in mind one's limitations. In choosing a "Matched Set" for instance it should go well with the various coats, suits and dresses of the outfit, and be of that happy medium that can be worn for almost any occasion, if economy is studied. Otherwise there is no limit to possibilities in matched accessories for day or evening wear.

FUR FASHIONS.

It is not an overstatement to say that fur enters into the make up of almost every fashionable costume seen from tailor mades to dancing frocks. The various pelts of all furry beasts are employed for women's comfort and adornament. The perfection of treatment of the skins, whereby they have lost all odor, stiffness and the weight that was formerly characteristic, is accountable for much of this popularity, though elegance of appearance and becomingness are their chief recommendations.

NEW MUFFS.

Among the newest muffs are those that have a wide roomy pocket in front with or without an overhanging pointed flap that conceals the opening. With such muffs, the ubiquitous bag can be dispensed with, a consideration that appeals to many women. All muffs are very large, very flat and without any stiffness in the lining or any appreciable padding of the skin. One can find in the most fashionable stocks, sets made up of single furs, or of combinations of two or more pelts in an endless variety of styles, prices, and colors, so that any taste or pocketbook may be suited and smart fur accessories secured for any occasion. C. C. Shayne shows especially charming creations in fur, that embody the last word in style and quality.

FOR THE YOUNG GIRL.

For the young girl there are dainty sets of white fox, ermine, white or blue mouffion, Iceland Lamb, sable squirrel, Raccoon or skunk. The last two probably the best wearing pelts known among the long haired furs, and for evening, the cosiest sort of long white coney coats that cost little more than a pretty cloth garment. For more general wear nothing is more desirable than the Caracul coats that stand the hardest usage admirably and can be bought from $65 up. With a light brocaded lining these black coats become dressy enough for almost any wear and as they are made to completely conceal the dress they give the effect of a fur costume, the last word of elegance from Paris.

LONG SCARF STOLES.

Long scarf stoles of fine quality caracul with huge muffs to match constitute a very complete fur garment, since the scarfs extend nearly to the foot of the skirt, and are about 18 inches broad. A distinct novelty seen was a set of mole skin in smoke color, the scarf having three equal length ends that when adjusted formed a very complete and novel covering for the chest and shoulders. Tassels to match finished the ends and the huge muff was similarly adorned. The flat furs, or those with short pelts like seal and ermine, are the ones used for scarf stoles.

THE LATEST FOOTWEAR.

The last word in fashionable footwear is the boot that buttons all the way down to the very sole with from sixteen to eighteen buttons. These have very short patent leather vamps, with tops of kid or cloth. The uppers are white, tan, black, russet, or they match the color of the gown. Velvet shoes have gone out, fortunately, for they were never suitable for anything but carriage wear.

A NEW WRINKLE.

One of the latest wrinkles is to have the fancy bag carried with a dressy get up, match the little waistcoat, or fancy revere worn with the suit coat. The vivid touch of contrasting color now so much desired, can be easily supplied in this way and varied at will.

MR. JOHNSON'S SHIFTLESSNESS

How It Lost Him a Thanksgiving Dinner at Home.

By WILL S. GIDLEY.

[Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.]

"GOT yeh Thanksgibin' tuhkey yet, Missus Johnsing?" asked Mrs. Rawlins across the dividing line fence of her neighbor in the next cottage.

"Has I got my Thanksgibin' tuhkey yet?" echoed Mrs. Johnson in tones of mingled indignation and despondency. "Is yeh axin' me if I's got my Thanksgibin' tuhkey? No, I hasn't! An', furthermore, I don't 'spect to git no tuhkey foh Thanksgibin' this yeah, nor chicken neither, foh dat matter, wid such a lazy, wu'thless, no account niggah as Hannibal Alexander Johnsing to 'ficiate as de grub pervider foh de family."

After a momentary pause and a doleful shake of her turbaned head the speaker went glibly on:

"Heah I bin sayin' 'tuhkey,' 'tuhkey,' to him foh de past six weeks, an' I 'clare to goodness it ain't done no mo' good dan talkin' to de wind."

"Dat was hard luck foh shuah."

"I dunno. Somefin' dreffful, I 'spects," and Mrs. Rawlins rolled up her eyes and smacked her lips in anticipation of the forthcoming revelation.

"Dreffful? I should say it was!" wailed Mrs. Johnson. "Not habin' bin able to connect wid a tuhkey up to date an' 'Thanksgibin' bein' only a few hours off, an' gittin' closer at hand eb'ry minit, Hannibal Alexander suddenly riz to de emergency an' went forth to secure de necessary ingregients foh a Thanksgibin' dinner, even if twa'n't nuffin' more'n chicken. He found de article all right, an' 'long 'bout midnight, he was silently meanderin' homeward wid a plump young rooster under one arm an' a nice fat pullet under de oder, when all at once he stubbed his toe—yes'm, stubbed his toe an' fell down, kerplunk!—an' I 'clare to goodness if dat shif'less mortal didn't lost his grip on dem buhds an' let 'em both git away!

"Why doan I take de money I made washin' last week an' buy a tuhkey, eh? Not much, Mandy Jane! Yeh don't ketch me encouragin' no sich downright shif'lessness by 'dulgin' de perpetrator ob it in dat way. Thanksgiving Centerpiece.

The centerpiece for the Thanksgiving table should symbolize the fruitfulness of the year, that, properly, for which thanks are given. The basket may be simple or elaborate, as the taste inclines, but the simpler it is the more in keeping with the spirit of the season. Nuts may be used in filling the basket. Let the assortment of nuts include hickory nuts, butternuts, black walnuts and chestnuts. For the distinct purpose of decoration quinces may be employed, and these, together with winter pears and apples, should be burnished highly. Finish the front centerpiece with bunches of purple grapes, velvety in their bloom. At the base of the basket may be arranged a bank of green grapes or preferably dried grains.

THE GOBBLER'S NIGHTMARE

By OUR OWN UNCLE WALT.

THE gobbler sat upon a limb and gobbled (soon they'd gobble him!) about this evanescent life and all its struggle, all its strife. "Bird that is born of egg," said he, "is full of trouble as can be. When from the egg he first doth hatch, forthwith he needs must toe the scratch, and scratch with both his baby feet all day to find enough to eat. Of course his mother scratches some to fill his hungry little tum, but when the family is many she often can't provide him any. And when he grows a bigger bird he's singled out from midst the herd, provided he bids fair to be a whopper gobbler, same as me. From that time on he gets his chuck free gratis, which he thinks is luck; but, after all, it is a trick of Farmer Jones that makes me sick, for, though I'm gorged on corn and oats and have a pen, the same as shotes, I have a fear that turns me pale and makes my diet flat and stale. Such overeating makes me dream of things more awful than they seem. In nightmare dreams I see the ax and hear its sharp and shuddery whacks. Oh, such is my distressful dread I sometimes think I'll lose my head!" And thus the gobbler gobbled on till came the chill November dawn, and Farmer Jones he also came with purpose which we needn't name. "By jinks," quoth he, "it seems to me this gobbler's most unusual tame! He doesn't try to get away, though this is sure Thanksgiving day." He reached to grasp the gobbler's leg and found it lifeless as a peg. Alas, the gobbler in the night had died and frozen there with fright!

Q.—Is there any basis in the Scriptures for the story of the "Wandering Jew?"

Answer.—The story of the Wandering Jew has no Scriptural basis, although some have supposed that the words of the Gospel of St. John (John xxi, 22) may have induced the thought. In answer to the words of Peter, the Lord said, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?"—and then we read, "Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die; yet Jesus said not unto him, he shall not die; but, "If I will that he tarry till I come what is that to thee?" Every one of the Lord's faithful followers of the past have fallen asleep in death and have remained in that sleep all through the Gospel dispensation waiting for the awakening in the dawn of the resurrection morning, and then, the Apostle explains, these shall all be "changed in a moment in the twinkling of an eye" from the conditions of corruption, weakness, and dishonor to those of glory, honor and immortality. (I Corinthians xv, 52-54.) To experience this "Change" from mortal to immortal conditions it is necessary that the followers of Christ should die. See verses 35th to 44th of this same chapter.

Q.—Is it proper to speak of those who have turned from sin to righteousness as being regenerated, or having a regenerated heart?

Answer.—The term regenerated is equivalent to the expression of "being born again." There are but two places in the Scriptures where the expression "regeneration" occurs. In Titus iii, 5 it is used to represent the reforming and justifying influences of faith in the Redeemer, the Lord Jesus Christ; and again in Matthew xix, 28, where it is used to represent that glorious moral, social, political, religious, and physical change which will be introduced by the Messiah, who says, "Behold, I make all things new." (Revelation xxi, 5.) The process of regeneration is now going on in the experiences of the members of the Church of Christ—the Christians. These have been forgotten of the Spirit and must grow and develop as "new creatures," and will be born of th Spirit in the resurrection, when as glorious spirit beings they will be invisible and powerful and can then go and come as the wind. (John iii, 8.) In the regeneration of the world, after the Church has experienced the new birth, the race will be restored to its primitive conditions of perfection and life as represented in Adam in the Garden of Eden—"The Times of Restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets."—Acts iii, 19-21.

THANKSGIVING MASKERS

Many Children and Some Grown-ups Parade In Costume.

By WILTON MARKHAM.

IN addition to eating turkey and incidentally being grateful for past mercies, New York has a Thanksgiving day custom that is observed in few if any other communities in America. It is a masker's parade, indulged in chiefly by the children, but also enjoyed and in many cases participated in by the grownups.

The custom is believed to have been originated by the foreign born population of the big city, who, while they have no Thanksgiving in their own lands, make use of other holidays for carnival masquerades and seized upon Thanksgiving for that purpose after coming to America. From them it spread to some extent to the native Americans and now is generally observed throughout Greater New York.

On that one day at least the children literally take possession of the streets, ride all over the street cars, even on the fenders; impersonate Uncle Sam, George Washington and other characters that suit their fancy; dress in all sorts of costumes, that of the ragamuffin having the preference; mask, black their faces, parade, blow horns, ride sorry horses, prance astride of broomsticks and generally enjoy themselves to the limit of their temporary liberty.

New York children have something to be thankful for on Thanksgiving day, even though they have not all the rest of the year. They have no limit set on their hilarity short of the actual commission of crime. Thanksgiving thus becomes to New York what New Year's is to Philadelphia, Christmas eve is in southern cities and Hallowe'en is throughout the country.

The human animal takes to revelry as naturally as the sparks fly upward. This is true whether the animal in question is an inhabitant of Japan, Italy or America and whether he belonged to the first century or boasts himself an up to date product of the twentieth.

Above all, however, it is a day of freedom for the children. They are out as ramins and are permitted to play at begging in the streets and at houses. Horns and rattles are worked overtime. The throwing of confetti and even of flour on pedestrians is an allowable pastime. At some of the open squares cakewalks are given by the children in the presence of thousands and usually with a big cake, presented by a baker in the neighborhood, as a prize. Wearing masks or with their faces stained, the youngsters roam through the streets by thousands.

No Doubt of It.

Mrs. Turkey (proudly)—I heard the farmer say today that I was to be at their Thanksgiving dinner. Do you think they'll feed me well?

Mrs. Goose—Feed you well? Why, they'll simply stuff you.

STATE PRISON FOR A "COUNT"

De Clamecy Given Term of From Six to Ten Years

SENTENCED AS COMMON THIEF

Pleads Guilty When Arraigned on Charge of Passing Worthless Checks —Pulled Wool Over Eyes of Boston City Officials, Who Supposed Him to Be Nobleman—Run Down In New York and Brought Back For Trial

Boston, Nov. 21.—Phil de Clamecy, "M. D., Ph. D., D. Sc., C. E., M. E., sometime lieutenant colonel in the French army," was declared by Judge Sanderson to be a common and notorious thief and was sentenced to not more than ten nor less than six years in the state prison.

"Count" de Clamecy pleaded guilty to four counts, each of which charged the passing by him of worthless checks on the Hotel Touraine. One of these checks, dated June 5, 1911, was for $112.50; another, dated June 4, was for $10, and two more, dated June 3, were drawn for $20 and $60.

"Count" de Clamecy, whose claim to noble birth is seriously questioned, appeared in this city last June and made the Touraine his abiding place. He soon began to move about in official circles, was introduced to Mayor Fitzgerald, who turned him over to ex-Secretary Boudrot for automobile rides and a trip to Deer island, where he wished to go to study that institution.

He also was introduced at city hall, where every courtesy was shown him, and he was given automobile rides around the park system and was shown through the various institutions run by the city. He also made quite an impression upon a French man-o'-war when she was in the harbor, and all but annexed the French consul to his list of trusting ones. The consul was suspicious, however, and insisted on credentials from the supposed distinguished foreigner.

Through Edward Mulready, executive officer of the probation commission, he met Judge Burke of the municipal court, who invited him to sit on the bench with him. The "count" availed himself of this honor and remained on the bench throughout the day.

De Clamecy was arrested in New York for the Boston police by Inspector Griffin. Inspector Sheehan of the Boston police brought him here. While in New York Sheehan found that De Clamecy had passed checks on the Park Avenue hotel to the amount of $260, all drawn on the Commonwealth Trust company of Boston.

Inspector Sheehan testified that De Clamecy had ordered high priced goods from several Boston concerns and had offered worthless checks, receiving cash for change.

The inspector introduced two records of previous sentences, one of which was for five years in Sing Sing.

CANADA IS SORRY

People Regret Having Rejected Reciprocity, Says Editor

Chicago, Nov. 21.—According to J. A. MacDonald, editor of the Toronto Globe and prominent member of the Liberal party, Canada is sorry she rejected reciprocity. MacDonald so declared in an address here.

"The people have returned to sober thinking and regret their action," he said. "The voters were swayed by the unintelligent emotion of the crowd. The annexation bugbear was to blame for it all. People were swept away by it and acted rashly. They are now in a repentant mood."

A Speedy Cure for

Constipation, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Liver Complaints, Tired Feeling, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bad Complexion, Nervousness and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

"Bloodine Liver Pills"

act gently, yet thoroughly upon the bowels, liver, stomach and digestive organs. The pills, in old and chronic cases of constipation and indigestion, act at once, without griping, nor do they leave any unpleasant after-effects, nor form a constant habit of purging, produced by other cathartic remedies.

"Bloodine Liver Pills"

restore the deranged and torpid liver to its normal condition and healthful action. Remove and prevent constipation by securing a natural and regular operation of the bowels, and relieve those unpleasant symptoms which attend a diseased or morbid condition of the liver, stomach and bowels. To assist in attaining this end, the following suggestions are offered.

REMARKS. Everyone who uses pills for their action on the liver, should know that large doses rarely prove as satisfactory as small ones. Large doses simply purge and pass out of the system, usually leaving the bowels constipated, and seldom removing the cause of the trouble, or improve the general health. On the other hand, small doses develop the alterative effect of the medicine, do not irritate or constipate the bowels, but gently stimulate the liver and prevent the accumulation of bile by directing its flow into the proper channels. Therefore it is advisable to commence by taking not over one or two pills at bedtime and increase dose as necessary.

PORTLAND, ME.

GENTS:—I find your "Bloodine Liver Pills" the most effective pill I ever used. They cause no griping or constipative after effect as most liver pills do. Yours truly,
MRS. AMADA RICHARDSON.

Ninth Venire Makes Its Appearance In Los Angeles Court

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 21.—Veniremen popped in and out of the jury box in the McNamara murder trial Monday, making a scene of activity, but one of little progress. Even activity died down in the afternoon during a protracted examination of M. F. Mooney, and it became necessary for a bailiff to awaken a man who went to sleep in court. F. A. McBurney, a builder, was passed as to cause by both sides.

The ninth venire appeared in court yesterday and from fifty named fourteen men were left after Judge Bordwell's preliminary examination. A new venire probably will be drawn before the end of the week.

ILLINOIS PENSIONS DESERVING MOTHERS

State Law Allows $5 to $10 a Month For Each Child

Chicago, Nov. 21.—The new state law pensioning deserving poor mothers with families has become operative. Forty widows, most of them the sole support of many children, received checks for amounts ranging from $18 to $120. This distribution of money brought happiness to many hearts from which it stands off hunger and cold.

The pension act allows $5 to $10 a month for each child. Nearly all the mothers were tearfully grateful. The deserving mothers and children are investigated by officials of the juvenile court. When the home influences are found to be good the money is paid to the mothers.

PROBE IS STARTED

Police Looking Into Alleged Vote Buying In New Bedford

New Bedford, Mass., Nov. 21.—Following a hearing at the state house with Governor Foss, state detectives arrived in this city last night to probe into the alleged vote buying here at the last state election. Instructions given the officers were explicit. They were told to proceed against any violators of the corrupt practices act, no matter whom they might hit.

An investigation was started today which, at its termination, will have swept every precinct of the city. Particular attention will be paid to those sections where the purchasing of votes was known to have been openly carried on.

Cummins seemed stunned by the verdict. His attitude during the testimony was one of apparent assurance and cheerfulness. At the Tombs he broke down and sobbed.

TROOPS FOR MEXICO BORDER

Action Speedily Taken by the Federal Government

BURDEN RESTS UPON DUNCAN

Will Move Troops Under His Command Without Waiting Orders From War Department If Action Is Deemed Necessary—Considerable Force Ready For Service—Reyes Is Arraigned and Held In $10,000 Bond

Washington, Nov. 21.—Determined to stamp out filibustering expeditions against Mexico, Secretary of War Stimson authorized General Duncan, commanding the department of Texas, to enforce the neutrality laws with vigor and to move the troops under his command within division limits without waiting orders from the department.

Secretary Stimson also informed Duncan that he would not lack for all the cavalry and infantry needed to prevent the organization of expeditions against Mexico. No additional troops have been ordered to Texas, however.

Has Over Four Thousand Troops

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 21.—Brigadier General Duncan, upon whose shoulders will fall the burden of maintaining the border patrol and the maintenance of American neutrality if Mexico is again thrown into civil war, has under his command now, and available for service on the border at a moment's notice, two regiments of infantry, two regiments of cavalry and three batteries of field artillery.

One of the infantry regiments and both of the cavalry had most of the patrol work in the course of the struggle of Madero against Diaz, and these commands are made up of seasoned veterans, familiar with every foot of the border country in which the government would be called upon to exercise authority in the event of alarming developments.

The total number of troops, including officers, in the four commands and the field artillery, is between 4000 and 5000, all that are left of the big division that was mobilized here last March. Two regiments of cavalry, four of infantry, two of field artillery and detachments of the signal and engineer corps were recently ordered to other stations outside of Texas and hundreds of miles from the border. One of the regiments, the Tenth infantry, was sent to the isthmus of Panama.

The sudden growth of the Reyes movement has caused much excitement among the troops and today they are wondering how long it will be before they will again be called into action.

Federal authorities at Laredo seized a quantity of ammunition and arms, said to be a part of a store provided by persons who expect to lead a revolt against the Madero government in Mexico. The officers were led to the cache by Juan Meriga shortly after he was arrested as a result of a federal indictment returned at the same time as the one against General Reyes.

Meriga was formerly a cavalry captain in Mexico and his arrest is the fifth in connection with the alleged revolutionary plot. Meriga is said to have made a confession regarding the alleged revolutionary plot, said to have been formed by General Reyes. The officials say Meriga told them he has been engaged in securing horses, arms and ammunition, a considerable amount of which has already been sent into Mexico.

General Bernardo Reyes, arrested on a charge of violating the neutrality laws of the United States, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwards on a new warrant, which further charges that Reyes is a fugitive from Webb county, in the southern district of Texas, where Laredo is situated. Reyes gave $10,000 bonds

BOSWORTH'S TRIAL BEGUN

Took Life of Young Woman With Whom He Was In Love

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 21.—It required but two hours to secure a jury to hear the evidence in the trial of Arthur Bosworth, indicted for the murder of Miss Mae Labell, with whom he was infatuated. Bosworth peaded not guilty.

Bosworth had been deeply in love with Miss Labell, but his affections were not returned. On June 7 last he saw Miss Labell at the railroad station at Essex Junction, pulled a revolver and fired at her five times, inflicting wounds which caused her death a short time afterward. The defense will be insanity.

SKIPS WITH AN ACTOR

Chinese Emperor's Mamma Figures In an Elopement

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—Princess Lai, mother of the baby Emperor of China and the wife of the prince regent, has eloped with an actor, Yung Shu Lu, according to Chinese newspapers received here.

A number of newspapers published in China refer to the "disgrace that has come to the royal family." The mother of the emperor, one paper says, fell in love with the actor and corresponded with him for some time before the rebellion began. The paper draws the conclusion that the princess believed that the Manchu cause was lost and decided to flee.

The princess is said to have taken a fortune in jewels with her and to be living with Yung in Mukden.

An actor and a barber are the lowest of castes in China, it is said.

RECORD PRICE FOR BIBLE

Initial Effort of Gutenburg Brings $290,000 at London Auction

London, Nov. 21.—The sale of the Ruth library at Sotheby's furnished a fresh sensation when a Mazarin Bible fetched the remarkable sum of $290,000.

Bernard Quaritch, the bookseller, opened the bidding at $10,000. The next offer was $15,000, and this was followed by bids rising by $2500 each time, Quaritch taking the prize at a price amounting to double that obtained for this copy when it was last sold at auction.

The so-called Mazarin Bible of 1453-55, the first printed with movable types, ranks as the initial effort of Gutenberg, the inventor of printing.

Coco was eager, learned quickly and came to be regarded as the family's most promising young comedian. He went to bed with a cold three days ago, and special care by Dr. Blair could not save him.

"WAR OF DEMONSTRATION"

Suffragettes Intend to Begin It Tonight In London

London, Nov. 21.—The suffragettes are preparing to renew their attacks on parliament with a battle tonight which will surpass all previous campaigns.

A few days ago a delegation of suffragettes interviewed Premier Asquith and tried to obtain a pledge that the government would undertake to pass a bill giving equal suffrage to both sexes. Asquith declined to make such a pledge, but told the women instead that he had always been opposed to woman suffrage.

At a subsequent meeting the suffragettes decided to inaugurate a "war of demonstration" in parliament square on Nov. 21. They have summoned all their followers and male sympathizers to assemble around the parliament building at 8 o'clock this evening. The fact that the gathering is fixed for after dark may make unusual trouble for the police.

DEATH CHAIR CLAIMS THREE IN SING SING

Triple Execution Accomplished In Twenty-Three Minutes

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Three murderers were led to the death chamber in Sing Sing prison Monday and put to death by electricity. They were Pietro Faletta of Portchester, Frank Schermerhorn of Millbrook and Bert I. Brown of Rye. They went to the chair in that order. The executions lasted only twenty-three minutes.

Of the three crimes expiated Schermerhorn's attracted the most notice. On the night of Jan. 13, 1910, Sarah Brymer, a nurse employed by Barnes Compton at Millbrook, was found dead. Schermerhorn was convicted on circumstantial evidence. Schermerhorn finally admitted the crime.

Bert L. Brown, a negro, killed William Brown, his half brother, at Rye, May 21, 1910. The defendant admitted firing the fatal shot, but contended he had done so in self defense.

Pietro Faletto cut Louis Levine's throat in Levine's store in Portchester, Aug. 13, 1909. The trial developed that Faletto was in need of money and went to Levine's store for the purpose of robbery. He admitted the killing, but said that Levine had attacked him with a knife.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 21.—Robert Burns, head of the Burns Detective agency, with offices at 1 Beacon street, Boston, was arrested yesterday afternoon at the Cambridge courthouse and later arraigned in the superior criminal court before Judge McLaughlin and pleaded not guilty to two counts of perjury.

When arraigned in court, he waived the reading of the indictment through his counsel and was released on sureties of $500. The indictment and arrest of Burns is a result of his work in the recent Middlesex graft investigation. He was employed by an association of men in Middlesex who brought the charges.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Dr. Dalaney, the White House physician, after a visit to President Taft, announced that there had been a decided improvement in Mr. Taft's condition. "He is very much better," said Dalaney. "It is not anything but a cold," said another White House official.

Although he is to be confined to the executive mension for a few days, if the doctor's orders are obeyed, the president will not lose that time. He intends to work in his library on his message to congress and other important matters and will receive cabinet officers and other officials there.

"ALCOHOL AND GLYCERINE"

Cabell Rules That "Solidified" Drink Must Be Taxed

Washington, Nov. 21.—Commissioner of Internal Revenue Cabell has put a crimp in the aspirations of the genius who wants to have his invention of solidified whiskies, beers and wines exempted from the customary internal revenue tax. Cabell, after carefully testing the tabloid product of the young westerner, ruled that it must carry tax.

The westerner's tabloid form of whiskey was nothing more than a quantity of alcohol mixed with glycerine, Cabell says. "I suppose that if a person consumed a large number of the 'whiskey tablets' he could become intoxicated, but I shudder to think of the effect."

WROTE TO HIS COUSIN

Spencer Expressed Horror at Murder of Miss Blackstone

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 21.—During his stay in the York street jail, Bertram G. Spencer, who is on trial here for the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, March 31, 1910, wrote to a relative in Oakland, Cal.: "The way of the transgressor is hard," and this letter, introduced by the defense, and the beginning of the expert testimony, which it is believed will last the entire week, featured Monday's session in the Hampden county courthouse.

Spencer declared in his letter to his cousin, Mrs. Anita Martland: "My whole life would have been different if father had treated me differently, but he did not and by his cruel treatment we all had to leave our seemingly good homes." He spoke of the killing of Miss Blackstone as "that awful, awful thing."

TO HOLD BACK TURKEYS

Women In Indiana and Kentucky Think Prices Too Low

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 21.—Farmers' wives in southern Indiana and western Kentucky have launched a movement to hold back the crop of Thanksgiving turkeys for better prices. This section offers an unusually large crop of turkeys.

In the markets of Chicago, Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati and St. Louis the quotations made to shippers are 6 to 8 cents lower than they were a year ago. The low prices are disappointing, and the women believe it is possible for them to "corner the market" themselves and force up the prices.

—Despite what any judge may decide, the average buyer of food will find it much more agreeable to buy of a man who keeps it covered from the dust and dirt of the street than of a man who disregards all cleanliness to save the price of a little screening.—Brockton Enterprise.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE LEFT OVER TURKEY.

AFTER Thanksgiving there is generally such a surfeit of turkey that the fragments of the fowl are hard to dispose of. Left over turkey can, however, be worked into several delicious dishes.

For breakfast there may be turkey hash with poached eggs. To make it the meat should be removed from the bones of the turkey and cut into small pieces to amount to about a cupful. Take some of the turkey stuffing, mince and add a tablespoonful of onion juice. Season with salt and pepper.

Turn the meat and stuffing into a well buttered skillet and moisten with a turkey sauce—oyster or giblet. Mix and heat well. Serve on slices of toast. Make a depression in the center of each slice and add a poached egg.

Turkey Soup.

To use up the turkey bones make turkey soup. Remove all the stuffing from the fowl for this purpose and break the back into pieces. Use all the left over bits of meat, the skin and all available bones. Take a knuckle of veal and cover with cold water. Boil for five minutes, after which throw the water away. Then add the fragments of turkey and bones, placing all in the stock pot with three quarts of boiling water. Let this boil until the meat falls from the bones. When almost cooked add a sliced onion, six sliced carrots, one blade of celery broken into pieces, a bit of bay leaf, a sprig of parsley and one-half teaspoonful of peppercorns. Strain and remove the fat.

Creamed Turkey.

Creamed turkey is a very appetizing dish, but to make it one needs some chicken or veal stock. Here is one recipe for it:

Chop one-half of a green pepper fine. Saute five minutes in three tablespoonfuls of butter, then stir in three tablespoonfuls of flour. Add the stock—about one cupful with one-half cupful of hot cream. Beat until smooth and then add salt and pepper and a trifle of celery salt. Now place the saucepan in hot water. Add a cupful of cold roast turkey cut in cubes, one-half cupful of cold boiled potatoes and one-half tablespoonful of onion juice. Take some boiled rice, shape in a mold, leaving a hollow center. In the center of the rice serve the turkey.

ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon Islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

"What part of the United States is your home," he asked—"Chicago or Wyoming or somewhere out there?"

"No; Hawaii. I was born there. It is a beautiful land. My, I'm almost homesick for it already. Not that I haven't been away. I was in New York when the crash came. But I do think it is the sweetest spot on earth—Hawaii, I mean.

"I might as well begin at the beginning." She lifted her head with a proud air of dismissing sadness after the manner of a woman qualified to wear a Baden-Powell and a long barreled Colt's. "I was born at Hilo. That's on the island of Hawaii, the biggest and best in the group. I can't remember when I first got on a horse nor when I learned to swim. That came before my A B C's. Dad owned cattle ranches on Hawaii and Maui—big ones for the islands. Hokuna had 200,000 acres alone. It extended in between Mauna Kea and Mauna Loa, and it was there I learned to shoot goats and wild cattle.

"Von had been in the army, and dad was an old seadog, and they were both stern disciplinarians—only Von's girls had no mother, and neither had I, and they were two men, after all. They spoiled us terribly. You see, they didn't have any wives, and they made chums out of us—when our tasks were done. We had to learn to do everything about the house twice as well as the native servants did it—that was so that we should know how to manage some day.

"More than once one or the other of us had our rifles taken away for a week just because of a tiny speck of rust. We had to know how to build fires in the driving rain, too, out of wet wood when we camped out, which was the hardest thing of all—except grammar, I do believe. We learned more from dad and Von than from the governesses; dad taught us French and Von German. We learned both languages passably well, and we learned them wholly in the saddle or in camp. When I was sixteen we three girls were all sent up to California to Mills seminary, which was quite fashionable and stifling. How we used to long for home! We didn't chum with the other girls, who called us little cannibals, just because we came from the Sandwich Islands and who made invidious remarks about our ancestors banqueting on Captain Cook—which was historically untrue, and, besides, our ancestors hadn't lived in Hawaii.

"I was three years at Mills seminary, with trips home, of course, and two years in New York, and then dad went smash in a sugar plantation on Maui. Dad had nothing left, and he decided to return to the sea. He'd always loved it, and I half believe that he was glad things had happened as they did. He was like a boy again—busy with plans and preparations from morning till night. He used to sit up half the night talking things over with me. That was after I had shown him that I was really resolved to go along. We were ready to start to Tahiti, where a lot of repairs and refitting for the Miele were necessary, when poor dad came down sick and died."

"And you were left all alone?" Joan nodded.

"Very much alone. I had no brothers or sisters, and all dad's people were drowned in a Kansas cloudburst. That happened when he was a little boy. Of course I could go back to Von. There's always a home there waiting for me. But why should I go? Besides, there were dad's plans, and I felt that it devolved upon me to carry them out. It seemed a fine thing to do; also I wanted to carry them out. And here I am.

"Take my advice and never go to Tahiti. It is a lovely place, and so are the natives, but the white people! Now, Barabbas lived in Tahiti. Thieves, robbers and liars—that is what they are. The honest men wouldn't require the fingers of one hand to count. The fact that I was a woman only simplified matters with them. They robbed me on every pretext, and they lied without pretext or need. Poor Mr. Ericson was corrupted. He joined the robbers and O. K.'d all their demands, even up to a thousand per cent. If they robbed me of 10 francs his share was 3.

"But when the robbers fell to cheating one another I got my first clews to the state of affairs. One of the robbed robbers came to me after dark with facts, figures and assertions. I knew I was ruined if I went to law. The judges were corrupt like everything else. But I did do one thing. In the dead of night I went to Ericson's house. I had the same revolver I've got now, and I made him stay in bed while I overhauled things. Nineteen hundred and odd francs was what I carried away with me. He never complained to the police.

"Then I sent to New Zealand and got a German mate. He had a master's certificate, and was on the ship's papers as captain, but I was a better navigator than he, and I was really captain myself. I lost her, too, but it's no reflection on my seamanship. The German mate was drowned. We lay all night to a sea drag, and next morning sighted your place here."

"I suppose you will go back to Von now?" Sheldon queried.

"Nothing of the sort. Dad planned to go to the Solomons. I shall look about for some land and start a small plantation. Do you know of any good land around here—cheap?"

"By George, you Yankees are remarkable—really remarkable!" said Sheldon. "I should never have dreamed of such a venture."

"Adventure," Joan corrected him.

"That's right—adventure it is. And if you'd gone ashore on Malaita instead of Guadalcanar you'd have been kai kai'd long ago, along with your noble Tahitian sailors."

Joan shuddered.

"To tell the truth," she confessed, "we were very much afraid to land on Guadalcanar. I read in the Sailing Directions that the natives were treacherous and hostile. Some day I should like to go to Malaita. Are there any plantations there?"

"Not one, not a white trader even."

"Then I shall go over on a recruiting vessel some time."

"Impossible!" Sheldon cried. "It is no place for a woman."

"I shall go just the same," she repeated.

SAVAGE SPORT.

Slapping Game of the Bontoc Igorrotes a Unique Contest.

Every nation has its own idea of sport. That of the wild Igorrotes of northern Luzon used to consist principally of head hunting, a grisly and bloody recreation which the American occupation discouraged. But not all the pastimes of the Igorrotes are as horrible as this. One rather amusing game of which they are fond is thus described by Dean C. Worcester in the National Geographic Magazine:

A constabulary officer tells us that if we want to see a unique contest we must ask for the slapping game of the Bontoc Igorrotes. We want to see all there is going and say so.

A wooden bench is brought out, and two lithe and muscular young men step forward. One of them squats on the bench, grasping his right thigh in his hands so as to tighten the muscles as much as possible.

The other stands beside him and stretches out his right arm. He throws his arm back and then sweeps it forward in a full round arm swing. The blow falls on thin air, close to the tightened thigh muscles of his opponent.

He now swings his arm back again, his whole body turning with it, rises on the toes of his left foot and puts every ounce of strength which he possesses into a blow delivered with the flat of his hand upon the rigid thigh of his opponent. Knots of muscle spring out on his arm, back and legs as he strikes and the blow cracks like a revolver shot.

The recipient endeavors, sometimes with poor success, to preserve an expression of contemptuous indifference. The judges examine his thigh. If the blow has been hard enough blood will show just beneath the skin and he will not have the stisfaction of taking a whack at his opponent, but if this result has not been achieved the other must take his seat on the bench and submit to be smitten.

The contest continues until one succeeds in producing the bloody mark on the other.

Generosity.

Patrick worked for a notoriously stingy boss and lost no chance to let the fact be known. Once a waggish friend, wishing to twit him, remarked:

"Pat, I hear your boss just gave you a brand new suit of clothes."

"No," said Pat, "only a part of a suit."

"What part?"

"The sleeves iv the vest."—New York Times.

FORBES—BERTAU.

A wedding of much interest to the younger set of Quincy took place at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Monday, when Miss Josephine Bertau was united in marriage to Edward Forbes of this city.

After a sumptuous wedding breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Forbes took a train East where the honeymoon will be spent. They will reside in Cambridge, where they will be at home to their friends after January 1, 1912.

Miss Bertau made many friends in this city during her stay with relatives while she was finishing her musical education at the New England Conservatory of Music and it was at this time that Mr. Forbes made her acquaintance.

Mr. Forbes is to be congratulated on gaining such a talented and gracious young lady for his wife.

COST OF CELEBRATING.

Col. H. N. Renouff, at the "Old Guard" banquet, told an instructive story about summer vacations.

"I said to a man the other day," he began, 'Well, are you going to send your wife to the seashore again this summer?'

" 'No, sir; I'm not,' said he. 'I can't afford it.'

" 'But your wife's so economical," I objected. 'You told me that she spent very little at the shore last year.'

" 'Yes, I know,' said he; 'but home alone, I spent over a hundred a week.' "

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

It was definitely announced this morning that there would be no football game between Waltham High and Quincy High this season. Waltham High as a result of the failure of the weather to permit the game scheduled for last Saturday, offered the manager December 2, but for numerous reasons, it was deemed inadvisable to accept that date.

Since being the case the football season of the local High school has drawn to a close, and a survey of the schedule will show that the local warriors out of 11 games, have annexed 8 victories and succumbed to 3 defeats.

Quincy High has been beaten this year by Cambridge Latin, Medford High and Powder Point High. The first mentioned secured a 14 to 0 victory, the second rolled up a victorious score of 23 to 0, while the third was pronounced a winner in a well contested and exciting game, by the close score of, 5 to 2.

Thus it can be readily seen that work of the team has been highly achieved is one of which the student body of the local institution may feel justly proud.

Great credit must be given Coach Arthur Staff for his ceaseless efforts to round out a fast combination, and he certainly caused the entire eleven to play a better game on each occasion. Many new men had to be developed, and as practically the same team will wear the colors of Quincy High next season, we may well expect to see a championship aggregation representing the Granite City in interscholastic ranks.

The results of all the football games played this season are as follows:

QUINCY HIGH.

Quincy High 0; Cambridge Latin 14.

Quincy High 6; Weymouth High 0.

Quincy High 20; Brighton High 0.

Quincy High 20; South Boston High 0.

Quincy High 0; Medford High 23.

Quincy High 5; High School of Com. 0.

Quincy High 5; Boston College High 0.

Quincy High 6; Brockton High 0.

Quincy High 2; Powder Point 5.

Quincy High 17; Melrose High 0.

Quincy High 8; Worcester High 0.

The recent performance of Franz Marceau, a well known local boy, now a student at Dartmouth college, has caused him to come in for a great deal of commendation. He ran the five mile cross country course of Hanover in 26 minutes, 27 seconds, such being considered remarkably fast time for five miles on the flat.

Ball Money.

Blackmail used to be levied on the newlyweds in England to prevent them from being mobbed upon leaving the church. This "graft" was called "ball money," because it was given ostensibly to buy a football for the village green, but it rarely went beyond the nearest public house.

Harvester Trust Has Not Used Its Power to Oppress

MAKES APPEAL IN MISSOURI

Roosevelt's Declaration For a Square Deal, as Well as Language of Two Judges, Quoted In Filing Motion For Rehearing of Case In Which Corporation Was Ousted From State and Fined $50,000

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 21.—Quoting Theodore Roosevelt's recent declaration for a "square deal" for both the corporations and the public, the International Harvester company filed in the supreme court of Missouri a motion for a rehearing in the recent case, in which it was conditionally ousted from the state and fined $50,000 on charges of violating the state anti-trust law.

The gist of the motion is that the harvester company ought not to be punished for the mere possession of power, and it announces its "intention of vigorously resisting the fine."

The brief quotes this language from the court's opinion, by Chief Justice Valliant: "On the whole, the evidence shows that the International Harvester company has not used its power to oppress or injure the farmers who are its customers."

Also from a separate opinion of Judge Ferries of St. Louis, as follows:

"In this case the court is required by the statute to pronounce a judgment of condemnation on a combination which is proved by the facts in this record to have been so far beneficial to the community that the price of mowers and reapers has not been raised in proportion to the increased cost of materials and labor, and that otherwise incidental benefits have accrued to the consumers, and furthermore, that independent manufacturers have not suffered by reason of the combination."

Referring to the fine, the company says it will oppose it, "not so much because of its amount as because of the fact, as is contended, that so large a fine will create the impression that the company has been unfair or oppressive in its dealings, and therefore deserved so severe a punishment, while the language of the court's opinion is to the contrary."

The brief quotes former President Roosevelt as follows:

"We demand that big business must give the people a square deal; in return we must insist that when anyone engaged in big business honestly endeavors to do right, he shall himself be given a square deal. We need to formulate immediately and definitely a policy which, in dealing with big corporations that behave themselves and which contain no menace, save what is necessarily potential in any corporation which is of great size and very well managed, shall aim, not at their destruction, but at their regulation and supervision."

LODGE AT OYSTER BAY

Senior Bay State Senator Is In Conference With Roosevelt

Boston, Nov. 21.—Senator Lodge is spending a few days at Oyster Bay with Theodore Roosevelt. The impression was given that Lodge had gone directly to Washington following the state campaign.

The visit of the senior senator to Oyster Bay is regarded as having considerable political significance in connection with the situation in Massachusetts, so far as relates to the delegation to the Republican convention in 1912.

There is considerable feeling among the Republican leaders here against a pledged delegation to President Taft in 1912. The issue, "a vote for Frothingham is a vote for Taft," was clearly made by the Republicans in the state fight.

RAMON CACERES SLAIN

Served Four Years as Head of the Dominican Government

Washington, Nov. 21.—Ramon Caceres, president of Santo Domingo, was assassinated by political malcontents in San Domingo City, according to reports to the state department. No uprising has followed as yet.

It is presumed here that Caceres has fallen a victim to one of the characteristic Dominican plots. It is known that Caceres' administration, which has lasted four years, an almost unprecedented period in Dominican history, has very recently been disturbed by several well defined revolutionary plots.

LAJOIE TELLS OF HIS HARDEST HIT

When He Put Force Behind Swing It Didn't Count.

BRICK WALL WAS THE FIELDER.

Larry Thought It Was a Sure Homer, but Was Unexpectedly Tagged Out by Second Sacker, Who Had Received Ball on Rebound From Wall.

"I have, of course, made quite a few long hits and hard hits in my time," said Larry Lajoie, the veteran infielder of the Cleveland Americans, the other day. "Some of them went a good deal farther than others, and some of them were smashed with a good deal more vigor than the rest, all depending largely, of course, upon the way the bat met the leather.

"I have a keen and painful recollection, however, of what I think was the hardest hit I ever made. The recollection is specially keen and extremely painful because I wasted so much energy on the blamed thing and because the best I got was the hawhaw.

LARRY LAJOIE, CLEVELAND'S GREAT BATTER AND INFIELDER.

"It was way back in the days when I was on the old Philadelphia team, which, as you will remember, was some aggregation of swatsmiths. Although I was rather new to the big league in those days, I seemed to fit in with that bunch all right and was hitting along with the rest of the tribe.

"In those days the right field fence in Philadelphia was close, and the fielders used to play to take them on the bound as they came back from the fence. In one game, if I remember rightly, three men were thrown out at first on what should have been the safest kind of hits. But that is another story.

"The afternoon I made my great hit was one of good, husky batting. Life was miserable for all the pitchers and especially for our performers. When the last half of the ninth arrived we were to the bad something like 9 to 7. There were a hit, an out, a base on balls and a pop fly. I came up, with men on first and second, two gone and the chance to tie or win before me.

"The ball came over hissing hot. I grazed it, and that was all. The next one must have been intended simply as a teaser, for it drifted over so slow and easy that a baby could have hit it with a wire. I thought the hurler never meant to get it near the pan, but was playing wide to get a possible fall out of the runner, who was leading off second. Anyhow, it came over the size of a balloon. 'Oh, joy!' said I, and I leaned the bat against that ball with all my weight and muscle.

"To the best of my recollection I never before or since hit a ball so hard as that one. I could almost feel the leather being driven into the core of the yarn and rubber by the force of that tremendous drive, and the sting ran up the bat. The ball went out, not whizzing, not sailing, but faster, more terrifically speedy than anything I ever laid the wood against in all my life.

"There was a glad roar from the multitude, and I went down to first, bent for a home run, while two men flew along ahead of me. Round first I went and steamed for the middle corner. Suddenly a man rose up in my tracks and stuck the ball into my diaphragm—it was the third out, and the game was over.

"How and whyfore? Only this: I had hit the ball so fearfully hard that it rebounded back from the right field wall like a snapped piece of rubber band. It shot straight back all the way to the diamond and leaped right into the second baseman's hands for a sure trap and the last one of the afternoon. And that is the story of the hardest ball I ever hit. Do you wonder that the memory gives me a pain?"

MASTERS OF CHESS.

Some of the Greatest Blindfolded Players of the Past.

Playing at chess without seeing the board is a much older accomplishment than is generally known even among chess players. Buzecca, an Italian, as early as 1266 played three games at once, looking at one board, but not at the other two. His three competitors were skilled in the game, but he won two games and made a draw of the third. Ruy Lopez, whose name has been given to an opening; Mangiolini, Terone Medrano, Leonardi da Cutis, Paoli Boi, Salvia and others who lived between the thirteenth and seventeenth centuries were able to play the game without seeing the board. Father Sacchieri of Pavia early in the eighteenth century played three games at once against three players without seeing any of the boards.

It remained for Philidor, the greatest genius at chess known up to his time, to play blindfolded in England in 1783 against three of the best players then living, winning two games and drawing the third, surprising his antagonists and the throng of onlookers by keeping up a lively conversation all the while. Philidor's achievement as to the number of simultaneous games has been far outdone by Paul Morphy, Paulsen, Blackburne and several of their successors. But Philidor, lively Frenchman that he was, still holds the palm as a conversationalist and player at the same time.

Philidor was the assumed name of Francois Andre Danican, born at Dreux in 1726. He was educated as a court musician for Louis XIV. He composed music to Dryden's "Alexander's Feast" and to many operas, all long since forgotten. Danican's fame does not live in music, but as Philidor, the chess player. As a chess player he visited Holland, Germany and England. In 1749, while in England, he published his "Analysis of Chess," a work which has taken its place among the classics of the game. He died in England Aug. 31, 1795.—Exchange.

Not Reassuring.

"Do you think you will like married life as well as you do your club, dear?"

"Yes, quite sure, darling."

"Are you so very fond of your club?"

"Not very, darling."

A Delightful Metaphor.

"Now," said a famous Irish speaker in a political debate, "I come to dangerous ground. In fact, I know I am skating on the thin ice of a burning volcano!"

AMATEUR BOXING.

The amateur boxing tournament held tonight in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, by the Quincy A. A. was featured by the unusual spectacle of two brothers entered in the same class. Frank and Martin Beoli of the Clapp Memorial Institute of East Weymouth. They boxed in the 125-pound division. Frank was beaten in the semifinal by Walter Ochs of the Dorchester A. A., but Ochs succumbed to Martin in the final. This bout was of the rapid-fire order and Martin avenged the family defeat in whirlwind fashion.

Al Davey of Roxbury beat Harry Marshall of the Terminal A. A. in the first bout in the 115-pound class. "Sailor" Harrington of the cruiser Des Moines, and Jack Noonan of the Dorchester A. A. drew byes in this class, but both were beaten in three-round bouts by Davey. Harry Carlson of the Brockton Y. M. C. A. was awarded the decision over Yorke O'Connell of Charlestown, who quitted in the second round of a 115-pound special.

Harry Stewart of Byers Gym beat Joe Henry of the Harmoney Club and Joseph White of the Marion A. C. in the 135-pound class, and Robert Gerstell of the Glover A. C. won from Harry Archung of Salem, a Chinese boxer in a 135-pound special. Jack Norton of the Forest Hills A. A. was referee.

"I tell you," said the complaining citizen, "that gambling-room in the next block is a greater nuisance than an aching tooth."

"Well," said the policeman, reflectively, "I guess we'll have it pulled."—Washington Star.

WASHINGTON WINS GAME AND CITY CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeats John Hancock School In Well Contested Soccer Game

Secures $100 Cup Offered As Trophy By Fore River

Exhibiting a form of playing characteristic of a well seasoned aggregation, the members of the John Hancock and Washington school soccer football teams, came together in the game to settle the championship for the grammar schools of this city, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, on the Water street grounds. The contest, which was witnessed by fully 450 spectators, composed mostly of the pupils whose teams were combatting for honors, and pupils as well of the various other schools throughout the city, who have been inspired and inflamed to a high degree of enthusiasm by the project itself, was a most gruelling one from start to finish and not until the time for playing had expired, could it be safely said that the Washington school team was a 1 to 0 victor.

Special cars conveyed the pupils of the Washington school to the scene of the battle and the Old Colony League park presented the spectacle of its history, for the continual shouting, the prolonged happy and viciferous outbursts of applause that greeted the different plays from time to time, were of the variety seldom, if ever, noticeable on the Water street grounds. It was at first thought that the rain of the previous day had placed the grounds in a rather unfavorable condition for the game, but on advice of Dr. Smith, physical director of the schools, who conferred with the principals of the contending factions, it was agreed to play the final game on the date scheduled and the announcement to that effect was received with great anxiety.

The idea of having soccer football participated in by the boys in the different schools was inaugurated by Dr. Smith himself, and the result of yesterday's final game was conclusive proof that great benefits have been derived from its adoption and that the project itself has met with marked success. Not only was the championship for the grammar schools of the city at stake, but a gold cup, to the value of $100 had been donated by the Fore River soccer football team to be presented to the winner. This cup is now the property of the Washington school. It is to be permanently set aside as the championship cup, and will be awarded each year to the winning combination.

The names of all the players of the winning team have been inscribed upon it and will remain in the possession of the pupils of the Washington school until some other school team is fortunate enough to secure the trophy.

All the grammar schools of the city were represented by teams, and the different schools were drawn up into four divisions. The four winners then played elimination games and the final struggle resolved into the question of supremacy resting between the members of the John Hancock and Washington school teams.

The Washington school team, the champion contingency of the grammar school league, has played games with the Coddington school, the Atherton Hough school, the Adams school, and one game each with two selected teams outside the district. They won all games with the exception of the game with the Adams school, which resulted in a 0 to 0 tie. The championship of the district of which the Washington school eleven was a member, was won by defeating Atherton Hough team. Two games were later required with the Coddington, one game having resulted in a 0 to 0 score. The Wollaston school, the champion team of the north district was also defeated and the defeat administered to the John Hancock school Tuesday, entitled the members of the Washington school team to the honor of superiority.

The Washington team has not been scored on this season, although it can be observed that two games resulted in no score ties. Superior passing, combined with a general knowledge of the strategy of the game, enabled the Washington school boys to win esterday. The game aws won in the first five minutes of play by a well directed pass to Cain, who booted the ball clean between the uprights for the first and only score of the game. The shouts that went up when he accomplished the feat were deafening and Cain is now being heralded as "the boy of the hour."

The remainder of the game was closely contested, although the ball was in the territory of the winners the greater part of the time, due to a large extent to the advantages of the excessive weight of the Washington school boys over their much lighter opponents.

For the winners, Cain, Marr, Greenhalgh and Gurney excelled, while Moody, Rannalls and Nelson played well for the losers.

BARNES IS OUT OF RACE

Withdraws As Candidate For President of Senate

SEN. GREENWOOD THE MAN

Senator George L. Barnes has withdrawn as a candidate for the presidency of the Senate which, together with those of Tinkham and Blanchard, leaves the field well in hand to Senator Greenwood of Gardner.

Senator Tinkham got out of the fight early on Tuesday and later in the day Senators Blanchard and Geo. L. Barnes sent the following letter to Senator Greenwood:

"We are satisfied that in the contest for the presidency of the Senate you now have the support of a clear majority of the Republican members-elect.

"We believe most thoroughly that the minority should acquiesce in the preference of the majority and should cordially support whoever may be so preferred. Therefore we are pleased to say to you that we shall no longer continue the contest for the presidency and shall be pleased to join with the Senators who have indicated their preference to you and give you our support.

"We wish you the most pleasant and successful administration of your office. Sincerely yours,

"George L. Barnes.
"Charles V. Blanchard."

FOUND DEAD BODY OF INFANT

B. F. Flynn, an East Milton produce dealer, in passing through Newport avenue extension, near the Norfolk Downs depot, Tuesday afternoon, had his attention attracted to a bundle on side of the street. Getting off of his team to investigate, he found the bundle to contain the body of a newly born female child. Officer Larkin was notified and the body was turned over to Medical Examiner Jones. Dr. Jones said that the child had been born dead and had evidently been there a week. There were no marks by which it could be identified, as the only covering was a Boston paper of Oct. 18 and a piece of brown wrapping paper. It was evidently a case of disertion.

POUND PARTY.

A "pound surprise party" was tendered Rev. and Mrs. T. C. Martin at the parsonage, Tuesday evening, by the people of the church. They assembled on Hall Place at 7.45 and marched to the parsonage where Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Jose had previously gone to secure the attention of the pastor and his family and it was a complete surprise when the party arrived.

Miss C. B. Hodgkinson had charge of the entertainment, which consisted of piano selections by Miss Jessie Burke and Maud Nichols; readings by Miss Hilda Francis and a solo by C. A. Goucher. During the evening Mrs. Martin and Miss Helen Martin favored the guests with readings and solos. There were also duets by Lawrence Martin and Camille Fuller.

Mr. Martin thanked his people for their expression of good will and told several clever short stories.

Games were played until a late hour and refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid.

MRS. ANDERSON ENTERTAINED.

Mrs. Charles J. Anderson of Oakland avenue, Wollaston, entertained at dinner Tuesday evening in honor of her daughter Mabel's twentieth birthday. It was an informal affair. Covers were laid for eight. The decorations were vari-colored chrysanthemums.

CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Mr. And Mrs. Washington I. Tuckerman Receive Congratulations of Many Friends

GUESTS PRESENT

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Washington I. Tuckerman of 24 Brackett street, East Milton, but for ten years a most popular and highly respected resident of this city, was the scene of a most happy gathering of relatives and friends, who had assembled to observe the 50th anniversary, or the golden wedding of the above mentioned parties. The affair itself was a most touching one, and the various adornments and decorations that bedecked the homestead itself, presented a spectacle of lustre that is almost beyond description.

Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman were kept busy the entire evening receiving the many visitors who had come to the event for the purpose of bestowing congratulations and well wishes for a long life, to the couple who have already rounded out a half century of united wedlock.

Flowers of various sorts adorned the reception parlor, where the couple were engaged in renewing the acquaintances of their friends. A handsome display of chrysanthemums, the gift of Mrs. J. H. Emerson showed forth conspicuously while an enticing bed of flowers, of varigated array, the gift of Mrs. Edith Prescott Wolcott, widow of the late Governor Wolcott, proved a source of enrapture to the onlooker.

The decorations themselves were of the finest order and were all artistically arranged by Mrs. Samuel Kirkland.

The music for the occasion was furnished by Reeves' orchestra and the repertoire rendered added a charm to the fitting observance of a golden anniversary. As soon as the different guests had been introduced to the happy couple, they repaired to the

TIME FOR FILING EXPIRES TODAY AT 5

The time for filing nomination papers expires tonight at 5 o'clock. Papers should be filed before that time, however, so that the Registrars may have time to certify to the signatures on the papers. It is not expected that there will be many papers filed, probably three at the most, one for Stone, one for Wall and one for Thayer as Councilman from Ward One.

INVITATION FOR SUNDAY.

The Squantum Improvement association has invited the candidates for Mayor and Councilmen-at-large to meet with the association Sunday afternoon at Squantum, at 3 o'clock. The particular reason that Sunday was selected is that it is difficult to have a meeting on a weekly evening.

SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION.

Th second regular meeting of the Unitarian Sunday School Union of Boston was held Monday evening in the parlors of First Parish church, Dorchester. Rev. Charles T. Billings delivered an address on "The Supreme Aim in Sunday School Instruction," after which there was a half-hour discussion by the delegates. President Charles H. Johnson of Quincy presided. The next meeting of the union will be held Dec. 18 in the Bulfinch Place church, Boston.

The Wollaston Glee club is preparing to give its first concert of the season of 1911-1912 on Wednesday evening Dec. 13 when it will be assisted by America's most famous baritone soloist Stephen Townsend.

"FRIENDLY VISITORS"

Great Help To Association Says Miss Hardwick

HER WORK IN SO. BOSTON

Miss Katherine Hardwick of Quincy, district secretary of the South Boston Associated Charities, gave an interesting talk about her work, before the Philanthropy committee of the Quincy Women's club Tuesday afternoon, at the Women's club house. Previous to introducing Miss Hardwick, the committee held a meeting fort he transaction of business, at which Mrs. Marsh made a report upon some of the cases which she was looking after.

Miss Hardwick spoke largely of her work in South Boston and the great help which the friendly visitors were to the association. in South Boston they had fifty volunteers, and of this number all but ten did visiting. Of the others, some were not able and three girls objected to entering houses unless they had been thoroughly disinfected. These three were given office work to do, of which there was a great amount. The things most helpful in these visitors is that you can depend upon them, for they are loyal. Then there are others who help with moeny and still others who have families in which they are specially interested.

Then we have a result committee said Miss Hardwick in South Boston we have from 200 to 300 families and the results in each case are carefully tabulated in our records, so that we may see if we have done all that is necessary for the family. By different colored tags the cause of the family trouble is indicated, so that we keep our work up day by day.

Then we have an executive committee, who understand what we are working for. They meet once a month and to them we bring our perplexing cases. Then we have weekly conferences and the problems that are perplexing are taken up and the plan for each case undertaken. The need for friendly visitors is eminent. We plan to have as many volunteers as possible, giving them from one to four families to visit.

In starting a new family, we give our visitor a definite excuse for calling on the family, for in many cases the families are too proud to want help. Then we talk to them in a common sense way, and in this way get them interested and get at the seat of their trouble.

Miss Hardwick said that perhaps the best way to show what friendly visitors do is to tell what some have accomplished. She then told how young ladies, with wealthy parents who had become interested in the

KNIGHTS AND LADIES HAVE MERRY TIME

At Social Of Galahad Brotherhood Tuesday Night

THE PROGRAM

King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table accompanied by the fairest maids of his court made merry Tuesday night at the Galahad Brotherhood social queen Guinevere, Enid, and the maid of Astolat, would there have met their rivals, while Sir Lancelot, Sir Galahad and Sir Gareth would have met their equals in tournament.

Christ church parish house was exquisitely decorated with shields and pennant, battle axe and helmet, blue ribbon and sword, while draped in the centre with the American flag was an excellent picture of Sir Galahad and his faithful steed.

The program was one that surpassed all others. Mrs. William Campbell, a reader of great ability proved one of the most enjoyable treats of the evening, while Miss Dagmar Nelson's vocal solo was one of love and inspiration, rendered as it could only be rendered by the sweet voice of the young lady, Prof. F. Wrigley's piano solo, not only fine in itself but set the finer cords in oneself applauding for more.

Merriment was at its highest, all through the evening, while the committee saw that all chairs were vacant during the dancing. The time passed all too quickly for those participating in the slow or lively beat of the music, and it was with reluctant hearts that they finally went their homeward way. There were about seventy-five present. The committee in charge were: Roy Prout, floor director. E. C. Smith and W. Pearce H. A. Smith, F. Wrigley, Jr., J. E. Spargo, H. Nicholson, and William Walker, aids.

—With the holiday season upon us the shop lifters here and there are bound to start business. Yet it would seem that in Boston, for one place, the experience of last year would be a deterrent. Last year there were in that city 638 cases of shoplifting in court and the prosecutions resulted in jail sentences for 103 thieves, fines aggregating $4830 for 350 others, probation for 64, and 18 cases filed. To be caught as a shoplifter is to lose reputation irrevocably, and the professional shoplifter is generally looked upon as one of the lowest of thieves. Also there is a fair chance that the captured one may see the inside of a prison for a term. The average shop lifter gets no great profit from his or her thefts, and takes a long chance of being punished in a way for which the successful treft of a fortune would not be adequate compensation.—Brockton Enterprise.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Chicago women, it is said, lose $500,000 annually at poker. But they have to provide something to keep the old men at home evenings.

As our New York friends have wasteful habits, those strikers who refused to carry off the garbage pails may have found that they contained quite an appetizing hand-out.

They have jailed a man for tarring a young woman at Lincoln Center, Kansas, although close fitting garments of black are supposed to be fashionable.

It is easy enough to get out 100,000 people to see a football game, but it takes considerable persuasion to recruit a quorum of 15 for the annual meeting of the literary society.

There is complaint that Mr. Taft has forbidden the practice of Christian Science in the canal zone. He may think that absent treatment of the shovel is not enough to make the dirt fly.

Now that our share of Standard Oil stock has been divided into 983,383 little pieces by the reorganization, we greatly fear that some of the fractions will get lost in our trouser pockets.

The German crown prince is detained for 30 days for applauding a jingo speech. Lucky this did not come early enough to prevent his ringing the neighbors' door bells Hallowe'en.

Mr. Taft laid a wreath on the grave of the author of the Star Spangled Banner. We trust this does not create a spirit of unrest among our poets, whom we have reduced to temporary silence after long effort to check their stormy upheavals.

SHOP EARLY.

Conspicuous signs adorning the electric cars of the Boston Elevated Railway, bearing the words that give friendly advice to "shop early," at once bring to our attention the fast approach of the joyous Yuletide season.

The purchase of holiday gifts is a delightful occupation when properly engaged in. But postponement works not only distress to the purchasers but exhausting labor to the thousands of employees who serve them in marts of trade.

Says an exchange:

"Procrastination is the great foe of peace of mind and comfort of body in this holiday season. It is so easy to put off until tomorrow that which can be done today—and done much more advantageously. The streets and the shopping district are crowded as it is; locomotion is difficult; what can the tardy ones expect later in the closing hours?

PERSISTENCE IN ADVERTISING.

The "World's Work" a few years ago gave publicity to facts from the books of Glidden Varnish C., showing the tremendous returns that follow a policy of persistent advertising.

The Glidden company began an advertising campaign in 1899. At that time their sales were $20,000. During the first three years of this campaign, their sales varied but little. No results were apparent at all until 1902. At that time the work began to tell, and in 1905, they had pushed their sales up to $1,200,000, an increase of 6,000 per cent.

The case of the ordinary merchant is somewhat different, because the retail dealer is much closer to his public. They look in the papers every day to see what the merchant advertises, and they go to the merchant that seems the most enterprising. Thus the local merchant gets his returns much more quickly.

A company like the Glidden company sells to merchants who buy largely through salesmen, and they have to run up for a long time against a blank wall of opposition, caused by the fact that the dealers are buying regular lines of goods with which they are satisfied. It is more difficult to get them to change their lines than to get the retail store customer to buy in a different place.

This story of expansion, however, illustrates the necessity, if one is to make any kind of impression, to repeat the impression over and over again. It illustrates also the tremendous gain that comes to the good advertiser in what may be called cumulative returns.

You are introduced to a stranger, and if you meet him on the street next day you do not recognize him. If you meet him half a dozen times his face becomes fixed in your mind. But if you should then fail to see him for six months, you might not recognize him again.

The impression on the mind made by an advertisement is much the same. If a merchant's advertisement impresses you with the idea that he is wide awake and gives his customers good values, the impression needs to be repeated until it becomes permanent. If it is given year after year by consistent advertising, it becomes like the face of a friend that you would know after long years of absence. When you start out on a shopping foray, you insensibly turn to your old acquaintance who has thus impressed himself on you.

CELEBRATE 3RD ANNIVERSARY

Daughters of Viking Entertain In Electa Hall

OVER 200 PRESENT

The third anniversary of the Daughters of Viking was observed in a most fitting manner in Electa hall, Tuesday evening, when about 200 assembled in observance of the event. The first part of the evening was devoted to a meeting and entertainment, which in turn was followed by a repast. The affair concluded at midnight with dancing.

The address of welcome was delivered by Otto Carlson. Piano solos were rendered by Arthur Robsham, Miss Lillian Carlson and Miss Hilda Johnson. Vocal selections were given by Mrs. Carlson Porter, and Miss Segrid Lundquist. Miss Julia Johnson took the house by surprise with her numerous recitations.

The committee in charge included Otto Carlson, Sophia Johnson and Olof Lundquist.

MAZAH TRIO.

Monday evening, the Mazah trio composed of three well known Quincy musicians will render a musicale in the Wollaston Congregational church under the auspices of the Abigail Phillips, Quincy Chapter, D. A. R. The trio is composed of Roscoe R. Ricker, violin; Miss Marion L. Moorhouse, 'cello; and Miss Grace M. Farrington, piano. All are accomplished musicians Mr. Ricker having a place among the leading young violinists of Boston, Miss Moorhouse has had two years abroad that has fitted her for a bright musical future as a soloist, Miss Farrington at the piano demonstrates her ability as the head of this trio. They will be assisted by Clifford F. Farrington, baritone soloist.

It is seldom that Quincy people have an opportunity to hear local talent in a program of this sort, for all are artists; were educated in the Quincy schools and started their musical careers at that time.

Miss Moorhouse will be remembered at Woodward where she spent four years but left just before graduation for her trip abroad to complete her musical education. Mr. Ricker completed his higher studies at Thayer academy but has been affiliated with music and musicals in and about Quincy for several years. Miss Farrington and her brother were '06 and '07 Quincy High respectively and were well known in Wollaston where they made their home during their schooldays.

The success of this trio at Steinart hall, Boston, the Baptist church, Wakefield, Congregational church Greenwood, North Avenue Congregational church, Cambridge; Huntington chambers, Boston; and several other public appearances, has demonstrated clearly the proficiency of all concerned, and to those who attend the musicale in Wollaston a treat for music lovers is assured.

TELLS ABOUT FORMER CITIZEN

Article In Portland Paper About John R. Graham

HIS FONDNESS FOR HORSES

Quincy is always interested in its former citizens, particularly so with the world in which John R. Graham, now of Bangor, Me., moves, for when Mr. Graham resided in Quincy he always took a wide awake interest in the city and its advancement. For many years he manufactured custom made shoes in Quincy and later becoming interested in street railway service took hold of the street railway problem and started its early development, forming what was the first fully equipped electric railroad in this part of the country. It was the company which he formed that absorbed the old Boston and Quincy street railway, then operated by horse power, equipped it with electric power then in its infancy, so, as stated above, Quincy had the honor of having the first fully electricly equipped electric railroad in New England, if not in the country. Mr. Graham was instrumental in building Quincy's transportation facilities, but eventually retired and going to Bangor, Me., established the light and power company of that city and is now one of the greatest promoters Maine has ever known.

His many Quincy friends also know of Mr. Graham's fondness for horses and of his stock farm that he at one time controlled in the Blue Grass country.

Tuesday's issue of the Portland Daily Press speaking of Mr. Graham says:

Wonder how many of the readers of the Maine newspapers who know of John R. Graham as a great railroad promoter know that for years he was a breeder of fine trotting stock in the Blue Grass region of "ole Kentuck." He was at the same time a large owner of trotting stock in and around Boston and when the trotting world began to discover that Maine had in Nelson 2.09 a great trotter and sire Mr. Graham was one of the original Nelson backers and any one who wanted to make a wager against the Maine proposition could always be accommodated if they could find Mr. Graham.

"Percy" writing in a recent issue of the Trotter and Parer draws this pleasant picture of the Mr. Graham that was and is:

In the "old days" John R. Graham and John Conley had the Briar Hill Farm at Lexington, or near that City, and there many retired Boston record mares ended their days breeding. Beautiful little Blondine, 2.24, I believe, died on that estate. I am not sure but that Butterfly also passed her last days there. Mr. Graham usually visited Mr. Bowen's Beacon Park office Sunday mornings, driving over from Quincy, and it was pleasant to sit on a blanket chest and listen to descriptions of the "prospects" sired by his horses Ivaneer, by Electioneer, Don Carlos, Don Wilkes by Alcyone and Myrtlewood, by Wedgewood, as well as young horses by various other sires.

Prior to the Briar Hill enterprise being launched, Mr. Graham had owned Mambrino Kirkman, I believe, was another that he stood, both here and down in Maine, yet I'm not sure. It was he who owned the latter horse. Later on he and Mr. Conley secured Constantine and they also had a very well-bred son of Steamboul, 2.07½ (3) at Briar Hill Farm.

Pity I've often thought, John R. Graham had not retained his active interest in breeding, yet both street railway interests and political ambition called him. He conducted a shoe store first on Malden Lane for years, and later on Washington street, just north of the historic Old South Church. No man whom I've ever known could so well combine stock farm interests, race a few and yet always be on hand at the right moment in his legitimate calling, that of the busy merchant. Today he is in business at Bangor where he controls enterprises of magnitude as well as owns the beautiful granite block, with "Graham Building" in raised block letters as its title.

I really believe John R. Graham to have been Boston's best horseman of his day and he had not aged appreciably when I last met him, a season or two ago, at a Fasig-Tipton sale in the "Garden." We need a few more like Mr. Graham, Wm. Russel Allen, the brothers Leonard and Hon. George Stevens of New Hampshire to again bring back to New England such good times as were during the old Breeder's Association's gala era around 1885-89.

Q.—Will Jerusalem ever be rebuilt and for what purpose?

Answer.—The most remarkable movement ever occurring amongst the Jewish people since the time of the destruction of their capital city, Jerusalem, is now in process of development, and is known as "The Zionist Movement." The primary object of this movement is the establishment of the Jews in their own land under a government of their own. This would mean the rebuilding of the city in the event of the success of this movement. There are many prophecies which show that the Jews shall return to Divine favor and shall again be established in their own country and that the City of Jesusalem will be rebuilt. We cite but one —Jeremiah xxxi, 27-40. The clear intimation of the teachings of the Scriptures is that Jerusalem will become the Capital City of the world, "for out of Zion shall go forth the Law, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem." "And many people shall go and say, Come ye and let us go up to the mountain (Kingdom) of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and He will teach us of His ways, and we will walk in His paths." (Isaiah ii, 3.) For a remarkable confirmation of this, in the words of the New Testament, see Acts xv, 16, 17.

"FRIENDLY VISITORS"

work, hd visited families and how they had been helped. She spoke of several individual cases taking them from the first visit of the friendly visitor, telling of their condition at that time and of the improved conditions that had been brought about. One particular case was that of a family where there were several children, and a worthless husband. Such a dismal place she never saw as this home. The children were scantily clothed and the woman was a drinker, but smart and very capable. It seemed as though the only thing to do was to take the children away. The committee however did not take that view.

One young lady said that she would take the case, and working through the church she eventually got them out of that house into better surroundings and for the first time for a year the family knew what it was to live. The family has been steadily improving ever since and the woman had stopped drinking. She also spoke of another family who at first refused to have anything done, yet the friendly visitor eventually accomplished the desired end, that work had been found fort he woman who was now self supporting.

Several other cases were spoken of where the friendly visitor had little by little got the family so that it was self supporting. The whole idea is to get at the most needy for individual cases. Tact is needed in the friendly visitor to find out just what the family most needs. To get the particular problem in each family.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The soloist at the next meeting of the Quincy Women's club, on Nov. 28, will be Enrico Barraja of Naples, Italy. Although Mr. Barraja is still a young man, he has already had a varied and interesting career. He is a graduate of the Royal Conservatory of Naples, class of 1908. He has been a pupil of the famous Paolo Serrao, and Camillo De Nardis, in counterpoint and composition, and of Alfonso Raimondi in pianoforte. He took the nine years' course of composition in five years.

He was assistant chorus master of the Bellini theatre of Naples for several seasons; assistant director and chorus master when the oratorios by Perosi were performed in Naples in 1909-'10; instructor in the pianoforte school of Prof. Raimondi; instructor in the vocal school of Prof. Campanello, besides having numerous private pupils. He shows marked versatility in his original work, his compositions covering those for piano, violin, voice, various instruments and complete orchestra. Most of these compositions have received the highest praise from musicians of world-wide reputation.

Mr. Barraja is now at work upon a symphony in four parts, for complete orchestra. In the near future h will open a studio for vocal and pianoforte instruction in Boston and Quincy. As a pianist he took second highest honors on his graduation from the Naples Conservatory. Music lovers in the Quincy Women's club, look forward with the greatest interest to Mr. Barraja's appearance on Nov. 28.

There will be the usual business session at half-past two followed at three by a program in charge of the Home Economics Committee, Mrs. Stanley Bone, chairman. Mrs. Mary H. Abel will speak on "The new principles of Scientific Shop Management, as applied to Housekeeping."

FEDERATION MEETING.

Those who attended the meeting of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's club at Haverhill on Nov. 16, passed a pleasant and profitable day. The hostess club was the Hannah Dustin club and it did everything possible for the comfort of the 500 women in attendance. Mrs. Josephine L. Sanborn extended cordial greetings and Mrs. Henry Coolidge Mulligan presided in her usual charming manner.

The first speaker was Mr. John Nolen of Cambridge on "City Planning." Mr. Nolen treated of some of the misconceptions of subject and then pointed out certain things which women can do in this direction. Rev. Frederick W. Perkins, D. D., of Lynn, the other speaker of the morning, took for his subject "Civic Responsibilities of Women." He said in part:

Among a bewildering variety of opportunities for women to wield civic influence, I speak of the following:

1. The opportunity to teach English and civics to women of foreign births in our cities, especially our industrial cities like Haverhill, Lowell, Lawrence and Lynn.

Let me illustrate the need and the opportunity by telling you of the situation with which we are attempting to deal in Lynn. In the city of Lynn, a city of about 90,000 people, there are over 40,000 of foreign birth or immediate descent. Of this number, over 17,000 above ten years of age cannot speak or read English. The immediate need is that these aliens receive instruction in English and the fundamental ideals and practices of American civic life. To teach them English is to do far more than give them utilitarian advantage in the struggle for a living. It is to open a way for participation in the intellectual and spiritual genius of the people among whom they have cast their fortunes. Perhaps no barrier is so separating, so patent a creator of racial and spiritual alienations, as difference of language.

How about the fathers and mothers? They will not go to evening school in large numbers, even if they can. Shame at their ignorance before children holds them back. The children often acquire contempt for their parents and elders. "Sit down; you're a dead one!" a youngster ordered his parent who was giving the boy instruction in their mother-tongue. The old speech marks an inferiority out of which the English-speaking boy supposes he has risen. If we are not to add alienations within races to alienations between races, we must teach English to foreign grownups as well as to children.

Here is a civic opportunity for women's clubs. Conduct for foreign women the sort of classes in English and civics that are being conducted for men.

2. Another opportunity for women to exert a civic influence in Massachusetts just now is provided by the movement to investigate the desirability and practicability of establishing minimum wage boards for certain trades largely employing women and minors.

The lamentable fact is that large numbers of women receive less than a living wage. I am entering into no indictment of the owners of department stores, laundries, candy stores and the like. Many an employer is bound by conditions which he individually would remedy if he saw the way. The fact, however, remains, and is fraught with serious consequences not only to the women and girls concerned, but to the whole social order as well.

Not all of us can see how the problem is to be solved; that is the specific task of the economist. But we can all see that it must be solved if we are to maintain a humane, Christian, civilization. For think what it means to have women regularly employed at less than a living wage?—regularly employed, not merely temporarily and incidentally. Either they are dependent on family or friends for part of their support or they must literally burn up their physical vitality in impossible economies of food, clothing, shelter and sleep, or they must sell their personal virtue. Our industrial order, which definitely forces one or the other of these conditions on its regular workers, is economically and morally defective.

This address was followed by discussion, in which interesting points were brought out. Members of the Quincy Women's club participated in the discussion.

After intermission there was an organ recital by James W. Hill, and a half-hour musical program from Liszt furnished by Mrs. Arthur W. Brigham, soprano, and Clarence Albert Jones, pianist of Boston.

The closing address was by Dr. William DeWitt Hyde, president of Bowdoin College on "Our Future Citizen."

Six times the speaker asked the question "What is that creature that they call a child?" and gave the following six answers. First: The answer of the child labor law: freedom from competitive industry, commercial and mechanical, up to the age of fourteen; from fourteen to sixteen freedom from excessive hours, night work, or employments dangerous to life, health, or morals; opportunity for fundamental education and normal development as a condition of employment; and protection up to eighteen, and where necessary up to twenty-one, from specially hazardous and demoralizing employments.

Second the answer of industrial education; that the child shall be trained from the first in constructive work; followed at the age of fourteen by actual work at processes fundamental to great groups of related industries, for those who must leave school at sixteen; and by technical high schools and trade schools in those larger communities that can profitably support them; all with aim to connect school with life, give reality to work, and interest to study, and fit for efficiency and promotion in industrial careers.

Third: the answer of vocational guidance; which studies the child's heredity, environment, aptitude and school record, with a view to placing him in the line of work in which he will be at once most useful and most happy.

Fourth: the answer of the playground and play leader; that the city child shall have the chance to develop his impulses and express his instincts without having to break the laws of society to do it; and shall have a leader to show him how.

Fifth: the answer of the Juvenile Court; that children under sixteen shall not be treated as criminals; but that their overt acts shall be treated as symptoms of a condition to be discovered and removed by firm, tactful and sympathetic men and women acting as Juvenile Court Judges and Probation Officers.

Sixth: the answer of the club and the association; that the strongest boys and girls will not respond to precepts handed down to them or advice poked at them; but that if bigheartedness and strong manliness, and pure womanliness are brought close to them in winsome personalities who share their interests in clubs and classes, associations and expeditions, they will admire and imitate these qualities even more readily than they do the bigness of brutality, the dash and daring of loose living, and the superficial kindliness that often goes with criminality.

This comprehensive child welfare movement, to give the children of the nation their birthright of leisure for growth of body and of mind, interesting work vocational counsel, wholesome play, sympathetic justice, and personal inspiration, is the youngest and lustiest of our social reforms; for all these six movements, in their systematic and vigorous development have sprung up within the present century, and are only from two to twelve years old. It carries in itself the germs of all the other great social reforms. For if we care for the children of the nation in this costly, vital way, we shall not stop caring for them when they reach the age of twenty-one.

Those attending from the Quincy Women's club were Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, Mrs. Edward B. Marsh, Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell, Mrs. John T. Conway, Miss Annie L. Prescott, Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, Mrs. John B. Worster and Mrs. Albert E. Avery.

OVERSEER MAKES APPEAL

For Funds To Assist With Thanksgiving Donations

LAST YEAR'S GIFTS

Thanksgiving is coming and the appeals to this department are many from the poor of our city to send them a basket on that day. Last year we delivered over ninety baskets, the size of the basket depending on the number of persons in the family, each basket containing a turkey or chicken, potatoes, celery, cranberries and turnip.

December 24, 1887, Cotton Centre Johnson bequeathed to the Town of Quincy, two thousand dollars, the interest of which was to be used to supply turkeys to the worthy poor of Quincy. The interest amounts to eighty dollars and this sum is very inadequate owing to the growth of the city.

I, therefore, appeal to your charity to make the poor people happy on Thanksgiving Day.

James H. Elcock,
Overseer of the Poor.

HISTORY OF RED CROSS SEALS

Red Cross Christmas Seals date back in their origin to "charity stamps," first used for the soldiers' relief funds in Boston in 1862, during the Civil War. After the war, this method of raising money was discontinued in this country for a generation, although it found vogue in Portugal, Switzerland, Austria, France, Spain, Denmark, Norway, Russia, Sweden and other European countries. There are now several hundred different types of charity stamps used in all parts of the world, as many as forty being used in Austria for children's hospitals alone.

Stamps or seals were first used to get money for the anti-tuberculosis crusade in Norway and Sweden in 1904. After being used in these countries for three years, as a direct result of the interest of Jacob Riis in this movement, the Delaware Anti-Tuberculosis Association headed by Miss Emily P. Bissell, and the Red Cross Society of Delaware, combined in issuing a Tuberculosis Stamp. So successful was this campaign that nearly $3,000 was realized, and the next year, in 1908, the American Red Cross was induced to issue a National Red Cross Tuberculosis Stamp. From this sale, $135,000 was realized, that amount being almost doubled in 1909. Last year, for the first time, the sale was organized on a comprehensive basis, taking in all parts of the United States, and $310,000 worth were sold. In 1911, the slogan for the campaign is, "A Million for Tuberculosis from Red Cross Seals."

—One of the younger officers of the Argentine naval delegation stationed at Fore River was offered two seats for the Dartmouth game, and declined. Then on Friday he made up his mind to go, but when he was asked $10 for a pair he rebelled and gave it over. When Saturday night he was told about the seats being sold for $1, and even less, he was irate. "In my country we have weather," he said, "which knows its own mind, but this like Saturday—no more for me, I do not like it."—Boston Journal.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

If you forget to flavor a cake, rub the desired flavor over the outside of the cake as soon as it is taken from the oven.

If only a part of a yeast cake is used at a time, tuck the remainder in the flour barrel out of reach of cold, heat and moisture.

To prevent rugs curling at the edges, bind on the underside with narrow webbing or a two-inch strip of light oilcloth.

Put bits of soap into a tin cup with a little hot water and enough oatmeal to thicken and stir till the soap melts, and you have a nice but inexpensive toilet soap.

To keep an iron sink in good condition scrub once or twice a week with soap and kerosene. Every night put a little chloride of lime over the strainer and pour boiling water through it.

A delicious dish consists of French plums stuffed with whole almonds, dipped in olive oil and roasted on a broiler over the fire, then rolled in thick slices of bacon and grilled. They are served piping hot.

To patch an umbrella cover get from the druggist black court plaster This is silk covered with an adhe rent. Moisten the adherent with water and fix over the hole on the outside, pressing down firmly.

To make a serviceable scarf for a boy's dresser, use unbleached crash having a simple design in cross stitch worked with red wash silk at both ends. Cushions to match add to the attractiveness of the room.

Five cents' worth of sugar of lead crystals dissolved in a pail of water makes a solution which fixes colors and establishes the tone of pinks, blues and lavenders.

If you have no whalebone at hand when making a girdle, cut stiff cardboard the desired shape and cover it with bits of material like the girdle It will wear well.

To remove machine oil wash the spots with cold water and soap before putting in hot water. Cold water takes the oil out; hot water sets it so it will never come out.

Hair brushes may be cleaned with flour. When quite clean remove all traces of the flour with a dry towel This method preserves the varnish on the back of the brush and keeps the bristles from becoming soft, as they will with frequent washing.

To make the hair curl, a good substitute for the curling iron is a bath for the hair in equal parts green soap and water. This should be carefully rinsed off with clear water. While the hair is still damp it can be fluffed by running the fingers through it or by tying narrow ribbons about the head and combing up the hair between.

MURDERER SAID TO BE BREAKING DOWN

Beattie Turns to Prayer as Death Day Draws Near

Richmond, Nov. 22.—Henry C. Beattie, Jr., has at last broken down. Whether he has confessed the public may not as yet know, but Rev. Benjamin Dennis, a Presbyterian pastor, who has been with him many lone hours in the solitude of his death cell, said:

"Beattie has given himself up to prayer. What has passed between him and myself is sacred. I am only willing to say that the young man has given himself up to prayer. It is not right that he should be pictured to the public as approaching death cold heartedly, as being indifferent to the fact that he is to end his life in the electric chair. He prays many times daily."

The prayers that Beattie utters are all in absolute privacy. He retires to the innermost corner of his cell to utter them.

New York, Nov. 22.—Mrs. Hetty Green is 76 years old and as active as a woman thirty-five years her junior. She was too busy making money to celebrate the anniversary, and she spent the day at her desk in the office of the Westminster company at 111 Broadway.

"I'm too busy to talk today," she said. "Come back next month and I'll give you an interview."

"But it's your birthday, Mrs. Green."

"Yes," she said, "and I had almost forgotten it."

Mrs. Green, wearing a brand new black silk dress and a bonnet to match, continued to give directions to her secretary.

WOMEN CLASH WITH POLICE

Suffragettes Fail In Effort to Storm Parliament

FULLY ARMED WITH STONES

Proceed to Smash Every Window In Sight When Barred From House of Commons—Eighteen Hundred Police Thwart Plans Which Were Carefully Laid—Women Chain Themselves to Railings

London, Nov. 22.—The suffragettes fared badly at the hands of the police last night. They had threatened to force their way into the house of commons and make a protest on the floor of the house against the prime minister's refusal to pledge the government to a bill giving equal suffrage to both sexes, but they failed even to reach the entrance to parliament.

Thwarted by the police, who arrested 220 women and three men, the suffragettes resorted to a campaign of window smashing. Driven from Parliament square by the police, 1800 of whom were on duty, the women, accompanied by sympathizers and street iders, proceeded through Whitehall armed with bags of stones concealed under their coats and broke the windows in the public offices, Liberal headquarters and the National Liberal club.

They even extended their operations to the Strand, where windows of the postoffice, bank and other private concerns suffered from the onslaught.

The window breaking was systematic, the motive apparently being to insure arrest. Many of the women carried stones in a cloth bag attached to long tapes. These they used like slings.

The militant tactics of the suffragettes followed a statement by Premier Asquith that the government was unable to introduce a bill to enfranchise women, as the cabinet was divided on the question, but would allow an amendment to be introduced to the proposed manhood suffrage bill, leaving it to the house of commons to decide whether women should be given a vote.

The suffragettes had made ample preparations to renew their attacks on parliament with a battle which was expected to surpass all previous efforts. They met early in the evening in Caxton hall, less than a mile from Parliament square, and after adopting a resolution declaring that the prime minister's denial of their request was a grave and unpardonable insult to women, called for volunteers for "dangerous service."

A delegation of fifty women, headed by Mrs. Pethick Lawrence and accompanied by immense crowds, started for the house of commons to present the resolution, or take whatever other action was deemed advisable. The police, however, were too much for the women, in spite of all their preparations and the assistance of hundreds of sympathizers.

Strong detachments of police, both on foot and mounted, guarded the streets from Caxton hall to the houses of parliament. They broke up the deputation into units, which, as they reached the cordons surrounding the square, were thrown back, or if too persistent, were arrested and passed along to a receiving squad in the square and thence through a double line of constables to the police station.

The greatest confusion prevailed. Several women were injured in the scramble, while others fainted or became hysterical and required the attention of the ambulance men. The battle was fierce but short.

An hour after the women emerged from the hall Parliament square had been cleared of the attacking forces, except half a dozen women who had chained themselves to the railings and whose chains the police had to file or break.

Among those arrested were Mrs. Lawrence, who is joint editor of Votes for Women; Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton, and Mrs. Evelina Haverfield, daughter of Lieutenant General Lord Abinger.

Minister Utilizes Hotel Bathtub to Accomplish His Purpose

The body was found lying face down in a bathtub and the tub was nearly full of water.

Phinney gave up preaching about two years ago on account of trouble with his head, and had resided lately with his brother. The contents of a note which Phinney left were not made public, but it was stated that what he had written indicated an intention to take his life. He was born in 1856 at Barnstable.

Boston, Nov. 22.—"Marse" Henry Watterson, orator and editor of the south, boomed Governor Foss for the presidency last night at the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Boston Press club, held at the Hotel Somerset.

It was done in as happy a vein as when he mentioned himself as a presidential possibility at a recent dinner of the Louisville Press club, yet delicately as the matter was brought about its significance was fully understood and applause followed.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE PUMPKIN PIE.

LET us not forget the ripe, juicy pumpkin, symbol of the Thanksgiving festival! It is to be feared that the success of the pumpkin pie has been of such a nature as to overshadow the glory of other pumpkin dishes. Since no Thanksgiving dinner is complete without its pumpkin pie, the following advice, true and tried, some of it from the private notebook of a clever chef, may be useful.

The Pie Filling.

The king of the kitchen in one famous New York restaurant says:

For the pie filling mix one quart of boiled and mashed pumpkin with one gill of molasses, four ounces of sugar, two ounces of butter, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, two tablespoonfuls of ginger, one-half teaspoonful of nutmeg and a half tablespoonful of salt. Bake with one crust. Serve with cheese.

A tried household recipe for pumpkin pie filling is as follows: Take a small pumpkin, cut it in halves, remove the seeds and the rind and cut into pieces. Boil or steam until the pumpkin is soft and the water nearly all off.

Press the pumpkin pulp through a sieve. To each cupful and a half of the pumpkin add one cupful of milk, a cupful of scalded cream, one well beaten egg, a half cupful of sugar, with salt and mace to taste. Bake slowly in a single crust.

Priscilla Alden's Way.

Members of the famous Alden family have a recipe for pumpkin pie which they will tell you was concocted by the fair Priscilla for the discriminating John Alden. Some authorities claim that it was this luscious pie rather than the charms of Priscilla that enthralled the susceptible Miles Standish.

Here is the formula given to friends:

Take one pint of boiled and mashed pumpkin, one egg, one-half cupful of molasses, one piece of butter as large as an egg, a half teacupful of milk, one-half a cupful of muscovado, or unrefined sugar, a little cinnamon, salt, clove, nutmeg and allspice and ginger. Use a rather thick crust and bake in the oven twenty minutes.

Pumpkin custard may be served as a dessert in individual baking dishes.

Anna Thompson.

In Every Home

there is sure to come physical suffering at times—suffering hard to bear—suffering which will be followed by serious sickness, if the first symptoms are neglected.

But this suffering will soon be forgotten, and there will be no after consequences if relief is obtained from a safe, reliable, natural corrective medicine.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

ought to be on hand in every home ready for use at first sign of trouble.

This famous family remedy has proved in years and years of trial, its power to correct physical trouble and to ward off disease.

Try for yourself—or in your home, a few doses and see how the bodily system is strengthened and refreshed and how surely and effectively they

Relieve Suffering

Anty Drudge Joins the Union.

Miss Highbrow—(visiting the Teamsters' Union)—"So you have made my friend, Anty Drudge, an Honorary Member. And why, may I ask?"

Honest Mike—"Well, you see, it's this way, mam: I drive a coal wagon, and Gerry over there drives for a wholesale butcher. We get terribly dirty—I all sooty and Gerry all grease and stains. It's the same with all the boys. Anty Drudge told us about Fels-Naptha—how it dissolves the grime and grease; and you only use lukewarm or cool water. Saves money and makes our wives happy."

"Wear" is nothing but "rubbing."

Every time you hard rub your clothes against anything, little particles are rubbed away.

Boiling softens the fibre of cotton, linen, silk and wool, and when rubbed hard on the washboard they wear away faster than at any other time.

Try to think how many days of wear are represented by one trip to the old-time washtub.

Fels-Naptha requires neither boiling water nor hard rubbing.

And there is no washboard wear on the clothes washed the Fels-Naptha way.

Fels-Naptha is made to do away with boiling and hard rubbing; therefore if you use it as an ordinary soap, you cause yourself unnecessary work.

Use Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water and it will do all we claim.

It will cut the washday in half, summer or winter, and do silently and effectively all the real hard work.

If you follow the simple directions on the red and green wrapper, you will never return to ordinary soaps and the old-fashioned way of washing.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians. Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

CHAPTER VI.

TEMPEST.

It was the first time Sheldon had been at close quarters with an American girl, and he would have wondered if all American girls were like Joan Lackland had he not had wit enough to realize that she was not at all typical. Her quick mind and changing moods bewildered him, while her outlook on life was so different from what he conceived a woman's outlook should be that he was more often than not at sixes and sevens with her. He could never anticipate what she would say or do next. Her temper was quick and stormy, and she relied too much on herself and too little on him, which did not approximate at all to his ideal of woman's conduct when a man was around. Her assumption of equality with him was disconcerting, and at times he half consciously resented the impudence and bizarreness of her intrusion upon him, rising out of the sea in a howling nor'wester, fresh from poking her revolver under Ericson's nose, protected by her gang of huge Polynesian sailors and settling down in Berande like any shipwrecked sailor. It was all on a par with her Baden-Powell and the long 38 Colt's.

At any rate, she did not look the part. And that was what he could not forgive. Had she been short haired, heavy jawed, large muscled, hard bitten and utterly unlovely in every way all would have been well, instead of which she was hopelessly and deliciously feminine. Her hair worried him, it was so generously beautiful. And she was so slenderly and prettily the woman—the girl, rather—that it cut him like a knife to see her with quick, comprehensive eyes and sharply imperative voice superintend the launching of the whaleboat through the surf. In imagination he could see her roping a horse, and it always made him shudder. Then, too, she was so many sided.

Sheldon certainly was not happy. The unconventional state of affairs was too much for his conservative disposition and training. Berande, inhabited by one lone white man, was no place for Joan Lackland. Yet he racked his brain for a way out, and even talked it over with her. In the first place, the steamer from Australia was not due for three weeks.

"One thing is evident; you don't want me here," she said. "I'll man the whale boat tomorrow and go over to Tulagi."

"But as I told you before, that is impossible," he cried. "There is no one there. The resident commissioner is away in Australia. There is only one white man, a third assistant understrapper and ex-sailor—a common sailor. He is in charge of the government of the Solomons, to say nothing of a hundred or so niggers—prisoners. Besides, he is such a fool that he would fine you £5 for not having entered at Tulagi, which is the port of entry, you know. He is not a nice man, and, I repeat, it is impossible."

"There is Guvutu," she suggested.

"There's nothing there but fever and five white men who are drinking themselves to death. I couldn't permit it."

"Oh, thank you," she said quietly. "I guess I'll start today—Viaburi! You go along Noah, speak 'm come along me."

Noa Noah was her head sailor, who had been boatswain of the Miele.

"Where are you going?" Sheldon asked in surprise. "Viaburi! You stop."

"To Guvutu—immediately," was her reply.

"But I won't permit it."

"That is why I am going. You said it once before, and it is something I cannot brook."

"What?" He was bewildered by her sudden anger. "If I have offended in any way"—

"Viaburi, you fetch 'm one fella Noa Noah along me," she commanded.

The black boy started to obey.

"Viaburi! You no stop I break 'm head belong you. And now, Miss Lackland; I insist; you must explain. What have I said or done to merit this?"

"You have presumed, you have dared"—

She choked and swallowed and could not go on.

Sheldon looked the picture of despair.

"I confess my head is going around with it all," he said. "If you could only be explicit."

"But you have no right—no man has the right—to tell me what he will permit or not permit. I'm too old to have a guardian, nor did I sail all the way to the Solomons to find one."

"A GENTLEMAN IS EVERY WOMAN'S GUARDIAN."

"A gentleman is every woman's guardian."

"Well, I'm not every woman—that's all. Will you kindly allow me to send your boy for Noa Noah? I wish him to launch the whaleboat. Or shall I go myself for him?"

Both were now on their feet, she with flushed cheeks and angry eyes, he, puzzled, vexed and alarmed. The black boy stood like a statue—a plumb black statue—taking no interest in the transactions of these incomprehensible whites.

"But you won't do anything so foolish"— he began.

"There you go again," she cried.

"I didn't mean it that way, and you know I didn't." He was speaking slowly and gravely. "And that other thing, that not permitting—it is only a manner of speaking. Of course I am not your guardian. You know you can go to Guvutu if you want to"—or to the devil, he was almost tempted to add. "Only, I should deeply regret it, that is all. And I am very sorry that I should have said anything that hurt you. Remember, I am an Englishman."

Joan smiled and sat down again.

"Perhaps I have been hasty," she admitted. "You see, I am intolerant of restraint. If you only knew how I have been compelled to fight for my freedom. It is a sore point with me, this being told what I am to do or not to do by you self constituted lords of creation. Viaburi! You, stop along kitchen. No bring 'm Noa Noah. And now, Mr. Sheldon, what am I to do? You don't want me here, and there doesn't seem to be any place for me to go."

"That is unfair. Your being wrecked here has been a godsend to me. I was very lonely and very sick. I really am not certain whether or not I should have pulled through had you not happened along. But that is not the point. Personally, purely selfishly personally, I should be sorry to see you go. But I am not considering myself. I am considering you. It—it is hardly the proper thing, you know. If I were married—if there were some woman of your own race here—but as it is"—

She threw up her hands in mock despair.

"I cannot follow you," she said. "In one breath you tell me I must go, and in the next breath you tell me there is no place to go and that you will not permit me to go. What is a poor girl to do?"

"That's the trouble," he said helplessly.

"And the situation annoys you."

"Only for your sake."

"Then let me save your feelings by telling you that it does not annoy me at all—except for the row you are making about it. I never allow what can't be changed to annoy me. I can't go elsewhere, by your own count. You certainly can't go elsewhere and leave me here alone with a whole plantation and 200 woolly cannibals on my hands. Therefore, you stay, and I stay. It is very simple. Also, it is adventure. And furthermore, you needn't worry for yourself. I am not matrimonially inclined. I came to the Solomons for a plantation, not a husband."

Brilliant Career of Kellogg Durland Is Cut Short

A STUDENT OF SOCIOLOGY

One of Best Known American Newspaper Correspondents Also Noted as Author—Wrote "The Red Reign" Following Thrilling Adventures In Russia—Takes Poison In Presence of Wife, Who Sought Divorce

Boston, Nov. 22.—Harry Kellogg Durland of New York and Boston, known the country over as Kellogg Durland, the Harvard graduate, Socialist and wrter, lies a suicide in a tomb in Forest Hills cemetery. He killed himself with cyanide of potassium.

Medical Examiner Magrath, who was called to North Grove street morgue to perform an autopsy upon "Kellogg Kurkind," was startled to recognize to body of the journalist whom he knew and who had interviewed him in previous years in the course of magazine assignments.

Durland had boarded a train for New York. Mrs. Durland was with her husband at the time. Soon after they had entered a car Durland complained that he was thirsty and his wife got him a glass of water. No sooner had he drunk it than he became ill. An ambulance was called and he was hurried to the hospital, but died before the ambulance arrived there. Durland probably emptied the poison into the glass of water which his wife had secured for him.

Kellogg Durland was one of the best known of American newspaper correspondents. He was born in New York, May 13, 1881. He was graduated from Harvard in 1900 and was in the University of Edinburg in 1901. He also studied in Paris for a year. Attracted by the study of sociology, he worked in a coal mine in Scotland for four months in 1901 to study the actual conditions of mining life, the following year publishing his first book, "Among the Fife Miners."

After a year spent in special investigations of child labor abuses in the coal mines, he came to Boston and in 1903-4 was head of Tech. House. In 1904-5 he went to New York again and became head worker in the University Settlement. Disguised as an immigrant he studied the American immigration question at first hand, and wrote numerous magazine articles which attracted national attention.

When the Russian revolutionary movement broke out in 1905 Durland started for that country as a special correspondent. It was he who telegraphed the news to America of the arrest in that country of William E. Walling and his wife of Indianapolis, and set in motion the machinery of the state department to secure their liberation. Within a few hours thereafter he was taken by the secret police of St. Petersburg and cast into the same prison that held the Wallings. His release was only a matter of a short time, and immediately after regaining his freedom Durland started for America.

He then issued his second book, "The Red Reign—Being the Story of an Adventurous Year in Russia."

Durland contributed magazine articles to Collier's, Harper's Weekly and The Review of Reviews. He was a trustee of Hartley House, the social settlement in New York, a member of the Explorers', Ends of the Earth, Chicago Press and National Press clubs and the National Geographic society.

Two years ago Durland wrote "Lone Stories of Living," and in collaboration with Genevieve Greville, a newspaper writer, wrote a play, "Buchanan of The Times." He married Miss Greville.

It became known three weeks ago that Mrs. Durland had had divorce papers served on Durland. When she was interviewed relative to the proceedings at New York she declined to explain them further than by saying that she had strong home instincts, while her husband was constitutionally a "rover."

Chas. W. Gill Withdraws As Candidate In Ward Six

OTHER RUMORS

Charles W. Gill, who was nominated on the Democratic ticket at the recent caucuses for Councilman from Ward Six, by having his name written on the ballot, has withdrawn.

It is rumored this morning, that the Independent Citizens papers taken out by friends of Candidate Stone, will not be filed.

It is understood that Dr. Reynolds will withdraw from the Democratic nomination as School Committee-at-large. Dr. Reynolds did not file nomination papers for the caucuses, but later decided to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for School Committee from Ward Four. He had stickers printed, and if the voters had been a little careful he would have received the nomination. Instead of using them for the office of School Committee from the ward, however, a large number, who voted for him pasted them under the title School Committee-at-large so that he received that nomination instead of the nomination from the ward. He did however receive the Republican nomination from the ward, by the use of stickers, as the Republicans had no candidate in this ward. Now it is said that he will file nomination papers for the office and will withdraw the nomination at large.

LACK OF EVIDENCE AGAINST STORROW

Charge of Violating Anti-Trust Act Is Dropped

Boston, Nov. 22.—James J. Storrow, who, with five other officers of the United Shoe Machinery company, including President Winslow, was indicted by the federal grand jury on a charge of violating the Sherman anti-trust act, will not be prosecuted by the United States government.

This announcement was made public by United States District Attorney French, who said:

"Because of insufficient evidence connecting James J. Storrow during the statutory period of limitations with any of the criminal acts charged in the indictments returned in the United Shoe Machinery cases I will not further prosecute them against him."

French added that Storrow has not been connected with the United Shoe Machinery company for a number of years.

HELPS UNCLE SAMUEL

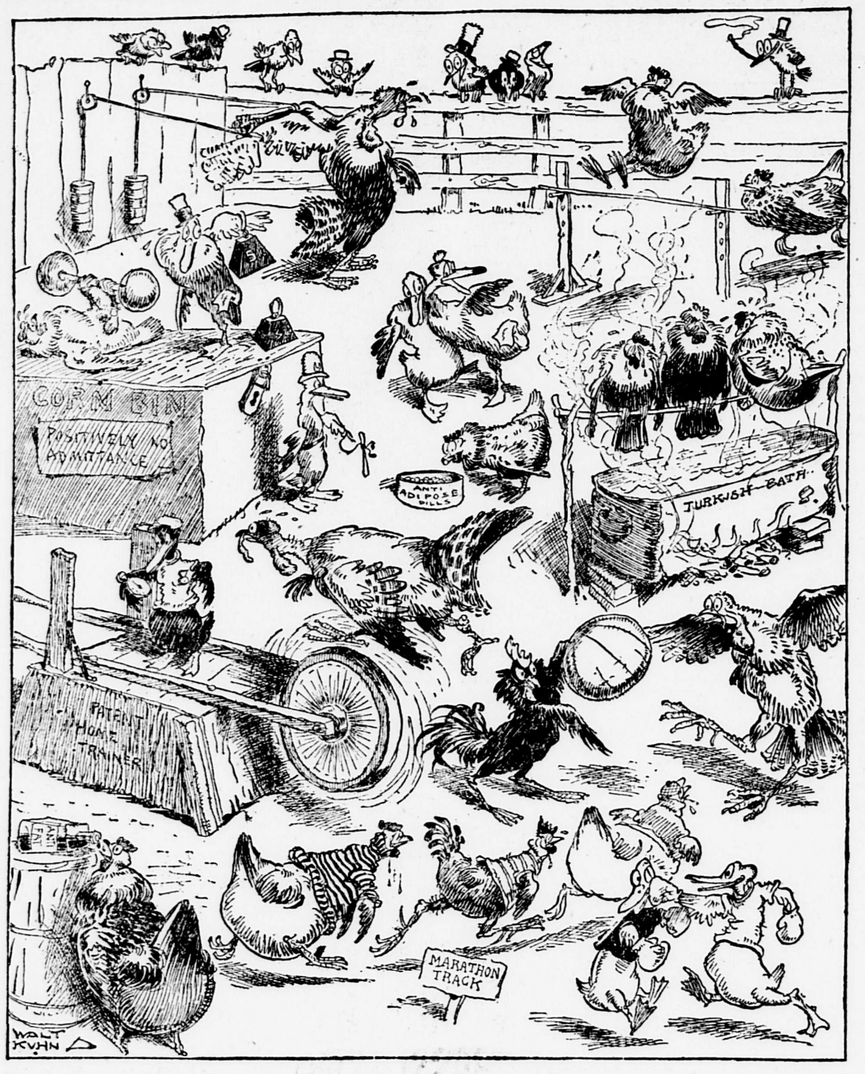

Flood Quickly Performs a Million Dollar Job Without Pay

Bellingham, Wash., Nov. 22.—A freak of the flood in the Skagit river has done, in twenty-four hours, without a cent of expense, work contemplated by the United States government at a cost of $1,000,000 and a year's labor of engineering crews.

The stream cut through Sterling Bend, above Mount Vernon, where a channel now runs, 300 feet wide and twenty feet deep.

For seventeen years the federal government has considered this improvement, and many surveys have been made.

WISE TURKEYS TRAINING DOWN FOR THANKSGIVING

If only turkey birds were wise they'd read the sporting pages,
Discovering there the secret rare of lengthening out their ages.
By training down instead of up they'd so reduce their meat
That when Thanksgiving day comes round they'd not be fit to eat,
And when the buyer came along to talk with Farmer Jones
He'd say, "Why, I these birds can't buy---they're only skin and bones!"

TRUST ISSUE TO THE FRONT

Will Be Principal Feature of Message to Congress

THE PRESIDENT IS AROUSED

Will Not Allow Attacks by Roosevelt and Insurgent Republicans to Remain Unanswered—May Postpone Discussion of Tariff Until Special Board Reports—No Comments on Reports of Commissions

Washington, Nov. 22.—The indisposition of President Taft is not such as to prevent him from working on his annual message to congress. He has the document well under way, although not much of the final draft has been put on paper. He intends to try to follow the advice of members of his cabinet and make the message short.

The trust question will be the leading one discussed. As late as a week ago it was not the intention of the president to devote much space to the so-called trust problem, but the attack on his administration by former President Roosevet and the intimation from the insurgent Republicans that thep propose to do their utmost to keep the trust question to the front has caused him to change his plans.

"The president is not anxious to invite a long controversy with either Mr. Roosevelt or the insurgent Republicans," said one member of the cabinet, "but he will not hesitate to indulge in some plain talk on the trust question in his message. He is perfectly willing to go before congress and before the American people on the administration's record on this subject."

Some well-informed persons suspect that the insurgent Republicans would like to create a situation in which the so-called trust question would overshadow the tariff. The president tells his callers that while he has decided to talk out plainly on the trust question he has no thought of minimizing the tariff. It is probably true that the tariff will not be discussed in his regular message to congress. This, however, has not been finally settled.

If the tariff board shall have its final report on the wool schedule ready when congress meets the president will discuss that schedule with the regular message. At any rate, it is pointed out, there will not be much delay in presenting to congress the report of the tariff board on the schedule, and the report will be accompanied by a strong demand from the president for a revision of the schedule.

The proposed regulation of the issues of stocks and bonds by railroads and the physical valuation of railroads as a basis for rate fixing are likely to be subjects that will attract much attention about the time congress meets, but the president does not intend to discuss this subject at length in his regular message. He has had the report of the stocks and bonds commission for several days. He will send it to congress without comment. He will do this because he feels that congress asked for this information and is entitled to receive it without comment from him.

It is pretty well understood that the commission recommends federal supervision of the issue of stocks and bonds by railroads and that it advises legislation by congress providing for a physical valuation of railroads by the interstate commerce commission. The report of the commission created to study the second class mail problem will submit its report to the president in a few days and this report will also go to congress without comment by the president.

The president and Secretary of the Interior Fisher are in perfect harmony as to proposed legislation for developing the natural resources of Alaska and for the development of the coal and oil-bearing lands on the public domain, as well as for regulations under which water power on government land may be developed. The leasing system, both for Alaska and the United States proper, will be recommended. So it would seem that there is to be no issue between the administration and the insurgent Republicans over conservation of the country's natural resources.

SPORTING NOTES.

One of the first bills that will be introduced in the New York legislature of 1912, will provide for the repeal of the Frawley Boxing law. Gov. Dix declared on Tuesday that he is convinced that the new law has fallen short of the purpose for which it was enacted—the promotion of amateur boxing contests.

Secretary of the Navy Meyers and Secretary of the War Stimson will go to Philadelphia on Saturday to watch the army and navy battle for the gridiron supremacy. If President Taft's cold improves he also will probably attend the game. If the Presidents attends he will probably divide his time between the boxes of the two secretaries, according to custom.

MAYOR SHEA GIVEN GREAT RECEPTION AT DEMOCRATIC RALLY

Comes Out Strong For Candidate Wall At First Rally In Local Campaign

Were Notable Addresses By All Speakers

The first big rally in the interest of James E. Wall, candidate for Mayoralty honors, was held Wednesday evening in St. Mary's hall under most favorable auspices. The candidate for Mayor was given a grand reception, as were also the other candidates for municipal offices, who spoke on the issues of the campaign.

John J. McDevitt was the presiding officer of the evening and handled all affairs to complete satisfaction. Mr. McDevitt was accorded great applause when he took possession of the meeting.

In opening, Mr. McDevitt thanked the voters of his own Ward for the loyal support they gave him while he was aspiring for representative honors from the sixth Norfolk district. He said he would always bear a deep affection in his heart for the voters of West Quincy and felt, from the great vote he received on state election day, that his was, without question, the banner ward of the city.

He then dwelt on the many features that had developed with regard to the municipal campaign. He related his experiences in the Council. He complimented Mr. Wall from a standpoint of character, integrity, and business capability and predicted that he would be the next Mayor, if only accorded the support that was due him. He dispelled the numerous rumors that were going about, and said that he hoped that candidate Wall would receive the same handsome plurality as was granted to himself as a representative candidate.

He then paid a tribute to the first speaker of the evening, for the loyalty and fidelity displayed on previous occasions and William D. Kelly, the well known labor leader, was given a great reception as he arose to speak.

In opening with his remarks, Mr. Kelly stated that he was always willing to use his efforts in behalf of a man who represented the interests of the common people. He said he had supported Michael T. Sullivan and John J. McDevitt for their respective offices, as best he could, not because of their names or their affiliations but because they represented the common people and were seeking office on principles which were sufficient to command the support of all working men. He spoke at length on the urgent need of placing men in the city council who will work for the interests of all, and not be bound by any party mandates.

He commended the calibre of the five men on the democratic ticket who were seeking the office of councilman at large and said that they could ably measure up to those who were seeking the same office on the republican ticket. He urged the election of the three candidates from the Ward and laid special stress on the necessity of rolling up a large vote for Joseph McPherson, candidate for school committee from the Ward. Mr. Kelly praised the administration of Mayor Shea and said that the same business like methods would be employed in the event of the election of Mr. Wall.

Mr. Kelly described the arguments that were being presentel by some to the effect that the working men of the city would not all be retained if James E. Wall were elected. He punctured this idea by stating that no man would be discharged from the city who was giving to the citizens a fair return for work he was receiving. He brought before those present the campaign literature of the eleventh hour put out by candidate Stone, while opposing Mayor Shea. He showed the large vote that was rolled up in repudiating these statements. He said that Mr. Stone has already promised positions to a number of men for their support. He said that the promise has been made that the present administration would be maintained. Mr. Kelly asserted that an inconsistency existed somewhere and that some men would have to suffer the consequence. He was roundly applauded at the conclusion of his remarks.

Joseph McPherson was the next speaker. He thanked those present for the support he received at the caucuses and said he entertained no unfriendly disposition towards those who had opposed his candidacy. He said that he felt qualified to become a member of the school committee in this city, from the fact that he had lived here all his life, was a graduate of the grammar and high schools, was now a student at the Harvard Business College and had by local association, familiarized himself with conditions in the local school department. He promised to use his best efforts to maintain a high standard of efficiency in the school department and said that he would do all in his power along those lines. He was greeted with great applause as he concluded his remarks.

Councilman Forde was the next speaker and urged that a large vote be gotten out for Mr. Wall and the other candidates who were associated with him. He also commended the ability of Mr. McPherson and urged that he be elected. As for himself he said that he had done his duty as he thought his oath of office demanded and was willing to rest his case with the voters. Great applause followed his remarks.

Thomas Griffin, was enthusiastically received when he was introduced. Mr. Griffin is a candidate for Councilman-at-large and said that though it was his initial appearance in Ward Four, he felt that he was in good hands since he was associated in the campaign with men who commanded the respect of the district. He said that the voters of Quincy were no longer bound in voting for a candidate, but voted for the man whose merits seemed to warrant their suffrage.

Councilman Harry T. Boyd was next introduced. He dwelt in brief on the recent campaign and showed the effect it ought to bear in this coming municipal election. He urged the election of Councilman Smith and the other gentlemen who were running for the Council in conjunction with him. He predicted that the Democrats would elect nine candidates to the coming body and said that Mr. Wall was getting stronger every day. He advocated a large vote on election day and said that the administration of Mayor Shea during the past four years was sufficient to warrant the election of Mr. Wall, in order that the same business like administration might be forthcoming.

At this point, Mayor Shea himself appeared on the scene and was thunderously welcomed as he ascended the platform. After the applause had subsided, Leo P. Noonan, was introduced as a young man, who bids fair to be of value to the rising generation in political circles. Mr. Noonan has appeared in Ward Four, many times, and was no stranger when he started to speak. He launched forth into the same strain as had been adopted by the previous speakers and said, without boasting at all, that the men who were seeking office in conjunction with Mr. Wall, could ably cope with their opponents who were candidates for the same offices. He paid a high tribute to Councilman Smith, for the record made in the City Council, and commended the ability of the other Councilmanic candidates.

He said that Mr. Wall consented to become a candidate at the solicitation of his friends, in order that the election of a Mayor might not go by default.

He said that Mr. Wall had been a successful business man for thirty years and was therefore thoroughly qualified to conduct the affairs of the city. He was accorded the same reception as the other speakers received.

Mr. McDevitt next paid a high tribute to Mayor Shea for his good administration during the past four years. He also showed the many improvements that were given to West Quincy during that time and said that the Mayor could best explain the features of the present campaign.

The applause that greeted His Honor as he arose to speak, lasted for some moments, and when it had subsided, he proceeded to state his position in the campaign and immediately dispelled all rumors with regard to his attitude, by saying that he was with James E. Wall for Mayor and would do all in his power to further his candidacy. The Mayor said that he was forced to retire from politics at the present time on the advice of his physician. He said that he was glad to see that Mr. Wall was seeking office on non partisan prin-

GASOLINE EXPLODED

At City Stone Crushing Plant And Man Badly Burned

WAS THAWING PIPES

Gustas Sandeline of 31 Arthur street employed at the city's portable stone crushing plant on Brook road, was badly burned about the face and hands this morning at 7.03 at a fire which destroyed the engine house and more or less damaged the engine. The alarm sounded from Box 39. It seems that when he went to work, one of the pipes was frozen up. This he attempted to thaw with a piece of lighted cotton waste. The result was that some loose gasoline was ignited and in an instant there was an explosion in his face. He ran from the building screaming with pain. Fellow workmen took him to the office of a physician who dressed his burns.

The building which was more or less saturated with oil burnt rapidly and was practically destroyed. The loss to the building is estimated at $300. Just what the loss will be on the engine can not be said until it is overhauled.

PREPARE FOR ANNUAL RALLY FOR CANDIDATES

Houghs Neck Associates Invite All Seeking Honors

NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT

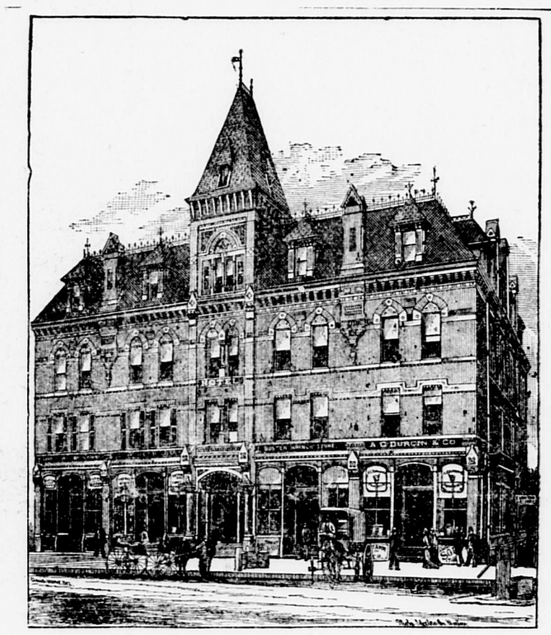

A largely attended meeting of the Houghs Neck Associates was held Wednesday night in Associates' Hall. In the absence of James E. Wall, who is engaged in conducting his campaign for mayoralty honors, the gathering was presided over by Capt. Oliver G. Fosdick.

The meeting itself proved to be a lively one and many interesting features, pertaining to the welfare of the district, were discussed at length. The reports of the various committees were read and accepted and from the various instances of progress that were advanced, the improvement association itself gives promise of developing into a most flourishing condition this coming year.

Considerable opposition was registered against the car service, it being claimed that the cars do not always run on schedule time, and furthermore that some are so crowded that additional cars should be sent on some of the trips. A committee was appointed to confer with the railway authorities in the matter.

Through the efforts of Captain Fosdick, the annual "rally night," the time in which all aspirants for municipal offices in the City of Quincy, are invited to appear in Associates' Hall, has been set for next Tuesday. This time is eagerly looked forward to with great anxiety and bids fair to be the mecca of attraction for a large number.

After the business meeting a collation, consisting of ice cream, coffee, cakes and sandwiches with cigars added to the bill, was in order. Messrs. Daniel Maloney, Henry W. French, N. J. Regan and Oliver G. Fosdick entertained with speechmaking and there were many words of praise expressed for the candidate for Mayor.

THE HOTEL GREENLEAF.
From an Old Photograph.

GREENLEAF HOTEL THING OF THE PAST

Is To Be Converted At Once Into An Office Building

UNSUCCESSFUL AS HOSTELRY

Hotel Greenleaf is a thing of the past. Several have tried to make a first class hotel pay in Quincy but the nearness to Boston has made this impossible. Mr. and Mrs. Nevins, the recent proprietors tried hard but were also unsuccessful. The Quincy Real Estate Trust Co., owners of the block have therefore decided to give up the idea of running a hotel and it has been closed.

It is the intention of the owners to either build stores in the rear of the street floor, or to enlarge some of the present ones on the Hancock street front.

The second floor wil be cut up into offices, for which there is quite a demand in Quincy at the present time and as they face Hancock street they will become very desirable.

The third floor will be used as a lodging house and for the present at least will be in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Nevins.

This morning the swinging sign over the main entrance was taken down and work will be started immediately to make the necessary changes.

It is too bad that a city with the population of Quincy can not support a first class hotel, but it seems that it can not, several have tried to make a success of the venture but have failed. It is claimed that being so near Boston, where there is plenty in the way of amusement is too alluring to the transient guests, and for that reason traveling men will not remain in Quincy over night.

STOLEN WATCH IS RECOVERED

Lieut. McKay, Wednesday recovered in a Boston pawnshop, a gold watch and chain that had been stolen from the home of Mrs. Anderson, who conducts a boarding house on School street. Early in the evening, one day last week, three young men applied at the house for board. Mrs. Anderson was absent at the time, but her daughter invited them in to wait. While waiting they rummaged about the house and when they suddenly left, without waiting for Mrs. Anderson to return, they carried away her watch and chain.

PLEASANT SURPRISE.

A pleasant surprise was given Mrs. Fred Northrop of Stanton street, on Wednesday afternoon, when the ladies of the S. F. club of Wollaston met at her house and presented her with a handsome drop light for her new home in Atlantic. The ladies present were: Mrs. William Atkins, Mrs. Frank Blake, Mrs. James Cruikshank, Mrs. Walter Coombs, Mrs. Royal Eastman, Mrs. Theo. Gram, Mrs. Walter Jones, Mrs. Judson Smith and Mrs. Seth S. Crocker.

Col. Roosevelt remarks that the Tobacco trust has only changed its clothes. But if its trousers don't match its coat and vest we are perfectly satisfied.

"MAY YOU LIVE LONG AND PROSPER"

Friends Extend Compliments of Season To Galen V. Bowditch

ON HIS 74TH BIRTHDAY

Galen Vinton Bowditch, of the old guard, is passing another milestone today, in his eventful career. It is his 74th, although one to see him rushing toward Boston with important news packages would never for a minute think it. Galen first saw the light of day in old Roxbury and is an honored member of the Old School Boys' association of that place, which organization, it so happens, is today holding its 31st annual reunion and banquet, and Galen is with them. They convene at Young's hotel this afternoon at 3 o'clock and after a business session will sit down to a banquet. This over, Galen will return to Quincy in time to gather his news packages for the morning editions and depart for Boston.

Galen has for years been a familiar figure in Quincy. He is a direct descendant of the old Braintree Vintons and Bowditches and is proud of it. He is more proud however of the fact that for 53 years he has cast his lot with the old Democracy. In all these years that he has been voting the Democratic ticket, he has seen his party defeated many times and has also seen it ride on to victory. He is not afraid to make himself and his preferences known in no uncertain tone wherever occasion demands.

In his younger days, Galen was engaged in the express business in Quincy, but for the past few years he has been the faithful messenger of the reporters. In every sense of the word faithful, he literaly carries out, for it must indeed be an unheard of occurance that would keep him from reaching his destination and delivering his packages once he started on his way. An incident to illustrate this, took place a few years ago during a great storm. Galen started for Boston on the train that evening, but did not get beyond Atlantic, for all trains were blocked by falling poles and wires. The wind was blowing a hurricane, but nothing daunted, Galen started to walk to Neponset where he could take the electric cars. He crossed the Neponset railroad bridge, which was a mass of tangled wires, in the teeth of the storm, being obliged to crawl on his hands and knees a part of the way. But he got there and eventually reached the newspaper offices.

Galen is not much of a society man and there was never but one secret society which he joined. To this he was initiated in what is now the Greenleaf hotel and of his initiation much might be written. He is, however, a member of the Washington M. French Hose association and can always be found at its gatherings, and a member of that most exclusive organization known as the Ramblers and the Old School Boys' association of Boston.

Life is too short however, for one, in the time allowed, to attempt to write a complete history of Galen's life, suffice to say that it has been an eventful one. He is hale and hearty and able to look the dining table in the face three times a day, a thing many a millionaire is unable to do. His many friends unite in wishing him many happy returns of the day and in the wish for a continued life of health and activity.

VIOLATED SUNDAY LAW.

Seven Italians were in court this morning and paid $1.25 cents each for violation of the Sunday law. About 1 o'clock last Sunday morning, Officer Broberg discovered the men at work cementing a cellar floor on Water street. He warned them that they had better stop, as it was Sunday. Returning at 3 o'clock, he found them still at work and securing warrants against them, had them in court this morning.

BIG BLAZE AT PARAGON PARK

Fire This Morning Destroyed Large Part of Famous Resort

PALM GARDEN SAVED

Paragon Park, Nantasket's famous summer resort, came near being entirely destroyed by fire this morning. The fire started from some unknown cause in the dance hall and from there it communicated to several of the buildings surrounding the lake in the centre of the park. These included, besides the dance hall, the merry-go-round, theatre and other buildings. For a time it looked as though the whole park would be wiped out. The fire was prevented, however, from communicating with the palm garden, although it was somewhat scorched.

Those who have visited this famous resort, will remember that the small buildings surrounding the lake, in the centre of the park are made of light material, gaily painted and therefore were very inflammable. The only wonder is that a fire, once started, did not wipe out all of the structures. The fire department had the fire under control before noon.

TEN TABLES WERE IN PLAY

At Weekly Whist Of Granite City Club Wednesday Evening

FINE LUNCH PREPARED

Ten tables were in play Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. While the play was in progress, Chef Johnson was busy in the kitchen preparing a lunch. This included creamed oysters, rolls, coffee, and cake which was served after the play. The best scores were made by Shirley F. Nutting who secured 78-9 per cent and W. O. Wellington who secured 69-1 per cent. As the next whist occurrs the night before Thanksgiving an unusual program is being arranged for the entertainment of the members.

WARRANT FOR "FAKE" DOCTOR

Lieut. McKay applied to the court this morning for a warrant for Thomas E. Able, who it is alleged has posed as a physician, and is wanted by the Lieutenant for an illegal operation on an Italian woman in Quincy. The case first came to light when a local physician was called and reported the case to the police. The man wanted by Lieut. McKay is now under arrest in Lynn on a similar complaint, his case is that court being continued until early in December.

ANNUAL LADIES' NIGHT.

The annual ladies' night of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, will be held tonight at their rooms in the Savings bank building and Colonial hall, and a pleasant evening is assured. During the early evening there will be an entertainment at Colonial hall, following which, refreshments will be served in the club roms and the evening will close with dancing.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

AN EVENING ECHO.

The fundamental object of democratic education is to lift the whole population to a high plane of intelligence, conduct and happiness.—Ex.-Pres. Eliot.

As President Taft has been confined to the White house by a cold, no suggestion that he run over to San Francisco for a week end was made.

Some people say they still believe that Doc Cook reached the Pole, but the real test comes when they are invited to put up fifty cents for a gallery seat to hear him lecture.

J. P. Morgan dropped the collection plate in church the other day. Before we know it he may drop our whole financial system and let it get scattered around every which way.

The Mexican revolutionists were given 48 hours to get out of Texas. Considering the width of the state and the condition of the walking, we believe 72 hours would have been only fair.

Chandeliers were broken and the curtain punctured in a New Haven theatre the other day by Yale students, but as long as they leave the college buildings standing they are doing pretty well.

If the Panama canal is finished a year ahead of contract, this distressing tendency for the help to work themselves out of a job will be contrary to all the principles of the government service.

The trusts say they can not find out what they can legally do under the Sherman law. But as they can find out by paying car fare for some one to go down to Texas and ask Senator Bailey, they should not complain.

THE REPORTER AND AUTHOR.

A unique provision in Joseph Pulitzer's will provides prizes for meritorious services by newspapers, for novels, plays and for the best example of a reporter's work. It is significant that Mr. Pulitzer offers the same honor to achievement as a newspaper reporter as to achievement in novel or play writing. And yet, we recall a cartoon published by a humorous paper, in which a society girl was depicted as asking "Can a reporter be a gentleman?"

A glorified halo of artistic temperament descends upon the head of the young man who announces that he has chosen a literary career. Friends whose idea of success is measured in terms of automobiles and Persian rugs may wish that he had chosen a calling where the financial rewards are less capricious. But in their secret hearts they admire his sportsmanship.

While the calling of the reporter has grown more dignified as newspapers have grown better, there does exist with some the impression that the reporter's position lacks dignity. The public of course justifies a young man who takes that position, for willingness to engage in the rough and tumble climb over the stepping stones of life. But there is yet to come a full recognition of the fact that the calling of the reporter is one essentially of large dignity.

In the temper of our times, in spite of the occasional really vital novel and play, the novelist and playwright usually only amuse. They make the public laugh, the reporter makes the public think. By the license of fiction, the whole world of imagination is at the command of the novelist and playwright. The reporter is given the hard, bare facts of life. He is held down to rules of precision and accuracy, which never bother the novelist or playwright. If he is a really good reporter, he sees between those facts into the vital principles of life, and so shapes his story that they illustrate those principles.

Under present conditions, the work of the reporter is usually underpaid, because the public fails to demand the highest grade of work and pay for it. But the public taste is growing more discriminating. It will before long refuse to accept newspapers which print sloppily written and inaccurate news stories, and it will be willing to pay prices that will permit newspaper reporters to make the calling a source of permanent reliance.

PRICES WILL BE KEPT UP

Not Much Chance That Turkeys Will Be Cheaper This Year

ALL DEPENDS ON SUPPLY

What are turkeys going to cost this year?" The natural question with the approach of Thanksgiving week.

Inquiry at various places today elicited the information that from present indications prices will rule about the same as in the past two years at the holiday season.

The price of turkeys, like the price of everything else, is declared to be governed by supply and demand. Dealers say they have no way of getting absolute information on what the supply is going to be, for it has not yet reached the market and probably will not until Saturday and Sunday

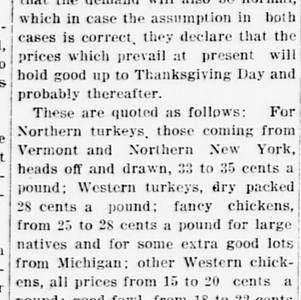

They assume, however, that it will be about normal. They assume also, from the state of business, generally, that the demand will also be normal, which in case the assumption in both cases is correct, they declare that the prices which prevail at present will hold good up to Thanksgiving Day and probably thereafter.

These are quoted as follows: For Northern turkeys, those coming from Vermont and Northern New York, heads off and drawn, 33 to 35 cents a pound; Western turkeys, dry packed 28 cents a pound; fancy chickens, from 25 to 28 cents a pound for large natives and for some extra good lots from Michigan; other Western chickens, all prices from 15 to 20 cents a pound; good fowl from 18 to 22 cents a pound.

The prices, it is said are not likely to now be affected by the weather, for the low temperature of the past couple of days here and in the West, and the indications for the next three or four days, have made ideal conditions for the handling of poultry.

It looks, therefore, as if those intending to purchase a Thanksgiving turkey would have to figure on paying about the same price they paid for the one last year.

A NEWSBOY'S CONTRIBUTION.

"Here's a penny for the Anti-Tuberculosis League," said a little newsboy, stepping up to the visiting nurse of a western league, who was selling the Red Cross Christmas seals in one of the moving picture theatres.

"Here, take one of the seals," said the nurse, as the boy dropped the penny in front of her.

"Aw, I ain't got no use for de seal, but I wants to give youse de penny 'cause youse did so much good for me mudder," replied the lad, running away before he could be questioned further.

SAVINGS BANK INSURANCE.

The Steady Growth of Massachusetts Savings Bank Life Insurance.

Three years have elapsed since the Whitman Savings Bank of Whitman and the People's Savings Bank of Brockton opened insurance departments under the law enacted by the Commonwealth to provide wage earners with the opportunity of obtaining life insurance and old age annuities at the lowest possible cost. Other banks have been waiting to see how the new departure worked out in these two institutions. The results have been so encouraging that the Trustees of the Berkshire County Savings Bank of Pittsfield opened an Insurance Department in that bank last June.

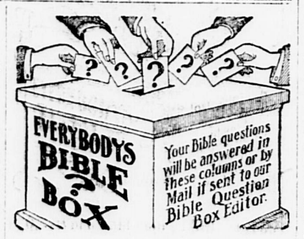

The third financial year of Savings Bank Life Insurance ended October 31st, 1911,—and the record of the year is most satisfactory. The insurance departments of the banks show a premium income for the year of $75,827.16—an increase of about 33 1-3 per cent over the previous year.

The number of policy holders has grown from 3,318 in 1910 to more than 5,200 in 1911. During the financial year just ended the amount of insurance in force has increased from $632,637 to nearly $2,000,000—a net gain of more than 45 per cent.

Q.—When did our Lord become the "only begotten Son of God?"

Answer.—The pre-human existence of the Lord Jesus is clearly established in the Scriptures. His own testimony of Himself was that He is "The faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God." Revelation iii, 14. We find then that our Lord became the "only begotten Son of God" at the time of His creation, which was before the foundation of the earth, and before the existence of any other thing in creation with the exception, of course, of God Himself, who created or begot Him. In agreement with this thought of our Lord's pre-existence from the very beginning we read, "He is the image of the invisible God— first born of all creation; because by Him were all things created, those in the heavens and those on the earth, visible and invisible—whether thrones, or lordships, or governments, or authorities; all things were created by Him and for Him, and He precedes all things, and in Him all things have been permanently placed." (Colossians i, 15-18.) The thought conveyed by the title, "The Only Begotten Son of God," is that the Lord Jesus was Himself the only direct creation or begetting of the Heavenly Father.

Q.—What will become of the heathen? Will they be saved because of their ignorance?

Answer.—If ignorance were a basis of salvation then all should have been left in ignorance, for then all would have been saved. And if the heathen are saved through ignorance then also all of the babes and children who have died before attaining years of discretion and knowledge, and therefore in ignorance—these likewise should be saved. What a great missionary Herod must have been when he slew so many of the infants of Bethlehem, for of course these were all saved to Kingdom glory! And what a pity we did not all die as infants! Heaven would be a delightful place filled with heathen and infants! We are informed in the Scriptures that the heathen's trial time for eternal life will be after the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, when not only the heathen but all the world of mankind shall be fully enlightened as to the way of salvation; when the way is so plain that a wayfaring man, though unlearned, shall not err. The babes developing to maturity will likewise have their opportunity of salvation, for eternal life is to be given to those only who exercise faith and obedience. Those who disobey, after full opportunity has been received, shall die the "second death."

HAS 87 PASSENGERS ABOARD

Steamer From New York Runs Aground In Isolated Position In the Bahamas—No Difficulty In Transferring Passengers, Whose Safety Is Assured, Is Anticipated—Ships Mobilized Few Hours After Disaster

New York, Nov. 23.—Whether the eighty-seven passengers on the steamer Prinz Joachim, which went ashore on Atwood key, near Samana island in the Bahamas, have been transferred to Ward line steamers, one of which a message said already was standing by, has not been learned, owing to the interruption of wireless communication.

Among the Prinz Joachim's passengers are William J. Bryan, his wife and grandchild.

No less than five ships and possibly seven are on their way to the assistance of the Prinz Joachim. It is considered another triumph of modern methods that such a fleet of ships was thus mobilized for rescue only a few hours after the Prinz Joachim grounded in her rather isolated position. This position, it may be added, is about 1000 miles from New York.

The United States revenue cutter Algonquin has been dispatched from San Juan, P. R., 600 miles away, and is expected to reach the scene this afternoon; the naval tug Peoria and the French cable steamer lying in Guantanamo harbor, Cuba, about 300 miles away, have been dispatched and probably will reach there this noon; the wrecking tug Premier left Kingston, Jam., yesterday afternoon and probably will reach the boat tomorrow; the Ward iner Seguranca already is on the scene, and another Ward liner, the Vigilancia, bound for Santiago, is due to reach the stranded vessel's side; the Hamburg-American line ship Allegheny and the Panama line steamer Colon also are reported in unofficial wireless messages as proceeding to the Prinz Joachim.

The few personal messages received gave assurance that the passengers were safe.

The transfer of pasengers, going on now presumably, is not expected to be attended by great difficulties by the Hamburg-American line officials, since the weather is reported as favorable. If any of the pasengers want to return to New York, they can come here on the Seguranca. Those who wish to continue the journey will be taken to Santiago, and then to Port Antonio by the Vigilancia.

From Port Antonio they will be transferred by rail to Kingston, where Bryan expected to make his first stop on the voyage. He took ship from here to see his son-in-law, who is a British army officer stationed there.

The Prinz Joachim sailed with a full cargo of general merchandise, principally soap, beef, flour and machinery. With these provisions she drew a full draught of water forward and aft, which may account for her grounding in a place she might otherwise have cleared.

HANG FROM LIVE WIRE

Three Men Have a Narrow Escape From Electrocution

Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 23.—While three men hung suspended from a telegraph pole where two had gone to rescue the third and momentarily expected that their grips would break and drop them to their deaths, firemen, street car men and linemen were hurrying to their assistance last night while pedestrians looked on unable to help.

Frank Cousins, a telephone lineman, while at work on a pole on River street, came in contact with the electric light wires and the full force of the alternating current of 2300 volts passed through his body. He fell unconscious on the cross-arm thirty feet above the street and was about to plunge to the sidewalk below when Carl Carter, another lineman, caught him by the right leg and held him there.

Both tottered perilously and Louis Marcotte, a third lineman, rushed to help, he becoming wedged in such a position that all three were in imminent danger of being dashed to the street.

The men were finally rescued in the nick of time after Cousins had been terribly burned.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

QUINCY HIGH.

Last week Thursday night, a dinner was served in the domestic science room to eight members of the committee on industrial education. The meal was prepared by the pupils of the cooking department, under the careful instructions of Miss Douglas, the domestic science teacher. Dorothy Edwards, Edith Atkins, Alice Hennigar and Alice Billings, were the girls in charge of the food in the kitchen, while Mary Critchley and Hortense Andrews waited on table. The table looked very pretty with its large centerpiece of chrysanthemums and its place cards, hand-painted with the same flower by students of the art department. The dinner was a great success and much praise is due Miss Douglas as well as the girls whose efforts helped to make it one.

The game between Quincy High and Waltham High which was scheduled for Nov. 18 was canceled and the school has now closed its football season of 1911 with a neat record winning eight and losing three games. This is a very good record considering that most of Quincy's victories were over big high schools such as, Brockton, Boston college, School of Commerce and others.

The football reception will be held Dec. 15. All pupils of the classes of 1912, '13 and '14 are invited to attend.

Those who are qualified to enter the Quincy—Weymouth cross country run are A. Williams, W. Safford, R. Prout, A. Bullock and F. Kingsbury.

Quincy High has a very good basket-ball schedule for her 1912 season. Some class games will be played before January, when the schedule begins. Mr. Staff will coach the basket-ball squad.

The reports were given out at the school this week.

It was a sad disappointment to a number of the students that the Waltham High—Quincy High football game, scheduled for last Saturday had to be called off on account of the inclement weather. The students had been rehearsing many school songs and yells, and had acquired a degree of enthusiasm that would have greatly aided the home team had the game been played. Considerable work was put into the matter of creating an enthusiastic school spirit, and such would have been exemplified in a fitting manner had favorable weather prevailed.

A collection for the benefit of the various departments of athletics was taken up Monday and a goodly sum was realized.

The cup game is to be played on Friday November 24th, instead of on December 1st as previously stated.

ANDREW CARNEGIE.

Saturday, Andrew Carnegie will be 74 years of age. To celebrate it he has given away another $26,000,000 his gifts to the cause of education, science, peace and the general betterment of mankind now reaching the princely sum of $226,000,000.

As the self confessed maker and sponsor of 43 millionaires—the survival of the fittest of that vast army of young men, who starting as puddlers, laborers and workers-in-ordinary in the great steel foundries of Pennsylvania, have risen to wealth and eminence under him, the Iron Master acquires new interest as the weight of time crowds upon him. To the youth of the nation, ambitious for material power, no career in the whole galaxy of famous Americans either native or foreign born, furnishes greater inspiration or offers more encouragement, than that of the steel magnate, who said a little while ago: "I'd rather be born poor than a millionaire and I have had experience in both directions."

Thomas Carnegie, father of Andrew, supported his family operating a hand linen loom in his home at Dunfermlin, Scotland. With the abolition of the hand loom, the Carnegies found themselves face to face with privation and came to America. As good fortune oftimes comes in the guise of misfortune so it was with them. In recounting the hardships of his boyhood, the seamed and grizzled old Iron Master counts as the proudest moment of his life, the day when he got his first job in America as a bobbin boy in a Pennsylvania mill and was able to take home to his mother his modest wage of $1.25 a week toward the support of his family.

In Carnegie, the germ of industry was rampart and when things did not gravitate his way he went after them. When everybody turned their back on the inventor of the sleeping car, claiming that it was a fool's conceit, and nobody would take it seriously, Carnegie backed him for all he had and could borrow. His shrewdness netted him millions and was the real beginning of his great future. And while his competitors in the early days of the steel industry were plodding along with obsolete methods, the canny Scot slipped across the Atlantic and clinched the American right for the newly discovered Bessemer process of manufacturing that product. This act of enterprise made him the world's foremost steel magnate and one of its richest men.

Has the young man of today like opportunities to these? Carnegie says he has but he must strike out along new lines and hew his path through unbeaten fields as he did. "We who now live" said he recently "are developing successors who will far surpass us and who in turn will develop successors who will practically reach perfection."

SOLD RED CROSS STAMPS

Sidney Everett Richards, the 6 year old son of Councilman Richards, set a good example Wednesday afternoon of what a bright boy can do in the way of selling the red cross stamps for the tuberculosis hospital. The stamps were given out Wednesday morning, at a meeting of the society and Mrs. Richards took home a quantity to sell. Master Everett was very anxious to do his part, and that afternoon started out to sell them. When he returned he reported that he had sold 200. If every boy would do as well, a goodly sum would be realized from the sale of these stamps for this most worthy cause.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

President Taft is going to be host to the Republican National Committee, most of the well known leaders of the party, and to many of his cabinet all at once.

It promises to be the largest gathering of Republican leaders ever held in the White House. The national committee is to meet in Washington about Dec. 11 to choose a chairman and the place for holding the national convention. The President's dinner probably will be given on the night of the 11th, although the date may be changed. Invitations will be sent to every national committeeman, but it is recognized that a few probably will not accept. The party leaders who are to be invited will bring the total guest list up probably to 75.

TODAY' COURT.

Michael Hurley was fined $3 and Lewis Wright $10 for drunkenness at Quincy. Wright was in court a short time ago and given until Dec. 1, to pay a fine of $5. He got arrested again Wednesday and the court revoked the suspension and ordered the sentence to stand. On the new complaint the court ordered it placed on file. From this disposition Wright took an appeal. Learning that an appeal was to be taken, the court then took the case from the file and imposed a fine of $10, making $15 in all that Wright was called on to pay. Not having the necessary $15 he will probably go over to Dedham to work it out.

Giovianni Teze, Pasquale Deflorie M. Cabacie, Pasquale Domint, Pasquale Bosilla, Pasquale Samoni and Francisci Cabacie were fined $1.25 each for violation of the Lord's day act in Quincy.

Charles H. Kendall was sentenced to three months in the house of correction for drunkennness at Weymouth. Sentence suspended until March 1.

CHORUS GIRLS ON TRIAL

Charged With Attempted Murder of Millionaire Stokes

New York, Nov. 23.—The chorus girls, Ethel Conrad and Lillian Graham, who shot William E. D. Stokes, the millionaire horseman and hotel man, in the legs last June, when Stokes called at the Graham girl's apartment to obtain letters he had written to Miss Graham, which he was anxious to get back, were brought to trial before Justice Marcus in the supreme court.

The girls, who are charged with attempted murder, assert they shot Stokes in self defense. Stokes asserts that he was summoned to the Graham apartment on the pretext that he would be given his letters, and that when he entered the room the door was locked and a demand made on him for $25,000. He says the girls began firing when he refused the demand.

BEEF PACKERS' APPEAL

Counsel Ready to Present Briefs to the Supreme Court

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Counsel for the nine Chicago packers, indicted under the criminal clause of the Sherman anti-trust act, departed last evening for Washington, where, it is expected, they will submit an appeal to Chief Justice White of the United States supreme court today.

Attorneys Miller and Mayer were the legal representatives of the packers who took the appeal briefs to Washington. Neither would discuss details of the plans which counsel hope will save the indicted men from facing a jury in the United States district court here.

The appeal to the supreme court was taken from the decision of Judge Kohlsaat, who issued and afterward quashed a writ of habeas corpus for the court.

GROOM IS PARADED IN A WHEELBARROW

Kidnapped From Bride Immediately After Wedding

Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 23.—Siezed by a crowd of 100, whom he had regarded as his friends, Michael J. Wholley, a bridegroom of an hour, was surprised last evening when he was wrested from the side of his bride, hurled into a waiting wheelbarrow and pushed through the principal streets of the city, the result of his confiding to a friend that he was going to be married secretly.

Wholley married Miss Julia Clark at the St. James rectory, but he did not want his friends to know anything about it. He asked Timothy Higgins to be his best man and to keep the knowledge of the coming event secret. Higgins passed the word along.

Just as Wholley was going up the steps to the bride's home he was kidnapped and carried, kicking, to the wheelbarrow. Rope bound him tight while signs—"I'm just married" and "The end of a boyhood romance"—showed to the crowds on the streets the medicine Wholley was receiving.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY

ciples and felt sure that he was ably qualified to carry out the same plan of administration that he himself had endeavored in the welfare of the citizens during the past four years.

The Mayor said that he had known Mr. Wall for a number of years and that from this association, he was convinced that he was the logical candidate for the office of Mayor. Mayor Shea said he was willing to lend a hand to elect Mr. Wall and would use every effort he could to bring about his elecion. He said he wanted it distinctly understood that he would suppor Mr.. Wall in every way possible and that he was with him from start to finish and hoped his friends would give Mr. Wall the same vote as they gave himself during the preceding four years. He urged the election of the Councilmen-at-large who were running with Mr. Wall, and scored the narrow views taken by Councilman Sandberg and others who seemed to vote for measures in the City Council from a standpoint of party and not with regard to the interests of the citizens throughout the city. He advocated a big vote on election day and predicted that Mr. Wall, with the proper support, could readily be pronounced the next Mayor of the city.

Councilman John D. Smith was the next speaker. He thanked the voters of the fourth Ward for the confidence they had exhibited in him in the past few years, and said that he had always voted on all measures in the interest of the people. He said he has taken an active part in everything concerning the welfare of the voters of his district and had also endeavored to be alert to the needs of all the voters of Quincy. He said that he was a candidate for Councilman-at-large and was willing to present his record in the City Council during the past three years to the voters and be willing to abide by their verdict.

He asserted that he felt that the men who were seeking the office of Councilman-at-large in conjunction with him could measure up to the type of man desired in the Council chamber. He asked the voters to weigh the relative merits of all candidates and then vote as they deemed best. He complimented Mr. Wall on, being a most desirable candidate and urged those present to do all in their power to bring about his election. He spoke somewhat in the interests of Joseph McPherson, a man who was capable in every way to become a member of the school committee. He asked those present to forget any little differences that had arisen in the past and brought his remarks to a close by urging a large vote on December 5th.

Candidate Wall himself was the next speaker and proceeded in a manner that was well received, to outline the policies he had adopted. He said that no man need be afraid to vote for him through fear of losing his position in the employ of the city, for he asserted that any man who was giving a just return for the money he was receiving from the city would be retained. He spoke of the condition of the bridge connecting Neponset and Quincy and said that an immediate remedy should be forthcoming. He also went on record in favor of having an all night car run from Boston to Quincy and spoke in advocacy of the extension of the so-called "missing link." He dwelt at some length on the water front development of Quincy and pledged his support to the movement. He also advocated a live Board of Trade, which would greatly help the interest of the City of Quincy.

He then went into numerous statements with regard to the finances of the city and said that a safe and sane business administration, such as has been conducted by the present administration, would be his aim. He told of the woeful defeat of Mr. Stone as a candidate for Mayor, against the present incumbent and said he did not see any reason why he should be any stronger now than he was then. He said that if elected to office, he would be untrammeled by any pledges to individuals.

He said that he intended to conduct one of the best campaigns ever seen in this city and that he was now gathering his stone to build his wall, which he claimed would be finished to satisfaction on December 5th. He advocated the election of the candidates who were running with him, after he had explained his entire platform in detail. He said that he expected a large vote in Ward four and would know no discrimination as regards political affiliations, if the will of the citizens of Quincy should vote him in as the next Mayor of Quincy. He was roundly applauded at the conclusion of his speech and the first big rally of the Wall campaign had come to a close at 10.30 o'clock.

Committee Is Probing High Finance In the Ore Fields

PATHETIC STORY BY MERRITT

Says Oil King Called Loan of $420,000 on Twenty-Four Hours' Notice and Secured Property Worth Half a Billion Dollars—Brothers Who Owned Valuable Holdings Saw Them Wiped Cut by Sharp Practice

Washington, Nov. 23.—John D. Rockefeller will have to appear before the steel investigating committee and explain his high finance methods in the ore fields. This announcement was made by Chairman Stanley of the committee as a result of sensational testimony given by Leonidas Merritt. Stanley also stated that Rev. S. B. Gates, who, Merritt said, acted as agent for Rockefeller, will be summoned.

Further details of the high finance methods of Rockefeller in the ore fields were given before the investigation committee Wednesday.

Resuming the story of the alleged "trimming" of the Merritt brothers, builders of the Duluth, Meseba and Northern railroad, by Rockefeller, Leonidas Merritt took the stand. He corroborated much of the testimony of his brother, Alfred, who preceded him, and who told how Rockefeller, by calling a loan of $420,000 on twenty-four hours' notice, had acquired control of property now estimated to be worth half a billion dollars.

Tracing his early trials in financing his ore mines in Duluth, Meseba and Northern railroad, Merritt said that he went to Andrew Carnegie after Carnegie had sent a man to get samples of the ore. He was sent then to H. C. Frick, who was in Carnegie's employ.

"Frick did not treat me like a gentleman," said Merritt. "He cut me off short and attempted to bulldoze me, so the negotiations were off."

Merritt testified that he and a number of his friends next got together and determined to finance the building of the road themselves. After a while, he said, he became acquainted with C. W. Wetmore of New York, who claimed to be an associate of Rockefeller. In a short time Rockefeller's personal attorney, G. W. Murray, came out to Duluth to see the Merritt brothers and their friends, and about the same time Merritt said he discovered that some of the local stockholders of the road and ore mines were attempting to sell out to a rival concern, the Minnesota Iron company.

"My brother and I controlled a majority of the mining stock, and through friends controlled a majority of the railroad stock."

Merritt explained that through Wetmore they obtained $350,000 to purchase treasury stock, of which Rockefeller was to have a part. Wetmore and his associates were to buy bonds and furnish money for the extension of the road and the operation of the mines.

"About this time," continued the witness, "Rev. S. B. Gates came up to Duluth, saying that he was a great friend of Rockefeller. Gates explained how pious he was and how pious Rockefeller was.

"I trusted Gates and took his advice when he said that if my brother and I would put up a bundle of securities, instead of securities in small lots, and if we would consolidate our company with Rockefeller's properties we could get all the money we needed from John D."

A dramatic interchange between Chairman Stanley, Attorney Murray, representing Rockefeller, and the witness, Merritt, occurred when Merritt related how Rockefeller had called his loans and gobbled securities worth millions for a loan of less than half a million. Merritt said he had been acting on the advice of Gates and Murray.

"Gates told me," Merritt said, "that Rockefeller had arranged with the other stockholders to throw us out of the company, but that if we would deal with him (Rockefeller) he would protect us and crush the other stockholders.

"I could scarcely believe my ears when I heard this from the minister, Rockefeller's representative," continued Merritt. "I told him that this would be stealing out in my country and that a man would go to jail for it. Gates replied that Rockefeller with his $700,000,000 would stand behind me. I said to Gates: 'Go back to J. D. Rockefeller and tell him when I steal I will steal for myself.'"

A few hours later the witness said he was notified that his loan would be foreclosed in twenty-four hours.

PLOTTING IN MEXICO

Two Distinct Revolts Against the Madero Administration

Mexico City, Nov. 23.—President Madero has ordered the immediate enlistment of 12,000 soldiers to reinforce the army against the Reyes revolution, which is threatening the north.

Madero's government is confronted with two alleged organized revolts. Details of the plan of Tacubaya, headed by Emilio Gomez, former minister of the interior, are made public. In this plan it is specifically stated that while the movement will receive the support of a number of regular army officers, General Reyes will have absolutely no part in it.

The government secret service agents believe there is no doubt of the authenticity of both this document and that found in San Antonio ascribed to Reyes. The common belief is that the two movements eventually will be amalgamated.

DEFENSE FINISHES IN SPENCER TRIAL

Rests Upon Question Whether the Slayer Is Insane

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 23.—After two stormy outbreaks by Bertram G. Spencer, one directed against Attorney General Swift and the other addressed to Judge Crosby, the defense rested its case.

It was not denied that Spencer fired the shot on March 3, 1910, that blotted out the life of Miss Blackstone and the shot that wounded Miss Harriet Dow. The confession of Spencer to his fifteen burglaries in Springfield was not questioned by the defense.

The case of the defense will go before the jury upon the simple question of whether Spencer was insane or not, and whether or not he was mentally responsible when he killed Miss Blackstone.

BEATTIE READY TO DIE

Murderer Will Go to the Chair Without Making Confession

Richmond, Nov. 23.—"I am innocent." Henry C. Beattie, Jr., condemned to die tomorrow for wife murder, announced through Rev. J. J. Fix, one of his spiritual advisers, that he would make no confession.

In a formal statement Fix told of Beattie's declaration of innocence.

"I will have to die some time and it might as well be now," the prisoner exclaimed. "I reckon there is no use putting it off. It would just make it harder for the old man."

Dr. Fix said that Beattie was thoroughly reconciled to his fate and would go to the death chair quetly.

WHERE THEY GET IT IN THE NECK

THE TURKEYS: "Here's where we get the ax!"
THE AXES: "No; here's where the ax gets you!"

Hymn of Thanksgiving.

We thank thee, O Father, for all that is bright—
The gleam of the day and the stars of the night,
The flowers of our youth and the fruits of our prime
And blessings e'er marching the pathway of time.

We thank thee, O Father, for all that is drear—
The sob of the tempest, the flow of the tear—
For never in blindness and never in vain
Thy mercy permitted a sorrow or pain.

We thank thee, O Father, for song and for feast,
The harvest that glowed and the wealth that increased,
For never a blessing encompassed thy child
But thou in thy mercy looked downward and smiled.

We thank thee, O Father of all, for the power
Of aiding each other in life's darkest hour,
The generous heart and the bountiful hand
And all the soul help that sad souls understand.

We thank thee, O Father, for days yet to be,
For hopes that our future will call us to see,
That all our eternity may form through thy love
One Thanksgiving day in the mansions above.

—Will Carleton.

"This," remarked Mrs. Hen, "as she flew up on to Mr. Turkey's back, "is my happy day. It's Thanksgiving, you know. What have I to give thanks for? Oh, several things, thank you. On almost any other day in the year I am liable to get the ax, and when I do get it I won't worry whether my head's on straight. But my worry comes from not knowing just when the ax may fall. There are 365 days in the year. Thanksgiving is the only day when I am immune. My large and lovely rival, Mr. Turkey, who scorns me in the barnyard, is underneath my feet today, as you can see with the naked eyes. Ta-ta, Mr. Turkey; I see the farmer coming with his ax."

HUNTING THE WILD TURKEY FOR THANKSGIVING

IN southern Missouri, Arkansas and other southern states the wild turkey, feathered a beautiful brown, still is numerous despite the encroachments of civilization upon the wilderuesses. Years ago there were millions of wild turkeys migrating in great flocks. Nowadays the number of them has diminished, but nevertheless a good hunter who knows the bird and its ways usually can bring down one for his Thanksgiving dinner in any locality that ever has been frequented by the wild turkey. Roasted to a brown, the meat is delicious. As a user of slang would say, the domesticated turkey has nothing on the wild bird.

Pilgrims' Thanksgiving Menu.

Potatoes were not included in the first Thanksgiving menu, as they were considered improper feed because they were not mentioned in the Bible.

Eels were another favorite dish for the pilgrims. They were served roasted, fried or boiled.

"Stuff the eels with nutmeg and cloves," says ye olden cookbook, "stick with cloves and cook in wine; place on a chafing dish and serve up."

Just the Thing.

"Here, Mrs. Closely," said the butcher to the landlady of the boarding house, "is just the turkey you're looking for."

"No; I'm afraid turkeys are too high," she replied.

"But that bird, Mrs. Closely, will keep your boarders so busy trying to get something off it that they'll be too tired to eat any more when it comes time for dessert."

"Send it right around, please."

ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

Sheldon flushed, but remained silent. "I know what you are thinking," she laughed gayly. "That if I were a man, you'd wring my neck for me. And I deserve it, too. I'm so sorry. I ought not to keep on hurting your feelings."

"I'm afraid I rather invite it," he said, relieved by the signs of the storm subsiding.

"I have it," she announced. "Lend me a gang of your boys for today. I'll build a grass house for myself over in the far corner of the compound—on piles, of course. I can move in tonight. I'll be comfortable and safe. The Tahitians can keep an anchor watch just as aboard ship. And then I'll study coconut planting. In return, I'll run the kitchen end of your household and give you some decent food to eat. And finally, I won't listen to any of your protests. On the other hand, if you don't agree, I'll go across the river, beyond your jurisdiction, and build a village for myself and my sailors, whom I shall send in the whaleboat to Guvutu for provisions. And now I want you to teach me billiards."

Joan took hold of the household with no uncertain grip, revolutionizing things till Sheldon hardly recognized the place. For the first time the bungalow was clean and orderly. No longer the house boys loafed and did as little as they could; while the cook complained that "head belong him walk about too much" from the strenuous course in cookery which she put him through. Nor did Sheldon escape being roundly lectured for his laziness in eating nothing but tinned provisions. She called him a muddler and a slouch, and other invidious names, for his slackness and his disregard of healthful food.

She sent her whaleboat down the coast twenty miles for limes and oranges, and wanted to know scathingly why said fruits had not long since been planted at Berande, while he was beneath contempt because there was no kitchen garden. Mummy apples, which he had regarded as weeds, under her guidance appeared as appetizing breakfast fruit, and, at dinner, were metamorphosed into puddings that elicited his unqualified admiration. She or her sailors dynamited fish daily, while the Balesuna natives were paid tobacco for bringing in oysters from the mangrove swamps.

Among other things, she burned the pestilential hospital, quarreled with Sheldon over the deed and in anger set her own men to work building a new and what she called a decent hospital. She robbed the windows of their lawn and muslin curtains, replacing them with gaudy calico from the trade store and made herself several gowns. When she wrote out a list of goods and clothing for herself, to be sent down to Sydney by the first steamer, Sheldon wondered how long she had made up her mind to stay.

She was certainly unlike any woman he had ever known or dreamed of. So far as he was concerned, she was not a woman at all. She neither languished nor blandished. No feminine lures were wasted on him. He might have been her brother, or she his brother, for all sex had to do with the strange situation. Despite his warnings about crocodiles and sharks, she persisted in swimming in deep water off the beach, nor could he persuade her, when she was in the boat, to let one of the sailors throw the dynamite when shooting fish. She argued that she was at least a little bit more intelligent than they and that, therefore, there was less liability of an accident if she did the shooting. She was to him the most masculine and at the same time the most feminine woman he had ever met.

A source of continual trouble between them was the disagreement over methods of handling the black boys. She ruled by stern kindness, rarely rewarding, never punishing, and he had to confess that her own sailors worshipped her, while the house boys were her slaves and did three times as much work for her as he had ever got out of them. She quickly saw the unrest of the contract laborers and was not blind to the danger, always imminent, that both she and Sheldon ran. Neither of them ever ventured out without a revolver, and the sailors who stood the night watches by Joan's grass house were armed with rifles. But Joan insisted that this reign of terror had been caused by the reign of fear practised by the white men. She had been brought up with the gentle Hawaiians, who never were illtreated nor roughly handled, and she generalized that the Solomon islanders, under kind treatment, would grow gentle.

One evening a terrific uproar arose in the barracks, and Sheldon, aided by Joan's sailors, succeeded in rescuing two women whom the blacks were beating to death. To save them from the vengeance of the blacks they were guarded in the cook house for the night. They were the two women who did the cooking for the laborers and their offense had consisted of one of them taking a bath in the big caldron in which the potatoes were boiled. The blacks were not outraged from the standpoint of cleanliness; they often took baths in the caldrons themselves. The trouble lay in that the bather had been a low, degraded, wretched female, for to the Solomon islanders all females are low, degraded and wretched.

CHAPTER VII.

A HARD BITTEN GANG.

NEXT morning Joan and Sheldon, at breakfast, were aroused by a swelling murmur of angry voices. The first rule of Berande had been broken. The compound had been entered without permission or command, and all the 200 laborers, with the exception of the boss boys, were guilty of the offense. They crowded up, threatening and shouting, close under the front veranda. Sheldon leaned over the veranda railing, looking down upon them, while Joan stood slightly back. When the uproar was stilled two brothers stood forth. They were large men, splendidly muscled, and with faces unusually ferocious, even for Solomon islanders. One was Carin-Jama, otherwise the Silent, and the other was Bellin-Jama, the Boaster. Both had served on the Queensland plantations in the old days, and they were known as evil characters wherever white men met and gamed.

"We fella boy we want 'm them two black fella Mary," said Bellin-Jama.

"What do you want along black fella Mary?" Sheldon asked.

"Kill 'm," said Bellin-Jama.

"What name you fella boy talk along me?" Sheldon demanded, with a show of rising anger. "Big bell he ring. You no belong along here. You belong along field. Bime by, big fella bell he ring, you stop along kai-kai, you come talk along me about two fella Mary. Now all you boy get along out of here."

The gang waited to see what Bellin-Jama would do, and Bellin-Jama stood still.

"Me no go," he said.

"You watch out, Bellin-Jama," Sheldon said sharply, "or I send you along Tulagi one big fella lashing. My word, you catch 'm strong fella."

Bellin-Jama glared up belligerently.

"You want 'm fight," he said, putting up his fists in approved returned Queenslander style.

Now, in the Solomons, where whites are few and blacks are many, and where the whites do the ruling, such an offer to fight is the deadliest insult. Blacks are not supposed to dare so highly as to offer to fight a white man.

CITY PLANNING.

This is the first of a series of five city planning articles to appear in this paper. The forthcoming articles will bear particularly on the need for city planning in Boston and the Metropolitan District, the preliminary work now under way, and the plans for the future.)

To plan a city as a home is planned, with every thought for the comfort, convenience and health of the family, that is the motive which is leading more than sixty American municipalities to check the haphazard growth of streets and highways, to provide adequate parks and playgrounds, to stop the growth of congested tenement districts, and to provide for the efficient city and town of today and tomorrow.

The cities of America have had the topsy-like characteristic of "just growing" and until the Chicago Exposition in 1893, the long established European idea of a city designed by architects, engineers, artists and expert planners,—an efficient city for all the citizen's,—did not take root in this country. With the passing of the White City, however, men began to ask why real cities could not be made as effirient and as beautiful as the play city on the shore of Lake Michigan,—why their own cities could not be planned and built for domfort, convenience and efficiency.

Shortly after, when city planning took actual shape through boards of experts appointed in various cities to study the municipal problems, there was usually complete innocence of any other plan than that of the town or city surveyor, whose blue prints had followed the way of real estate speculators or relentlessly adhered to the popular checker-board plan of streets of which William Penn had made Philadelphia a horrible example. The result was that "re-planning" became as important as initial planning, and cities were obliged to correct the mistakes of the early builders who, if they had planned at all, had done so without regard to the welfare of coming generations. Examples of what this lack of foresight has meant to American municipalities may be seen today in almost any city or town of the country.

Dr. J. F. C. Smith, Mayor of Boston a 1853, looked ahead far enough to see the plight of his city a generation hence if some comprehensive plan of growth was not adopted. Writing in the Boston Almanac for 1853 he said Boston has been particularly unfortunate in the policy pursued by those holding office when opportunity occurred for projecting generous squares, and laying out wide streets. There never was a more fitting period than at present when the whole territory is in an elementary state, awaiting improvements, to lay out squares, project wide streets, plant trees and make provision for the multitudes of human beings who will reside here when Boston proper is converted into one mighty maze of warehouses. All municipal legislation should have reference to the wants of the city hundreds of years hence, instead of today."

Mistakes in planning, and you have only to study your own town or city to find a lack of foresight, have laid the foundation for numerous "problems" which city planners of today are attempting to solve. Along with street systems which handicap traffic and hamper business have grown areas of congested dwellings,—"the slums" which foster in so many American cities and towns. Inadequate building laws have often added to angers from conflagration, both in residential and business districts. Opportunities for reserving lands for public uses, playgrounds, parks, civic centers, etc., have slipped by, while real estate speculators have bought and built upon the needed property. Greater railroad corporations and steamship lines have forced their ways across and around cities and have shown, even as the steel corporation proved at Gary, that private planners cannot deal with a great community in a business-like way, either for their own or for the city's advantage. Spreading out from the cities to the suburbs and surrounding towns, the mistakes for planning have taken root until the smaller towns are seeing the need for stopping unguided growth before it saddles upon them the greater handicaps under which the cities are struggling.

In most of the American municipalities which are actively engaged in city planning, the necessary preliminary steps preceding actual work are now being made.

Gov. Foss last spring appointed a Metropolitan Planning Commission to study the whole question of city planning in its relation to Boston and the Metropolitan District. This Commission, strengthened by the valuable reports already made by other metropolitan commissions, will report to the next legislature and make definite recommendations for improvements. Already the people of Metropolitan Boston are learning by costly experience that certain municipal improvements must be made sooner or later if the district is to grow in prestige as it is growing in population. Connecting streets and thoroughfares must be made to accommodate the traffic of today and tomorrow. Parks, Playgrounds and open spaces must be provided, housing and living conditions must be bettered, and the energies of great private planners must be guided. It is merely a question of when and how these improvements are to be made,—whether we are to wait until desirable land rises in value, until street improvements necessitate the destruction of more of this valuable property, until we build and rebuild costly public buildings which outgrow their usefulness in a comparatively few years, or whether we take immediate steps, as Dr. Smith put it over half a century ago, "to provide for the city of today and the city of a hundred years hence."

AUSTIN FLOOD DISASTER

Blame For Great Loss of Life Is Place Upon Owners of Dam

Coudersport, Pa., Nov. 23.—That the Austin dam disaster of Sept. 30 "was due to gross negligence on the part of George W. Bayless, president, and Fred N. Hamlin, superintendent of the Bayless Pulp and Paper company," was the unanimous verdict of the coroner's jury after three hours' deliberation over the testimony taken at the inquest, which concluded with the testimony of T. C. Hatton, the designing and constructing engineer of the dam.

Hamlin and Michael C. Bailey, an employe in charge of the dam, were arraigned on a charge of manslaughter on warrants sworn to by the husbands of two victims of the flood. A warrant for Bayless has also been issued.

220 SUFFRAGETTES ARE SENT TO PRISON

Prefer Occupying Cells to the Payment of Fines

London, Nov. 23.—Unrepentant suffragettes to the number of 223, many of whom are apparently still in their teens, appeared at Bow street police court to answer for their sins of Tuesday and were sentenced to fines or alternative terms of imprisonment varying from a fortnight to a month. The women invariably chose prison instead of a fine.

Counsel for the public prosecutor said he could not adequately describe the "disgraceful and discreditable scenes of organized disorder" of which the accused were guilty.

The damage caused by the stones thrown throughout the Whitehall district is estimated at $250,000.

IN INTEREST OF LABOR

Advocating compulsory education, free school books in public schools, and night schools.

Petitioning President Taft to recommend to the governor of Porto Rico larger school appropriations, an eight-hour day and other beneficial legislation.

"WATCH THE GERMANS"

Yuan's Reply to Those Who Advise Abdication of Throne

Pekin, Nov. 23.—According to a Chinese report, an attempt was made to assassinate Premier Yuan Shi-Kai. There have been various rumors that the premier's life was threatened, and he has been going about escorted by a guard.

The president of the Shantung republic has sent another message advising the abdication of the throne, and Yuan has replied, according to the Chinese newspapers, "Watch the Germans."

Dies According to Schedule

Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 23.—"I would not be surprised if this old heart of mine should stop ticking in the next twenty-four hours," said Dr. J. G. Galleger to a friend. Galleger was stricken with heart failure eighteen hours later and soon died.

California Town Shaken

Colton, Cal., Nov. 23.—A sharp earthquake shock was felt here. The disturbance affected the telephone system and crippled wire service for a time.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HOW TO STUFF THE TURKEY.

As the turkey is the chief feature of the Thanksgiving feast its preparation is a consideration of the greatest importance. His majesty must not only be well cleaned and roasted, but the question of dressing is an important one.

The choice of a dressing depends on what one likes and what has been used in the family, for custom has a great deal to do with such feasts.

After the turkey has been washed and cleaned it should be wiped dry. Then the breast of the fowl may be filled with the dressing and sewed up, so that it cannot cook out.

Sage Dressing.

To make plain sage dressing take stale bread. Cut off all the crusts, rub very fine, pour over it melted butter enough to make it crumble when worked with the hands and add sage and salt and pepper to taste.

Oyster stuffing is another favorite method of finishing off the turkey. If fresh oysters cannot be had canned oysters will do. Cut the largest oysters into quarters.

Now, just mix with a cup and a half of rolled soda crackers, half a pint of oyster liquor, an egg, a teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Mix these ingredients thoroughly. Stuff the breast of the turkey and then sew it up.

Chestnut Dressing.

Many persons think there is no dressing for turkey, or, in fact, for any poultry, that can compare with chestnut dressing. Shell about a quart of chestnuts. Pour boiling water over them and let stand until the brown skin peels off.

Then carefully look over the nuts to make sure that all are sound. Boil them until soft. Take off the fire, mash fine and mix with a little cream, some breadcrumbs and pepper and salt. Then insert the dressing in the turkey as in the case of other dressings.

A turkey garnished with sausage has a very festive appearance. Three-quarters of an hour before the cooking is finished festoon the turkey with strings of link sausage. These you must turn from time to time so that every part shall be as brown as the bird itself.

Of course the better the flavor of the browned sausage the finer the flavor of the turkey. With this you will want giblet sauce made by stewing and mincing the giblets and adding them to the gravy in the pan after the fat has been removed. Flavor with kitchen bouquet.

One of the Strongest Values In My Store Are

MEN'S SUITS

AT .....

$15.00

Not that these are the only strong values, but this price is popular—seems that men, and especially the young men like to pay $15. I'm convinced that they are the best looking—finest fitting—the longest wearing suits in Quincy. They come in rich grays, handsome browns and plain colors. They are in good taste for business or pleasure and tailored so thoroughly they'll hold their style and shapeliness throughout the course of wear.

Other Good Suits at $10, 12.50, 14.50, 16.50

Remarkable Overcoats at $15.00

PUBLIC WINTER MEETING.

The public winter meeting of the State Board of Agriculture will be held at Barre, this year, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 5, 6, and 7 next. An unusually good programme has been arranged and as Barre is in the heart of the milk producing section of western Worcester County due attention has been paid to the milk question. Printed programmes may be procured by applying to J. Lewis Ellsworth, Secretary State Board of Agriculture, State House, Boston, Mass.

The meeting will close on the morning of the third day, Thursday, Dec. 7, with a lecture on "The interest of the producer in the consumer's dollar," by Dr. George M. Twitchell, of Auburn, Maine. Dr. Twitchell will take up the question of transportation and marketing and will discuss them thoroughly. He has devoted much time to the study of these vexed questions and will have many suggestions of value to offer. In the afternoon visits have been arranged to some of the fine dairy farms in the vicinity of Barre. Everyone is welcome to the meeting, all are invited to take part in the discussions to follow the lectures, and a very snappy, helpful and interesting meeting is in prospect.

GOOD RACE NEXT MONDAY.

The Coliseum bids fair to be the scene of attraction for a number of sporting fans next Monday evening, when John J. Cook, the ten mile champion of New England and Frank Bruce, the champion Italian marathon runner of America, come together in a five mile special race in connection with the roller skating events Cook has issued a "defi" to meet the local boy on previous occasions and now that the opportunity to accept it has been presented, Bruce has lost no time in taking action. Both men are well known figures in running circles and the attraction should prove a most interesting one for those who desire to see a five mile race of the first class order. Bruce is a member of the Italian American A. C. of this city and has frequently brought home laurels to this organization. Great rivalry exists between both runners and on this account a warm contest should be in order.

A PROFITABLE BUSINESS

Express Companies Make Over 38 Perecent on Plant Valuation

New York, Nov. 23.—Criticisms and remedial recommendations, ranging from mild to radical, were listened to by the interstate commerce commission at the opening here of a series of hearings to be held throughout the country in investigation of the express business.

The magnitude of this business was brought out by Attorney Lyon, counsel for the commission. He said that the express companies operated over 270,000 miles of railway and do business through 31,328 stations. He placed the cost of conducting the express plants at $27,000,000 and the operating net income at $10,000,000, or a fraction over 38 percent on plant and valuation.

And now, gentleman, cried the disinterested campaign orator, working for justice and exercise, let me tell you one thing.

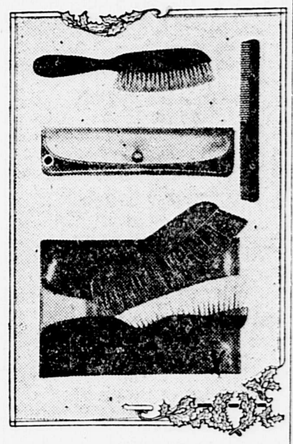

That's what we have come here for, piped a voice from the gallery, and we've been waiting now three hours and a half for you to say it.

FOR MERE MAN'S CHRISTMAS

Suggestions by Santa Claus For Sweethearts and Wives.

The man who travels with a suit case is always on the lookout for compact toilet articles that pack easily and take up little space; consequently these same conveniences never fail to make a hit as Christmas gifts. The illustration shows the very latest thing in toilet accessories designed especially for the requirements of the suit case.

In both instances the cases are made of pigskin, and the envelope-like looking affair which fastens securely with a "snapper" holds a very flat hairbrush mounted neatly in ebony. The bristles of this brush are of the best quality and quite numerous enough to smoothly put into place the hirsute possessions of the average man. This brush is fitted into a little pocket, together with a small comb.

The other contrivance, which resembles in shape a bill book, contains two brushes, one with gray bristles intended for brushing clothes and the other with white ones for removing dust from the hat. One or both of these cases would make an ideal gift.

Give Him a String Bag.

This case for the useful ball of twine may be woven of raffia in the open work pattern shown here, the ends of the strands being secured by ribbons, tied in pretty bows. Red ribbon on natural colored raffia was used in this case and made a pleasing combination. The ball is tied inside the raffia cover, one end of the twine being allowed to hang out of the case so that a length of string may be pulled off without tangling the ball. The twine ball case makes a good gift for a man, who can hang it beside his desk or on the wall of his room or office.

Presents For Young Men.

An acceptable present is a year's subscription for a magazine, but of course this can be offered only when the man is a relative or intimate friend whose taste in literature is familiar to the giver.

Bound books, too, are usually appreciated, but small books, such as notebooks, diaries, verse books, etc., are seldom used. Sometimes the notebook is a misfit for the pocket, and again, not every man keeps a diary—all reasons why this kind is a risk to present.

A leather framed calendar will always find a place on a man's desk.

A fountain pen should only be given when the donor knows exactly the kind the recipient likes. The same may be said of a camera, as the majority of men prefer to select the size and make they like best.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF UNION

Granite Cutters To Vote Tonight Regarding Revision ot Constitution

MEANS MUCH TO QUINCY

An important meeting of the Quincy branches of the Granite cutter's union will be held tonight, at which time a vote will be taken to determine whether the revision of the constitution shall be done by a committee or by convention. A vote on the same question will be taken Friday evening by the tool sharpeners' branch.

If the branches decide that the revision is to be done by committees it means that the committee will consist of 7 granite cutters, one tool sharpener and one polisher, to be elected at large by the entire association. If done by convention it means that the revision will be done by delegates from the different branches. Every branch having from 25 to 250 members, will be entitled to one delegate, branches having from 250 to 500 to two delegates and branches having over 500 members three delegates.

The question is a most important one, as it is understood that the western branches are desirous of having a $4 per day minimum clause in the new constitution, while the branches in the east are opposed to this, realizing that it would be a bad blow to vicinities like Quincy and Barre, Vt. If the work of revision is done by a committee, the chances are that the $4. clause will not be included. If by convention it may be adopted. Then, again, the convention idea is rather unfair to Quincy, for the reason that the union in this city has over 1,000 members yet would not be allowed but three delegates.

FARRAR AMONG THE MISSING

Chaplain to British Royal Family an Absconder

London, Nov. 23.—Rev. Frederick P. Farrar, son of the late Canon Farrar, domestic chaplain to the royal family of England and married only last July to Miss Nora Davis, sister of Richard Harding Davis, the American author, is an absconder, according to charges just made public.

A warrant for his arrest has been issued. The London Gazette contains notice of his dismissal from his post as royal chaplain. An investigation into the chaplain's private conduct has been going on for some time. It is said that sensational revelations as to his moral standing are imminent.

The news of the alleged delinquencies of the prominent clergyman has amazed English society. The church element is horrified. The American set here, many of whose most distinguished representatives attended the Farrar-Davis nuptials at St. Andrews', Westminster, five months ago, is tremendously stirred by the manner in which the happiness of another American bride has been wrecked.

The royal household feels the situation most keenly. It was only last Sunday that the dismissed clergyman preached in Sandringham church before Queen Alexandra, the dowager; her daughter, Queen Maud of Norway, the Prince of Wales, and other members of royalty.

The chaplain was very intimate, by nature of his post, with the king, queen and all their relatives here. That the family chaplain should figure in such disgraceful charges as are now made is very humiliating.

Chaplain Farrar was courted by the American set because it was known his approval meant much in court. When he married Miss Davis the wedding gifts from both English and Americans were many.

The wedding took place on July 6. Richard H. Davis gave his sister away in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Edgar Sheppard, sub-dean of the Chapel Royal, assisted by Rev. John S. Northcote, vicar of St. Andrew's.

Back of this wedding was a pretty international romance, and back of that was a picturesque history of the bridegroom.

Frederick P. Farrar is one of eight children of the late Canon Farrar, one of the leading English ecclesiastics. Canon Farrar was an intimate friend of the late George W. Childs, the American publisher and philanthropist. Childs had no children. He

Public Ceremony Held Thursday Evening In Masonic Hall

LIST OF EXECUTIVES

The officers of Rural Masonic lodge were publicly installed Thursday evening, at Masonic hall, in the presence of a large gathering of brothers and their ladies. The installation ceremony, always impressive, was unusually so on this occasion. The installing officer was Wor. Hartley L. White, District Deputy of Rural lodge who was assisted by Wor. Joseph P. Prout as Grand Marshall. Music during the ceremonies was by the Harvard quartet.

The new officers assembled in the anti-room and marched into the lodge room and took their stations, after which they were introduced to their respective offices.

After the installation Wor. Frank A. Reed, presented Wor. Albert M. Parker, the retiring Master with a Past Master's apron.

An adjournment was then made to the banquet hall where a banquet was served by Westover & Foss, under the direction of Henry P. Furnald, which closed the evening.

In relation to the officers installed, it is interesting to note that Walter E. Simmons was installed for his 27 years as secretary of the lodge. There was quite a few changes in the list of officers from last year. The officers installed being as follows:

Worshipful Master—Frank A. Reed.
Senior Warden—H. Everett Crane.
Junior Warden—Frederick E. Tupper.
Secretary—Walter E. Simmons.

QUINCY MAN HONORED AT MILITARY BALL

Many military men, including several from Quincy, were present Thursday evening at the first military ball of the First Engineers' division of the Massachusetts Volunteer Naval Brigade, of which Theodore Hermanson, formerly of Quincy is Lieut. Commander. Fully 300 were in attendance and the many uniforms worn by the officers made the scene a brilliant one. A feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. Hermanson of a magnificent Knights Templar charm, by the members of the corps, in appreciation of the earnest work which he has done in bringing the corps up to its present high standard. The ball was held in the Catholic union hall, Boston.

FINE LECTURE TOMORROW.

No boy in town should miss the great lecture, Quo Vadis, with 60 colored pictures, that is to be given at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday morning at the regular weekly meeting. The story is of especial interest and with the fine views forms the basis for a lecture of unusual interest. Great prepartions are being made and the best time of the season, so far, will be expected.

MEETING AT EAST BRAINTREE.

About 40 members of the Ladies' society, of the Swedish M. E. church journeyed to East Braintree on Wednesday afternoon and met at the home of Mrs. Olmquist, 46 Howard street. After the usual routine of business, a social hour was spent, and refreshments served. All report having a very pleasant time.

Perhaps, says, the Weymouth Gazette if there had been more of the Bible in the homes of some of the inmates and more education as to earning an honest living, there would have been less call for the Bible at Dedham.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

Entertain At Annual Ladies' Night Thursday

MUSICAL PROGRAM

The annual ladies' night of Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, was held Thursday evening and was the occasion for a large gathering of the Knights and their ladies. Assembling in the club rooms, on the upper floor of the Savings Bank building, wraps were laid aside and they then adjourned to Colonial hall where the program arranged for the entertainment of the ladies was carried out.

GRAND KNIGHT JOHN J. CUNNIFF.

In opening the program Grand Knight John J. Cunniff made a few brief remarks in which he extended the welcome of Quincy Council. It was always a pleasure to have the ladies present, he said, and he hoped that the evening would be one of enjoyment.

The musical program included soprano solos by Miss Margaret Mcleevy of Neponset, tenor solos by Dr. A. L. Hood of New York and Joseph Morrissett of West Quincy, baritone solos by David Looney of East Weymouth and bass solos by Edward Sullivan of Quincy Council.

All of the numbers were greatly enjoyed and the artists were freely encored and graciously responded. In addition to the entertainment there was general dancing, music being furnished by Keating's orchestra.

There was a lull in the festivities at 10.30, during which time ice cream and cake were served in the club rooms.

Among the guests were: James E. Riley, Grand Knight of Weymouth Council, Charles J. McGilvray, Grand Knight of Ave Maria Council, West Quincy, Edward J. Slattery, Grand Knight of Dorchester Lower Mills Council, John J. Mahoney, Deputy Grand Knight of Ave Maria Council, West Quincy and Miss Sarah Dunphy of the Quincy Catholic club.

NEWTON BREAKS RECORDS.

The steamship Newton, launched recently at the Fore River yards, on her maiden trip, loaded today at the Curtis Bay Piers of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in 4 hours 55 minutes, loading a cargo of 7904 tons of coal. The best previous record of loading a steamer of similar size was 5 hours 21 minutes. The record made today is the fastest known time of any steamer on the Atlantic seaboard, and probably not exceeded at any seaboard in the world. This cargo will be discharged at the Everett plant of the New England Coal and Coke Co.

DAILY—WEST.

Charles H. Daily of Braintree and Miss Helen L. West, daughter of Joshua T. West of Quincy, were married at the home of the bride, 3 Charles street, Houghs Neck, Wednesday, friends being present from Boston, Milton, Woburn, Brockton, Whitman and Holbrook.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. J. Sayre of the Union Congregational church, Houghs Neck. The groom was attended by Chester W. Daily of Braintree and the bridesmaid was Miss Bertelle Bennett of Braintree. The ushers were Walter Delory and Orin Jackson of Braintree and Cyrus West of Whitman.

We Are Not Jugglers

Our goods are not deceptive in quality. The grocer or market man who sells unreliable foods just for the sake of making a few cents more, is not a safe man to trade with. Unreliable things can't come into this store. We know enough about these to know when they are pure and when they are not. It isn't wholly a question of price with us. We get the best that money will buy, and then sell it with just a fair percentage of profit added.

Not that these are the only strong values, but this price is popular—seems that men, and especially the young men like to pay $15. I'm convinced that they are the best looking—finest fitting—the longest wearing suits in Quincy. They come in rich grays, handsome browns and plain colors. They are in good taste for business or pleasure and tailored so thoroughly they'll hold their style and shapeliness throughout the course of wear.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Even if the McNamaras are acquitted, they seem to be sure of free board for several years to come.

In view of the general interest shown in Col. Roosevelt's recent piece in the Outlook, we believe several New York papers would be willing to take him on to write Oyster Bay items at space rates.

While a school of journalism is needed, the principal thing a reporter has to learn is how to cover the two miles across the city from a Sunday school festival to a boxing match in the time between 9.05 and 9.14 P. M.

Although we are not denying that the Republican party may contain just as many honest men as any other, it is a fact that whenever big business wanted to hire an office boy they always sent first for the Republican party.

The 100th anniversary of peace among English speaking peoples is to be celebrated by every one stopping work five minutes. We are fearful lest our stenographer and our bookkeeper take the occasion to engage in a scrap.

TOO BAD.

It seems too bad, indeed, that a city the size of Quincy cannot support a hotel in a manner that will guarantee a satisfactory financial return to those who might undertake the venture. Such, however, seems to be the case, the passing of the Greenleaf today as a hostelry, adding another in the long list of attempts to make the house pay.

With its beautiful surroundings, its close proximity to Boston, which should prove an advantage, Quincy should have a good hotel, one sufficiently up-to-date, that it can cater to transient trade and become an advertisement for the city and a pleasure to visit by those whose business calls them here.

RIVERS AND HARBORS CONGRESS

The name of this organization which meets in Washington Dec. 6, suggests too clearly the annual riotous scramble for the pork barrel. There is, however, a great need for deep water ways which this Congress will no doubt express in emphatic form.

The trouble with our water way improvement system has been that distributing of driblets of money here and there in such aimless fashion. For instance, Congress authorized thirty years ago a project for slack water navigation of the Ohio river, which it will take 150 years to complete.

How sharply the Great Lakes waterway development contrasts with this policy. By reason of magnificent docks, Duluth and Superior now handle in seven and one half months of the open navigation on the lakes, a greater business than any of our Atlantic seaports.

The old Soo canal twenty years ago would not admit more than a 3,000 ton ship. When it was deepened to take in 10,000 to 12,000 ships, a great expansion of traffic came.

The decline of freightage on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers is of course primarily due to the shallow water way, but also to a lack of adequate facilities for shipping.

A shipper at Cincinnati thus compares shipping hogs by railroad and by river steamer:

"Take the shipment of a drove of hogs," he says, "You drive them down to the river to wait the arrival of the boat. The drivers are yelling and the hogs squealing. The bank is steep and often muddy. There are no yards or conveniences because of the rise and fall of the water. The arrival of the boat is uncertain. If it is on time it is at dusk, and you have trouble in getting the load aboard. The night on the boat is the same."

"While by railroad" he goes on, "a car is simply shipped to your yard, and the hogs are easily loaded, and there is no trouble at all."

Nowhere in our government service has the baleful trail of politics been more felt than in the annual distribution of river and harbor pork. Let us hope the river and harbors Congress brings pressure to bear on Congress to take our waterways out of politics.

ENTERTAIN "AT HOME"

Thursday night to enjoy their hospitality, the occasion being the second and last of their wedding at homes.

The host and hostess received informally and a pleasant evening was enjoyed, with music and refreshments. Those contributing to the musical program were Miss Augusta Crane and Miss Agnes Kelly in vocal solos.

BRIEFS

The operetta 'The Japanese Girl" will be given tonight in the chapel of the First church.

The revised voting lists for the municipal election have been received by the City Clerk and are ready for distribution.

The announcement in Thursday's Ledger that the Hotel Greenleaf was closed, was received with surprise as well as regret that a city of Quincy's size could not have a first class hotel.

Overseer of the Poor Elcock says that his appeal to the generous public, published in Wednesday's Ledger, is meeting with response. Some money has been received to help provide needy poor with Thanksgiving baskets, but still more is needed.

The new city scales, for which the Council made a special appropriation, are being put in, replacing the old scales which had outlived their usefulness. By a single device attached to the scales, the exact weight is printed on a slip of paper, so that there is no possibility of error.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

The meeting of the granite cutters Thursday evening was very largely attended, over 800 voting. The large attendance shows the great interest the members are taking in the vote on the question of revising the constitution. While the exact vote was not announced, it is known that it was overwhelmingly in favor of the committee plan of revision.

WORD FROM MR. FALVEY.

Word has been received from Daniel Falvey lately of the plant department of the Quincy telephone office, who left a few weeks ago for the Isle of Pines, stating that he arrived in Havana on Monday in good health. Mr. Falvey goes there to build up the telephone system which has been taken over by a party of capitalists.

MANY ATTEND FAIR.

There was another large attendance Thursday evening at the fair of the Ladies' Aid society of the Water Street Presbyterian church in aid of the building fund. The many articles on the tables met with a ready sale and about everything was disposed of. The prizes offered for the ones who sold the most tickets were awarded during the evening.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

A banquet will be given this evening by the Women's Auxiliary to the dormitory men, at which time it is intended that a club will be formed. A Thanksgiving dinner will also be served to the same favored parties.

TODAY'S COURT.

Michael Hurley of Milton and John Lood of Quincy were fined $3 on account of costs for drunkenness.

Alexander Darr and Maurice Gordon were fined $3 each on account of costs for having registered milk bottles in their possession at Quincy.

Sentence of Youth Who Pleaded Guilty to Killing His Cousin

Taunton, Mass., Nov. 24.—Although the prisoner's counsel had contended that Lukas Dardarian, 17 years old, had acted in self-defense in the fight with his cousin, John Dardarian, in which the latter was killed, Lukas pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the superior criminal court.

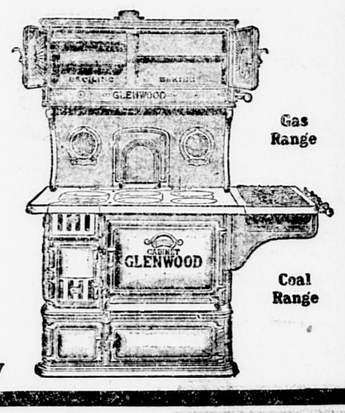

He was sentenced by Judge White to serve from fifteen to eighteen years in state prison. The cousins are said to have quarrelled over a small sum of money which John demanded that Lukas pay him.

Counsel for the defendant asserted that John drew a knife and attacked Lukas, who took it from him.

Q.—What about the "River of the Water of Life, clear as crystal?" (Revelation xxii, 1, 2. Is it an actual river? If so, how may one get a drink out of it?

Answer.—If we were disposed to accept this as a literal statement, we might well do as the old Spanish explorer, Ponce De Leon, did—search for the Fountain of Perpetual Youth! And we might have the consoling thought that surely there would be enough water in this river of the water of life to put out all of the fires of the "lake of fire and brimstone" mentioned in the eighth verse of the preceding chapter! Dispensing with absurdities, we recognize that a wonderful symbolical picture is here presented to our mental gaze—a gloriously beautiful city of vast proportions and all of gold and precious stones, reflecting the radiance of the marvelous light that glows within and which emanates from that great Being who is the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, the Almighty God! And forth from the street of gold, there flows this lovely river whose waters are as clear as crystal, and whose banks are adorned with trees whose leaves shall be for the healing of the nations!" The city is "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife," the church of Christ glorified. The river is the stream of truth, and not the muddy waters of the traditions of men, that shall flow from the Church when it is complete and highly exalted. The Lord had promised that whoever would drink of the water (the truth) that He should give, it would make of him "a well of water springing up into eternal life." (John iv, 14.) These wells or springs of water have been in course of development throughout this Christian Era, and when they are all brought together—the 144,000 mentioned in the 7th and 14th chapters—there will be formed a mighty flow of truth, of which all the nations will be invited to partake. The Spirit and the Bride will then say come and, whosoever is athirst may come and partake of the Water of Life freely. —Revelation xxii, 17.

TWO PROBERS NOT IN ACCORD

Split Over Continuation of the Steel Inquiry

Washington, Nov. 24.—The future of the present investigation into the affairs of the steel corporation will probably have to be decided by a vote of the house of representatives, with every prospect that there will be a sharp clash on the Democratic side when the matter comes up.

Representative Stanley of Kentucky, chairman of the committee, and Representative Littleton of New York, one of the Democratic members, have never been in harmony since the investigation got under way. Littleton is opposed to a continuance of the investigation, because of the fact that the government has brought a suit against the steel corporation, and he does not believe that the investigation should embarrass or jeopardize the prosecution. Stanley believes the investigation should go ahead, notwithstanding the government suit.

Mr. Littleton proposes to bring the matter before the house, and it is also understood that if the house decides that the investigation shall go ahead Littleton will resign from the committee.

There is keen interest among Democrats as to the outcome of such a contest before the house. The Republicans would probably take the Littleton view. On the other hand, if Stanley makes a strong fight for the continuance of the investigation and asks for a vote of confidence from his colleagues, many Democrats believe that he will be sustained. The fact that he is chairman of the committee, his prominence on the Democratic side and his service in five congresses, are regarded as entitling him to recognition on the part of his colleagues.

When Mr. Underwood, the Democratic leader of the house, returns to Washington next week it is probable that the controversy will be put up to him. He will undoubtedly try to effect a compromise in the interest of harmony; but it seems almost inevitable that the differences of Stanley and Littleton will have an airing on the floor.

John D. Rockefeller and his almoner, Rev. F. D. Gates of Montclair, N. J., will be invited by the committee to answer testimony given by Alfred and Leonidas Merritt of Duluth, Minn. The Merritts allege that, through Gates, Rockefeller took from them in 1893 $10,000,000 in Mesaba Iron Mine and Duluth, Mesaba and Northern railroad securities to satisfy a call loan of $420,000. These securities were afterward sold to the United States Steel corporation, and are today a part of that corporation's vast holdings.

The committee has adjourned, probably not to meet again until after congress convenes.

Rockefeller Denies Charges

New York, Nov. 24.—John D. Rockefeller, in a statement given out here last night, answers the charges of the Merritt brothers before the Stanley steel investigating committee, regarding the methods used by Rockefeller in obtaining control of the Mesaba ore mines and the Duluth, Mesaba and Northern railroad, and points out that these charges were denied under oath as long ago as 1895 in the litigation over the Lake Superior consolidated iron mines.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Motorist Driving Car That Killed Two Persons Convicted by Jury

Taunton, Mass., Nov. 24.—W. H. Day and Edwin Hancock were jointly charged with manslaughter because they were riding in an automobile which killed George Hunt and Lottie Thomas at Attleboro April 19. Only one of the two defendants could have been negligent. It was up to the jury in the Bristol county superior criminal court to determine which one.

The evidence showed that Hancock was operating the car at the time of the tragedy. He was convicted and Day was acquitted. Hancock will be sentenced later.

BEEKS IS CONVICTED

Jury Finds Negro Guilty of Murder In Second Degree

Boston, Nov. 24.—Murder in the second degree was the verdict reported by the jury in the case of James Beeks, negro mess attendant on board the battleship Nebraska, who has been on trial in the United States circuit court, charged with the murder of his mess mate, Alexander Allen, whom he fatally shot while the battleship was in drydock in the Charlestown navy yard.

Beeks, who is 31 years old and of a lively temperament, appeared somewhat indifferent to the verdict.

The penalty for murder in the second degree is any term of years over ten. Pending sentence Beeks was committed to jail.

The murder resulted from a trifling scuffle over the possession of a broom which was used to sweep out the junior officers' mess room.

PACKERS MUST APPLY TO THE FULL BENCH

Justice White's Decision Means That Trial Must Proceed

Washington, Nov. 24.—Chief Justice White refused to grant a stay in the trial of the Chicago beef packers, but referred the attorneys making the application to the entire bench, with the statement that the matter was of too much importance for him to pass on individually.

Attorney Miller announced that such an application to the entire court would be made at the first sitting, Dec. 4. As Judge Carpenter of the federal district court at Chicago, before whom the case will be heard, has announced that he will countenance no further delays, White's action means that the trial will open on next Monday.

Attorneys for the packers, however, indicate that efforts will be made to have Carpenter grant a further postponement until the supreme court passes on the application for a stay.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL NOTES.

By Teri Bus.

The Eagles are on their way to Philadelphia, where they will play Collinswood eleven for honors in the All American Cup.

The Committee have sent their strongest possible team away, and a great game is expected. We look for the Eagles to keep up their good record of victory.

At the present time there is not a team too good nor too strong but what the Eagles could have a crack at—and ossibly win out—so Mr. W. McVicar the popular secretary of the Eagles has arranged a game with the Scottish Americans. This game will be played as the Eagles are on their return from Phila. The game takes place at Newark.

The weather of last Saturday did not permit any Association games to be played. Just as the Eagles were boarding the train on their way to play Howard & Bullock they received a wire that the game was off. For once the Eagles were in luck.

Look out fellow! the Eagles are after you for that dollar. The membership cards are out, and are now for sale. There is not a club in Quincy that deserve better financial support than the Eagles. Of late they have been playing nothing but championship ball, and it is only with your help and mine that they can continue to do that. It costs money. Let us help them.

McGregor versus Ivernia tomorrow. At least if a game can be arranged when the steamer arrives. The crew of the "Ivernia" can certainly put up a good game, and if the Clan are successful in securing them the play would be well worth going to witness.

That the Eagles are to be reckoned as one of the clubs who will have a big say in the destination of the American Cup goes without saying. Although only able to play a draw with the Oaks in the New England League two weeks ago—a result which resounds to the credit of Fall River club—and which bears out my statement made some time ago that a cup tie is very different from a league match. The Fore River men showed ability above the ordinary and have no real fear as to the ballot in the second round of the All American Cup.

The officials of the Eagles would do well to let the results of their games played away from home be known directly after the game. The last time they were in New Jersey it was Monday before word reached Quincy that the Eagles played a draw. Why not telegraph the results to the "Ledger office."

The club officials of both the Fore River club and the McGregors should do all in their power to give the school boys of Quincy ample opportunity to learn the game. Without a doubt they have done a lot, but it requires a lot of time before any new game becomes popular with boys and it is a fact that the officials with combined effort could create more lively interest amongst the "young ones" if they so desired. It is the boys that later make the men.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

POMANDER WALK.

Beginning Monday "Pomander Walk" will enter upon the fifth week of its engagement at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. The play has not only proven to be one of the most delightful comedies seen in Boston for a long time, but is steadily increasing in popularity as evidenced by the large and enthusiastic audiences that greet the all-English cast at every performance. Louis N. Parker, author of "Pomander Walk," has canceled several important engagements in New York in order to come to Boston for Nov. 28, which will be celebrated by the Plymouth Theatre management and the playwright's many friends and admirers at Louis N. Parker night. He has consented to deliver an address upon the acts of the play, in which he will tell some of his personal experiences in connection with the Comedy of Happiness.

Louis N. Parker belongs to the historic New England family of that surname. His grandfather, Isaac Parker, was Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court; his father lived abroad many years, and the son was born in France and attained fame as a British dramatist. With his many successes, including the delightful Pomander Walk, he ranks today as the foremost playwright of the English-speaking stage. A pleasing feature of the Plymouth production is the presence in the leading feminine role of his daughter, Miss Dorothy Parker.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The merry humors of farce will have their turn at the Castle Square next week. "Before and After" is the title of the play, and it is the work of Leo Dietrichstein who has written "Are You a Mason," "All on Account of Eliza," and others that are again and again revived without any sign of decrease in their popularity. The plot of "Before and After" involves a physician who thinks he has discovered a remedy for the worst kind of grouch, and trying it on a fellow doctor, he finds that it works to perfection. His patient from a man of morose disposition becomes the jolliest and most companionable of fellows and so much does it change hi nature that he gets into a number of scrapes that furnish the audience with continuous food for laughter. "Before and After" comes to the Castle Square for the first time on Monday, and it promises to repeat the great success of other plays of its kind. The cast will be carefully chosen by Mr. Craig to bring out all the humors of the play and the capabilities of the players. It will have a run of only one week.

B. F. KEITH'S.

A real all-star vaudeville show is promised for next week at B. F. Keith's Theatre, practically every act on the list being of headline calibre. Sam Chip and Mary Marble will appear in their dainty Delft dialogue with droll ditties, entitled "In Old Edam." This is one of the prettiest and most delightful one-act musical comedies ever staged. The scenery and costumes are all done in a delicate shade of Delft blue, and as the little Dutch boy and girl who live in the little house in the midst of tulip fields, John C. Rice and Sally Cohen will return to Boston after a long absence in their amusing comedy, "A Bachelor's Wife." One of the novelties of the week will be the Red Sox Quartet composed of four of Boston's most popular ball tossers. Buck O'Brien, the pitcher, Marty McHale Hughey Bradley, and Bill Lyons will offer a number of popular selections, and reports from other cities where they have appeared are to the effect that these boys can sing even better than they play ball. Stuart Barnes, the story teller and entertainer; Max Witt's Melody Lane Girls in songs and dances; Bradna and Derrick, the equestriennes from the New York Hippodrome; H. T. MacConnell, "President of the 13 Club," and McCormack and Wallace in a ventriloquial novelty, will be other big features.

CORONATION PICTURES.

The last week of the Coronation pictures after an unprecedented engagement of four months, begins at Tremont Temple on Monday. The regular program will be given every afternoon and evening, and it will include the remarkable color motion pictures of all the important scenes connected with the great event in London last June. The addition, on Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, Eugene Farnsworth will deliver his illustrated lecture on Dalmatia and the Dalmatians, thus affording a double entertainment at one price. There will also be a special exhibition of the Coronation pictures Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, for school-children, teachers and parents.

SUNDAY CONCERTS.

The Sunday evening concert at the Castle Square will have a number of interesting special features in addition to the display of motion pictures. It should be noted that these Castle Square concerts are different from the usual entertainment of that sort. They are refined in every particular, and they give the choicest acts obtainable for a pleasing and popular program in which people of all ages may take enjoyment. The box office opens for the sale of seats Sunday evening at 6 o'clock, and the overture begins at 8.

"EVERYWOMAN."

"Everywoman," which has entered upon a prosperous run at the Majestic Theatre, is a play of that unique type that pleases all classes of playgoers. There is something in this remarkable drama that appeals to every one. For the student of dramatic literature, who goes to see a revival of archaic form it has its lesson; for the occasional theatre-goer, who likes a moral with his dramatic diet, it carries a preachment; for the lover of music it provides enjoyment, and for the seeker after entertainment pure and simple it is diverting from the rise to the fall of the curtain. The stage pictures in "Everywoman" and the stimulating symphonic music that enhances the value of each dramatic situation, makes an unconscious appeal to the most thoughtless theatre-goer who looks upon an evening at the play as a mere ephemeral diversion. "Everywoman" has certainly taken Boston by storm just as it did New York, Chicago, and the other large cities where it has been seen. There will be three matinees the coming week, for in addition to the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees, there will be a special holiday matinee on Thanksgiving day.

FEIGNED INSANITY

Spencer's Conversation With Convict Is Related In Court

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 24.—The commonwealth sprung a surprise on the defense in the trial of Bertram G. Spencer by introducing a witness who swore that Spencer had told him that he was shamming insanity and that he had killed Miss Martha B. Blackstone instead of knocking her senseless when she screamed as he was robbing the home of Mrs. Sarah G. Dow because "Dead men tell no tales."

The witness was Edwin B. Bell, who has served two years of a seven-year sentence in the state prison for assault with intent to kill. He had feigned insanity himself to get out of the prison, he said, and had been sent to the asylum at Bridgewater, where he met Spencer.

Asked on cross-examination what was his motive for revealing what Spencer had told him, Bell replied: "I'm not a high-minded or public-spirited citizen, but Spencer's crime, even to my mind, was too cold-blooded to go unpunished."

THANKSGIVING SOCIABLE

Held In Vestry of Wollaston Unitarian Church

NOVEL AND PLEASING

A Thanksgiving sociable was held in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church, Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Alliance.

Promptly at 6.30 a large number sat down to an excellent menu served by the following committee: Mrs. Charles S. Adams, Mrs. Lucy K. Arnold, Mrs. Charles E. Barker, Mrs. John Morgan, Mrs. Roy C. Baker, Mrs. E. Tyler Brigham, Mrs. Clifton H. Baker, Mrs. Gorham Nickerson, Mrs. E. W. Bowker, Mrs. Paul R. Brodbeck, Mrs. H. C. Briggs, Miss Eva Briggs, Miss Esther Briggs.

The entertainment consisted of the production entitled "Fond Memories" given by the following cast:

Farmer Green, Arthur W. Rohn
Mrs. Green, his wife, Ernestine Litchfield
Sheriff Witherspoon, Edward R. Hall
Nat Skalem, the hired man, George E. Brown
Louie, the chore boy, Louis B. Weston
Peggy Higglesby, Dot Higglesby, just girls, Margaret Hall, Dorothy Fay
Topsy, Elsie Moulton

The scene was that of an old fashioned sitting room and the costumes those of the farm. The dialogue served to introduce many of the songs of long ago.

Among the chorus numbers were "Swanee River," "Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party," "Spanish Cavalier." Old Gray Shawl was effectively rendered by the male quartet while Peggy and the Sheriff were pleasing in "Whispering Hope."

The Higglesby sisters brought down the house in their tongue fantasia entitled 'Chingaringachuchi." "Rebecca" by the male trio and "Juanita" by the girls were also good.

Elsie Moulton made a good Topsy and her "Year o' Jobilo" was sung in characteristic darky dialect.

"The Nightingale" by the farmer's wife, "Go to sea my lads," and "Rocked in the cradle of the deep," deserved the hearty applause they received.

The program closed with "Good night ladies" all pronouncing the entertainment as most novel as well as pleasing.

NEW INCA CITY FOUND

Yale Expedition to Peru Also Climbs Mountain 22,000 Feet High

Hartford, Nov. 24.—Dr. William G. Erving, surgeon of the Yale expedition, is back after an absence of seven months, in the course of which he penetrated to little visited recesses of the mountainous interior of Peru with Professor Bingham of Yale university.

The expedition discovered a hitherto unknown Inca city, containing a palace, temples and baths, and Bingham and another member of the party succeeded in reaching the summit of Mt. Coropuna after six days of hard work.

A careful survey by the topographer made the altitude of the mountain about 22,000 feet. It is figured that the mountain is the highest in Peru and third highest in this hemisphere.

Dr. Erving with a detachment of the expedition followed the parent branch of the Amazon from its source in a glacier over 15,000 feet above the sea.

SUICIDE OF DURLAND

Writer's Wife Says It Came Near to Being a Double Tragedy

Boston, Nov. 24.—Before Kellogg Durland, the writer, took a fatal dose of cyanide of potassium on a train at the South station, he told his wife that they must die together, then and there, according to a statement made public by Mrs. Durland through a lawyer.

From Mrs. Durland's story it appears that it was by the exercise of woman's wit that she save her life. "Wait until the train starts," she urged Durland. The while, she knew, policemen from station 4 were hurrying to the train to take Durland, whose sanity was doubted, into custody.

"Kellogg Durland committed suicide when he saw the police closing in on him. He believed it was either the madhouse of death for him, and he chose the latter," said Mrs. Durland.

MURDERER OF WIFE IS EXECUTED

Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., was electrocuted at Richmond, Va., this morning at 7.23, thus paying the penalty for shooting to death his young wife on the Midlothian turnpike last June.

Beattie walked to the chair without support. His last words were: "I am not afraid to die."

It is reported that he made a full confession before entering the death chamber.

Butter and Egg Prices Boosted

Chicago, Nov. 24.—The price of butter and eggs has been boosted to the highest price of 1911, eggs being 40 to 42 cents and butter 39 to 40 cents.

—We challenge any advocate of the license system to demonstrate from criminal records that prohibition fosters crime and disorder or that license contributes to the peace and order of a community, and we challenge any enthusiastic friend of the saloon to state candidly why, in times of excitement and riot, the authorities invariably step in and order the saloons to close.—Richmond Virginian.

A Queer Animal.

"That is the only animal I ever saw that would eat and drink and sleep upside down," said a visitor to the zoo, indicating a fruit bat or flying squirrel from Borneo. It hung head downward in its cage. Three curved claws on what appeared to be its tail embraced a roof bar. In its pendulous position it reached out for the disks of banana the keeper passed through the bars. Finishing its meal, it swung over to a cup of water and took a drink. Then, folding its membranous wings, it closed its eyes and was soon asleep.—New York Sun.

ANNUAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS

Of Heptasophs Held Thursday Evening In Protection Hall

DANCE NEXT MONDAY

Protection hall was the scene of a most interesting and enthusiastic gathering Thursday evening, when the members of the local order of Heptasophs held forth in the annual election of officers, followed in turn by an entertainment and banquet of the first class order. There was a large attendance of members and 17 men were initiated by the regular officers.

After the business meeting was concluded, the election of officers, which was the first thing in order, resulted as follows:

Archon, J. J. Mullen; probist, Edward Brown; prelate, William DeCoste; inspector, Bertram Irving; warder, John Kolson; sentinel, William Eaton; financier, F. P. Hill; treasurer, John Cahill and trustees, Thomas F. Raiche, John Holton and Harry Kallinback.

An able and scholarly address on "Fraternity" was delivered, after the election of officers by F. P. Hill and the many interesting and instructive points which he developed in his talk, elicited great applause from time to time.

The meeting was then thrown open to merry-making, and the entertainment furnished by members of the order, was of the first class variety. Speeches, in jocosing style, were delivered by Thomas F. Raiche, who also gave a number of readings and John H. O'Brien. William Provost officiated on the piano and accredited himself in a splendid manner.

Bertram Irving came to the front in his usual funny mode, while Geo. Wilson also took those present by surprise with his clever work. William DeCoste was kept busy with his buck and wing steps and the members of the Heptasophs can certainly vaunt themselves in the talent which they have in their membership.

Refreshments of all sorts were served in abundance, and it was shortly before midnight when the meeting adjourned.

The members of the local order are now eagerly looking forward to next Monday evening, when the second annual dance of the Heptasophs will be observed in Alpha hall. The event last year was a gala one from every standpoint, but the committee in charge expects that this coming occasion will greatly eclipse the event of last year. Delegations will be presented from other cities and towns, and the committee in charge is prepared to accommodate a large crowd.

This news reached the Ward line office here in a wireless message from the Seguranca, which apparently had been relayed by the steamer Vigilancia, now at Nassau.

FIGURES OUT FOR RIVERS AND HARBORS

Estimates for continuing the work of river and harbor improvement throughout the country, made public at the War Department Thursday and covering the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, show a strict adherence to the new administration policy of asking Congress to appropriate only for those improvements which have received the approach of the Army corps of engineers after the most thorough investigation.

No new projects of any great importance are provided for in the estimates, and unless Congress takes the bit in its teeth and disregards the recommendations of Gen. W. H. Bixby, chief of engineers, the "pork barrel" method of river and harbor work will have been eliminated for a second year.

The appropriations asked for aggregate $29,628,698, as against $30,095,698 for the current year. The estimates will be sent to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury, and President Taft in his message will urge that they be strictly adhered to.

The estimates for New England follow:

Maine—Mount Desert-Porcupine island breakwater, $75,000; Sullivan Falls Harbor, $5,000.

Vermont—Burlington Harbor, $2,000.

Massachusetts—Lynn Harbor, $35,000; Mystic River below Island End River, $50,000; Boston Harbor, $590,000; New Bedford and Fairhaven harbors, $127,000.

Rhode Island—Providence River and harbor and Narragansett Bay, and Green Jacket Shoal, $100,000; harbor of refuge, Point Judith, $160,000.

Connecticut—Connecticut River below Hartford, $40,000; harbor of refuge, Duck Island Harbor, $75,000; Branford Harbor, $3,000; Housatonic River, $10,000.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

day evening, action was taken regarding the resignation of Rev. Edward A. Chase as pastor of the church. The meeting was called to order by the Moderator Charles P. Hutchins and the pastor's letter of resignation was read by Charles F. West, the clerk.

The following resolutions were adopted by the meeting:

"Resolved: That in accepting Mr. Chase's resignation and acting upon his request, we, the members of the Wollaston Congregational church desire to express our appreciation of his years of service with us.

"We are grateful for his public utterances on the Lord's day, for his pastoral work, and especially for his sympathy and helpful ministrations in time of bereavement and sorrow.

"To the poor he has always lent an attentive ear and a helping hand. His influence has extended beyond the limits of our parish and his broad views of Christianity have made him a loyal friend of missions at home and abroad.

"No less grateful are we to Mrs. Chase, who, as mistress of the manse, has been unceasing in her efforts to advance the cause of Christ in our parish and community. Her well rounded Christian character has made her an example, and her pre-eminent ability has marked her as a leader.

"We part with our pastor and his wife with regret and we wish them Godspeed in their new field of labor."

A resolve was also offered by the ladies of the Benevolent Society in appreciation of the help Mrs. Chase had been to them in the past.

By vote of those present, the moderator was authorized to appoint a committee to confer with the pastor in regard to the calling of an ecclesiastical council to ratify the action of this meeting. The following were named: Chester J. Hogue, Wendell H. Hull, Fred L. Eastman, Mrs. A. A. Lincoln and Mrs. E. R. Johnson.

A committee on pulpit supply were appointed consisting of Dr. E. R. Johnson, Chester N. Godfrey, Charles F. West, Charles A. Randall and Mrs. A. A. Lincoln.

WOMEN'S RIGHT TO VOTE

It Does Not Change Their Jury Eligibility In California

Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 24.—Attorney General Webb has ruled that women cannot serve as jurors in this city, the question having been raised by the success of the equal suffrage constitutional amendment.

"Under the common law," said Webb, "a jury consists of twelve free and lawful men, and under the same law women were not eligible to jury duty. I don't understand that the suffrage has affected the question of eligibility for jury service."

APPEAL OF NO LICENSE LEAGUE

The annual appeal of the Quincy No-License League to the voters of the city has been issued and a copy of the same will be mailed to every voter in the city. Last year, says the appeal, there were 1,308 stay aways at the last election, nearly one for every four voters. Citizenship is a privilege, it is also a solemn duty.

Every citizen who has the interest of the city at heart should not neglect to record himself against the saloon in Quincy. Quincy has long been in the no-license column and anyone who resided here during the years when there were 28 licensed bar rooms and twice as many more that were not licensed, would not like to have the city return to those days, when the streets were nightly full of fighting drunks and it was unsafe for a lady to pass through the city unless accompanied by an escort.

Last year there were 265 who did not have the courage to record themselves for or against license. They are even worse than the stay at homes. See to it this year that there is a rousing vote for no-license—for the sake of mother, sister, wife, child and home.

It looks as if some of our trust magnates had got to begin life all over again with only a pittance like a million a year.

ADVENTURE

By JACK LONDON

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

A murmur of admiration at Bellin-Jama's bravery went up from the listening blacks. But Bellin-Jama's voice was still ringing in the air, and the murmuring was just beginning, when Sheldon cleared the rail, leaping straight downward. From the top of the railing to the ground, it was fifteen feet, and Bellin-Jama was directly beneath. Sheldon's flying body struck him and crushed him to earth. No blows were needed to be struck. The black had been knocked helpless. Joan, startled by the unexpected leap, saw Carin-Jama, the Silent, reach out and seize Sheldon by the throat as he was halfway to his feet, while the ten score blacks surged forward for the killing. Her revolver was out, and Carin-Jama let go his grip, reeling backward with a bullet in his shoulder. In that fleeting instant of action, she had thought to shoot him in the arm, which, at that short distance, might reasonably have been achieved. But the wave of savages leaping forward had changed her shot to the shoulder. It was a moment when not the slightest chance could be taken.

The instant his throat was released, Sheldon struck out with his fist, and Carin-Jama joined his brother on the ground. The mutiny was quelled, and five minutes more saw the brothers being carried to the hospital, and the mutineers, marshalled by the gang bosses, on the way to the fields.

When Sheldon came up on the veranda, he found Joan collapsed on the steamer chair and in tears. The sight unnerved him as the row just over could not possibly have done. He glanced down at her helplessly, and moistened his lips.

"I want to thank you," he began. "There isn't a doubt but what you saved my life, and I must say"—

She abruptly removed her hands, showing a wrathful and tear stained face.

"You brute! You coward!" she cried. "You have made me shoot a man, and I never shot a man in my life before."

"It's only a flesh wound, and he isn't going to die," Sheldon managed to interpolate.

"What of that? I shot him just the same. There was no need for you to jump down there that way. It was brutal and cowardly."

"Oh, now I say"— he began soothingly.

"Go away. Don't you see I hate you! hate you! Oh, won't you go away!"

Sheldon was white with anger.

"Then why in the name of common sense did you shoot?" he demanded.

"Be-be-cause you were a white man," she sobbed. "And dad would never have left any white man in the lurch. But it was your fault. You had no right to get yourself in such a position. Besides, it wasn't necessary."

"I am afraid I don't understand," he said, shortly, turning away. "We will talk it over later on."

* * * * * * *

"I suppose I've been unforgivably foolish," was her greeting when he returned several hours later from a round of the plantation. "I've been to the hospital, and the man is getting along all right. It is not a serious hurt."

Sheldon felt unaccountably pleased and happy at the changed aspect of her mood.

"You see, you don't understand the situation," he began. "In the first place, the blacks have to be ruled sternly. Kindness is all very well, but you can't rule them by kindness only. I accept all that you say about the Hawaiians and Tahitians. You say that they can be handled that way, and I believe you. I have had no experience with them. But you have had no experience with the blacks, and I ask you to believe me. They are different from your natives. You are used to Polynesians. These boys are Melanesians. They're blacks. They're niggers—look at their kinky hair. And they're a whole lot lower than the African niggers. Really, you know, there is a vast difference.

"They possess no gratitude, no sympathy, no kindliness. If you are kind to them they think you are a fool. If you are gentle with them they think you are afraid. And when they think you are afraid, watch out, for they will get you. Just to show you, let me state the one invariable process in a black man's brain when on his native heath he encounters a stranger. His first thought is one of fear. Will the stranger kill him? His next thought, seeing that he is not killed is, Can he kill the stranger? There was Packard, a colonial trader, some twelve miles down the coast. He boasted that he ruled by kindness and never struck a blow. The result was that he did not rule at all. He used to come down in his whaleboat to visit Hughie and me. When his boat's crew decided to go home he had to cut his visit short to accompany them. I remember one Sunday afternoon when Packard had accepted our invitation to stop to dinner. The soup was just served when Hughie saw a nigger peering in through the door. He went out to him, for it was a violation of Berande custom. Any nigger has to send in word by the house boys and to keep outside the compound. This man, who was one of Packard's boat's crew, was on the veranda. And he knew better, too. 'What name?' said Hughie. 'You tell 'm white man close up we fella boat's crew go along. He no come now, we fella boy no wait. We go.'

"And just then Hughie fetched him a clout that knocked him clean down the stairs and off the veranda."

"But it was needlessly cruel," Joan objected. "You wouldn't treat a white man that way."

"And that's just the point. He wasn't a white man. He was a low black nigger, and he was deliberately insulting, not alone his own white master, but every white master in the Solomons. He insulted me. He insulted Hughie. He insulted Berande."

Woman Arrested as Shoplifter Said to Be Old Offender

Boston, Nov. 24.—Catherine McCann, 74, a widow, was arrested last night, charged with shoplifting, and when searched in the booking office at police headquarters she was found to have eight bank books, showing deposits of $10,690.54, $470 in bills, $11.50 in gold, $1.20 in English money and three diamond lockets.

This wealth was in chamois bags attached to her waist, inside of her dress. When she appeared before inspector Douglas, the booking officer, he recognized the woman as a person whom he had arrested fifteen years ago on a similar offense. The police say that her picture is in the rogue's gallery.

The eulogy will, as usual, be by one of the local clergymen. After the eexrcises a lunch will be served at the club rooms.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE JUICY OYSTER.

NOW that oysters are in season, housewives can vary the Friday's fish diet by serving an occasional dish of oysters. While those who live near the ocean are especially fortunate in being able to obtain nice fresh bivalves, in these days of refrigerator cars, so called fresh oysters may be bought in most communities. In small towns housewives can depend on the many excellent brands of canned oysters.

Oysters for steaming should be the largest which your oyster dealer can provide. Clean them and arrange on an enameled pan or plate. Put them in the steamer over boiling water and steam for about twenty minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Serve on buttered toast.

Creamed Oysters.

Creamed oysters are popular. Here is one recipe for making them. Take the liquor off a quart of oysters, add a cupful of cream and place it over the fire, bringing it to a boil.

Thicken the cream mixture with a tablespoonful of flour and one of butter. Drop the oysters into the pan with the liquor and the cream and cook the oysters until they begin to curl. Serve these on toast or in pattie shells.

Scalloped oysters require a quart of solid oysters from which the liquor has been drained. The oysters are washed, rolled in cracker crumbs and placed in a pan on a layer of cracker crumbs.

Then use a layer of crumbs, some bits of butter, pepper and salt, alternating until the pan is filled with layers of crumbs and oysters. Add a cupful of oyster liquor and sweet milk to saturate. Bake about forty-five minutes.

Oyster Patties.

Oyster patties are always an acceptable dish. To prepare them drain a couple of dozen of oysters, put in a saucepan and stir over the fire until the edges have curled. Drain off the liquor, measure and add sufficient rich milk or cream to make one cupful.

Melt a tablespoonful of butter, add to it two scant tablespoonfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper. When well blended with the butter add the liquid and stir until thick and smooth. Add the oysters and set over hot water for five or ten minutes. Fill the patty shells the last thing before sending to the table.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

A football game of the high class order is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at Merrymount park, when the 'jackies'" eleven of the U. S. S. Rhode Island clash in a battle royal with the Quincy A. A. aggregation. The navy boys are conceded to be an exceptionally fast combination of players and as the local team seems to be the logical aspirant for the 160 pound championship of the state, a warm and keenly exciting game is bound to ensue. Captain McDonald of the local eleven is out to win this game above all, and if a victory is foarthcoming from the much heralded Cunningham gymnasium team of Milton on the afternoon of Thanksgiving day, the title shall have been won and the local boys shall have acquired amost enviable football reputation.

To add to the occasion, the band of the U. S. S. Nebraska will accompany the navy boys if the present circumstances permit, and this in itself should prove a special attraction to the local lovers of a gridiron contest, Harvord and Yale will be battling together on the Cambridge stadium in bloody array, but the interest and ecstacy that are bound to prevail on the local gridiron give every promise of being as great, comparatively speaking. Both teams will combat for the same title and any one who desires to see the real article of pigskin work should make an especial effort to be present for the occasion.

By a rather strange coincidence, the Marceau boys, two well known local runners, will compete with one another in the intercollegate cross country championship run, which is to take place in Brookline tomorow afternoon. Franz will wear the colors of Dartmouth college, while his brother E. T., will try to bring home laurels to the Institute of Technology track team.

Of the two it seems that Franz has the better record and the Hanover school students expect to see him carry off the honors of the day. Franz gained a wide reputation while a student at the local high school in various one mile runs and since he has entered collge has proceeded along the same lines. Only recently he established a cross country record for Dartmouth college and his many admirers are hoping to see him attain still greater horros tomorrow.

Some men compliment themselves for local patriotism if they merely buy a yeast cake at the home store.

GREAT SCANDAL DEVELOPES

Royal Chaplain Said to Have Been Leading a Double Life, Involving Names Which Gossip Never Before Has Dared to Touch—Desperate Efforts to Effect Escape Before Facts Became Known to the Public

London, Nov. 24.—Rev. F. P. Farrar, former chaplain in ordinary to King George and Queen Mary, and honorary domestic chaplain to Dowager Queen Alexandra, who has fled England in disgrace, following his expulsion from his ecclesiastical offices, is reported to have sailed for the United States incognito, leaving in his wake the elements of a scandal that will shake not only Great Britain but all of Europe. Frenzied efforts are being made to cover up the facts underlying the royal chaplain's flight.

It is realized in court circles that a terrible mistake was made in allowing any of the facts to become public and belated efforts are being made to correct the blunder. Little hope is entertained, however, that they can be successful. Rumor is rife in the case and while the real facts may never be published, gossip is dealing with names which scandal never before has dared to touch.

So highly was Farrar held in the esteem of the late King Edward and King George and so faithfully had he executed his church duties that the fact is recognized that the offense must have been very grave indeed to compel the expulsion of the chaplain.

The bishop of Norwich, in whose diocese the accused cleric's parish of Sandringham was located, has already started an investigation of charges of immorality and drunkenness. According to the complaints Farrar has been leading a dual life.

Intense interest is felt throughout the American colony in the scandal because the accused is the husband of an American girl, having married Miss Nora Davis, a sister of Richard H. Davis, the novelist, last July.

Never before in the history of the English church has there been a scandal which promised revelations so sensational and general attention is attracted to it with intensified force because of the prominence of the clergyman's family, he himself being a son of Dean Farrar, one of the most famous prelates in England.

The only information obtainable about the missing clergyman at his residence is that he left suddenly without leaving an address.

When the facts were first brought to notice of the authorities powerful influences were set to work with a view of enabling Farrar to escape before the scandal became public property, and before a warrant for his arrest could be issued. These powerful friends, it is believed, have been able to accomplish this together with those other influences which are most desirous to keep the king's name from being mixed with such a miserable affair.

The action of the king against the chaplain is unprecedented in the annals of the royal court, and was only taken after the full facts had been communicated to him by wireless on board the eMdina, which is carrying him to India for the durbar.

The bishop of Norwich, upon being informed of the charges, immediately began an investigation which is now proceeding. It was then decided to communicate with King George by wireless and aerograms were exchanged between the wireless station at the admiralty in London and the Medina. The king, after careful consideration, ordered the chaplain's dismissal and the announcement thereof to be published in the London Gazette.

FOOLED WITH $1000 BILL

Joker Accidentally Lights a Cigar With the Yellowback

San Francisco, Nov. 24.—Sigurd Hartig, a real estate dealer, accidentally lit a cigar with a $1000 bill. He intended to burn only the end of a bit of yellow paper at the edge of the bill for the edification of his friends. Samuel Haller joined the group just as Hartig lit the cigar.

"Give me a light, Sig," said Haller, seizing the bill. Before Hartig could recover it, the bill was in flames. A small corner of the bill and a few ashes were recovered and will be sent to Washington in an attempt to have the loss made good.

FOR HIS HEALTH.

Alvy MacIntyre overheard this conversation, which he says is the funniest that man ever spoke:

"Where you been, Murray?"

"To a health resort. Finest place I ever struck. It was simply great."

"Then why did you come back?"

"Oh, I got sick and had to come home."

"Are you going back?"

"You bet. Just as soon as I get well enough."—Chicago News.

Sylvester Webster of Quincy and Henry A. Burns of 1222 Blue Hill avenue, Mattapan, were injured Friday night at 11 o'clock when an electric car of the Bay State Street Railway Company struck a wagon, in which they were riding, on East River street, Hyde Park. The car jumped the track and plunged onto the sidewalk.

Burns received injuries to his left leg and Webster had his broken below the knee.

Dr. Martin took Burns to his office in his automobile and dressed his wounds. Webster was removed to Dr. Holmes' hospital in Hyde Park.

Calvin C. Fletcher of Garfield street, Quincy is owner of the granite team.

FORE RIVER LOWEST BIDDERS

The Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy were the lowest bidders for the contract of building a new steamer for the Union Sulphur Company, and it is probable the concern will receive the contract. Five of the leading shipbuilding concerns on the Atlantic Coast submitted bids. The steamer is to be the same size as the Herman Frasch, which was built at Quincy in 1909 for the sulphur company.

PROMINENT CITIZEN DEAD.

Thomas P. Haley, one of Quincy's well known citizens, passed away at his home on Adams street, Friday, after a brief illness. He was a man of sterling honesty, respected by all. He leaves a widow and three children, Thomas F. Haley, Miss Annie C. Haley and Miss Catherine Haley. His funeral will take place from St. Mary's church, Monday morning. Mr. Haley has been engaged in the milk business for many years.

"BREEZY POINT" WELL ACTED

Given Under Auspices of St. Margaret's Guild

AT COLONIAL HALL

The inclement weather Friday evening, did not seem to in any way interfere with a large attendance at Colonial hall where the three act drama, "Breezy Point" was given under the auspices of St. Margaret's Guild of Christ church. The several characters in the drama were impersonated by the young ladies of the guild, who entered heartily into the spirit of the drama and took their several parts in a manner that would do credit to professionals.

Aunt Debby Dexter, the mistress of Breezy Point was perfectly impersonated by May Veale, while Olive Barnicoat, Emma Barnicoat, Minnie Barnicoat and Isabelle Walker, Aunt Debby's summer boarders, fresh from a boarding school, proved themselves to be typical summer boarders full of girlish pranks.

Cora Bornicoat impersonated the character of Elinor Pearl of unknown parentage, Florence Ford, a workhouse waif, Adelaide McDowell a woman with business propensities, Helen Schools and Lizzie Ross the twins "who never told nothing," Marion Bolster, fascinating French maid, Mabel Dickie, manufacturer of snuff and bitters and Lizzie Dickie the gypsy also took their parts equally well so that the drama ran very smoothly.

Between the first and second acts, Elizabeth Torrey gave a pleasing monologue entitled "At the market." At the close of the drama the floor was cleared for dancing.

Music during the drama and for the dancing was furnished by Elton Chase, at the drum and Mrs. Effie L. Rhines at the piano. The beautiful roses, carnations and chrysanthemums used in the decorations were the gift of William Patterson.

CLAN McGREGOR.

On Monday evening, at Clan McGregor hall, Doble's corner, Clan McGregor will have one of the biggest nights in its history, as it has over a hundred applications for membership to be acted on.

In addition, Dr. John A. Gordon, the Clan's first physician will be present and address the Clan. On account of the extra business the meeting is called for 6.30, instead of 7.30 as usual.

GALA NIGHT AT BRYANT'S ANNUAL DANCE

Many Guests Celebrate With Leading Organization

COMMITTEE IN CHARGE

Not even the unfavorable weather that prevailed last evening was an obstacle to the observance of the ninth annual dance of the Bryant A. C., one of Quincy's foremost organizations of young men, for fully 150 couples turned out in Alpha hall in celebration of the occasion. From 8 o'clock until 9, an instrumental concert was in order, and a fine repertoire of music was furnished.

Dancing was enjoyed till midnight. Delegations of the Crimson club and the Glenno Girls were present from Brockton and special cars conveyed a number of Brockton dancers to and from their destination. A special car was also run to West Quincy at midnight, in order to take home the many who were present from that section of the city.

A short intermission took place at 10.30 o'clock, and a great ovation was given at this time to candidates for political honors who addressed the gathering and were well received.

An exhibition dance was given at 11 o'clock by John Henselberger and lady.

The affair itself proved to be a gala observance for Bryant's annual. The floor was in charge of James Donovan assisted by Joseph J. Farrell. Thomas Flaherty was chief of aids, and was assisted by the following aids:

Joseph Wade, Charles C. McCue, Joseph Brunette, John Perkins, B. J. Flaherty, Joseph H. Fitzgerald, Richard Joyce, Walter Barry, John J. McDevitt, Lawrence Donovan, James O'Brien, John Perkins, James McDonald, James P. King.

What promises to be one of the finest entertainments ever given in Quincy will take place Tuesday evening at Music hall under the auspices of J. A. Keating who is to furnish four grand upright pianos. The program is well gotten up and noted stars will appear, among them Professors Wrigley, Gilbert, Fouche and Mahon and Miss Helen Donovan Kearns of Quincy, Miss Rose Bryant and Dr. Archer Leslie Hood of New York, and Robert Cavendish of the Imperial Opera house, London.

HOT FIGHT ON IN WEST QUINCY

Battle Wages Around Candidate For School Committee

WILL AFFECT TICKET

Of all the contests during the present municipal campaign, that at West Quincy is the merriest for a hot fight is on, which even the vote of the election will not settle. On the one side is the city committee working to have the caucus nominee for school committee from the ward win out, while on the other side are some of the candidates for councilmen working tooth and nail to see that the Independent candidate carries the ward.

For the ward councilmen there is no contest, but that for school committee from the ward is becoming very bitter, if all reports are true. In the first place it is said that James F. Burke, the present member of the school board from the ward, would not have objected to being returned, but he neglected to take out nomination papers and none of the ward committee waited upon him to see if he desired to again be a candidate, but taking it for granted that he did not, place one of the ward's young men in nomination.

But when the caucuses were held, it developed that Dr. Reynolds had aspirations to represent the ward on the school board and his friends appeared at the caucuses with printed stickers. Had all who voted for him taken the precaution to affix the stickers in the right place he would have readily obtained the nomination. Unfortunately, some pasted them over the place for school committee from the ward while others pasted them over the space for school committee at large. Some of his friends in the Republican party, who had no candidate of their own, also affixed his stickers to the Republican ballot. The result was that when the vote was counted it was found that he had lost the regular Democratic nomination for school committee from the ward, but had received the nomination for school committee at large on the Democratic ticket, while by the Republican ballot he had received the nomination for school committee from the ward.

Once into the contest, the Doctor was bound to see it through and he therefore lost no time in officially withdrawing from the Democratic nomination for school committee at large and from the Republican nomination for school committee from the ward. He then circulated papers as an independent candidate for school committee from the ward and is now fighting for the election on these lines.

Then the war began, and it has been growing warmer and warmer every day since, until today the contest is at a fever heat and the ward is divided against its self. Politicians are lining up against each other and both sides are working tooth and nail to have their candidate win. The fight on the school committee question will also have some effect on the balance of the ticket, especially for councilmen. While the three gentlemen nominated for councilmen from the ward are sure to be elected, as they have no opposition, a war is being waged to see which of the three will get the largest vote, so taking all in all there is something doing in the Fourth ward and will be until after the polls are closed, Dec. 5.

TUNEFUL OPERETTA

Given Friday Evening In First Church Chapel

THOSE IN CAST

The inclement weather interfered somewhat with having a large attendance at the operetta given in the First church chapel, Friday evening, but those that did brave the elements were well repaid, for the tuneful operetta was well rendered and greatly enjoyed.

"The Japanese Girl" was the title of the operetta and it was given under the direction of Miss Minnie Packard, with William Ellis Weston as accompanist. Between the acts and before and after the operetta an orchestra rendered several selections.

The operetta was given in two acts the scene being laid in a Japanese tea garden. The occasion for the gathering of Japanese maidens was to celebrate the coming of age of O Hanu San, a Japanese girl of position, who was impersonated by Miss Abbie B. Penley.

The young ladies who impersonated the several characters were gowned in fetching Japanese gowns and the words to the tuneful music was rendered by sweet voices. The solo parts were sung by Miss Penley and Miss Packard. Then there were duets and a trio.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It is proving as difficult to get any one to take a place in the Chinese cabinet as to get any one to stand for Sunday school superintendent.

Mrs. Winifred Cooley told the Women's clubs that women could improve the quality of food if they had the ballot. The things Mother used to make, however, were done without the aid of voting.

We are not confident that jailing the packers would make them any better, but if they could be fed on some of the beef-steak we had this morning, we feel sure they would be good in future.

Although we are theoretically convinced that foot ball is a rude game, yet at heart we shall not feel sure that the world is growing better until we learn that the Yale—Harvard foot ball game has come out right.

With eggs selling at 42 cents and butter at 40 cents the government today began to present its evidence in the suit to dissolve the Chicago butter and egg board, which it is alleged arbitrarily fixes the price of these commodities.—Chicago news dispatch.

Eggs direct from the poultry raiser to the customer cost fifty-five cents a dozen in this city. Will the government please take measures to dissolve the grasping poultryman?

Says the "Man About Town" in the Salem News:—

The definition of a pessimist which President Smith of the Boston Chamber of Commerce gave at the recent meeting of the Salem Board of Trade has called to my mind the following definition which I remember hearing at a public meeting several years ago:

A pessimist is a nuisance.

The man who knocks his town is a public pessimist.

Therefore, the man who knocks his town is a public nuisance.

And Webster says:

A nuisance is offensive and noxious.

THE TROLLEY FREIGHT.

Judging from the accommodation so far accorded to Quincy by the Electric express, Boston is missing a good thing in its opposition to installation of the service. Speakers from all sections of the state were in attendance at the hearing before the Railroad Commissioner, Friday, and spoke in the highest terms of the benefits to be derived from the trolley freight system. From our own city, His Honor, and two or three other leading citizens voiced the sentiments of the community at large that the proposition has worked out well here and is worthy of further development—which would come with its entry into Boston.

As no representative of the city government that refused it was present, it is impossible to state the reasons for so doing. It is to be hoped, however, that the Commissioners will give the matter favorable consideration and extend a really important and useful public institution.

AMEN TO IT!

We heartily endorse the Boston Post's editorial regarding the "sane" Christmas and agree with it that "judging from the literature of the organization that is now invading the offices of the newspapers, it is a day for the cutting off of gifts, the suppression of Santa Claus and the squelching of many other features that have given joy to childhood for generations."

We'll go a little farther by wagering that the "grouch" from whose narrow contracted mind such "gush" emenated has never had the pleasure of beholding the wide opened eyes and beaming faces of the happy youngsters when they beheld the fruits of Santa's visit, modest if you please, on the morning of Christmas.

To the average fellow that's worth a mighty lot of hard work and privations and if the "sane" Christmas means the doing away of such holiday cheer, lets have the insane one, hallowed and mellowed by years and memories.

FINANCIAL OUTLOOK.

Special 1911.

Beyond question favorable conditions predominate in the stock market. There is a spirit of confidence and cheerfulness developing which is in striking contrast with what has prevailed for many months. We still have with us the pessimist and the timid; but these classes are always present, and though acting as a restraint upon blind optimism cannot long hold in check the growing spirit of rational confidence now appearing.

A wide range survey of the situation shows many changes for the better. There are, for instance, better trade conditions because stocks of merchandise are much below the normal and price concessions are often acting as a stimulant to purchasers. The credit situation in all parts of the country is better than for many months, and borrowers in good standing have no difficulty in securing all reasonable accommodation upon favorable terms.

There is also a better sentiment in banking circles as revealed by the attitude of our financial leaders toward the stock market and in their preparations for the placement of new security issues. We are now approaching the largest dividend season when the demand from investors is always counted upon in advance as a strengthening element. It is worthy of particular attention that dividends on both railroads and industrials have been well maintained in spite of recent business depression. This result has been largely obtained through economy and the postponement of many renewals and repairs. The railroads have fared better during the latter half of the year than expected, and are now beginning to show better gross earnings. There has been no important diminution of traffic, as some timid managers predicted, and with better net results there is every reason for increased confidence in railroad shares, particularly those of the higher grade. The cheaper issues, however, will of course show the most marked recovery, for the reason that they were the chief sufferers from the fears and disturbances which are now passing away.

There is also a much better political situation. A week hence Congress will open and the country must be prepared for shocks from proposed radical legislation. The Presidential campaign has been prematurely begun. It is fairly under way. Sensational attacks must be expected for political effect. They should be regarded, however, with reserve and a recollection of the fact that the conservative element often rests in the background until the final struggle, when it usually asserts its sobering influence. Recent events show a wholesome change in public opinion from extreme radicalism and irrational progressiveism. The people are getting tired of agitation and there is less danger to day of extreme political action than at any time for many years. This is largely because the anti-trust crusade has passed the crisis.

So far as political elements are concerned, the outlook in the long run is distinctly brighter, and nothing more serious than temporary setbacks may be anticipated on the news from Washington.

Finally, we have a better foreign situation; better investment conditions; a better bond market; a satisfactory monetary outlook, and better copper conditions, all of which must tend toward a return and crystalization of confidence. The only reactions at present in sight are such as may occur from political developments and the taking of profits after an already very considerable rise. Such reactions, however, under present conditions are sure to be followed by further recoveries.—Henry Clews, Banker, New York.

BUY RED CROSS SEALS.

By Stephen Chalmers.

The sunshine-making fairies
We loved ere we grew wise,
Don't seem to come around now—
Not even in disguise.
But whisper! (This is magic!)
They did not all depart,
For here's a fairy "sticker"
To match a broken heart.

Don't ask the why or wherefore,
Or who they are who weep,
The fairies hear the sad things
While happy people sleep.
Don't buy because you're frightened
Your own cheer may depart.
The widow's mite was mighty
Through goodness in her heart!"

So when you're Christmas-happy,
Remember, as you should,
Good will is more than being
Just willing to be good.
So kiss the seal and stick it
(Or else the charm will fail)—
The finger- print of fairies
On everything you mail!

CHARITY IN LAWRENCE.

The Lawrence City Mission recently issued its 52d annual report which contains much interesting data, especially for those engaged in a like work. On opening the book the first thing to greet the eye is the following which seems appropriate at Thanksgiving as well as at all times:

CHARITY SHOULD DO FIVE THINGS

Act upon knowledge acquired by intelligent investigation.

Relieve worthy need promptly, adequately and kindly.

Prevent unwise alms to the unworthy.

Raise into independence every needy person where it is possible.

Make sure that no children grow to be paupers.

From the secretary's report we quote the following:

All charity rests on the foundation principle of love. The sandwich or piece of pie extended by a motherly hand from the back door of thrift to the unthrifty beggar tells of the giver's love—her love for suffering or lost humanity, or her love for the Christ who taught us charity. But when many mothers in a city become convinced that their individual doles to strangers are merely an encouragement of idleness and vagrancy they unite in establishing a wayfarer's lodge with a labor test. The many mothers, moved by the compulsion of love, and uniting in a wisely directed effort, accomplish through organized charity better results than can be gained by their individual effort.

Love is the underlying principle or motive; but it finds expression in certain principles of action, such as Investigation, Registration, Co-operation and Adequate Relief. Their purpose is to accomplish intelligent action which shall result in thorough and efficient service. Investigation of the social need is like the physician's diagnosis of physical ailment. The right remedy can not be given in either case until the cause of the suffering as well as its symptoms is discovered. Systematic registration of the essential facts is necessary, not only to help in the immediate consideration of the case, but for the reconsideration of it should distress again occur. Co-operation also is necessary because the sufferer has access to many sources of possible relief, the independent ministration of which may aggravate the sufferer's distress. The patient who resorts at the same time to physicians of two schools of medicine and to a mental healer is quite likely to develop new symptoms of disease without relieving the old. So the sufferer from poverty is in danger of multiplying his own troubles and of becoming an increasing burden to his neighbors if he is allowed to have access to several independent sources of aid. But just as a physician of any school may wisely refer a case of impaired vision to an oculist, or may call in a masseur to supplement the effect of the medicine which he himself prescribes so may the agents of different kinds of belief confer together and add efficiency to each other's efforts by intelligent co-operation.

Organized Charity has its representatives in nearly all the cities and larger towns of the United States. The Lawrence City Mission exchanges reports with about four hundred such societies, and has occasion to correspond with many of them every year.

In order that these hundreds of societies may be united for still larger service of humanity, and may be interchanging information as to methods of greater efficiency, a National Association of Societies for Organizing Charity has been formed during the year. In it the Lawrence City Mission holds membership. Because of this membership, because of the increasing spirit of co-operation in its efforts shown by all the philanthropic agenciesof this city, and especially because of the larger sympathy and support extended by good citizens of every race and creed the Mission faces its fifty-third year with the enthusiasm of renewed youth.

MISS ROSE BRYANT.

Miss Rose Bryant of New York who appears in the "Gems from the Opera" concert at Music hall, Tuesday evening is one of the most popular of the young singers of the day. She is a Connecticut girl, whose splendid native gifts for music have been finely cultivated. The greater part of her study has been with Madame Franz Milcke, an accredited pupil of Madame Lilli Lehmann, the noted prima donna and teacher.

MISS ROSE BRYANT, Contralto.

Her work has been well done as is evidenced by her admirable phrasing, her tone production, her clear diction and her finished style. Although so young an artist she has had the most flattering engagements in concerts, festivals, oratorio productions and the like. She has sung with the New York Symphony Orchestra, the Boston Festival Orchestra the New York Oratorio Society, the Boston Cecilia society, the Brooklyn Oratorio Society, the New Haven Festival and many others. At a recent appearance with the Orpheus Society of Buffalo where she sang before an audience of 4,000 she was accorded a great ovation and was engaged for a return date. She has an extensive repertoire and sings the whole range of contralto songs, being successful with German lieder and American ballads, the oratorio songs and the opera arias in equal measure. While decidedly contralto in timbre, she fills mezzo soprano easily. Her singing is characterized by much intelligence and dramatic spirit. Some of her selections have shown her possessed of a considerable command of coloratura, her flexibility and her artistic handling of such music being delightful. She has poise and a strong, powerful, particularly pleasing voice.

Fumed Oak
For the Living Room

Rather uncommon, perhaps a bit "tony. It will stand usage far better than any other finish, for 'tis treated in a manner its name would apply. The Oak, after being coated with a soft brown stain, is placed in an air tight compartment, and permeated with ammonia. This opens the pores and the stain sinks under the surface making the finish really fadeless. 'Tis waxed then and rubbed down to a soft dull finish, a brown tone produced, that is rich and refined.
'Tis furniture prettily adapted to the Living Room and Den, its designs ever simple, free from ornamentation, either in relief or applied. Its cost is much less than its appearance would imply, but sold here at Kincaide's, on the straight basis of what it costs.

In addition to the Japanese maidens, there were, of course, two young American ladies travelling with their governess and with true American spirit they noised about the garden, examining minutely everything in sight, which of course, created much merriment especially when the governess was found asleep.

In the cast, in addition to Miss Penley, were Miss Ruth Packard and Miss Lela B. Smith, her cousins, Miss Minnie Packard her servant, Miss Dorothy Packard and Miss Eleanor Whittemore, Young American ladies, Miss Catherine Saville, the governess and Bruce W. Saville as the Mikado.

LOCAL BOY COMPETED.

Arthur F. Williams, a sophomore in Quincy High school, was one of the competitors in the interscholastic cross country championship run, held yesterday in Brookline. It was the local boy's first appearance in a run of such a nature and the fact that he finished in 17th place, out of such a large list of entrants, shows that he bids fair to be a valuable acquisition to the track athletics at the local institution.

The weather, too, was a serious obstacle to him in his first attempt, yet a new record was established by the winner, Henigan of Malden High school, who covered the 2 1-2 miles in 16 minutes, 45 seconds. The previous record was held by White of Brookline High in 1908, who covered the distance in 17 minutes and 17 seconds.

MANY ENDORSE TROLLEY FREIGHT FOR BOSTON

Hearing of Boston "L" Before Railroad Commissioners

OVER 700 PRESENT

Several from Quincy were present Friday at the hearing before the Railroad Commissioners on the petition of the Boston "L" that it be granted permission to operate a trolley freight in Boston. The "L" as required by law, first petitioned the Boston City Council for the necessary authority but was turned down. Then the Railroad Commissioners were petitioned, as under a recent law this board has the power to grant permission, if the local boards refuse, after a hearing.

The hearing Friday was an animated one and from the many cities and towns outside of Boston, who are enjoying the blessings of good express service now obtained by the Trolley freight, came hundreds to speak in its favor. From Quincy there were Frank Fessenden Crane and Henry L. Kincaide as well as J. F. Kemp purchasing agent of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. A letter was also filed from Mayor Shea stating that the operation of trolley freight cars in Quincy had not interfered with the running of passenger cars and that he had received no complaints. Also, that from information that had come to him, it was appreciated by the local business men.

There were about 700 men and women present from all over the state at the hearing. It was stated that there were 86 cities and towns about Boston where the trolley freight was in operation, but that these municipalities were unable to get the best service, for the reason that they were unable to get into Boston.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce also favored the granting of the authority, but submitted certain restrictions which it thought should be embodied in the authority if granted. Many of the large manufacturing concerns of Boston spoke in favor of granting the petition, setting forth the poor service that had been given by local express companies, and the difficulty which they had in getting their packages promptly delivered by the usual companies.

The opposition to the granting of the petition was from the expressmen's league, from George E. Fogg of Braintree, who formerly did about all the work for the Fore River Co., and from some of the improvement societies in Boston.

Considerable surprise was expressed on the part of Chairman Macleod of the Railroad commission that the City of Boston who had denied the petition was not represented at the hearing.

The Elevated company explained its plans, if the permit was granted which in brief was that a freight shed would be erected on its property on Mott street, sufficient to accommodate seven cars.

J. C. B. Smith, of the New England Dry Goods association, said in his opinion nothing would be as great a boom to Boston as the providing of better transportation facilities for freight.

The hearing will be continued Monday.

RED CROSS SEALS.

A man in a Southern city received a legacy of $3.65 during the Red Cross Seal campaign. The following letter shows how he spent his money.

"Dear Sir—I am enclosing a check for $3.65. This check came to me as an inheritance and I want to spend it where I think it could do good, as the donor would have wished. I am therefore writing to ask you to invest in Red Cross Christmas stamps and send to me, as I think this a worthy cause."

We Are Not Jugglers

Our goods are not deceptive in quality. The grocer or market man who sells unreliable foods just for the sake of making a few cents more, is not a safe man to trade with. Unreliable things can't come into this store. We know enough about these to know when they are pure and when they are not. It isn't wholly a question of price with us. We get the best that money will buy, and then sell it with just a fair percentage of profit added.

MUST NOT TAKE TREES FROM RESERVATION

Man Heavily Fined For Having Two In Possession

CUTTING BOUGHS ILLEGAL

Frederick W. Murdock of Cambridge was in court, late Friday, charged with having 3 pine trees from Metropolitan Park in his possession, and also with operating his automobile on restricted roads of the reservation. He was fined $15 on the first charge and $5 on the second.

The Metropolitan Park Police said the pine trees were from 5 to 7 years old. The practice of taking up small pine and hemlock trees is becoming so prevalent in the Blue Hills Reservation that the Park Commissioners have decided to push all prosecutions. Those in charge of the reservation say that the pine and hemlock trees are the only trees that pests have not as yet attacked, and in time to come it is probable, unless the moths and other pests are held in check, the Blue Hills will be covered with nothing but pine and hemlock trees, which have been set out by thousands during the last seven years.

From now till the end of the year it is customary for women and children to go into the reservation to cut off green boughs for Thanksgiving and Christmas decorations. The cutting of these boughs destroys the trees, and in the future anybody found with boughs in their possession in the Blue Hills reservation will be arrested and brought into court.

GIVING GOOD SERVICE.

"The Electric Express can have all of my business," remarked a business man who lives in a city on the Bay State Street Railway Co. lines. "The other day, "he continued, "I ordered some meat and provisions in a Boston market and told them to send them out by Electric Express. I should have had them late that afternoon. When I got home they had not arrived and I called up your office, and was told that the matter would be investigated. Shortly after I was called up and told that no record of having received the articles could be found and that a man had been sent to the market where I purchased the stuff to look it up. He found that it had been sent by another express."

"That is what I call service. It shows that you are interested enough in your customers to go to considerable trouble to see that they are properly cared for. That sort of thing isn't common and ought to be appreciated. When my goods have been sent by Electric Express I have received them in the best of condition and much sooner than I used to by the old way."

This is a sample of the many pleasant things that are being said about this new way of shipping goods and indicates that the management is doing everyhing possible to make it as nearly a perfect service as can be attained.

NEW TOWN HALL.

Moderator B. Herbert Woodsum, Jr., of South Braintree, has appointed a committee to consider the erection of a new Town Hall building and also to consider more up-to-date fire apparatus. The Town Hall question will be considered at the town meeting in March.

The selectmen favor a two-story brick structure with large basement where the town offices would be located as well as the police station. The estimated cost is $70,000.

CENTRAL POLICE STATION.

East Weymouth people are considering the establishment of a central police station, the old lockup having been condemned. In the new station is is proposed to have chief's office, and an emergency room fitted with first aid appliances.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Randall and son and daughter moved this week from the Hardwick house on Spear street into the house recently purchased by Miss Alice White, and located on the same street.

CHRISTMAS NUMBER.

The December Woman's Home Companion is a specially illustrated and beautified Christmas number. It contains aside from the usual illustrations, a great many pictures in color. Stories are included in greater number than usual and several of them are extraordinary presentations of the Christmas spirit—full of action and the best kind of sentiment. Some of the contributors of the fiction are: Jeffery Farnol, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, Norwell Harrison, Owen Oliver and Hulbert Footner.

One of the notable special articles in the number is entitled "What Christmas Might Be." It is an eloquent plea by Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle in New York City.

The special departments, for which the Woman's Home Companion is famous, are filled with good reading—such, for example, as a remarkable article on "The Healthy Baby," by Dr. Roger H. Dennett, a great specialist in New York, "A Girl's Charities at Christmas," "Sam Loyd's Own Puzzle Page," and many other contributions.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Hope in Present Day Hats, Says a Hubbite Artist—A Protagonist of Feminine Styles—Findings is Keepings among Rubbers Stuck in Stadium Mud—Boston Minister Gets Unexpected Commission for Selling Liquor. Should He Keep It?—Arts and Crafts and Suffrage Are in the Lime Light Still.

A story is going the rounds of a pastor in one of the suburbs of greater Boston who received an invitation to send the names of some friends who might appreciate a bottle of good whiskey to a New York liquor house. The preacher, having a sense of humor, sent in the names of a dozen men, mostly members of his church and all supposed to be strictly temperance. He was somewhat surprised a few days later to receive a letter of thanks from the liquor house with a check for six dollars enclosed as his commission on the sales. The gentleman is undecided, so it is said, whether to return the check or turn it over to foreign missions.

The trail of rubbers stuck in the clinging pudding which the enormous travel had beaten up in the adjacent streets was an interesting feature of the muddy contest between Harvard and Dartmouth on the Stadium gridiron. The crowd which hurried to the waiting street cars after the final whistle was blown left many a foothold behind them, and those who lingered until the mass of people had melted away found considerable amusement in counting the stray derelicts along the route. All shapes and sizes, from the large and competent looking protector dragged from the foot of a presumably equally large and competent looking masculine enthusiast, to the pathetic little half-buried storm rubber of size number two and a half. Boys in the neighborhood were quick to seize their opportunities, and several were seen with sticks from which dangled a miscellaneous collection of rescued mismates, many of which were of a newness to indicate that they had been bought for the occasion.

Teaching arts and crafts to the hundreds of Italian girls and women who yearly come to this city to earn meagre wages in the shops is an undertaking lately introduced at the Denison House, one of the Hub's widest known settlement centres. A department has been established under the charge of Miss A. Pearson who is thoroughly conversant with the best in Italian arts and crafts. The object of the innovation is not only to aid the Italian immigrants to add to their scanty wages by pleasant and profitable handicraft pursuits, but is considered extremely valuable from the social standpoint, inasmuch as it brings out the best that is in the aliens, helping them to maintain their love for their fatherland, and creating at the same time a sincere love for the new country. "The aims of the society, which has been named the 'Associazione Italiana di Lavori Manuali ed Arti Applicate,'" says Miss Vida Scudder of Wellesley, head of the board of directors of Denison House, "are to cultivate the artistic ability of the Italian but not to establish industries, to raise the standards of living and of citizenship."

Lo! a champion for us women. A Bostonian of acknowledged wisdom, an art critic and a student of psychological, physiological and various other logical subjects, sees bright rays of reason emanating from the present day madness of modes and medleys. Women's dress has for the past season been a matter of widespread ridicule and criticism, but out of the fever of extremes the artist sees a coming era of sense, comfort and beauty, which will mark the women of this decade as the best dressed of any age. This champion maintains that the tendency is steadily toward simplicity of lines, artistic adaptation of coloring, comfort and freedom from unhealthy "bundling up," and adoption of the style which are economically best despite the united efforts of the manufacturers to set fashions which will consume the greatest number of yards of goods. The popularity of the simple kimono style gowns is an evidence of this economic advantage both as regards quantity of material and time required for making, as is the skirt of simple, graceful lines, which, when not of extreme narrowness, allows the wearer the freedom from annoyance that saves her nerves to an unrealized degree. Some day the women of the land will have the gumption to stand up and wear what they have found to be comfortable, becoming and economical, without regard to the mandates of a few men who depend upon feminine impressionableness for their living.

Active preparations are under way to make the visit of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English militant suffragist, early in December an even more notable affair than that of 1909. There is a little [illegible] about the coming event, too. Mrs. Pankhurst, who is to speak at Tremont Temple on December 5, was scheduled to take as her subject "The Recent Triumph in England," so certain did it seem that suffrage would be granted to women before her coming to this city. As it is, her subject is as yet undecided, but those who heard her two years ago and those who have followed her remarkable career in the English campaign for Votes for Women have no fear but that her remarks will be of intense interest despite the sidetracking of the original intention. Mrs. Pankhurst is extremely indignant over the action of Premier Asquith who, she contends, has insulted the intelligence of the English women, and she keenly regrets that she is not on the scene to assist in the effort to introduce the bill. Her tour through this country has been one of triumph far outreaching the enthusiasm aroused by her first visit The Massachusetts suffragists are planning sandwich parades, automobile parades, a luncheon at the Vendome and various festivities in celebration of Mrs. Pankhurst's advent and the indications are that Tremont Temple will be far too small to hold the suffragists and others who have come to look upon her with an admiration akin to that of her countrywomen.

Suffragism has again invaded the ranks ofthe Boston opera company, and interest waxes lively. Mme. Ieszka Swartz has been elected to the campaign committee of the Massachusetts association, and Signor Constantino, the popular tenor, also has declared himself in favor of suffrage, and rumor has it that he has admitted he wouldn't be a bit afraid to marry a suffragist.

GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY.

Miss Whittier of Cambridge vice president of Eastern Massachusetts Diocesan Council of the Girls' Friendly society, gave a most interesting and highly instructive talk before St. Chrysostom's branch Friday evening in the parish rooms. Miss Whittier gave very adequately the origin and the strength of the society as one of the societies of the Episcopal church, its objects, and its usefulness. She told what it was doing in Massachusetts and America as a whole, and what it could do everywhere, and she dwelt on what membership means to those who belong to so extensive a society.

Anty Drudge Discovers Why George Has No Appetite.

Anty Drudge—"What? eating dinner in this steamy, smelly kitchen? I should think it would take your appetite away."

Mrs. Slow—"I have noticed that George doesn't eat much on washdays."

Anty Drudge—"How can he! Why don't you use Fels-Naptha? Boiling water isn't necessary; and you'll be through your wash plenty of time to have dinner in the dining-room. Or if you prefer the kitchen, there will be no steam or bad smells."

Talk about energy!

A half cake of Fels-Naptha soap can display more energy in getting rid of dirt in half an hour than an able-bodied woman can in half a day.

But there's this difference: Much of the woman's energy is wasted.

When she rubs clothes hard on a washboard she wears out the clothes in trying to rub out the dirt.

Fels-Naptha concentrates its energy on the dirt—dissolves it into tiny particles that are easily rinsed away—without harming the most delicate fabric.

And it does this in cool or lukewarm water, without hot water or boiling, summer or winter.

Do you prefer to supply the dirt-removing energy yourself or to use that stored up in a cake of Fels-Naptha?

If you choose the easier and better way, follow directions on the red and green wrapper.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Seleo calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

"Of course, according to your lights, to your formula of the rule of the strong"—

"Yes," Sheldon interrupted, "but it was according to the formula of the rule of the weak that Packard ruled. And what was the result? I am still alive. Packard is dead. He was unswervingly kind and gentle to his boys, and his boys waited till one day he was down with fever. His head is over on Malaita now. They carried away two whaleboats as well filled with the loot of the store. Then there was Captain Mackenzie of the ketch Minota. He believed in kindness and paraded around the deck without even a revolver on him. He was tomahawked. His head remains in Malaita. It was suicide. So was Packard's finish suicide. You must understand one thing, Berande, bar none, is by far the worst plantation in the Solomons so far as the labor is concerned. And how it came to be so proves your point. The previous owners of Berande were not discreetly kind. They were a pair of unadulterated brutes. One was a down east Yankee, as I believe they are called, and the other was a guzzling German.

"They were slave drivers. To begin with, they bought their labor from Johnny Bo-blowed, the most notorious recruiter in the Solomons. He is working out a ten years' sentence in Fiji now, for the wanton killing of a black boy. During his last days here he had made himself so obnoxious that the natives on Malaita would have nothing to do with him. The only way he could get recruits was by harrying to the spot whenever a murder or series of murders occurred. The murderers were usually only too willing to sign on and get away to escape vengeance. Down here they call such escapes 'pier head jumps.' There is suddenly a roar from the beach, and a nigger runs down to the water pursued by clouds of spears and arrows. Of course, Johnny Bo-blowed's whaleboat is lying ready to pick him up. In his last days Johnny got nothing but pier head jumps.

"When the first owners of Berande bought his recruits—a hard bitten gang of murderers. They were all five year boys. Well, that's the gang of murderers we've got on our hands now. Of course, some are dead, some have been killed, and there are others serving sentences at Tulagi. Very little clearing did those first owners do, and less planting. It was war all the time. They had one manager killed. One of the partners had his shoulder slashed nearly off by a cane knife. The other was speared on two different occasions. They were chased away—literally chased away—by their own niggers. And along came poor Hughie and me, two new chums, to take hold of that hard bitten gang. We did not know the situation, and we had bought Berande, and there was nothing to do but hang on and muddle through somehow.

"At first we made the mistake of indiscreet kindness. We tried to rule by persuasion and fair treatment. The niggers concluded that we were afraid. Then came the day when Hughie reprimanded one of the boys, and was nearly killed by the gang. The only thing that saved him was the number on top of him, which enabled me to reach the spot in time.

"Then began the rule of the strong hand. It was either that or quit, and we had sunk about all our money into the venture, and we could not quit. And besides, our pride was involved. We had started out to do something, and we were so made that we just had to go on with it. Do you know, we have been unable to get white men in. We've offered the managership to half a dozen. I won't say they were afraid, for they were not. But they did not consider it healthy—at least that is the way it was put by the last one who declined our offer. So Hughie and I did the managing ourselves."

"And when he died you were prepared to go on all alone!" Joan cried, with shining eyes.

"I thought I'd muddle through. And now, Miss Lackland, please be charitable when I seem harsh, and remember that the situation is unparalleled down here. We've got a bad crowd, and we're making them work."

Joan nodded but remained silent. She was too occupied in glimpsing the vision of the one lone white man as she had first seen him, helpless from fever, a collapsed wraith in a steamer chair, who, up to the last heart beat, by some strange alchemy of race, was pledged to mastery.

"It is a pity," she said. "But the white man has to rule, I suppose."

"I don't like it," Sheldon assured her. "To save my life I can't imagine how I ever came here. But here I am, and I can't run away."

"Blind destiny of race," she said, faintly smiling. "We whites have been land robbers and sea robbers from remotest time. It is in our blood, I guess, and we can't get away from it."

"I never thought about it so abstractly," he confessed. "I've been too busy puzzling over why I came here."

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent society of the Memorial Congregational church on Wednesday was of unusual interest.

Mrs. W. F. Cummings of the Christmas gift committee reported more money from her table and Mrs. H. D. Gearwar and Mrs. T. W. Davison gave reports of more progress on their tables of goods sold since the fair, so that the full amount from the fair work will be about $1,300.

At the close of the meeting Rev. T. W. Davison spoke of the earnest efforts, and self denial put forth by all the women, and suggested that the men were glad to let the women have all the honors, and that men were valiant losers. He also assured the Ladies' society that the men had done noble work in the last year, and would do just as much this year.

In closing his remarks he presented Mrs. Sarah Butler, president of the Ladies' society with a hand painted frappe dish from the china committee. He assured Mrs. Butler that while the dish came from the china committee all the ladies put their good wishes into it even though they did not have the chance to contribute towards it.

The note accompanying the present read: "It gives us pleasure to present to you this little piece of decorated china in loving appreciation of your Christian loyalty and service as our president, and as a member of our church.

"We feel that you are an inspiration to every worker, an honor to the church and society, and a blessing in God's service to show the beauty and dignity of true Christian womanhood. Ever yours in Christian service, Mrs. T. W. Davison, Mrs. A. H. Hall, Mrs. George Hight, Jr., Mrs. C. F. Letteney, Mrs. E. E. Willey, Mrs. W. F. Blake, Miss Caroline Hermann, Mrs. Alva Beede, Mrs. B. F. Thomas, Mrs. Linden T. Gurney, J. H. Houston and Rev. T. W. Houston.

After the presentation refreshments were served by Mrs. W. F. Cummings, Mrs. Walter Hill, Mrs. Dr. Bartlett and Mrs. Rogers.

One of the Strongest Values In My Store Are

MEN'S SUITS

AT .....

$15.00

Not that these are the only strong values, but this price is popular—seems that men, and especially the young men like to pay $15. I'm convinced that they are the best looking—finest fitting—the longest wearing suits in Quincy. They come in rich grays, handsome browns and plain colors. They are in good taste for business or pleasure and tailored so thoroughly they'll hold their style and shapeliness throughout the course of wear.

Other Good Suits at

$10, 12.50, 14.50, 16.50

Remarkable Overcoats at $15.00

The price tag is the only resemblance these overcoats bear to average $15.00 qualities. We'd be fair in marking these overcoats $20 to $22, and you'd be glad to pay that much for them. You can tramp all over Boston and you will not find values that will equal them.

The annual ball and benefit fair of Mozzola's orchestra, will be held in Malnati hall, Wednesday evening, Nov. 29th. A special program has also been arranged for the afternoon of Thanksgiving day, in connection with the event.

The third annual dance of the Adams A. A., an event which is looked forward to with great anxiety by the younger people, will occur in Alpha hall on Tuesday evening, December 5th. A prize is to be given for the couple deemed the best "glide waltzers," in connection with the event.

THANKSGIVING APPEAL.

Thanksgiving is coming and the appeals to this department are many from the poor of our city to send them a basket on that day. Last year we delivered over ninety baskets, the size of the basket depending on the number of persons in the family, each basket containing a turkey or chicken, potatoes, celery, cranberries and turnip.

December 24, 1887, Cotton Centre Johnson bequeathed to the Town of Quincy, two thousand dollars, the interest of which was to be used to supply turkeys to the worthy poor of Quincy. The interest amounts to eighty dollars and this sum is very inadequate owing to the growth of the city.

I, therefore, appeal to your charity to make the poor people happy on Thanksgiving Day.

James H. Elcock,
Overseer of the Poor.

Nothing doing by the City Council Monday evening. The next meeting will be held the night before the city election.

GANZEL PLAYED IN GREAT FORM

GREAT GAMES SCHEDULED FOR TONIGHT

Three games are scheduled in the Y. M. C. A. League tonight the first commencing at 7.45.

Harvard vs. Columbia will be the opening attraction and a hot battle ought to result, for a win for Capt. Parker's team will put Harvard in a tie for first place, while Columbia under Capt. Wilson, will endeavor to wipe out the disgrace of the defeat of their last game with Penn. Columbia has been greatly strengthened by the addition of Robert Booth who was the star shooter of last year's team. Altstein will also be in the line up this evening and Columbia's game ought to be greatly improved.

Capt. Parker has had his men out for secret practice, however, and says that there is nothing to it, but a win for Harvard.

The 2nd game will prove to be the star attraction of the evening, if the men of the Army and Navy teams play up to their form. Capt. Brooks of the Army, has had three weeks in which to coach his men and perfect his team play and he promises to show the audience some rare signal work. "Jack" Melville the popular captain of "Navy," has also been hard at work and to strengthen his men has had them out twice a week, for cross country runs, etc.

Yale will endeavor to repeat its victory of two weeks ago when it had a "practice" game, and "Toodie" Dineen says that "Eddie" Newcomb of Tech will wish that he never saw a basket ball after tonight's battle. Tom Djerf of Tech, has been resting quietly at the "Stillhouse" Infirmary since their last game and now that his right hand has fully recovered, he promises to show his opponent that he can "come-back."

TO VISIT QUINCY QUARRIES.

So successful was the first of the geological excursions conducted by the natural history committee of the Milton Education society, that the committee has decided to undertake the second excursion at an early date. Saturday, Dec. 9, is the day chosen, and the party will visit the West Quincy granite quarries to study the rocks of the granitic series, an introduction to which was gained in the examination of the contact of granite with the Cambrian slate at Braintree. All interested persons are invited, irrespective of membership in the Education society.

You need the Ledger every day.

SENSATIONAL RAID MADE BY POLICE SUNDAY NIGHT

Squad In Charge of Inspector Goodhue Clean Out Rooms of Local Club

Liquor And Gaming Outfit Seized By Officers

A large squad of police under acting Inspector Goodhue, made a sensational raid, early Sunday evening, on what is known as the Quincy Associates who have rooms on the upper floor of the Keating building at the corner of Washington and Canal streets. Every year about city election time, this club becomes very active and it has been the custom to hold a rally the night before election at which candidates for office, irrespective of party are invited to attend. In fact among many they are more commonly known as beer parties. The raid Sunday night, however, will probably result in this year's party being called off.

Early Sunday evening, Officer Dhooge in citizen's dress, was posted at the rear door of the club rooms, while Officer Johnson took a position near the front entrance where he could watch without being seen. It was learned that the police auto, with a squad of officers, would arrive on the scene at 7 o'clock and as it came round the corner its object was suspected by the man on watch and a rush was made for the rear door. They were held in check however by Officer Dhooge who had to use his night stick in a vigorous manner.

TOOK HEMLOCK BOUGHS ARE FINED $5

Miss Mary C. McIntire of Wabeno street, Roxbury, will not use hemlock boughs for the decoration of her home, on the occasion of her wedding, as planned, for the beautiful boughs that she and her friend Edna McKinnin had gathered for this occasion, were confiscated by the Metropolitan Park officers. The two young ladies came to Milton, last Friday, on an electric car and in answer to their query of the street car conductor if they could get some boughs in the reservation, the conductor said yes. They gathered quite an armful, when an officer appeared on the scene.

They told the officer their story and Miss Mary also said that she was about to be married and thought to decorate her home with the boughs, thinking that she had a right to take them.

Te officer took the boughs and summoned the girls into court this morning. They entered a plea of not guilty and the court imposed a fine of $5.

DORMITORY MEN START NEW ORGANIZATION

Friday evening, a new organization was perfected at the Y. M. C. A. In an endeavor to provide a social life for the men in the dormitories, a committee of ladies consisting of Mrs. A. M. Thompson, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. D. L. Gordon, Misses Parks, Gilson, Spaulding and Bromley provided a bountiful dinner for the men.

Promptly at seven o'clock the men sat down with President Chase and William G. Shaw chairman of the House committee. That they enjoyed the "feed" was testified to by the way in which it disappeared from the table. When the ice cream and pie had at last melted away, President Chase called the men to order with a few well chosen words. He introduced Mr. Shaw who expressed his appreciation at being permitted to dine with the men.

The read object of the meeting was then set forth by General Secretary Bromley. At the close of his remarks it was proposed that a committee be selected to bring in the names for a committee who should have charge of the future gatherings. This committee consisted of Messrs. Wardwell, Meek and Wilcox. They retired and brought in the following names for a committee, they to choose their own chairman: Messrs. Campbell, Armstrong, Meek, Wardwell and Drinkwater.

The gathering finally broke up to inspect the wireless outfit in the room of Messrs. Campbell and Armstrong. Here they found a well equipped plant and were able to hear messages from Cape Cod and elsewhere.

This organization is going to mean much to the men living in the building.

The funeral of William P. Moodey was held Sunday afternoon from his late residence 123 School street at 2.30 and was very largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. James Mathewson of the Water Street Presbyterian church. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

THOMAS P. HALEY BURIED.

The funeral of Thomas P. Haley was held this morning from his late residence at 346 Adams street and was followed by a High Mass of Requiem at St. Mary's church, which was celebrated by Rev. Henry T. Grady. The Gregorian mass was sung by the regular choir under the direction of Miss Mary McKay, organist. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

NEW COURT INSTITUTED

Order of Foresters Hold Services In Alpha Hall

THE SPEAKERS

A new court of the Massachusetts Catholic order of Foresters, was instituted Sunday afternoon at Alpha hall in the presence of a large gathering of the High officers of the order and by many brothers of the order from courts in Quincy and vicinity.

The new court, which will be known as St. Kevin's court, is composed of residents of Atlantic, and its institution was due to the good work of Cornelius M. Duggan, the High Chief Ranger, who is a resident of that section of the city.

High Chief Ranger Duggan was assisted in the institution of the new court by High Vice Chief Ranger, James Digman of New Bedford, High Senior Conductor E. M. Clancy of Watertown, High Junior Conductor C. F. Buckley of South Boston, High Treasurer D. T. Maguire of Haverhill, and High Medical Examiner Dr. Francis J. Hanley of Whitman.

The officers of the new court are as follows:

Chief Ranger—T. A. Keohane.

Vice Chief Ranger—John Hayes.

Recording Secretary—Miss Marie Duggan.

Financial Secretary—Henry J. Granahan.

Treasurer—Dr. M. S. Sweeney.

After the ceremonies of institution and installation there were addresses by Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Sacred Heart church, Atlantic; Mayor William T. Shea, ex-Mayor William P. Hayes of Springfield, Chief Ranger Dorkey of Quincy Court, Mrs. Alice Ash of St. Ambrose Court, Chief Ranger, Joseph McNeally of St. Francis' Court, Chief Ranger of McMannon of Neponset Court, Mrs. T. P. Flannigan of St. Louise Court, Past Chief Ranger Riley of Dorchester Court and Mrs. Della K. McKeever of St. Joseph's Court.

MR. ANDERSON COMPLETELY SURPRISED

A number of his friends visited the home of Frank W. Anderson, on Squantum street, last Saturday evening and took him by complete surprise. No sooner had the gathering of the merrymakers convened, when Mr. Anderson was presented with a handsome rug. He responded touchingly to the presentation of the gift.

The remainder of the evening was then taken up by songs, recitations and joke making. The Squantumites turned out in large numbers and a most enjoyable evening was observed.

BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. George Pleadwell of Cheriton road are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son born November twentieth.

The first service will be held in the Park and Downs church Thanksgiving morning at 10 o'clock. There will be special music.

The Epworth League social in the Atlantic M. E. church, was largely attended and the elocutionist from Boston was well received.

A rally in the interest of James E. Wall, mayoralty candidate will be held tonight in Malnati's hall. The speakers will include besides the mayoralty candidate, the candidates for councilmen-at-large, candidates for Ward council and well known representative citizens.

The union no-license rally of Atlantic will be held in Memorial church Sunday evening. Mr. Theophilus King of Quincy will be the principal speaker, followed by Deacon W. F. Blake and others. W. F. Cummings will act as chairman of the meeting.

The Thanksgiving service of Memorial church, Atlantic, will be held at 7 o'clock in the morning. This was considered the most advantageous hour for such a service, as it will be convenient for those who have to prepare dinner and it will not break into the family circle in the evening.

POPULAR RAILROADER DIED SUNDAY

Thomas J. Joyce Passed Away At Local Hospital

SICK SEVERAL WEEKS

Thomas J. Joyce, one of the oldest employees of the street railway and very popular among the patrons of the road died Sunday afternoon at the City Hospital after an illness of several weeks of typhoid fever and pneumonia. He was about 30 years of age and leaves a widow.

Mr. Joyce was vice president of the local street railway employees' union. He was also a member of Division 22 A. O. H. and a member of the St. Mary's C. T. A. society. He was a son of Michael Joyce of West Quincy.

Mr. Joyce, who resided on Putnam street, had been employed by the street railway as a conductor for many years and had run on every route of the city. He was always obliging and accommodating and therefore made many friends among the patrons of the road.

The Charles Pratts who have been occupying the Faxon estate, corner Hancock and Beale streets since the early summer, moved last week into their new home on Fenno street near Hancock street.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

NOTICE.

Thursday Thanksgiving day being a legal holiday the office of the Quincy Daily Ledger will be closed all day.

The flurry in the paper market may be caused by the large quantity used by President Taft in writing his message.

A Georgia court finds it is a crime to kill the base ball umpire. How do they expect bleacher seats can be sold under such restrictions?

As a good start has been made in the meat packers' cases, we have hopes that it will be possible to jail the grandchildren of the present defendants.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT PLAN.

The Metropolitan Plan Commission, created under the authority of a resolve enacted by the Massachusetts Legislature of 1911, will report to the next Legislature on the need and practicability of a plan for the Metropolitan District, with its 38 cities and towns. If it reports that a metropolitan plan is feasible, it will also recommend a method by which such a plan may be created and carried out. The report will be one of the most important to come before the legislature of 1912.

This Commission has been at work since July. It has studied city planning as it is practised in England and Europe and as it is beginning to be practised in the United States. It has investigated the powers of authorities that have carried out city planning projects. It has reviewed previous Massachusetts reports that have to do with subjects related to city planning, and the authority of the various state commissions. It has brought its own knowledge of city planning to bear on the subject of its coming report.

The Commission has now reached the point where it desires to hear what the citizens of the Metropolitan District has to say. It wishes their aid in the preparation of its report. It is ready to call upon the people to present their opinions as ti how a plan may best be secured and developed. For that purpose the Commission will give public hearings. The first of those hearings will be held at the State House in Room 431, Nov. 28 at 4 P. M. Any one who so desires may attend this hearing.

Here, in brief, is the proposition that today confronts the people of the Metropolitan District:—"A city cannot attain its greatest efficiency, cannot provide the best living conditions for its citizens, without a plan. No more can a group of intimatly related, interdependent cities and towns give their inhabitants the most adequate system of traffic highways and local street systems, the most advantageous health conditions, the best transportation systems, fire protection, building regulations, and water and sewerage systems, without an orderly plan for their development. A practicable plan, properly followed, means for any community or group of communities better progress commercially, industrially, financially and socially. A plan is a sound investiment that will pay generous interest both in dollars and cents and in a healthier, happier, more efficient and prosperous citizenship."

"The Metropolitan District of 30 years ago had a population that did not exceed the present population of the City of Boston. Today the Metropolitan District has a population of approximately 1,500,000. It has increased over 111 per cent. in three decades. By 50 years from now there will probably be from two and a half to three millions of people within a 10 mile radius of the State House. And yet, the Metropolitan District has no comprehensive, carefully prepared plan for its certain growth. Such a plan is needed. Meanwhile citizens have for years urged the creation of a plan and authority to carry it out. Their endeavors have resulted as yet in parts of plans for parts of the District."

Today a State Commission is at work trying to discover the best method of procuring a plan for the whole Metropolitan District, and the best method of applying that plan. It is a definite and conscious attempt to plan Boston and the surrounding communities. If the people really desire a plan, they now have the opportunity to get one. It is a problem of vast public concern. The members of the Commission are giving a great deal of their time and strength to the solution of this problem. Other citizens may well give an hour or two of their time and thought. Do you, as a citizen, therefore, go to the State House Tuesday afternoon and tell the Commission briefly and concisely whether or not you believe in a plan for the Metropolitan District and how you believe it can best be secured and realized.

THANKSGIVING HOME COMING.

Tur holidays are very different from what those who made them intended they should be. If George Washington returned to earth on a modern July 4, particularly a few years ago, he would be more apt to think that the occasion commemorated the birthday of the king of the Cannibal islands than that of our nation.

So the old Puritan who should happen around to our big Thanksgiving dinners would be apt to think the feast was planned in honor of Bacchus or some other Lord of Gluttony.

Thanksgiving is still a time when sons and daughters and cousins gather at the old oaken bucket and dream a bit of the days that were. As such it is one of the finest of our public occasions. Originally purely a New England institution, it spread through the Northern states about 1830. The South took it up later, Virginia leading the way in 1855, and eight Southern states in 1856. Though the war interrupted its observance in that section, yet recognition of the holiday was resumed subsequently. As a day of religious emotion and generous hospitality it has appealed to warm hearted Dixie.

Many families are finding, however, that there are not the home comings that were commonly seen twenty years or more ago. Even so recently as that, the boys were apt to seek a life work near the old home. When Thanksgiving day came there was a wide circle of cousins within reach of a day's drive behind old Dobbin. And how the paternal roof tree would clatter with blind man's buff and the Virginia reel!

Today comparatively few boys remain very near the old home. It is regarded as less of a journey to go from New York to California today than into the next state thirty years ago. In thousands and thousands of families, where the merriment of scores used to ring through the old farm home on Thanksgiving night, the occasion this year will see only a half melancholy little group about the dying embers of the hearth fire.

But on the other hand, with the advance of prosperity, people travel longer distances to gather at the old hearth stone. And in countless homes there will be a glad welcome for sons and daughters that have travelled hundreds of miles to greet the old friends again.

TRAGEDY AT E. WEYMOUTH

Takes Woman's Life And Then His Own

CRIME PREMEDITATED

Weymouth, Mass., Nov. 27.—Mrs. Ida Bates, 55 years old, was shot and instantly killed by Charles F. Lander, aged 65, who committed suicide a moment afterward. The tragedy took place in a flat where Mrs. Bates lived with her daughter, Mrs. Archie Price, and her granddaughter.

Very little could be learned about the cause of the murder and suicide. Mrs. Bates came to this town from Brockton and was employed in a shoe factory. Lander lived in Campello.

Medical Examiner Fraser found, upon examining Lander's clothing, letters and a photograph which seem to prove that the man premeditated shooting Mrs. Bates and himself.

One letter was marked, "To be opened at once," and it was found to contain directions for the disposition of Lander's body. A photograph of Mrs. Bates was found in one of the dead man's pockets and on the back was written: "This woman was the cause of my death. She could have saved my life and would not." It was signed by Lander.

PUSH THE GOOD WORK.

Inspector Goodhue and his men did good work Sunday night and that such is appreciated was shown by the demonstration afforded the officers after successfully putting the "club" out of business. That too much liquor is coming into Quincy is not doubted by anyone. That the police officials are with the better element in seeing that the regulations regarding the liquar traffic are enforced is also a fact. It remains however that something is materially wrong with prohibition that closes public places but allows rum to be hauled into the city by the cargo and dispensed behind closed doors and windows to young and old alike in the secret confines of some gambling joint.

The "pony express" can have a "kink" put into its business and pretty soon, too, if some member of that worthy league, which has done so much in the interests of temperance here, will take up the matter with the proper authorities of having some sort of a check put on the destination of certain packages. It's merely a hint, but it will work wonders.

Members of the "No-License-League," there is not much danger of having saloons here. Turn the "spot" light for a while on its right hand man—the pony express.

MORSE IN A HOSPITAL

Four Trained Nurses Will Look After Banker Convict

Atlanta, Nov. 27.—Charles W. Morse, the New York banker, exchanged his bare cell at the federal prison here for a more commodious ward in the army hospital at Fort McPherson Sunday. The change was ordered by Attorney General Wickersham, who recently made a special visit to Atlanta to investigate the condition of Morse.

Morse made the trip of several miles in an ambulance. According to a statement given out by Warden Meyer at the penitentiary, Morse is suffering from kidney trouble.

In his new quarters Morse will be under the care of Major Baker and a staff of four trained nurses who have just arrived from New York. His ward is cheerful and comfortable and he will have the privilege of receiving friends and relatives whenever he wishes.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!

A gentleman well and favorably known in City Square business circles is Eben W. Sheppard, manager of the Quincy branch of the firm of J. F. Sheppard & Sons dealers in coal, wood and ice. He was born in Greenwich, N. J., May 7, 1860, and soon after removed to Braintree with his parents. Here he attended the public schools, graduating in 1870. Twelve years later he came to Quincy as manager of the Quincy branch of the buisness established by his father.

He represented the Fifth Norfolk district in the state legislature in 1900 and 1901, and then retired from active political life, although he has continued to take an active interest in political campaigns.

He is a great lover of all kinds of sports, particularly yachting and is a life member of the Quincy Yacht club which he joined in 1886 and served as its Commodore in 1902, '03, and '04, and as Rear Commodore in 1906 and 1907. He is at present a member of the Executive committee. He was also for a time, the Quincy Yacht club representative at the Challenge cup races at Marblehead. He was—not what is sometimes called a member of the arm chair fleet, but sailed in many of the clubs races, sailing in his father's yacht.

He was the first president of the Quincy Retail Merchants' association which flourished for a time and is also a member of the Board of Trade. He is the present President of the Granite City club, Quincy's one business men's association. He is also affiliated with Rural lodge A. F. & A. M., St. Stephens R. A. chapter, Quincy Commandery K. T. and Aleppo Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THOMAS PAGE DESCENDANTS.

Editor Ledger:

Can you give me any information regarding the descendants of Thomas Page who lived in Leominster, Mass., until about 1781. Some of his descendants are supposed to have located in your locality, though possibly those now living there are not named Page, but may be Wright, Guernsey, Dunn or some other name which married into the Page family at an early date.

It appears that owing to the death of other heirs, a large property amounting to several million dollars reverts to this branch of the family, and has been lying dormant in the hands of the trustees and executors for many years past.

It is supposed that Thomas Page lived until about 1830, but it now becomes important to trace the time and place of his death and names of his descendants. Any information will be greatly appreciated.

Charles N. Page.

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 27, 1911.

SENSATIONAL RAID

At the same time, Inspector Goodhue with Officer Johnson and the squad from the police auto rushed up the front stairway and broke into the club room where ten young men, who would have given considerable to have been elsewhere, were found. They were all well known to the police who took their names and they will be summoned into court on the charge of being present where gaming implements were found.

The police confiscated several packs of cards, two tables coverd with white cloths, which it is alleged were used for dice throwing, cues and pool balls, empty glasses, beer bottles and three cases of beer.

The officers then went down stairs to the office of the Boston & Quincy express and seized fifteen cases of beer and two barrels of beer.

While the raid was in progress, a crowd of nearly five hundred gathered in the street in the vicinity and excitement was at a high pitch. As the officers drove away with their load the crowd gave them three cheers for their good work.

The last sensational raid at these same premises was made several years ago and came about through one of the victims giving the place away. This man, who has since left the city, rushed into City Square one night and said that he had been robbed of $46 at the club by the use of loaded dice. A raid was immediately pulled off and several persons were arrested and some loaded dice seized.

When the police entered the rooms of the Associates they were surprised at the elegant way in which they were furnished. The floor was covered with a heavy carpet, while about the room were a piano, pool table, stuffed chairs and several tables that were covered with heavy cloths which would prevent any sound coming from them, the cloth being covered with white canvas. There was also an elaborate system of electric bells and speaking tubes and the doors were locked and well guarded. Over the windows were double curtains so that no light could be seen from without.

In fact the elaborateness of the joint was somewhat of a surprise to the police. The raid had been well planned, and even the officers, when they left the police station at 6.55 did not know their destination. The men on guard saw the officers approaching from the front and hoped that they could escape by the rear door, for which they made a rush. Officer Dhooge however used his night stick to good advantage and drove them back and not a man escaped.

After the raid up stairs, the officers went down where it is said that they obtained possession of the private books of the express company and were again surprised at what they gleaned from these records.

The case will probably come up in court some day this week and there will doubtless be some surprises when the names of the parties caught in the raid are known.

One of the most surprising things, was the quickness with which a crowd of spectators assembled in the street outside. This crowd was not confined to men but contained many women who were the ones that started the cheering for the police.

Q.—Are we to understand from James v, 14-16, that it is possible for the "Elders of the Church," at the present day, to heal the sick by prayer and anointing with oil?

Answer.—The following is a more literal translation of the verses cited than that in the Authorized Version: "Is any weak among you (weak in the faith, morally and spiritually weak or ailing) let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the wearied one (weary in well doing; the one who is in a "backslidden" condition. The prayers and the words of exhortation and encouragement to righteousness on the part of the "elder" brothers in the church will have the effect of raising up, stimulating and reviving the spiritually weary and fainting one.) And the Lord shall raise him up, and though he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him. Therefore confess your sins one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Evidently the weakness and faintness are spiritual, and the restoration and healing also spiritual. There is no instance mentioned in the Scriptures of where the Apostles or their associates healed each other of their physical maladies or ailments. When Timothy was afflicted with indigestion, the elders were not called in to pray over him; but the Apostle counseled the use of a little wine for his infirmity. The Apostle Paul himself was afflicted with painfully weak eyes (a "thorn in the flesh") and prayed for relief, but his prayer was not granted. From the foregoing we conclude that Christians are nowhere authorized to practice "faith healing" amongst themselves.

A union service to which all members of Wollaston churches are invited will be held at the Congregational church at 5 o'clock on Thanksgiving afternoon. The Rev. L. H. Bugbee of Malden, will deliver an address on temperance and the music will be of a high order.

The first meeting of the month of the Girls' Friendly society regularly begins with a service in the church lasting about thirty minutes. At the service next Friday it is planned to institute a senior members' branch to consist of those whose membership in the society for five years has been faithful. To this and to all the services on the first Friday evening of the month all interested in the society are welcome.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

In exchange with Rev. Carl G. Horst, the Rev. Louis C. Dethlefs of Hyde Park, occupied the pulpit of the Wollaston Unitarian church. He chose for his Scripture reading the 42d and the 139th psalms—and his reading of them was searching and impressive. Taking as his text, "Enter thou into thine inner chamber, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father in secret," he spoke with reverence and fine appreciation of those deep needs of the human soul which makes necessary a sense of intimacy with God. It was a tender and sympathetic call to those whose hearts are burdened with sin and sorrow, to lay aside the reserve which all must carry in the daily contact with their fellowmen, and to enter into the silence and solitude where the consciousness of God's presence brings help and healing.

The love and yearing care of earthly parents, was used as a faint, foreshadowing example of the profound love and forgiveness of the Father of all, the sense of whose constant presence may penetrate to the inner consciousness of every soul who leaves the noise of busy life for a few moments each day to find, in silent communion with God, a sweet sense of his Fatherhood.

Our Young People's Religious Union was well represented at the Boston Federation of Y. P. R. U's, which was held at the First Unitarian church in Hyde Park, Saturday afternoon and evening.

"The Journalism of Toady, its Merits and Defects" was the subject of a fine address by the well known journalist, George P. Morris, at the monthly meeting of the Boston Unitarian Ministerial Union today.

Our church unites with others in Wollaston in a union Thanksgiving churches in a union Thanksgiving service Thursday, at 5 P. M. Special music by a large orchestra, baritone solos by Adam Walker of Boston, and sermon by the Rev. L. H. Bugbee, D. D. of Malden on "The Larger Thanksgiving."

The Unitarian Church-Helpers have voted to present to the church a bulletin board to be placed in the vestibule.

The Christmas sale under the auspices of the Women's Alliance, will be held in the vestry, Friday Dec. 8. Mrs. Paul E. Brobek, Mrs. David T. Whiton and Mrs. Roy C. Baker have charge of the Salamagrundi table. In connection with the sale, Dec. 8, the Women's Alliance will publish a cook book.

The monthly church supper and social and entertainment last week attracted a large attendance. These occasions furnish a splendid opportunity for better acquaintance with the new comers into our parish.

At the Y. P. R. U. meeting, Sunday evening, Walter E. Simmons will speak on "The Spirit of Christmas." The devotional service will be led by Arvin Page. The object of the union is to cultivate the devotional spirit, to help one another as far as possible in pure and noble living, and to lend our aid and support to our church.

The people of Wollaston greatly appreciate the courtesy of the ministers in arranging their vesper services so as not to have them occur o nthe same Sunday. The vespers in the Unitarian church are held on the second Sunday in the month; in the Methodist church on the third Sunday, and in the Congregational on the fourth Sunday. It was the Rev. Frank Wright Pratt, minister of our church from Jan. 1, 1900 to Feb. 28,1905, that first suggested the most ideal hour for a union Thanksgiving service—namely Thanksgiving day at 5 P. M.

New members will be voted in at the parish committee meeting, Friday evening.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services were held in Christ church yesterday as follows: 8 A. M. Holy Communion, 10.30 Morning prayer, Confirmation 12.05 Sunday School and Galahad Brotherhood, 7.30 Special Harvest Thanksgiving Service. All services were largely attended.

At the morning service the Rt. Rev. Wm. Lawrence, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Massachusetts made his annual visitation to the parish for confirmation. The class which was, a large one was presented to the Bishop by the rector, Rev. R. E. Armstrong, for the sacred laying on of hands. At its conclusion the Bishop spoke a few words of advice to the members of the class and then delivered the address. He spoke first of the marked improvement in the appearance of the interior of the church since his last visit. He then took as his key-note, the song of the Angels at the birth of Christ which was "Glory to God in the Highest and on Earth peace, good will toward men." He dwelt mainly on "International peace." Gov. Foss's Thanksgiving Proclamation was read at both services by the rector.

At 12.05 the Sunday School and Galahad Brotherhood met but as it was the Bishop's desire to see the whole school together, the lessons were omitted and a union service was held in the church. Here he delivered a brief address to the school.

In the evening, the sermon was omitted and Maxfield's cantata "The Bountiful Giver" was delightfully rendered under the efficient direction of Professor Wrigley. There was a "Processional" by the choir. The soloists were Stanley Ross soprano, William Carter, tenor and Mr. McLeod bass. Many were the exclamations of the delight at the close of the service.

On Thanksgiving Day two services will be held, 7.30 Holy Communion and 9.10 Morning prayer and address.

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. William I. Lawrance, president of the Unitarian Sunday school society, occupied the pulpit at the First church, Sunday morning and preached an eloquent and able sermon on the harvest season. The service was largely attended, many young people being in the congregation.

The regular session of the Sunday school was omitted, but at 4 o'clock a harvest service was held in the chapel Charles H. Johnson had charge of the service which was very interesting.

The platform was covered with fruit and vegetables that had been contributed and which were, this morning, destributed among the poor families of the city outside of the church, care being taken to select families with children. A collection was also taken and the proceeds will be used in the purchase of meat to go with the baskets.

A special basket of fruit was sent to the pastor, Rev. Ellery C. Butler, who is ill. The committee in charge of the distribution of the baskets are Miss Mary Holden, Miss Maria Whitney and Miss Abby Wood.

The exercises at the festival included the reading of the Governor's Thanksgiving proclamation by Mrs. A. Isabel Davis, an address by Rev. Mr. Lawrence and special musical numbers by the Sunday school.

Rev. Arthur B. Whitney of Plymouth spoke this afternoon at the meeting of the Alliance. His subject was "Historical and Religious Significance of Thanksgiving."

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

The usual services were held yesterday at the First Presbyterian church, as follows:—

Morning service at 10.30 Mr. Matheson, pastor of the church, preached at both mornings and evening service He took his text in the morning from the book of Acts and had a short talk for the children before the sermon.

The Bible school was held at 12 o'clock. At the close of the lesson Mr. Clark, Mr. Matheson and Mr. Wilson spoke a few words on Thanksgiving and things we have to be thankful for.

The prayer circle at 5.45 and the Christian Endeavor met at 6 o'clock. The leader for the meeting was, Miss Margaret Michael, the subject being: "Echoes of Peace and Blessing." She was ably assisted by Wallace Kemp.

The evening service at 7 o'clock was very largely attended. Mr. Matheson took his text from Luke 14, the parable of the Great Supper and spoke very interestingly on the duty of the servants that were sent out to bring the guests to his master's supper and of the various excuses which were sent in and how the servants then went out in the highways and constrained the people to come in and the house was filled, but few were ready to be admitted to the feast. Thus it is that many are called but few are chosen.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held Thursday evening at 7.30. There will be special music by the choir and Mr. Matheson will speak on Thanksgiving.

Next Sunday evening a union no-license service will be held at 7.45.

QUINCY POINT CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor the Rev. Charles T. Marshall, preached a stirring Thanksgiving sermon at the Sunday morning service taking his text from John 12, 24. In the evening a large congregation greeted Mr. A. C. Estes of the Y. M. C. A., who delivered an address on the Mens and Religion Forward Movement. The discourse was interesting and instructive and proved a stimulus in the avancement of the great religious movement in the church here.

The regular meeting of the Quincy Point Men's club will be held Tuesday evening at which time J. C. Page will give an illustrated lecture on Japan. Mr. Page's success as a lecturer is well known and a large and appreciative audience may be expected on this occasion.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Sunday was a day of special services at the Hall Place M. E. church. In the morning the pastor, Rev. T. C. Martin, took for his text, Luke 10-23; "Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see." He preached a sermon appropriate to Thanksgiving. Miss Helen Martin was the soloist.

Sunday school was held at 12 M., and was followed by a meeting of the Sunday school board. The Junior League met at 3 P. M.

The Epworth League service was opened at 6.15 by the first vice-president, Miss Hilda Francis. After the praise service, the pastor led in prayer.

The speaker was Paul M. Hillman of the Boston Student Volunteer League for Foreign Missions. Mr. Hillman presented the subject of missions in foreign lands,—their beginnings, their progress, and their great need, together with the glorious opportunities that await the christian church and its possibilities in India, Africa, Korea, Japan and China.

He also spoke of the responsibilities of this work to the people of America and especially the young people of the church and exhorted them to further the missionary work of the world by doing all they can to spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Mr. Hillman spoke in a clear, definite, interesting and helpful way which proved instructive as well as awakening to Missionary zeal.

A variety service of Thanksgiving took the place of the regular evenig service at seven. The service opened with congregational singing followed by a few brief remarks of explanation by the pastor. Miss Hilda Francis read "New England's Thanksgiving" by Ex-Gov. John D. Long as an introduction to the evening's program. Miss Maud Nichols, Miss Bessie Nichols, Miss Maud E. Hodgkinson, Miss Edna Burke, Miss Cassie Thayer and Master Leslie McCormick read selections from noted men concerning Thanksgiving. Miss Helen Martin sang "Keep on the Sunny Side of Life" the congregation joining in the chorus. A full choir, composed of Charles A. Goucher, chorister, Miss Margaret Shirley, Miss Catherine B. Hodgkinson, Miss Olive Grant, Miss Helen Martin and Miss Hilda Francis, sang a selection of "Thanksgiving." The pastor also called on Mr. Hillman who said that Thanksgiving should be followed by Thanksliving.

The service closed with prayer by the pastor and the benediction followed by the Doxology.

Mrs. Walter E. Kimball of Standish avenue entertained a company of ten children Saturday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock in honor of the sixth birthday of her son Richard. After heartily indulging in games and listening to music they were served in the prettily decorated dining room with ice cream, cake and candy. A beautiful birthday cake was cut, and the favors pleased the youngsters. The guests were: Florence Furgeson, Ruth Kingsbury, Lillian Pitts, Agnes Rice, Ruth Wales, Elizabeth Nelson Howard Houghton, Carl Kelly, Charles Kelly and Harold Morgan.

HOUSE DAMAGED AT SUNDAY MORNING FIRE

Had Made Considerable Headway When Firemen Arrived

QUICKLY OUT, HOWEVER

The alarm from Box 7, at 5.15 Sunday morning, summoned the fire department to a fire in a house at 67 Edison street owned by Henry Lathrop and occupied by John Wightman. The blaze started in the rear end of a hallway, near an ice chest, and made considerable smoke which aroused the inmates of the house. Mr. Wightman and his family reached the street in safety and the boarders up stairs got out through the windows. William Mardine and J. T. Ryan had rooms on the second floor. Mardine threw his trunk out through the window and then jumped out himself.

The firemen found that the blaze had worked through the woodwork from the back hall, up to the outside to the roof and entered one of the rooms on its way. The firemen made short work of the blaze, although there was considerable loss. The damage to the house was estimated at $350 and the loss on furniture at $250.

Mr. Lathrop the owner of the house is now in California. The cause of the fire is unknown.

WILL ATTEND MEETING AT WASHINGTON

Frank Fessenden Crane, Quincy's Dock and Water Front Commissioner, will accompany the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange party to Washington, which leaves Dec. 5, to attend the National Rivers and Harbors congress, which will be a most important meeting. President Marton of the exchange says.

"The total appropriations made by the last National Congress for rivers and harbors amounted to $30,095,698. Of this amount, Ohio River received $2,943,000 the Mississippi River $2,510,000, and Massachusetts the insignificant sum of $290,000. The estimated appropriation for the present year is $29, 628,698. Of this amount, we are informed that Massachusetts will receive $802,000.

"Where will all of the rest go? The reason why Massachusetts figures so small is because she has never been adequately represented at the conventions of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. But the attitude of Massachusetts is changing in this matter, and the prospect is that in place of the delegation of 10 or 15 from the entire state, as in past years, there will be a Massachusetts delegation in excess of 100.

"The development of Massachusetts projects calls for larger appropriations than are being granted, and if these projects are to be property developed it will be through the impression made by an adequate representation at the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. This year's convention meets in Washington at the New Willard Hotel, Dec. 6, 7 and 8.

"The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange has interested itself in securing a delegation that will give Massachusetts the proper standing in relation to the other States. Western States send large delegations every year to these conventions, with the result that the National Congress makes accordingly large appropriations to Western projects. The appropriations to Massachusetts have been commensurate with her representation at these conventions.

"Any person interested in the development of Massachusetts rivers and harbors is invited to participate in this trip to Washington. The party will leave Boston on the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange party to Washington Wednesday at 7.12 A. M."

Among those recently announcing their intention of joining the party are the three commissioners of Bristol County. F. N. Chace, John J. Bryant, R. E. Warner, and it is expected also that the three commissioners of Essex County and Mayor Thomas F. Higgins of Fall River will join.

A dinner of the delegates will be given at the New Willard on the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 6, under the auspices of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange. In addition to the guests already invited, the Massachusetts Senators, Henry Cabot Lodge and Winthroy Murray Crane, have been invited and expect to be present. Similar acceptances have been received from Representatives George P. Lawrence, Frederick H. Gillett, John A. Thayer, William H. Wilder, Butler Ames, Augustus P. Gardner, Ernest W. Roberts, Samuel W. McCall, William F. Murray, James M. Curley, Andrew J. Peters, John W. Weeks, William S. Greene and Robert O. Harris.

The convention will be opened with an address by President Taft, who will also give a reception on Dec. 7 to the Governors of the various States who are in attendance. The Massachusetts delegation will be presented to the President at the White House on the same day.

"ROUGH HOUSE" IN EVIDENCE

At Football Game Between Quincy and U. S. S. Rhode Island

SCORE 3-0

In a game which assumed a rather riotous nature at frequent intervals, one too that was warmly contested on several occasions, the members of the Quincy A. A. football eleven were forced to succumb to their first defeat of the season last Saturday, at the hands of the U. S. S. Rhode Island aggregation, the score being 3 to 0. The absence of police protection was responsible, in a large measure, for the unrestrained conduct of several spectators, who swarmed in on the players from time to time, thereby retarding the progress of the game, and at the same time preventing the contest being played as the rules require.

The largest crowd of the season was present and as both teams were advertised as being of the same calibre, great anxiety awaited the outcome. In the first period, when the ball was within striking distance of the goal, Sullivan of the visitors booted it between the uprights for the first and only score of the game. After this the Rhode Island combination failed to derive any great gains, and the fine work of the local players, both on offensive and defensive play was greatly in evidence.

At one time Boyle, the plucky left half back of the local team, had the ball within three yards of the goal line; but interference on the part of some of the spectators caused him to lose possession of it. A number of protests were registered against the decisions of the officials by members of the visiting team.

Two of the Quincy players sustained injuries as a result of the game. Boyle was considerably bruised about the face, while a badly mutilated left ear, sustained by McDonald, the local quarterback, required the services of a physician. Two stitches were necessitated.

The two teams will play next Saturday at Merrymount park, and it is sincerely hoped that conditions will prevail that will warrant the game being played in a fair, sportsmanlike manner. It was the first unfavorable set back the local boys had experienced this season, for all their previous opponents had resorted to none of the so called rough-house tactics. The summary:

A LITTLE LAY SERMON ON GIVING THANKS

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

LET us give thanks! Why not? Who that has life and health is exempt from this universal duty? Ingrate indeed is he who enjoys the manifold blessings which all of us share in common and which cannot be caged or cornered by Plutonian or plutocratic powers, yet fails to feel somehow a sense of thankfulness therefor. The world belongs to every person who occupies it.

Let us give thanks! Let us thank the sun that blossoms daily in the east, a great red rose of dawn, that warms the elsewise icy earth, that dissipates the all engulfing dark, that resurrects the buried seed in the aspiring life of leaf and bud, of flower and fruit.

Let us give thanks! Let us thank the breeze, laden with rose scent and summer balm, that fans our eager faces uplifted to the sun, that makes a siren music in the leaves, that lingers to caress the fever wasted brows of our loved ones and fills the lungs of health with the breath of vigor that makes us bold to dare and do.

Let us give thanks! Let us thank the shimmery moon and the shiny stars that shed a softened radiance upon us after dusk, and let us thank the mantle of night that softly covers us as with a quilt, wooing to silence and repose and conferring the sustenance of sleep.

Let us give thanks! Let us thank the tree that shelters us from excess of rain or shine, that becomes fuel to cheer us with its warmth, paper whereon are printed the poems and songs and histories and happy thoughts, ships in which we voyage the streams and the seas, houses wherein we dwell with those we love.

Let us give thanks! Let us thank the earth and the firmament and the Infinite Artist that paints the sun in the heavens and the rose tint in the dooryard, the Supreme Artificer of use and beauty, the divine purpose that is working behind the veil of our knowledge toward the ultimate perfection of all things whatsoever, nothing ignored, nothing squandered, nothing lost.

Let us give thanks

"That nothing walks with aimless feet,
That not one life shall be destroyed
Or cast as rubbish to the void
When God hath made the pile complete."

V. M. C. A. BASKETBALL

Did Columbia make good against Harvard on Saturday night? Well! For your answer, just take a look at Capt. John Wilson's "smile that won't come off." There have been some close and exciting games in the league in the past, but the game between these two teams was the best yet. The first half ended 8 to 7 in favor of Harvard, but the game had not gone more than a minute in the second half, when Booth caged a dandy goal from the center of the floor, which put Columbia to the good by one point. Kemp, the star center of Harvard came right back with another basket and Harvard held their lead until the end of the game, Parker scoring one more goal, for his team and Corthell also getting one for Columbia, the final score reading 14 to 11 in favor of Harvard Altsteins work as guard against Parker was easily the feature of the game, for he held the fast and shifty Harvard captain dawn to a goal in each half.

Second Game.

The Army had an easy time with the Navy, owing to the absence of the latter captain. Brooks and Price played well for the Army, while Cobb was the only one on the Navy team who acted as if he ever held a basket ball in his hands. Everett Clark substituted for Capt. Melville and caged three baskets, he showed the lack of practice, however, for he had many more chances to score. "Wes" Brown who took the place of "Chick" Holmes on the Army team showed that with a little experience, he would be a top notcher. Brown has just been promoted from the junior to the student class and his work was very good, considering that he was playing against men. The score was 35 to 14 in favor of Quincy.

Third Game.

The Yale-Tech game was one of the best of the evening, for just like the first game it was a see-saw affair A win for Yale would put them in a triple tie for first place, while a victory for Tech meant a climb upward from the "cellar division" up to a respectable standing in the league.

For Yale, E. Nicoll played the best game,for although he received a bad crack in the nose in the first half he came back stronger than ever during the last part of the game. He and Flieger who played center for Tech, were about evenly watched, but Nicoll had the best eye for the basket, caging three goals to his opponents one. George Daniels had many opportunities to win for his team, but seemed unable to locate the goal. For Tech, Patuaro made the prettiest play of the game, when he shot a "clean" goal from the left center of the floor. Capt. Newcomb also played well for the winners. The final score was Tech 13; Yale 11.

A CORROBORATION

Of Interest to Quincy Readers.

For months Quincy citizens have seen in these columns enthusiastic praise of Doan's Kidney Pills by residence of this locality.

Would these prominent people reconfimend a remedy that had not proven reliable?

Would they confirm their statements after years had elapsed if personal experience had not shown the remedy to be worthy of endorsement?

No stronger proof of merit can be had than cures that have stood the test of time.

The following statement should carry conviction to the mind of every Quincy reader.

John Callahan, 55 Prospect Street, Brockton, Mass., says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have been greatly benefited by their use. I was annoyed by a lame and aching back and my kidneys did not act regularly. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills, and they gave me entire relief. I am glad to confirm the statement given in their praise by a member of my family in 1908."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

PIQUANT PEPPERS.

FOREIGNERS understand how to make use of peppers better than we do. The Italians especially are fond of them and have many ways of preparing them for the table. So far as their food value is concerned, peppers are only a stimulant for the stomach.

Stuffed sweet peppers are served with the vegetables. Cut off the tops of six peppers. Remove the seeds and scald out the inside with water. Take boiled rice, hominy or any cereal which can be cooked stiff and add chopped cold meat.

Prepare a nice seasoning of chopped onions and celery and moisten with stewed tomatoes. Use sugar and salt to taste. Dry the peppers and fill the inside with this mixture. Sprinkle the tops of the peppers with cracker crumbs. Place the stuffed peppers in a baking dish with a little water. Bake for about a half hour.

Pepper and Grapefruit.

Pepper and grapefruit salad is thus made: Slice the tops from six peppers, remove the seeds and scald. Then take grapefruit pulp, fine cut celery and English walnut meats and mix with mayonnaise dressing.

Add some fresh sweet cream beaten stiff in the proportion of one-fourth of a cupful of the cream to one and a quarter cupful of the mixture. Fill the green peppers with this. Add as a garnish to the top of each pepper three walnut meats.

Cucumber salad is improved by adding slices of the green pepper from which the seeds have been removed. The shell of the green pepper chopped fine, seasoned with onion juice and served with vinegar and salt and pepper, is also liked by some lovers of the green peppers.

Pepper Salad.

An appetizing green pepper salad is the following: Cut slices from stem ends of several green peppers and remove the seeds.

Refill with fresh, firm grapefruit cut into cubes, the tenderest stalks of celery cut into small pieces and shredded almonds, allowing twice as much grapefruit as celery, and one-third as many nut meats as grapefruit. Arrange in lettuce leaves and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Light vegetable salads with French or boiled dressing are usually served at dinner, while heavy meat or fish salad with mayonnaise or cream dressing are served for luncheon or supper.

ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

CHAPTER VIII.

LOCAL COLOR.

At sunset a small ketch fanned in to anchorage, and a little later the skipper came ashore. He was a soft spoken, gentle voiced young fellow of twenty, but he won Joan's admiration in advance when Sheldon told her that he ran the ketch all alone with a black crew from Malaita. And romance lured and beckoned before Joan's eyes when she learned he was Christian Young, a Norfolk islander, but a direct descendant of John Young, one of the original Bounty mutineers. The blended Tahitian and English blood showed in his soft eyes and tawny skin, but the English hardness seemed to have disappeared. Yet the hardness was there, and it was what enabled him to run his ketch single handed and to wring a livelihood out of the fighting Solomons.

Joan's unexpected presence embarrassed him until she herself put him out at his ease by a frank, comradely manner that offended Sheldon's sense of the fitness of things feminine. News from the world Young had not, but he was filled with news of the Solomons. Fifteen boys had stolen rifles and run away into the bush from Lunga plantation, which was farther east on the Guadalcanar coast. And from the bush they had sent word that they were coming back to wipe out the three white men in charge, while two of the three white men, in turn, were hunting them through the bush. There was a strong possibility, Young volunteered, that if they were not caught, they might circle around and tap the coast at Berande in order to steal or capture a whaleboat.

"I forgot to tell you that your trader at Ugi has been murdered," he said to Sheldon. "Five big canoes came down from Port Adams. They landed in the night time and caught Oscar asleep. What they didn't steal they burned. The Flibberty Gibbet got the news at Mboli pass and ran down to Agi. I was at Mboli when the news came."

"I think I'll have to abandon Ugi," Sheldon remarked.

"It's the second trader you've lost there in a year," Young concurred. "To make it safe, there ought to be two white men at least. I've got a dog for you. Tommy Jones sent it up from Neal island. He said he'd promised it to you. It's a first class nigger chaser. Hadn't been on board two minutes when he had my whole boat's crew in the rigging. Tommy calls him Satan. Jack Henley was killed at Marovo lagoon two months ago. The news just came down on the Apostle."

"Where is Marovo lagoon?" Joan asked.

"New Georgia, a couple of hundred miles to the westward," Sheldon answered. "Bougainville lies just beyond."

"His own house boys did it," Young went on; "but they were put up to it by the Marovo natives. His Santa Cruz boat's crew escaped in the whaleboat to Choiseul, and Mather, in the Lily, sailed over to Marovo. He burned a village and got Henley's head back. He found it in one of the houses where the niggers had it drying. And that's all the news I've got, except that there's a lot of new Lee-Enfields loose on the eastern end of Ysabel. Nobody knows how the natives got them. The government ought to investigate. Ah—oh, yes—a war vessel's in the group, the Cambrian. She burned three villages at Bina—on account of the Minota, you know—and shelled the bush. Then she went to Sio to straighten out things there."

The conversation became general, and just before Young left to go on board Joan asked:

"How can you manage all alone, Mr. Young?"

His large, almost girlish eyes rested on her for a moment before he replied, and then it was in the softest and gentlest of voices.

"Oh, I get along pretty well with them. Of course, there is a bit of trouble once in awhile, but that must be expected. You must never let them think you are afraid. I've been afraid plenty of times, but they never knew it."

(To be Continued.)

LECTURE ON LOCAL BIRDS.

"Keen quests for small birds" was the subject of a lecture by Mr. Herbert K. Job in the lecture room of the Boston Society of Natural History, November 23. Many of Quincy and Braintree bird lovers were noticed in the audience. It is a fact, worthy of notice that twenty minutes before the time scheduled for closing of doors every seat was occupied and the doorways blocked by bird lovers who remained there for an hour and a half or during the entire lecture.

Stereopticon view of common birds, namely: red and white-eyed vireos worm eating warbler, chickadee, chewink, humming-bird, alder fly-catcher, brown thrasher, scarlet tanagers and others were given with not only the adult birds, male and female, but the nest containing eggs and young in all stages of development. The feeding of the young was exceedingly interesting.

The story of the rage of a brown thrasher when disturbed upon her nest was startling. The bird flew at a too ardent lover and pierced his cheek with her beak; and when the man put his hand to the wound in his agony, the thrasher flew behind him and without waiting for an invitation, came to the front and pierced the other cheek. I shall always think of this bird's temper when I hear his wonderful song given from the top of a high tree, and when he is again seen gliding through the under brush, apparently as meek as beautiful.

We were told the starling has now become thoroughly naturalized and may be looked for in the vicinity of Boston next summer. They are now plentiful in central Massachusetts.

In the year 1890 sixty English Starlings were released in Central Park, New York city, and these sixty have thousands of children, grand children and so on. The starling is eight and a half inches long, brown glossed with black, with metallic purple and green reflections, and a buff tip to each feather, excepting on the under parts where the feathers are marked only on the sides. The starling walks; he is an insect eater; according to a story in a reading book, many years ago, this bird is often caged and taught to speak like a parrot. His bill is yellow. Mr. Job thinks he will drive away our native birds. He also said that although he has many good qualities he is as filthy as an English sparrow. He is a bird easily identified. Let bird lovers watch for him.

Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving! Again our thoughts go back to childhood days in the old home. There Thanksgiving was associated with turkey and cranberries, with plum pudding, mince pie, nuts, raisins, and mother's other dainty delicacies. Our happiness was contagious as we sat down to the feast, and it reflected in the eyes of our elders.

Your children appreciate Thanksgiving just as you did. Their eyes will sparkle and their lips smack at the sight of a plump brown turkey.

Our windows give a hint of the searching we've done through markets and farms to make your selection of Thanksgiving supplies a pleasure.

EVERYBODY HAD A GRAND GOOD TIME

Birthday Surprise To Mrs. Susanna Johnson

WILL BE LONG REMEMBERED

To say that Mrs. Susanna Johnson was surprised on Monday, at her home No. 2 Gothland street, would be putting it mild. She had been invited to the house of her son Carl for dinner, so that the surprise to her was perfectly carried out. When she returned home from her visit, and entered her house, the parlor was full of relatives and friends waiting to receive her. She was almost struck dumb with astonishment when she entered and saw so many smiling faces awaiting to extend to her the well wishes of the day.

She quickly recovered and entered heartily into the festivities of the occasion. The dining room, under the skilful hands of her daughter Annie who had planned the surprise assisted by friends, had been transformed into a bower of beauty Cut flowers consisting of chrysanthemums, pinks, roses, etc., made it a perfect fairyland. She was the recipient of many handsome presents and was also remembered by her son Fred, who is in Eureka, Utah, and William, now of Chicago.

The pastor of the Swedish M. E. church, of which she has been a member and a conscientious worker for many years, called during the day and presented her with a beautiful bouquet of cut flowers, the gift of the Ladies' society.

At an early hour the guests departed, wishing Mrs. Johnson many more years of happiness. Refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and coffee was served during day and evening. Special mention should be made of two cakes in particular which adorned the table, one large cake had the figures "70" in frosting on the top, while the other contained small candles, which when burning, presented a beautiful apeparance. Taken all in all the affair was very successful and will be long remembered by those present, and the grandchildren, of whom Mrs. Johnson is the happy possessor of quite a few, made the house merry with their laughter. They all had a grand, good time.

LARGE NUMBER ATTEND CONCERT

Under Auspices Women's Guild Park And Downs Church

THE ARTISTS

At the aPrk and Downs Congregational church Monday evening a fine entertainment was given by the Angelus Concert Company. The affair was given under the auspices of the Woman's Guild and attracted a large number.

The participating artists consisted of a male quartet composed of Herbert W. Colby, tenor, Vernon A. Lyman, tenor, Herbert C. Greenwood, baritone, Walter H. Fletcher, bass and Mrs. Mabel B. Lyman soprano, Miss Bess Anderson Colburn pianist and Ruth Fielding, child reader.

Miss Colburn opened the evening with a waltz in E minor by Chopin, which was followed by the male quartet in "The Jolly Blacksmiths."

Among the selections of the quartet were "Wanted a wife" and "Sleep, my Lady" while several encores of humorous trend were given.

Mrs. Lyman pleased those present with her high soprano voice, giving as solos "When the heart is young" and "Heart's Delight." The "Venetian Serenade" a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Lyman met with applause.

The solos by male voices were well received, Mr. Fletcher singing "The Condor" by Kenyon, Mr. Greenwood, "The bandolero" by Stuart and Mr. Colby a selected tenor solo.

Ruth Fielding, a precocious miss of twelve was the hit of the evening. Each of her numerous readings brought forth an encore approaching an ovation and she was recalled again and again.

The final number on the program was the "Star Spangled Banner" sung as a soprano solo by Mrs. Lyman, the audience rising and joining in the chorus.

ALL NUMBERS EXCELLENT

At Musicale ot Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter D. A. R.

IN WOLLASTON CHURCH

Under the auspices of the Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter, D. A. R., a musicale was held in the Wollaston Congregational church Monday evening by the Mazah trio.

Thetrio consisted of Roscoe R. Ricker, violin, Marion L. Moorehouse, 'cello and Grace M. Farrington, piano. They were assisted by Erdine Cowlishaw, reader and Clifford F. Farrington, baritone.

Miss Farrington and her brother Clifford have resided in Wollaston and the hearty applause which greeted them, showed an appreciation of their musical ability as well as the fact that their friends were glad to welcome them once more to their former home.

The opening number was a trio by Bohm, composing allegro and andante con moto movements.

The violin solos of Mr. Ricker showed not only an ability far above the mediocre but a deft touch. His fingering in Schubert's selection "L Abeilee" (The Bee) was worthy of the hearty applause it received. In addition to encores, the "Spanish Dance" of Sarasate was played.

As a reader Miss Cowlishaw was excellent, her selections of "Strongheart," "Mud pies," "Confessions," "The red rose," and others showing a wide range of character.

Mr. Farrington received an ovation upon his appearance and sang most acceptably two baritone solos entitled "Three for Jack" and "Youth."

The 'cello solo of Miss Marion L. Moorehouse, a local player of note met with the continued applause it deserved. The number was an "Hungarian Rhapsodie" by Kletzer.

Other renditions by the trio included "Grecian Dance" by Wagner, "Souvenir d' Hongrie" by Bendel, "Serenade" by Liebe and "Ungarischer Tanz" by Brahms.

The program was a well rounded one and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience that was present.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY.

A number of friends called to congratulate Miss Emma Witting, at her home on Deldorf street, Monday, it being her birthday anniversary. Miss Witting received a number of beautiful gifts. Refreshments were served.

SOUNDED LIKE BOMBARDMENT

Police Capture Party of Italians For Torching

OFF HOUGHS NECK

People living on the shores of Quincy Bay, thought for a time, Monday night, that the Italian fleet had entered the bay, and were bombarding the city, for there was a fusilade of shots that resounded in the still night air. It was in the vicinity of midnight that the shots were heard and a little later five motor boats landed at Houghs Neck.

It seems that the State officers had been chasing some South Boston Italians, who were torching herring in the bay. There were four motor boats in the party. Each boat had a captain and a crew of three men. The State police have been trying to catch the men, and last night headed by State officer Richardson, a boat load of officers and constables put out from Houghs Neck to round up the gang. In the officers' party were officers party were officers Phillips and Corbett and Constables Dyer, Mahan and Putnam.

The officers boat came upon the enemy unawares and 3 of the boats were quickly captured. The fourth, however, which was captained by Salvatire Tereivie tried to escape) Then it was that the officers opened fire upon them and after a running fire of a few minutes the enemy surrendered.

The torchers were taken to Houghs Neck and the four captains placed under arrest and the others allowed to go their way. The four men arrested gave their names as Salvatore LaRosa and Luigi Scuole.

They were arraigned in court this morning on a complaint charging them with torching herring and were fined $50 each.

The men were well supplied with money, for they quickly drew forth large rolls of bills and paid up. They gave their addresses as Fleet street, Boston.

MASS AT ST. JOHN'S

A large number of relatives and friends congregated in St. John's church this morning, to pay their last respects to Thomas J. Joyce, for years a most popular employee of the local street railway company, who departed from mortal life last Sunday. The funeral corteve left the home of the deceased, 49 Putnam street shortly beore 9 o'clock, headed a carriage bearing numerous floral tokens, showing the esteem in which the late Mr. Joyce was held. A feature which added great solemnity to the funeral procession was the appearance of an electric car, draped in mourning colors and carrying a large delegation of Division 253 of the railway men's union, of which the deceased was vice president.

A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated in St. John's church at 9 o'clock by Rev. John J. Casey, curate, assisted by Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Sacred Heart church, Atlantic, as deacon and Rev. John B. Holland, pastor of the Sacred Heart church in Weymouth Landing, as deacon. CLAN McGREGOR HEARS TALK ABOUT ALASKA

Interesting and Instructive Lecture By Dr. John A. Gordon

HISTORIC MEETING DEC. 11

Clan McGregor No. 5, O. S. C. held its regular meeting last night in Clan McGregor hall Doble's Corner. There was a large attendance of clansmen. The meeting was called at 6.30 instead of the usual hour 7.30, as about one hundred applications for membership had to be acted upon.

After the usual business was disposed of Clansman Dr. John A. Gordon, a charter member of the clan and its first physician, was introduced by Chief Alfred O. Diack who explained that the genial doctor did not need any introduction to a Quincy audience. Dr. Gordon was very warmly received and bowed his acknowledgement to the long applause which greeted him.

Beginning his remarks he alluded to the first meeting of the seventeen young men, who formed Clan McGregor thirty-one years ago. The little acorn he said, had grown to be a great oak, strong and with spreading branches. He complimented the clan on its splendid showing and hoped it would continue to grow in number and usefulness.

The subject of Dr. Gordon's discourse was "A trip through south Eastern Alaska" which the doctor took three years ago.

The speaker introduced his subject with an explanation of the dervation of the name which, he said, is a corruption of the aboriginal name "Alakshak" which means in the Indian

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

NOTICE.

Thursday Thanksgiving day being a legal holiday the office of the Quincy Daily Ledger will be closed all day.

When J. P. Morgan dropped the collection plate it attracted more attention than the last drop in the stock market.

Although the tobacco reorganization will not probably reduce the price to the smoker, the law feels better now that its majesty is vindicated.

Itis considered unsportsmanlike for aviators to fly over ball games and other public spectacles. Then too they might be under suspicion of gathering in one of John Franklin Baker's long hits.

It is said that war was narrowly averted between England and Germany. There were a whole lot of fellows who wanted to lick somebody, but they were not the same ones who had the money to lend to pay damages.

THE NEW THANKSGIVING.

In the early days of the Thanksgiving celebration people showed their thankfulness by shivering in fireless churches while the preacher delivered a two hour sermon on the state of the nation.

Today God and Uncle Sam have to wait while we attend to our prior engagement with Turkey-Bird.

However, as a considerable number of people have previously carted around flour barrels and plum puddings to some of their hungry neighbors, the Lord of Heaven and Earth may be just as well satisfied.

There is a pretty bad gap in our lives though, if there are not tucked in somewhere some moments of thankfulness for all that we have received. For the most of us, life has been kinder than our fears. Like the locomotive engineer at night, we have been ever dreading the dark things on the track ahead, but when we got there, they were only shadows.

At the heart of the world there must be love. For the power that made the world must be greater and better than the thing made. If love existed only in human hearts, the creature must be greater than the creator, which is inconceivable.

PROTECT THE HOME.

Delcevare King, president of the No-License League, addressed a monster meeting at Gloucester Sunday, the largest that had ever gathered in the town hall. A report of it is printed in today's news columns for two reasons,—to give publicity to Mr. King's excellent remarks and to offer a gentle reminder that the time is opportune for such a demonstration in Quincy.

Along the lines of the "No License" work, let us look for a moment at a couple of the sentiments expressed in the valuable circular sent out recently by the organization.

Here's the first, by John Mitchell:—"I ask you to judge the labor movement by the good it has done, not by the mistakes it has made. Every scandal, few as they have been, in organized labor, can be traced back to some connection with the saloon."

The other by John B. Lennon:—"The moral and intellectual development of any people were judged by its standard of living. So any institution should be judged by its effect on that standard. The liquor traffic had tended always to the depression of that standard. The labor movement stood for equal opportunities for women in industry, and more opportunities for them to keep out of industry, and be the mothers and home-keepers of the nation. Could any man dare say that the liquor traffic had not sent to the factory, mill and wash-tub more women than could well be numbered? The labor movement stood for the elimination of child labor. The waste of intemperance had driven countless children to work when they should have been on the playground or at school. As a trade unionist, he was unalterably opposed to a business that had any such tendency, and he believed that the time would come when the trade unions would be found orrayed positively and unqualified against the liquor business."

A KANSAS TAR PARTY.

Years ago tar and feathers was a common method of expressing social disapproval in many sections. If the victim also escaped being ejected from the township by riding on a rail, he could count himself fortunate.

But now there is a general agreement that the light treatment of such episodes belongs to a past epoch of our civilization, and the party of Kansas roughs that stripped Miss Mary Chamberlain of her clothing and anointed her with tar some weeks ago, may learn some things they did not know before.

Of late years, it has generally been perceived that the curs and cowards of a community are not the persons who should execute the decrees of social justice. As this class of people feel the keenest animosity toward the people whose characters contrast most sharply with their own, it has often happened that they have picked out the individuals who were performing the most useful service to receive their vile attentions. If that kind of people are to control things, there are some of us who would feel like emigrating and seeking a higher state of civilization in the interior of Africa.

Leaving aside all questions of the evil of lawlessness, the final enormity of this Kansas outrage lay in its abuse of a woman. Any man who has the slightest sense of fair play recognizes that women have physical limitations and perils which make them physically an unequal match for men. Most men can easily administer a thrashing to most women if they see fit.

But if the average man has a coarser, harder, tougher body, he has a less alert mind. With the roughs of the world, this creates a desire for reprisal. Too stupid to meet woman's wit, too coarse for her standards of conduct, the mere animals among us would no doubt like to get their revenge by coats of tar if they dared to.

This comparative physical weakness of women has given rise, deep down in every man who has any shadow of a heart inside of him, to an instinct to protect all women. Ninety-nine out of a hundred ragged men of the worst city slum feel this instinct, and will spring to the defence of any woman in peril. But there are still among us some deformed souls with the heart of a dog, who should be taught by physical suffering what they can never learn by an appeal to a non-existent heart and brain. If the men who are guilty of this Kansas tar party can be captured, let us hope they get the limit of the law.

INTRUDER MAY BE INSANE.

George Brannock of Braintree was awakened about 1 A. M. on Sunday by the crash of breaking glass in the lower part of his house. Rushing below he was attacked by a man, who after a few minutes fled. Invetigation showed the man had entered by a window, breaking sash and glass.

The matter was reported to Chief of Police Fitzgerald. The police went to a camp of Italians at the corner of Washington and Maine streets, and there found a man badly cut about the head and face. He was removed to the insane hospital at Taunton for observation.

PLEA FOR KINDERGARTENS

Four Million American Children Denied Needed Training

New York, Nov. 28.—The contrast between gifts of $53,000,000 to the cause of higher education in this country this year and the fact that there are 4,000,000 little children in the country without the privileges of kindergarten training, was brought out in the report of Miss Bessie Locke, corresponding secretary of the National Kindergarten association, at its annual meeting here.

She said that while the European countries generally realized the value of kindergarten training, only one state in this country, Utah, has made the kindergarten a part of its school systems.

Music during the ceremony was furnished by the Beethoven quartet with Thomas Carter as bugler. After the charter had been read by Grand Recorder Rowell and the ceremonies about the altar had been concluded Grand Commander Blair said "By virtue of the power in me vested I now form you into a just and regular commandery of Knights Templars, may the God of our fathers be with you to guide and direct you in all your doings."

The proclamation was made by the Grand Warder and heralded to the north and south, east and west by Bugler Carter.

After the institution, the Grand Commander addressing the members stated that he brought to them the congratulations, love, sympathy and support of the Grand Commandery. "The question is often asked, why do men gather together this way? Why do they affiliate? Why night after night do they assemble and listen to the oft repeated lessons? The answer is simple and direct to every Knights Templar."

"It matters not if you are the youngest and not the largest in number, but it does matter that each Knights Templar shall be so imbued, that he will walk along the pathway that comes from the cross."

Immediately following the institution, came the election and installation of officers and it was a source of gratification to all, as well as a mark of appreciation to Em. Sir Henry P. Furnald that he was elected as Eminent Commander by a unanimous vote.

SIR WATER E. PIPER,
Generalissimo.

The election of the other officers was equally as unanimous, the full list of elective and appointive officers being as follows:

Commander, Em. Sir Henry P. Furnald.

Generalissimo, Sir Walter E. Piper.

Captain General, Sir John Morgan.

Senior Warden, Sir Otis B. Oakman.

Junior Warden, Sir Edward H. Bushnell.

Prelate, Sir William A. Bradford.

Associate Prelate, Sir Rev. Rufus B. Tobey.

Treasurer, Sir Jonathan S. Swingle.

Recorder, Sir Alfred H. Richards.

Standard Bearer, Sir Walter S. Pinkham.

Sword Bearer, Sir George L. Cole.

Warder, Sir John H. Whitehead.

Captain of the Guards, Sir George E. Adams, Sir George E. Sampson, Sir J. Francis Merrill.

Assistant Guards, Sir Arthur F. Maynard, Sir Waldo B. Fay, Sir Charles A. Chase.

Organist, Sir Herbert Y. Follett.

Sentinel, Sir Dexter Remick.

Adjutant, Sir David Hanson.

These officers were then installed by the Grand Commander Blair, assisted by Em. Sir Charles E. Pierce.

Immediately after the installation, the Grand Commander said that he had a pleasant duty to perform. This was the presentation to Em. Sir Furnald, in behalf of the Commandery, of a Commanders' belt and sword. In receiving this gift, Em. Sir Furnald thanked the Sir Knights for their loyalty and stated that he should do all in his power to make Quincy Commandery the best in the jurisdiction. He then presented bouquets to the Grand Commander and Grand Warder.

After the grand officers retired the first business of the Commandery was to elect Rt. Em. John Albert Blake and Rt. Em. Layfayette G. Blair as honorary members.

These two officers were then escorted to the asylum and informed of the action of the Commandery by Em. Sir Furnald, who pinned upon each a distinctive badge.

The badge is similar to that worn by the members but on the gold bar under the crown is the word "Honorary." To this suspends a large passion cross, on which rests a circle, and inside the circle are three crosses of different pattern, one within the other.

In accepting the honor Past Commander Blake declared that he was proud to be enrolled as a member of Quincy Commandery and was proud that he had had some hand in starting it upon its career.

Commander Blair said: "From the bottom of my heart I appreciate the compliment you have paid me." It is a great honor to be enrolled on your list. And rightly you have named my predecessor the first honorary member. I pledge you my very best services in all your works, and shall ever prize the decoration you have seen fit to bestow upon me."

After the close of the Commandery, a banquet was served in the banquet hall and the exercises ended with a few brief remarks by the Grand Commander in which he gave some excellent advice to the Sir Knights.

The new Commandery started out last February with a membership of 180 and since that time 32 have been added to the roster, bringing the membership at institution up to 212. One member has been lost by death Sir Joseph L. Whiton.

Among the visitors noticed were: Past Grand Commander Flanders, besides representatives of the following commanderies: Boston, Henry H. Litchfield, PC; De Molay, Charles W. Kidder, EC; E. E. Jameson, CG; Coeur de Lion, Henry A. Yenetchi, PC; St. Bernard, Richard W. Smith, PC; St. Omer, Fletcher K. Tirrell and Charles H. MacGarvey, PC; South Shore, Gardner R. P. Barker, G. Edwin B. Pratt, CG; William S. Wallace, David J. Pierce, T. John Evans and Arthur W. Burr, PC; Natick, Luther E. Cowles, PC; Old Colony, Alfred H. Nash and Charles S. Beal, PC; Bay State, Arthur L. Beals, EC; George A. Thatcher, G. David W. Battles and Calvin R. Barrett, PC; Cyprus, Frank H. Tyler, EC; Irving C. Webster, G; Cambridge, Charles E. Haddcock and Howard F. (Continued from Page One.)

"Great Land," or "Big Land." The purchase of Alaska, or that part which now belongs to the United States, was made by Secretary of State William H. Seward in 1867 for the sum of $7,200,000. Here the doctor referred to the opposition which leading men in the councils of this country offered to the taking over of the territory, which was described as an earthquake, a field of ice, etc. The late Hon. Benjamin Butler, even suggested giving Russia, from whom it was purchased, the price, $7,200,000 as a gift and let the land alone. Today however no one who knows anything of the wonderful resources and possibilities of that great territory would think of giving it up. Since its acquisition by the United States there has been taken from its mines and fisheries over $400,000,000 and it is undoubtedly capable of producing thousands of millions more. There are known coal fields of 12600 square miles besides vast amounts of other products, including animals of many kinds many of them of great commercial value.

The doctor described very eloquently and minutely the numerous wonderful bays and inlets along the sea board. The beauty and magnificence of the ice fields, bergs and glasiers, which are the largest in the world.

He dwelt a considerable time upon the people, who now number about 95,000, mostly whites, their mode of living and their industries. To the traveler, the native is of much interest and the speaker gave his audience a very clear account of those people, their legends and philosophies, their manner of preserving the race in all its vigor and nobility.

The family tree, "Totem" a model of which the doctor had with him and showed to his audience, which better described how family relations were marked and kept than mere words could possibly do. Of great interest to the white man is the "Totem." Its grotesque carvings extending up the pole to heights of fifty feet or more just as the family has been added to by marriage etc. All in all the speaker said it was a magnificent trip, a land wonderful in mountains and glaciers and gorgeous sunsets, wealth of mine and timber and animals of many kinds, beautiful beyond all other lands in majestic scenery.

At the close, the doctor was given a rising vote of thanks a number of clansmen made remarks on the lecture all of which were expressive of appreciation of the clear telling style and instructive character of the lecture.

John J. McAnarney, who is a clansman of long standing and Quiney's well known lawyer was present and made some very interesting remarks.

Chief Diack secured the genial lawyer as the next lecturer, which will be some time soon.

A social hour was held after business was over. Songs were sung by a number of Clansmen and cigars were handed round.

Next meeting December 11th will be the historic event of the Clan.

The Clansmen are to assemble at their hall at Doble's corner at 6.30 and from there, headed by a band of Pipers, all in full Scottish regalia, drums and clangs accompaning. The clan, six hundred strong, in full Clan regalia will march to Alpha hall where the ceremony of initiating the largest number of new members ever taken into the order of scottish clans in a body, will take place. Chief Alfred O. Diack and his staff will pass the degree.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING DISCUSSED

Interesting Statistics Furnished About Employment

NEXT MEETING DEC. 7

Only one member of the committee on vocational training for girls was absent at the meeting held in the rooms of the school committee, Monday afternoon. Various matters pertaining to the advancement and development of the project were considered at length and many interesting features were developed. Statistics were presented, showing the number of girls who had left school between the fiscal year, of September 8, 1910 and 1911.

This information concerned the grade in which the student was pursuing the work, at the same time giving the age of the pupil. In addition statistics were shown giving the occupations now indulged in and the firms as well that furnished employment to the girls. A scrutiny and survey of the statistics brought forth many interesting facts and the same proved to be a source of pleasurable study.

Facts were presented that were never before realized by the committee and such imparted information will henceforth be used as the basis for committee research in an endeavor to obtain desirable conclusions to recommend to the school committee.

The committee on industrial training for boys met at the school committee rooms, Monday evening, with Chairman Dr. H. Gerrish Smith, presiding. Mr. S. H. Couch of the Couch Company of Wollaston, completes the membership of the committee. The meeting was devoted largely to a study of statistics, showing the annual drainage from the schools, together with the ages of the boys who withdraw from the schools and the industries in which they are now occupied. These and other topics of interest along thesame planes were brought forth.

Efforts will be made before the next meeting to ascertain the capacity of this city for furnishing employment for boys each year, the wages that may be expected in the various branches of the industries and other facts vital to a proper solution of the whole problem. The committee adjourned at 10 o'clock and in all probability will convene again on the evening of December 7th at 8 o'clock.

FORESTERS WILL HOLD INITIATION

Members of Courts John Adams, John Ericsson and Roger Wolcott are looking forward to Sunday, when a class initiation will be held at Alpha hall at two o'clock.

About one hundred candidates will be initiated by the Grand Chief Ranger of Massachusetts, William Mitchell and staff, accompanied by several officers of the Supreme Court. The three Quincy Courts have adjourned until Sunday to meet at Alpha hall.

The Foresters of America have a magnificient organization, the membership in this country numbering two hundred and fifty thousand; there are thirty-two thousand in this state and seven hundred in Quincy.

The Quincy Courts include some of the most prominent citizens in their membership and the excellent condition of their treasuries and membership show the good judgment used in the selection of officers and candidates for membership.

ENTHUSIASTIC RALLY HELD AT GLOUCESTER

In the Interes's of the No License League

MR. KING SPEAKS

Delcevare King, president of the Massachusetts No-License League, spoke at Gloucester Sunday night to one of the largest gatherings ever held in City Hall. Flags and banners everywhere decorated the hall, the most conspicuous reading:—"This is not the cause of faction, nor of party, nor of any individual, but the cause of mankind. Another, "Ask the first ten mothers you meet if they would vote for the saloon, and then govern yourself accordingly."

Seated on the platform were a large number of men known to be in sympathy with the no-license cause, including business and professional men, clergymen of all faiths and denominations, and leaders of other local institutions.

The ushering was looked after by 20 young men of the city, many of whom will cast their first ballot at the coming city election.

At 8 o'clock the great meeting was called to order by N. Carlton Phillips, the chairman of the executive committee of the Gloucester No-License League, who in a few words welcomed the people to a fair discussion of the issue of the campaign, and mentioned especially the permanency of the cause declaring that the fight would go on not only until, but after, the election and that the City hall had already been engaged for two great meetings for the campaign of 1912.

MR. KING SPEAKS.

Delcevare King of Quincy, chairman of the Massachusetts No-License League, gave a characteristic rapid-fire address which fairly bristled with facts and figures contrasting the conditions in no license and license cities of the state. Every minute of the day and night, said Mr. King, over $3000 is spent in this country for intoxicating drink, making $1,599,000,000 each year, an amount several times greater than the national debt and three times greater than the amount spent for education. And for every six minutes of the day and night there is born in this country a sweet and innocent boy or girl who is destined to fill a drunkard's grave.

It could be proven from statistics that the bulk of the sex evils could be traced to the saloon, and that in our state 60 per cent of the arrests are for and 65 per cent of all the imprisonments are for drunkenness, and of the other third of the arrests and imprisonments, nearly all were indirectly due to drink.

No license, he said, is not total abstinence, not temperance, not prohibition, but a vote against the open saloon, and no license had accomplished great things for every city and town where it had been given a fair trial. In the long run the tax rates had remained about the same but very much more had been expended for streets and education and public improvements in the no-license cities. The difference in drunkeness had been very marked, especially in Gloucester. Last year there were 598 arrests the first six months under license as against 190 this year under no license. And at the same rate there would be 816 less arrests for the whole year.

Mr. King said he had no doubt the Manufacturer's and Dealers' League of New England would distribute statements in favor of license. It is true that these men are not liquor dealers but the organization was formed by Morris Grau of the United States Brewers' Association and was composed almost entirely of men engaged in trades allied to the saloon, such as making bottles and similar business. He hoped the people of Gloucester would not be misled by any such sham business.

RECEPTION FOR PASTOR

Rev. Fannie E. Austin Meets Parish'oners And Friends

LARGELY ATTENDED

Rev. Fannie E. Austin, pastor of the First Universalist church, was given a reception at the church Monday evening by its parishioners and friends. The occasion was one of almost informality and afforded those attending an opportunity to meet their pastor in a social manner. The reception was held in the vestry and was largely attended.

In the receiving line with the pastor were the trustees, George W. Gragg, George W. Wheeler, Frank Hobart and A. J. Graf, Mrs. Arthur C. Merritt representing the Ladies' Aid society, Mrs. George Sprague representing the Dorcas society, and Mrs. Thomas A. Addison representing the Mission circle.

The ushers were, Freeman Hyland, Everett Andrews, Bartlett Spooner and Lester Sprague.

After the reception, which was from 8 to 8.30, there were brief remarks by Rev. Charles Conklin, state superintendent of churches and Rev. Austin. Mrs. G. White and daughter rendered a piano solo and Miss Edith Hyland sang.

Then followed a social hour during which light refreshments were served. Mrs. George Spooner, Mrs. George W. Wheeler, Mrs. George W. Gragg and Mrs. John Smith presided at the tea tables while the young ladies of the Murray club assisted in serving.

OFFICIAL BRANDS REPORT "SIMPLY SILLY"

The state department characterizes as "simply silly" the latest attack from Europe on the Fore River Shipbuilding company, in connection with the bids for battleships for South American republics, says the washington correspondent of the Boston Herald.

"We have been expecting something of this kind for two or three weeks," said an official of the department who is very well informed about organized efforts to discredit the success of Americans in obtaining these contracts.

The charges referred to are reported in Berlin cable despatches. Accusations are being made by the whole German press of unfair competition on the part of the American shipbuilding firm which obtained the order for the construction of the two Argentine battleships at the beginning of 1910.

It is asserted that the Argentine government delayed the decision until the American firm was able to obtain an insight into the tenders of its competitors, and that the diplomatic representatives of the United States in Buenos Ayres played a very important part in the negotiations.

Further, it is asserted that the United States bound itself to take Argentina under its protection until the two battleships were finished, which, in view of the tension existing at that time betweent Argentina and Brazil, was of great importance.

"We did not promise to protect Argentina till the battleships were finished," said this state department official. "Argentina did not ask it, and of course no such promise could be given. Remember that that story was first circulated long ago and very effectually exploded. There is nothing to it. Any statements about a protecorate for Chili underw ay circumstances whatever are equally absurd."

Some of the European authorities have recently been uttering portentous warnings about the success of American shipbuilders. They have said that "our cousins across the Atlantic will push us into the ocean if we don't watch out." There is great jealousy at our success, and the state department is well aware the Europeans are not at all scrupulous in their method of attack.

In the biography of Dr. Hawtrey, a famous English schoolmaster, there is a description of his unkempt appearance, with a comment which has been greatly quoted. It is said that he was scolding, for being late at morning lessons, some boy, who replied that he had no time to dress.

"But I can dress in time," said the doctor.

"Yes," replied the boy, "but I wash."

A THANKSGIVING SURPRISE

By JOANNA SINGLE.

THANKSGIVING day was almost upon Miss Abby Cullom, poor, but thrifty, in her cottage at the end of the town, and her only near neighbors, the Beans. Miss Abby, being a New Englander, was always prepared. The Beans, being southern "Crackers," were eternally unprepared in their shiftless little hut. Miss Abby had a good vegetable garden and a big chicken yard.

This is where the turkey comes in—an immense gobbler, the monarch of the place and the pride of Miss Abby, who had doomed him to Thanksgiving dinner. He grew fatter and fatter, and the assorted collection of Bean children watched him hopelessly while they sat astride the division fence. Hunger shone from their eyes.

"They'll be stealin' him next thing," Miss Abby muttered as she threw out the dishwater and wrung the dishrag fiercely.

"Maw," bawled one of the twins to his gaunt, bedraggled mother in the door, "ain't we goin' to have no turkey? We ain't never had no turkey like other folks."

"Yore paw's had mighty pore luck, honey. He cain't make out to buy turkey, honey."

"Why cain't he, maw?" wailed the oldest girl.

"Yore paw's had bad luck," the dull mother voice reiterated. "He'll git us somepin' extray, but I don't reckon it'll be turkey. Turkey meat's awful dear, honey."

Miss Abby slammed into her house with a righteous rattle of stiff blue calico and an indecorous display of flat ankles. She snorted wrathfully:

"Luck! If he'd had any luck he'd never have been born. But he's luckier than his wife and children. He's the laziest image of a man that ever wore pants—too lazy to come when he's called to meals. I'd see that he never was called if I was her."

Miss Abby went to make her bed, and from the open window next the Bean house she could hardly help hearing the rest of the conversation.

"Maw, he's awful big! Will she eat him all herself? Will it make her sick, maw?"

"Why, maybe she'll have company, honey."

"Can't we be company, maw? Why ain't we never company?"

"We ain't got any relations up along here, honey."

"Would Miss Abby let us be company if she knowed we ain't goin' to have no Thanksgiving?" Miss Abby shut the window with a bang.

"'Tain't as if he couldn't work," she muttered. "He won't work. His garden's all dried up for lack of a little water, and there he set all summer on that bench! Nothin' short of a fire

RECEIVE TOKEN OF ESTEEM

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony M. Isaacsen, 58 Parker street, was the mecca for a most happy gathering Sunday, it being the occasion of the 20th wedding anniversary. The event was very fittingly observed and everything was in complete readiness for the numerous friends who took possession of the Isaacsen homestead on this event.

Relatives and friends were present to the number of 20, corresponding relatively to the number of years the couple themselves have rounded out. Delegations were present from Forest Hills, Dorchester, Braintree and Quincy to shower congratulations on the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaacsen were presented with a handsome china dinner set, which was very gratefully accepted in a touching response made by Mr. Isaacson. An orchestra was present to furnish the music for the affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaacsen are well and favorably known in local circles, Mr. Isaacson being proprietor of the Cranch Hill Granite Company. The couple are the parents of four children.

Q.—If a person has led a sinful life and has been instrumental in causing others to sin, would it be possible for such a one to be fully forgiven and all their past sins cancelled if they should repent and ask the Lord to forgive them?

Answer.—There should be no question in the mind of any one on this point. The Scriptures abound with expressions in which the Divine love and compassion of God, the Heavenly Father, are set forth. The great Creator of the Universe sacrificed His well-beloved Son, the Lord Jesus Christ to redeem the world and to reconcile it to Himself. Those, therefore, who will accept the Lord Jesus as their Savior, believing that He by the grace of God tasted death for every man—these are freely forgiven all their past iniquities. The Apostle Paul, before his conversion to Christianity, was bitterly opposed to the cause of Christ and went about persecuting the followers of the Master—putting them in prison and arranging that some should be put to death. We remember that he consented to the death of Stephen, the first martyr. Yet with all this, the Lord freely forgave him. Note the following Scriptures as evidencing the full and complete forgiveness of all those who are truly repentant and who desire to draw nigh to God through Christ.—(Isaiah i, 18; Psalm ciii, 10.14: Acts xxvi, 18; Ephesians i, 7; Colossians i 14.)

THANKSGIVING FESTIVAL AT SWEDISH CHURCH

A Thanksgiving festival will be given in the Swedish Lutheran church on the evening of Thanksgiving, under the auspices of the church parishioners. In addition to a varied program to be furnished by the church talent, professor Wrigley will give several concert numbers on the pipe organ. A cordial invitation has been extended to all to be present.

FUNERAL LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral of P. Samuel Swanson was held Monday afternoon from his late home on Whitwell street and was largely attended, many of his young friends being present. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Anderson of Beverly. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, the bearers being E. T. Sanborn, Victor Ericson, Fred Ericson, Gus Ericson, Robert Cameron and Frank Gustafson.

There were many beautiful flowers, including a standing wreath from his friends, and many other pieces.

BRIEFS

Herbert Lawton is pleased to report that his dog, which strayed away, returned Monday.

The Swedish Lutheran church has extended a call to Rev. H. Myreen to become pastor of the church.

The joint committees of the City Council met Monday night and were in session until after 11 o'clock.

There was an unusual demand for the Ledger Monday evening, and the local newsdealers quickly sold out their supply.

Gertrude A. Boyd Auxiliary to the United Spanish War Veterans is to hold a whist party tomorrow night at Protection hall.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Wilson of Revere road were guests of Harvard friends at dinner in Boston on Saturday evening in celebration of the Harvard-Yale game. The decorations and music were fine and it was a most enjoyable affair.

A week from today and the voters of the city will be having their little say as to who shall be Mayor for next year and also their representatives in the City Council. The campaign up to the present time, however, has been very quiet. Quite a contrast to some in other years.

WAS A MISTAKE.

Word has been received from Commodore James A. Ring, retired, in which the naval officer declared to Quincy friends that the story his son Morton Ring, was among the Annapolis midshipmen caught "cribbing" at the academy last week was without foundation.

Says the Boston Herald:—

Young Ring's home is at Portsmouth, N. H., but he recently spent some time with friends in Quincy, who were much disturbed when they read his name among those of four midshipmen who were accused of dishonorable conduct in examinations.

Beyond the mere statement that his son was not involved in the scandal the retired commodore said nothing in his dispatch. Quincy friends are at a loss to understand how such a report could have been given out from the academy.

IMPROVEMENT IN STREET CAR SERVICE

Quincy Point is to receive an improvement in its street car service at night, through the efforts of the special committee of the City Council. One of the things that this committee desired, was that the car which leaves City Square for Quincy Point at five minutes of and twenty-five minutes past the hour should be continued during the evening, instead of being taken off at 7 o'clock. Monday, it was announced by Supt. Gammons, that starting next Monday, this car would run up to 10 o'clock every night and that if there seemed to be a demand for it the car would be continued in service. It will be tried out for a month at any rate.

No Suffragettes In Plymouth.

Governor Bradford of Massachusetts specified that, "besides waterfowl, there was a great store of wild turkeys" for their first Thanksgiving feast, 1621, by which it is plain that our ancestors inaugurated the custom of the turkey on Thanksgiving day.

But chefs were not numerous in Plymouth. The first feast, at which there were fifty-five white men and ninety Indians, was prepared by "four women, one servant and a few maidenkins." Poor women! How they must have sighed for their day of emancipation!

CITY PLANNING.

What Has Been Done and What Is Being Left Undone in the Metropolitan District.

If the term "city planning" is Greek to the average citizen it is not because he is an American; for city planning has been going on, bad as it may have been, since the building of the first log cabin on the site of the city of Boston, right up through the days of the stage coach and the horse car to the present time with its subways, elevateds, automobile trucks and pneumatic tubes. In spite of the fact that your public streets may even now be torn up and laid down three times a year, when only once in three years, or never at all, would be more than sufficient, some communities in the district do plan the work of the street, water, sewer and wire departments so that this is not necessary. As a matter of fact, the Metropolitan District has seen some planning carried out right before its very eyes which has impressed the whole country and our friends across the water as one of the best executed pieces of city planning that has ever been carried out.

About 1885 the rapid growth of population and the inadequate systems of water supply and sewerage disposal, resulted in the creation of separate water and sewerage commissions to carry out the construction. Whatever the cities and towns in the district may think of the assessments which they have had to pay, the fact remains that experts measure up the efficiency of this work against that of any other public work in the country; and the verdict is very favorable to the commissions. The water system cost $41,000,000 and the sewerage sytem cost $15,000,000. Both were necessary in the interests of the public health. Both have proved their efficiency.

This period seems to have been almost in the nature of a rennaissance in its consideration of the welfare of the general population. In 1874 a commission was appointed to consider a general park system for Boston, and in 1875 a referendum resulted in a vote authorizing the creation of such a system.

The City of Boston, within its political limits, has spent $12,000,000 since 1875 for a system of public parks and playgrounds. Since 1893 the Metropolitan Park Commission has spent $14,000,000 and has laid out the great shore reservations of Nantasket, Revere, Lynn, Quincy, Winthrop and acquired the Charles River Basin and magnificent land reservations in the Blue Hills, the Middlesex Fells, the Mystic Valley and the Lynn Fells at a total cost of about $14,000,000.

In spite of the fact that all of these expenditures have been in the interest of the public health and the results have had a direct influence upon public efficiency, there are immediate necessities which have been practically neglected,—the development of traffic highways; the planning and connecting of transportation facilities and a better system of low priced housing.

The Boston Society of Architects presented a report in 1907 recommending the laying out and improvement of certain streets, a comprehensive system of dock development and many other public developments. In 1909 the Metropolitan Improvement commission reported in detail on the dock and terminal situation, the need of a more comprehensive transportation system, a connecting up of traffic highways, etc., etc.

The type of city planning of most importance to the average citizen and the kind which is being done in Germany, can best be set forth by considering one or two problems near at hand. Sometime if you are in a hurry, walk up Washington street between twelve and two and estimate the loss of time and energy in pushing your way through the crowd. Multiply the total by 50,000 to represent the number of people and that total by 300 to represent the number of days, and you will get some estimate of the cost to the population of an overcrowded street. Send for some goods to be shipped by freight from the Middle West and learn for yourself whether or not it takes it as long to come from Chicago to Boston as it does to cross the city from one freight terminal to the other.

If by chance you own a team which is transporting goods of any kind, estimate how much it costs you a week to pay your driver, the interest upon the investiment in the team and the extra wear and tear of the whole equipment in getting the team through the crowded streets and squares of the city of Boston or its more populous suburbs.

The parkways have made direct communication between cities and towns of the district, in many important instances, but these are located in only sixteen of the thirty-eight towns. If the connection for traffic vehicles could be made anywhere near as efficient, think of the saving it would mean in teaming costs. Imagine the streets of the district ten years from now with the motor truck in full swing and estimate the increase of congestion in squares and crowded streets which will be caused by more vehicles and more speed.

If you wish to cross the city of Boston how much cost does it represent to you if through imperfect connections it takes ten minutes longer than is really necessary and results in the failure to make connections which may take anywhere from ten minutes to an hour to reestablish. In the last fifty years the population of Boston increased more than 300 per cent. In the next fifty years the great increase is going to be made in the surrounding cities and towns. The population at present is about 1,411,000. If it should increase to only 3,000,000 by 1950 what will the result be unless we have some adequate provision for making general plans and sounding the warning, when specific work is under way?

In your own city and town large plots of land are being opened up and streets laid out which the town will be asked later to accept. Are they going to fit with the local system of streets or are they laying foundations for more work for your Poor Department and your Board of Health? These questions should be asked and answered in advance.

The answer does not mean big costs and useless ornamentation. It means the best efficiency for the purpose for which the plan is designed and it applies as directly to the tenement which will rent for $10 as it does to the business block or the town's mansion.

They do these things in other cities and gradually the indirect taxes go down, the community health improves, new business comes and one day the city wakes up to find its name among the market places of the world.

A THANKSGIVING SURPRISE

built under him would start him to coal. I should think he'd want to see them young ones with clean faces and full stummicks at least once in the year!"

The days flew, and the turkey grew still fatter and more complacent. The Bean children looked more and more wistful. They sat often on the fence in the chilly November air, their half clothed bodies shivering, their bare feet blue with cold. But with the eternal faith of childhood they watched the turkey in the hope that something would yet give them a taste of him.

Miss Abby's old maid heart grew soft sometimes, but hardened at thought of the lazy father and slovenly mother.

Miss Abby had had bad luck about Thanksgiving company. Everybody was elsewhere engaged—the minister and his family, the Browns and the Treshams. She had no relatives near. Have some one she must, for she had refused Matilda Jenkins' invitation on the plea of having company herself.

The day before Thanksgiving she had found no one and was worried. In the cold gray morning she came out to feed the chickens from a yellow crock held in the angle of her arm. When she had tossed the cornmeal to the hungry brood she closed the chicken yard gate, set down the crock and stood watching the turkey—and the house next door. She folded her thin arms across her blue calico chest for warmth and in what she saw forgot how cold it was.

Four of the eight Beans had the whooping cough, and their thin, sallow little faces, cleaner than usual, were flattened against the grimy panes overlooking the chicken yard. She could hear the wail of the baby and the coughs of the older ones.

"I just can't do it," she muttered and at last returned to the house, ill at ease and chilled to the bone.

She plied wood into the stove till the kitchen was stifling, but she could not get warm. Her teeth chattered in a chill, and in spite of hot lemonade and Jamaica ginger Miss Abby had to go to bed in the middle of the afternoon with hot flatirons at her feet and a mustard plaster on her chest.

She fell into a doze, broken by visions of the hungry little faces next door. She wished she had at least taken them over some vegetables. "I will—'long about night," she muttered and fell into a strange, wretched sleep.

When she awoke it was night and very cold. Pains stabbed her chest sharply, and her head throbbed dizzily. Then she seemed delirious and heard the babbling of hungry children. Then she went completely out of her head.

She came at last to herself, weak and feeble. The bedroom was very cold, but the fever was gone and the stabbing pains. She wrapped herself up and managed to light the kitchen fire, creeping back to bed till things warmed up. The door of the Bean house slammed, and she heard a child cough.

When the warmth from the kitchen filled her room she rose and went out to get some breakfast. She had never felt so weak in her life. She put on the coffeepot.

Miss Abby sat eating her toast with her feet in the oven. Mrs. Bean knocked and entered.

"Land sakes! Air you sick?"

"Sick! I ain't feelin' very spry," said Miss Abby sharply. "I went to bed yestiddy afternoon, I felt so sick!"

"We ain't seen you out this mornin', an' as it's Thursday an' Thanksgivin' we s'posed you had bad news that called you away in the night. The children's been feedin' the hens an' the turkey—the ones that ain't whoopin'."

"What you talkin' about?" snapped Miss Abby. "This is Thanksgivin', ain't it? I'm too sick to recollect it."

"I come to see if I could do somepin fer you all. You look mighty peaked," said Mrs. Bean. Miss Abby shook her head, and the woman was almost to the door when Miss Abby recalled her.

"Is your man at home?" she began abruptly, while Mrs. Bean stared. "Well, then, would he as lief kill that big turkey for me?"

"Why, sure, he would! You all air weak, an' that turkey looks mighty hefty."

"And can you come over and help me cook him?" Miss Abby went on. "I shall need help with the rest of the dinner, too, if I don't feel any sprier'n I do now. You can bring the baby and leave the others with him till dinner's ready. Then I want you should fetch them all over and let them eat all the turkey they can hold. I don't feel's if I could get away with more than ten pounds myself," she concluded grimly. The woman stood still staring, too astonished to express her gratitude even had she known how.

"Well," commanded Miss Abby, "if we don't git on the move dinner won't be ready before midnight."

"Yes'm," agreed the woman, letting herself out of the door. She sped across the yard more quickly than Miss Abby had ever yet seen her move.

"It'll take me a week to clean up after them, and it's encouraging that shiftless man," grumbled Miss Abby.

Then she heard from the Bean house a yell of joy that utterly demolished her New England conscience for the time being and sent a warm glow to the uttermost depths of her human heart. And she set to work on a dinner that was a record breaker in the Bean experiences.

Clark Declares He Never Meant Forcible Annexation of Canada

Washington, Nov. 28.—Speaker Champ Clark, after nine weeks of speaking and lecturing in nineteen states, returned to Washington and began conferences with other leaders over the work of congress which opens next Monday. Clark said that the coming session would be long, exceedingly busy and very important.

Mr. Clark said tariff revision would be the great issue of the next campaign. He declared the assaults on him, regarding Canadian annexation, was a misrepresentation for "political effect, general and personal," and said he had never even hinted at such "a wicked and quixotic scheme" as forcible annexation, "never dreamed of such a thing and would oppose it to the utmost."

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

"You would think he wouldn't strike a mosquito that was biting him," Sheldon said when Young had gone on board. "All the Norfolk islanders that have descended from the Bounty crowd are that way. But look at Young. Only three years ago, when he first got the Minerva, he was lying in Suu, on Malaita. There are a lot of returned Queenslanders there—a rough crowd. They planned to get his head. The son of their chief, old One Eyed Billy, had recruited on Lunga and died of dysentery. That meant that a white man's head was owing to Suu—any white man, it didn't matter who, so long as they got the head. And Young was only a lad and they made sure to get his easily. They decoyed his whaleboat ashore with a promise of recruits and killed all hands. At the same instant the Suu gang that was on board the Minerva jumped Young. He was just preparing a dynamite stick for fish, and he lighted it and tossed it in among them. One can't get him to talk about it, but the fuse was short, the survivors leaped overboard, while he slipped his anchor and got away. They've got 100 fathoms of shell money on his head now, which is worth £100. Yet he goes into Suu regularly. He was there a short time ago, returning thirty boys from Cape Marsh—that's the Fulerum brothers' plantation."

"At any rate, his news tonight has given me a better insight into the life down here," Joan said. "And it is colorful life, to say the least. The Solomons ought to be printed red on the charts—and yellow, too, for the diseases."

"The Solomons are not always like this," Sheldon answered. "Of course Berande is the worst plantation and everything it gets is the worst. All the old timers shake their heads at it. They say it has what you Americans call a hoodoo on it."

"Berande will succeed," Joan said stoutly. "I like to laugh at superstition. You'll pull through and come out the big end of the horn. The ill luck can't last forever. I am afraid though, the Solomons is not a white man's climate."

"It will be, though. Give us fifty years, and when all the bush is cleared off back to the mountains, fever will be stamped out, everything will be far healthier. There will be cities and towns here, for there's an immense amount of good land going to waste. The black, the brown and the yellow will have to do the work, managed by the white men. The black labor is too wasteful, however, and in time Chinese or Indian coolies will be imported."

"Then the blacks will die off?"

Sheldon shrugged his shoulders and retorted:

"Yes, like the North American Indian, who was a far nobler type than the Melanesian. The world is only so large, you know, and it is filling up"—

"And the unfit must perish?"

"Precisely so. The unfit must perish."

In the morning Joan was roused by a great row and hullabaloo. Captain Young had landed Satan at the moment when the bridge building gang had started along the beach. Satan was big and black, short haired and muscular and weighed fully seventy pounds. He did not love the blacks. Tommy Jones had trained him well, tying him up daily for several hours and telling off one or two black boys at a time to tease him. So Satan had it in for the whole black race, and the second after he landed on the beach the bridge building gang was stampeding over the compound fence and swarming up the cocoanut palms.

"Good morning," Sheldon called from the veranda, "and what do you think of the nigger chaser?"

"I'm thinking we have a task before us to train him into the house boys," she called back.

"And to your Tahitians, too. Look out, Noah! Run for it!"

Satan, having satisfied himself that the tree perches were unassailable, was charging straight for the big Tahitian.

But Noah stood his ground, though somewhat irresolutely, and Satan, to every one's surprise, danced and frisked about him with laughing eyes and wagging tail.

"Now that is what I might call a proper dog," was Joan's comment. "He is at least wiser than you, Mr. Sheldon. He didn't require any teaching to recognize the difference between a Tahitian and a black boy. What do you think, Noah? Why don't he bite you? He savvee you Tahitian, eh?"

Noa Noah shook his head and grinned.

"He no savvee me Tahitian," he explained. "He savvee me wear pants all the same white man."

"You'll have to give him a course in 'Sartor Resartus,'" Sheldon laughed, as he came down and began to make friends with Satan.

It chanced, just then, that Adamu Adam and Matauare, two of Joan's sailors, entered the compound from the far side gate. They had been down to the Balesuna, making an alligator trap, and, instead of trousers, were clad in lava-lavas that flapped gracefully about their stalwart limbs. Satan saw them and advertised his find by breaking away from Sheldon's hands and charging.

"No got pants," Noah announced, with a grin that broadened as Adamu Adam took to flight.

He climbed up the platform that supported the galvanized iron tanks which held the water collected from the roof. Foiled here, Satan turned and charged back on Matauare.

"Run, Matauare! Run!" Joan called. But he held his ground and waited the dog.

"He is The Fearless One—that is what his name means," Joan explained to Sheldon.

The Tahitian watched Satan coolly and when that sanguine mouthed creature lifted into the air in the final leap the man's hand shot out. It was a fair grip on the lower jaw, and Satan described a half circle and was flung to the rear, turning over in the air and falling heavily on his back. Three times he leaped and three times that grip on his jaw flung him to defeat. Then he contented himself with trotting at Matauare's heels, eying him and sniffing him suspiciously.

"It's all right, Satan; it's all right," Sheldon assured him. "That good fella belong along me."

Then Satan turned his attention to the three house boys, cornering Orntirt in the kitchen and rushing him against the hot stove, stripping the lava-lava from Lalaperu when that excited youth climbed a veranda post and following Viaburi on top the billiard table where the battle raged until Joan managed a rescue.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

APPLE DAINTIES.

EAT apples and live to be a hundred is advice some of us were given by our grandmothers. Wise old ladies, they knew the value of this fruit in keeping the system in order. Their own rosy cheeks and fair white skins were proofs of the value of their doctrine.

Apple Fritters.

For lunch there are apple fritters, golden dainties that come from the frying pan with an aroma that would tempt an epicure. If you have never made apple fritters try this recipe: Peel, core and cut two good sized sour apples into eighths, then slicing the eighths.

Prepare a batter of one and one-third cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds of a cupful of milk and one egg. Stir the slices of apple into the batter and drop by spoonfuls into hot fat. Fry until brown. Drain the fritters on paper, sprinkle with powdered sugar, and serve hot.

Apple Scallop.

Apple scallop is also worth a trial. It is easy to prepare. Peel and slice about a dozen small apples. Butter a baking dish and place in it a layer of apples, then one of sugar, cinnamon flour and butter.

You may now add another layer of apples and so continue until the dish is filled. Sprinkle cake crumbs over the top or add a layer of meringue. Bake slowly in the oven for an hour.

Apple lovers will enjoy apple and mint jelly. To prepare it take two pounds of tart apples, two bunches of mint, one-half cupful sugar to each cupful of juice and juice of one lemon. Cut the apples in small pieces and add a little water.

When it has been partly cooked add the mint leaves, which have been washed, dried and chopped fine. Strain when soft, keeping the juice that runs through first separate from that which is pressed through, as the first juice makes the clearer jelly. Measure the juice and add equal parts of sugar in proportion to the juice. Boil to the jelly state. A short time before it is done add the lemon juice and something to tint the jelly green.

THE DEFICIENT TURKEY

By GERTRUDE M'KENZIE.

MISS ELLA WHITE and Cousin Dan,
They dined with us Thanksgiving day.
He is an awful smart young man.
And Ella White—well, I must say
She seemed real tickled to be able
To sit next to him at the table.

"Now, when the turkey's cut," said he,
"I hope the wishbone is our share."
"Yes, I've a wish all made," said she,
"As good as yours is, I declare."
And then she blushed, and he got red,
But what the wish was neither said.

Now, we eat vegetarian food.
Our turkey wasn't really meat.
'Twas made of nuts and bread all screwed
Together from its neck to feet,
With macaroni sticks and things
To imitate the legs and wings.

Then ma said: "Isn't it a shame?
I never put a wishbone in.
You cannot try your wishing game"—
But Brother Jim began to grin.
"I'll bet their wishes coincide,"
Said he, "so let the wishbone slide."

By using PRATT'S BREAD you require less butter and can save money.

HINTS ON HOW TO COOK YOUR TURKEY

ROAST TURKEY.

Materials—Procure one 10-pound young turkey, from Berry Brothers, the Market with a reputation. Now, one pint of cracker crumbs, one pint of bread crumbs, one half cup of butter, one teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of pepper, one tablespoon of grated onion and poultry seasoning to taste.

Way of Preparing—Pour a cup of hot water over the bread crumbs and squeese them dry. Mix them with the cracker crumbs add the butter melted and the seasonings. Clean and wipe the turkey dry inside and out. Stuff with the other mixture. Truss and cover the breast and legs with a thin coating of butter. Place in a pan and put into a hot oven, watch carefully and when nicely browned add a pint of boiling water. Reduce the heat and cook for two hours, basting frequently. The success in roasting a turkey perfectly depends on the basting and the proper heat. When the turkey is tender remove from the pan to a hot platter. Thicken the liquor in the pan with a little flour mixed with cold water. Strain into a gravy boat and serve. Garnish the platter on which you serve your turkey with fried sausage cakes, fried oysters, celery croquettes or chestnut croquettes.

George McKee, U. S. S. Marietta Re-enlisted in Navy

HAS MANY SOUVENIRS

George McKee of the U. S. S. Marietta U. S. N., is on a thirty days' furlough having re-enlisted for the third time in the service of Uncle Sam. He was given a great send off by his ship-mates at Portsmouth, N. H., the home port of the ship.

At his home 239 Water street Saturday evening he entertained a number of his friends and displayed souvenirs which he gathered during his first and second cruise around the world and explained some of his experiences in different countries. The evening was pleasantly spent with songs, recitations, whist and dancing, the games being in charge of Fred Steinbrenner.

Refreshments were served by his mother assisted by Mrs. Jane Gorman, Mrs. Joseph Brown and Mrs. Helen Kelly. Favorite songs were rendered by Alex. McKee, "You're as welcome as the flowers in May" and "Gee ain't it great to be home," all hands joining in the chorus.

A number of ship mates were present and each helped in entertaining. A recitation entitled "Kelly's dream," was rendered by Joseph G. Kelly. "Annie Lawrie" and other Scottish melodies were sung by Mrs. James McLellan and warmly received as were "My Old New Hampshire Home" by George McKee and a very pleasing solo by W. A. Kelly, "The Old Arm Chair."

A selection on the violin by James Gorman and some of aHrry Lauders latest hits by John Murphy; "Afton Water" by Joseph Brown and the recitation of the "Curfew shall not ring tonight," by ship-mate Harry Askew were enjoyed, also piano selections by Mrs. Jennie Steinbrenner, Mrs. Emma Savoie and Miss Ruth Kelly.

The party broke up in the wee sma' 'ours of the morning singing "He's a jolly good fellow," an "Auld Lang Syne."

PLAN PORT FROM LYNN TO QUINCY

Mass. Reform Club Discussion At Monday's Meeting

MR. IVES SPEAKS

"The development of the Port of Boston," was the subject for discussion before the Massachusetts Reform Club at Young's Hotel, Monday evening, and it was treated by Benjamin N. Johnson, who said that he believed the water front should be religiously protected and that the new board should address itself to the task of laying out a comprehensive plan for development from Lynn to Quincy.

David O. Ives, transportation manager of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, said one of the fundamental propositions in development of the port is the encouragement of competitive railroad lines to make Boston a terminal. He cited how such competition benefitted New York. He said the Boston & Maine system, which brought 60 per cent. of the business to Boston, had entirely inadequate docking terminals, while the Boston & Albany, which brought only 10 per cent, had excellent docking facilities. Concentration of foreign traffic terminals at one point he considers of vital importance.

Atlantic avenue should be developed and made Boston's show place instead of being a disgrace, he continued. He said the reason the project for a steamship line to Texas fell through was because it was felt such a line would hurt other financial interests of the city. There is at least 100,000 tons of New England freight that goes annually to California via New York. He suggested as one important means of developing the port would be a large service of car floats and lighters flying across the harbor.

Mr. Peabody said much of the money spent by other ports in the pastdecadefor development—vast as the sums were in many instances—was spent mainly to put those ports in a condition or position which Boston occupies naturally. Boston is only eight miles from the sea. New York 15, Philedelphia 30 and Balti, more about 100 miles before it is free of the capes.

The one great thing that has been demonstrated in the experience of developing other ports is the necessity of a single controlling power and the futility of individual ownership of docks, he said. Two steamboat lines a few years ago tried to get docking facilities on Atlantic avenue and it was found that the property was so tied up in trusts that it was impossible to get the owners together on any project. The steamship lines went elsewhere.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN.

The annual report of Royal E. Cabell commissioner of internal revenue at Washington, given out on Saturday, makes several startling declarations.

All records were broken in the past fiscal year in the production of alcoholic liquor.

The smoking of opium is a widespread vice in this country and opium "joints" exist in every city of considerable size.

The double system of taxing olemargarine is corrupting grocers, and gross frauds are being perpetrated on the butter buying public.

The internal revenue receipts last year were $322,526,299, the greatest in the history of the government.

Corporations making returns under the new corporation tax law numbered 270, 202, with an aggregate capital of $67,886,430,519. The aggregate net income to the stockholders was $3,360,250,642.

The year's production of distilled spirits amounted to 175,402,395 gallons, nearly 7,000,000 gallons more than in the previous banner year, 1907. The production of beer, ale, etc., amounted to 63,216,851 barrels, nearly 4,000,000 more than in the previous record year, 1910.

The amount of liquor held in bonded warehouses for ripening now reaches the enormous total of 249,279-346 gallons.

To remedy the olemargarine situation, Mr. Cabell suggests that fraud would be wiped out if a single standard of taxation for the colored and uncolored product be established, and if the manufacturers be required to put their product in small sealed packages instead of selling it in bulk.

DEATH LIST OF THIRTEEN

Forty-Seven Football Players Badly Injured During Season of 1911

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Football games killed thirteen persons and severely injured forty-seven others during 1911, according to records kept by Chicago sporting writers. Of these four were "hold-overs," having been injured in 1910, but not succumbing until months after being hurt.

Last year fourteen were killed and forty-three were hurt. The largest decrease this year was in the number of college players injured, only two being killed this year, compared with four in 1910 and ten in 1909. One of this year's injured was Miss Irene Butrun, a pupil of the high school at Evansville, Ind., whose arm was broken. Of the colleges Michigan suffered heaviest in injuries.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The Quincy A. A. and the U. S. S. Rhode Island football elevens will clash again next Saturday and it is sincerely hoped that the local players will be successful in turning the tables. There is no question but what police protection should be available in order to keep spectators from crowding in on the gridiron, thus harrowing the efforts of the players, to indulge in the sort of game enjoined by the rules.

A record breaking crowd was in attendance last Saturday, but the attendance next Saturday gives every promise of being still larger.

The Quincy Gym Girls have organized their basket ball team for the season and are out to beat all records. The majority of games will be played away from home.

Challenges have been issued to all basket ball teams in and about Boston composed of the fairer sex and the manager, Miss Helen F. Mitchell, of 55 Pleasant street, expects that her quintet will bring home great laurels to the Granite city in the basket ball field.

"Charlie" Mullaly the former English High school and St. Alphonsus A. A. Star, now a resident of this city, is to manage the Brockton basketball team in the Bay State league. The manager himself is quite a player and has proved his efficiency in all departments of athletics.

The members of the party are Governors Eberhardt of Minnesota, Carey of Wyoming, Burke of North Dakota, Norris of Montana, Vessey of South Dakota, West of Oregon and Hawley of Idaho. California, Colorado and Washington are represented by special delegates, sent by the governors of those states. Governor Oddie of Nevada will join the party at Chicago today.

The products of the field, of the mine and of the orchards of the vast empire of the west will be lauded and shown to the people of various states through which the special train of eleven cars will pass.

The governors will try to establish a closer commercial relationship and to encourage immigration and investment.

DEESTRICKT SCHOOL WELL ATTENDED

A full house greeted the opening performance of the "Deestrickt Skule" in the hall of St. John's Parochial school, Monday evening. The presentation of the old time cast proved a source of pleasure from start to finish and from beginning to end, the audience was in a state of mirth and laughter. The scene of the old time school house and the methods which were employed about a half a century ago, were presented vividly to hundreds who were in attendance and all the characters were depicted in a manner that would reflect credit even upon professional performers.

The entire affair was in charge of Andrew Dinnegan, whose fame in minstrelsy is too well known to require any comment concerning the success of the production of the old school play. The scenes were all laid in the farm-yard school and the entire cast was made up of well known local talent, all of whom have appeared before the public on previous occasions. It would be a difficult task to select the individual stars, so great were the performances of all. John Mahon was the pianist and among those who participated were Mr. Pendergast, a school teacher, Andrew Dinnegan; Obedia Buzzard, Matthew Fay; Michael Dooley, Peter J. Colligan; Sammy Brooks, Frank Driscoll; Johnny Greene, Daniel Driscoll; Cymantha Piper, Agnes Beeman; Susie Crowfoot, Mary Kilrain; Dorcas Dolittle, Annie Burke; Rose Ketchum, Nellie Desmond; Dominie Salvutch, Fred McDonald; Sally Brown, Hattie Daley; Luther Weeks, Ernest McMahon; pupils, Zita Pitts, suffragette, Lulu Driscoll.

R. society of West Quincy, an organization in which the late Mr. Joyce had displayed great activity for a number of years.

The late Thomas Joyce was in his 30th year. He was born and reared in West Quincy, and during his many years in the employ of the Bay State Street Railway company, had associated himself with scores of people to whom he had always endeared himself with his affable personality and hospitable courtesy. He is survived by his wife, his father Michael Joyce, one of the most familiar figures in the west section of the city, five brothers and four sisters, all of whom are well and familiarly known in local circles. Besides being a conductor, the deceased also had charge of the advertisements that were installed in the street cars of the local division.

Delegates were present from the Weymouth division of the local car company were also present in large numbers and the Ave Maria Council of the Knights of Columbus was also ably represented.

Burial was in the family lot at St. Mary's cemetery where a large number of mourners saw the remains of the departed one interred. A number of City Officials were present at the mass and other prominent representative citizens were also present to share the immediate family of the deceased in their heartfelt bereavement.

These included Mayor William T. Shea, City Clerk McGilvray, Sealers of Weights and Measures James Cantill and others Edward L. Bean, the well known local undertaker.

A wide profusion of floral tributes were in evidence and the scene of the cortage itself was a most touching one

Two Killed and Many Injured In Riot at Portugal's Capital

Lisbon, Nov. 28.—The disorders which occurred here, owing to the expulsion of two Chinese women for the illegal exercise of a "cure" for blindness, at one time attained serious proportions. All the streets in the centre of the city were occupied by the cavalry, who charged continuously in all directions.

NEWSPAPER OF ATLANTA LAUDS JAMES DUNCAN

Granite Cutters' Secretary Big Man At Convention

OF A. F. Of L.

James Duncan, popular secretary of the G. C. I. A. and First Vice President of the American Federation of Labor, who has been attending the convention at Atlanta, Ga., met with the usual fine reception his personality warrants. A clipping from the Atlanta Georgian is as follows:

"One of the handsome souvenirs of the labor convention is the report of James Duncan, of Quincy, Mass., upon his official visit to the secretariat, or international trades convention at Budapest, Hungary, in August last. No more appreciated souvenir of the Atlanta convention has been presented to the delegates, for the written account of James Duncan's visit through Great Britain and Europe is as entertaining and interesting as any of the famous travel books of Bayard Taylor, and the other authors who have "done" Europe.

"James Duncan, first vice president of the American Federation of Labor, is one of the greatest of all the labor unionists of the world. Some of his friends think he is easily the premier of the American Federation of Labor cabinet. Often he is referred to as "the big man" of the convention, and he is a big man physically and mentally, which has been proven often in the present convention by his easy handling of difficult situations in the most conservative but determined fashion. He is a master of parliamentary practice, and ready at all times to go into a heated debate. Events have proven that what James Duncan says is generally the 'last word' on the subject.

" 'If a convention of the representative men of all nations were called, that man James Duncan would rank with the best,' whispered one newspaper man admiringly to another Wednesday, after he had spoken on the impracticability of selecting American Federation of Labor officers by the initiative and referendum.

" 'Wouldn't he make a great United States senator?' said another.

"And when two veteran newspaper men size up a man as able to rank thus, he is certainly 'some man.' "

—The tentative plan of the Homestead Commission to lend the credit of the State on a 3 per cent basis to the provision of cheap but sanitary and attractive suburban homes for workingmen will naturally bring before the next Legislature a sharp issue between the public welfare and private speculation in land values. But as the State has already decided to go into dock development on a large scale, it will find some difficulty in discovering a logical reason why it should not likewise go into home development.—Boston Common.

CANDIDATES RECEIVE GREAT OVATIONS

Stone and Wall Enthusiastically Received At Houghs Neck Rally

BOTH OUTLINE PLATFORM

The annual Houghs Neck rally, an event whcih is always looked forward to with great interest, because of the fact that a cordial invitation to attend, is open to every aspirant for municipal honors, took place in Associates' Hall Tuesday evening. Even the inclement weather which prevailed could not deter the "natives" from turning out in large numbers, and the result was that one of the best and most largely attended meetings ever etertained in Associates' Hall was in order for the occasion. The meeting was resided over by the congenial captain, Oliver G. Fosdick, vice-president of the Improvement Association, and it is needless to say that his experience in this capacity in the past rendered him a most efficient master of the ceremonies.

The principal feature of the event was the presence on the scene, of both candidates for Mayor and a remarkable coincidence of the meeting was that James E. Wall and Eugene R. Stone sat beside each other during the rally, thereby proving that a friendly feeling of fellowship exists between them. The majority of those who attended were desirous of hearing the attitude of the different candidates concerning the immediate section of the city where the gathering was convened and all speakers were listened to with great attention.

The first speaker of the evening was introduced in a happy mode as a man who was too well known to the Houghs Neck residents to need an introduction. He had resided in that section for a number of years and a great demonstration was in evidence when James E. Wall, democratic candidate for Mayor began his remarks. Mr. Wall in opening, assured those present that he entertained no inimical disposition toward his opponents but felt that the issues of the campaign would result in the election of the man who would conduct the affairs of the city in the same manner as they have been conducted during the past four years by the present executive.

Mr. Wall then proceeded to outline the policies he had adopted in the campaign and went at length into a discussion of them. Mr. Wall advocated that a car run all night between Quincy and Boston and showed the benefits that would result in the establishment of the same. He spoke of the desirability of having a live Board of Trade in order to induce the establishment of more industries in this city. He spoke on the equalization of taxation and the re-organization of all the departments of the city upon a systematic and economic basis. He said he believed that all contracts should be open to fair competition and that all companies and corporations having contracts with the city of Quincy should be made to conform to them strictly. He described the condition of a number of streets in the city and declared that attention should be forthcoming in this regard at the earliest possible date.

He said that the city affairs should be conducted on business principles and felt that his 31 years' experience as a business man should eminently qualify him for the position of Mayor. He told of the success he had met with in his business career and said that he would devote the same energies in the conducting of the affairs of the city. He talked at length on the waterfront facilities that this city possess and spoke in advocacy of the etablishment of a suitable dock system. He made no promises whatsoever, but asserted that if elected he would show no discrimination because of party ties and would endeavor at all times to impart a non-partisan business administration. He was roundly applauded at the conclusion of his remarks.

The next speaker was the republican candidate for Mayor Eugene R. Stone, and he too, was given a rousing reception. Mr. Stone talked from a business standpoint and related his experience with different matters in the past concerning the interests of the city. He spoke of his experience as a member of the city council, relating the conclusion he had drawn from his four years in that body, and the opinions he had been enabled to draw as chairman of the committees on fire and police and as a member of the finance committee. He felt that a man in order to be mayor should know the needs of the city, which he asserted could not be ascertained in any way save through a careful investigation of all circumstances and a thorough survey of matters of vital importance.

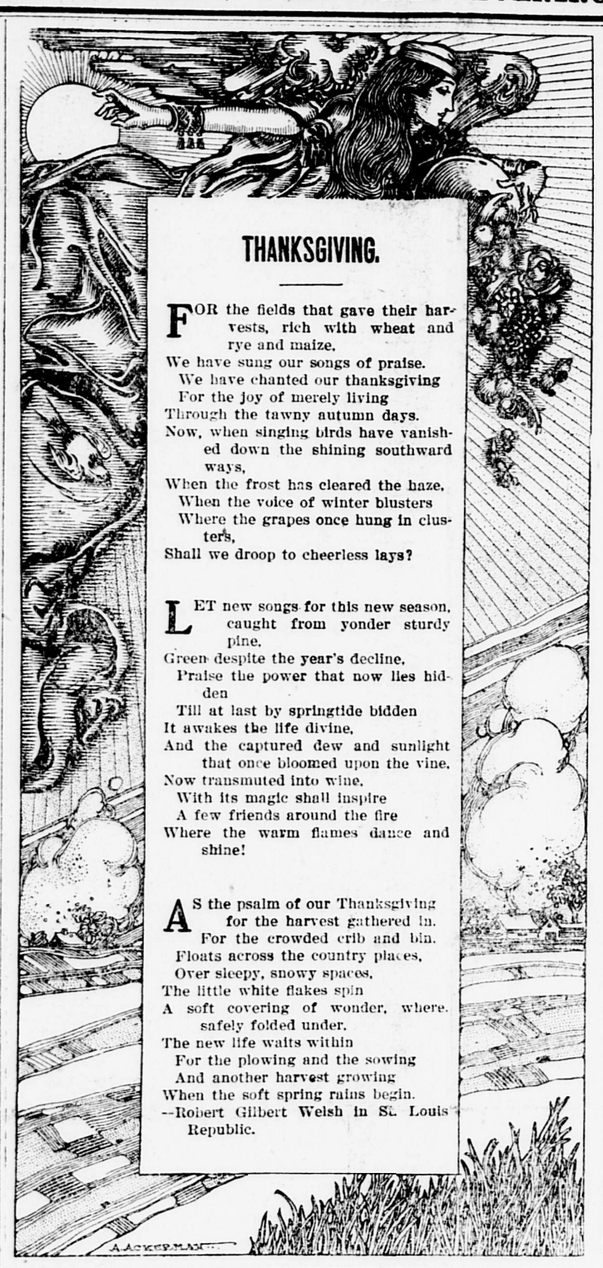

He outlined his platform in detail, stating what he had learned in his connections with the Board of Trade, of which organization he is now president. He gave a detailed account of the city's financial candition, its resources and its liabilities, and felt that his experience with these matters in the past was sufficient to warrant his ability to cope with the same as Mayor of the city this coming year. He said that all these problems must be met honestly and fearlessly and solved solely in the interest of the city. He spoke of the economical methods that should be employed and advocated an economy that would enable the city to progress and not retrogress. He said that the head of each department should be a man of good probity and one who was willing to give the city an adequate return for his pay.

He spoke at length upon the freight transportations of the city, and advocated for the local merchants proper water, as well as railway transportations. He spoke of the development of the water front and the establishment of a public dock. He said that all laws should be impartially enforced and promised if elected to conform to all principles that tended towards the interest and welfare of the city.

The next speaker was Councilman John D. Smith, who was introduced as a man who had always taken a most active part in the interest of the Houghs Neck section. Mr. Smith stated that he had represented Ward Four in the city council for three years, and had endeavored at all times to promote the needs of the entire city as well as his own immediate district. He asked those present to make a survey of his record and said that he would be willing to rest his case in the hands of the voters. He believed that he had represented the city in the best way he possibly knew how and asked the voters to support him for councilman at large if they believed that he had discharged his duties in the past to entire satisfaction. He also commended the men who were seking office with him, and presented a few reasons why Mr. Wall should be elected Mayor. He also spoke on the candidacy of Thomas McGrath, candidate for councilman from Ward One, and praised the local candidate Councilman John R. S. Ross, who is seeking re-election. He made no promises whatsoever, but asserted that if elected, he would endeavor to perform his duties in the future, as in the past. He was given a great ovation.

William P. Thompson, candidate for the city council from Ward One, had

THANKSGIVING.

FOR the fields that gave their harvests, rich with wheat and rye and maize,
We have sung our songs of praise.
We have chanted our thanksgiving
For the joy of merely living
Through the tawny autumn days.
Now, when singing birds have vanished down the shining southward ways,
When the frost has cleared the haze,
When the voice of winter blusters
Where the grapes once hung in clusters,
Shall we droop to cheerless lays?

LET new songs for this new season, caught from yonder sturdy pine,
Green despite the year's decline,
Praise the power that now lies hidden
Till at last by springtide bidden
It awakes the life divine,
And the captured dew and sunlight that once bloomed upon the vine,
Now transmuted into wine,
With its magic shall inspire
A few friends around the fire
Where the warm flames dance and shine!

AS the psalm of our Thanksgiving for the harvest gathered in.
For the crowded crib and bin.
Floats across the country places,
Over sleepy, snowy spaces,
The little white flakes spin
A soft covering of wonder, where safely folded under.
The new life waits within
For the plowing and the sowing
And another harvest growing
When the soft spring rains begin.
—Robert Gilbert Welsh in St. Louis Republic.

Instructive Talk By J. J. Hurley At Wollaston Church

CONCERT ALSO ENJOYED

"Immigration" was the subject of J. J. Hurley, U. S. Deputy Commissioner of immigration for the Port of Boston, before the Congregational club of Wollaston Tuesday evening.

Mr. Hurley's talk was as instructive and interesting as usual, his many anecdotes, told in his own inimitable fashion, adding much to the evening's enjoyment.

At the business meeting mention was made of the third annual entertainment of the club which takes place on next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. This year it will take the form of a vaudeville in which many of the club's leading jokesters will be seen.

Charles F. West commended the club on the businesslike way in which it had started its meetings this year and for the excellent program it had in store.

Rufus B. Tobey offered resolutions on the death of Charles G. Farwell, a club member and a prominent worker in the church.

Referring to immigration as a subject which was as fascinating as it was vital, Commissioner Hurley said that two classes of opinion are found. One says, "Open wide the doors and let everybody in." The other says, "Close the doors and let nobody in. There is a happy middle path of judgement and discernment. The subject should be dealt with from a practical point of view.

The immigrant forms today the material for the American citizen of tomorrow. Some are difficult to deal with but that human sifting machine—the United States Government— goes on unceasingly, separating the wheat from the chaff.

Immigration is one of the most serious problems facing the United States today. All other questions of material things sink into insignificance besides it.

The large proportions of aliens entering in the last five years make us wonder if it is not time to look forward to further legislation on immigration.

BROTHERHOODS' FIRST SOCIAL

1st Pres. Church Society Had Fine Time Tuesday Evening

SONGS AND SPEECHES

The Brotherhood of the First Presbyterian church held its first social of the season, last evening in the lecture room of the church. In spite of the stormy weather there was a large number of men and their friends present. It was a profitable and inspiring evening, for the time was well spent in song and speech. The Brotherhood stands for mutual help, unity fellowship, the other man. These were emphasized as some of the characteristics of true Brotherhood.

Miss Minnie Miller and Mrs. John Bell sang at their best. Mr. Jas. Smith and Mr. Anderson sang several fine songs. Mr. F. Meakin gave a number of recitations. Remarks were made by Mr. George Wilson, Mr. Alex Clarke, Mr. Bisset and Rev. J. A. Matheson.

The remainder of the evening was spent in enjoying the refreshments and in much merriment and sociability.

—Harry K. Thaw is at last engaged in doing something for which mention of his name in the papers is justified. He is studying law, with the purpose of passing an examination, so as to show he is not a paranoic. The cheering feature of this announcement is that if he succeeds in his aim, he is likely to be compelled to answer for the crime he committed, and thus to enable the world to get rid of him—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

NOTICE.

Thursday Thanksgiving day being a legal holiday the office of the Quincy Daily Ledger will be closed all day.

A magazine of poetry is to be established in Chicago, and our poets can no doubt get their stuff printed on paying the space rates.

It seems strange that some people's idea of celebrating thankfulness to God is to take the inevitable step that lead to a first class stomach ache.

Alfred Tennyson Dickens of England says our railroad trains are the best in the world. Our railroad men can't believe that or they wouldn't get mad and smash them up so frequently.

LEST WE FORGET.

Quincy is thankful for a churchgoing community. For fine churches in which to worship and for religious and honorable servants of the Almighty to conduct the services.

Quincy is blessed with beautiful surroundings, plenty of open space in which to breath God's pure air, magnificent scenery and sparkling water.

Quincy is thankful for honest and conscientious public officials, for the realization of the fact that city offices are held by men who are exerting every effort in seeing that their stewardship represents the very best that is in them.

Quincy realizes the fine work that is being done by the department of public safety and the superiority of its fearless fire fighters. Over this great, broad universe a more valiant body of men cannot be found.

Quincy is thankful for its excellent schools and educational facilities, a curriculum that is endorsed and used as a model by educational boards in other sections of the country, faithful teachers from the lowest to the highest grades, a brilliant school committee and a superintendent of rare executive ability and pedagogical attainments.

Quincy is thankful for its war on demon rum, for the absence of saloons and the protection of mothers, sisters, boys and the home, for its No-Licence league, for its Kings and Sedgwicks and others who are exerting every effort for the extention of the good work in this community.

Quincy glories in its Women's clubs, its Associated charities, Anti-Tuberculosis league and other organization that are doing so much for civic advancement.

WERE GEMS OF GRAND OPERA

Appreciative Audience At Concert Direction Mr. Keating

LOCAL MEN AT PIANOS

A gem of grand opera was the feature presented in Music Hall, Tuesday evening, and despite the inclement weather that prevailed, the affair was attended by a large and most appreciative audience. The concert was furnished under the direction of Joseph A. Keating, a well known local business man, and was pronounced a marked success by all who were fortunate enough to listen to the high class talent.

The artists who performed included Mrs. Hellen Donovan Kerins of this city, Miss Rose Bryant of New York city, Mr. Archer Leslie Hood, also of New York city, and Mr. Robert Cavendish of London, England. The above mentioned composed a quartette of singers, whose renditions of various selections, caused the many present to give evidence of their heartfelt appreciation by continuous applause.

All four sung the first number and the manner in which they accredited themselves is worthy of favorable comment. Mrs. Kerins was the soprano, Miss Bryant rendered the contralto, Mr. Hood the tenor, while the gentleman from across the water, Mr. Cavendish furnished the bass accompaniment. The singers were rather late in arriving, yet the audience would have been amply repaid no matter how much anxiety was expressed.

Four grand upright pianos were on the stage, and the accompaniments to the singers, were ably furnished by professors Frank Wrigley, Clarence J. Fouche, Frank Gilbert and John Mahan.

Solos were rendered by each of the singers, and each of them was accorded a fine reception. All four pianists played simultaneously, and added to the singing of the quartette, which occurred in conjunction with it, the feature was acclaimed to have been about the best of its nature ever produced in local circles.

The program consisted of the following:

Sextette, from Lucia arranged for quartette, Donizetti
Mrs. Kerins, Miss Bryant, Messrs. Hood and Cavendish
Solo, Toreador song from Carmen Bizet
Robert Cavendish
Solo, "How could I fain have slumbered," from Der Freischutz, Weber

ANNUAL SERVICE B. P. O. E.

At the regular meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks, Tuesday evening, arrangements were perfected for the annual service in memory of brothers who have gone to the great beyond, which will be held in Alpha hall Sunday evening. Music will be furnished by the Alpha quartet, and the general eulogy will be delivered by Judge Thomas P. Riley. The religious invocation will be by a well known local clergyman.

The service is a public one and the friends and ladies of the members are cordially invited to attend. Light refreshments will be served at the club house after the service.

—Whether we are happy or not, successful or not and possessed of the friendship and good will of others or not, rests mainly with ourselves. Whether we are contented one day and disgruntled the next depends to a great extent upon how we start each day and in what frame of mind we meet its developments.

BAKER WINS IN FAST CROSS COUNTRY RUN

In one of the closest and most exciting foot races ever witnessed in local circles, Baker, the plucky Weymouth High runner finished ahead of Kinsbury, a well known local sprinter, by a small margin, in the cross country run observed here yesterday between track teams of Weymouth and Quincy High schools. The race was run over a course of two and a half miles. The start was made at the corner of Butler road and Putnam street thence along Butler road to Valley street, to Coddington street to Woodward avenue, to Greenleaf street, thence to Valley street in a circuitous route, back again to Valley street and finally to Butler road and Putnam street, whence the race had started.

The runners finished in the following order, Butler, Weymouth High; Kingsbury, Quincy High; Williams Quincy High; Talbot, Weymouth High; Phillips, Weymouth High; Hayden, Quincy High; Safford, Quincy High; Haviland, Weymouth High. Baker was credited with one point, Kinsbury with two, Williams with three, Talbot with four, Phillips with five, and Hayden with six. The sum totals showed Weymouth High with 10 points, and the local High school with 11 points. Weymouth, having the lesser number of points, was the winner of the run.

The time for the distance was 16 minutes, and 2 seconds, a remarkably fast performance considering the conditions of the different streets. Kinsbury was considerably handicapped because of the fact that he ran with sneakers, while the winner of the race wore running shoes. Both the aforementioned kept closely together throughout the race, but within striking distances of the finish, the Quincy lad slipped in the mud and was unable to catch his opponent. It was a game race from start to finish, even though the weather and grounds were of the most unfavorable variety.

George A. Sullivan of the B. A. A. track team was the starter, while Warren Robinson and Charles Wade were the judges at the finish.

Q.—According to the statistics compiled by the U. S. Government Census Bureau, there are something over 245 different religious denominations in this country today. Which one of these did Christ refer to when He said—"Upon this rock I will build my Church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it?"—Matthew xvi, 18. When did Christ establish this Church? (J. A. C.)

Answer.—Our Lord Jesus is the Head of the Church, which is His Body. This Church was organized or "established" on the day of Pentecost, when the Holy Spirit came upon His followers who were gathered together at Jerusalem. From that time on the Church has been in existence and in process of development, and "the gates of hell cannot prevail against it." This Church is being made up of an "elect" class—the "saints"—who are being gathered out of all classes and denominations. These are the ones referred to in the Scriptures as having their names enrolled in the Lambs book of life (Revelation iii, 5; xxi, 27) and not necessarily in some one particular church book. Doubtless, there are some of the saintly followers of Christ in all of the various denominations, and these when all gathered out and associated with the Lord in the glories of the Heavenly Kingdom, will constitute the Bride, the Church of Christ.

IMMIGRATION

The influx is altogether too large for the good of the country and more stringent regulations should be made regarding the criminal classes. A higher physical standard should be enforced and as many of the undesirable as possible should be excluded, Mr. Hurley spoke at length on the various presidents' views on the subject, from the time of Washington up to the present administration.

There are three causes for immigration namely: attaction, expulsion and solicitation.

This country is a mighty magnet. America is the magic word throughout Europe. It means money and liberty—two things that the European peasant misses. American wages are the honey pots that draw the European flies.

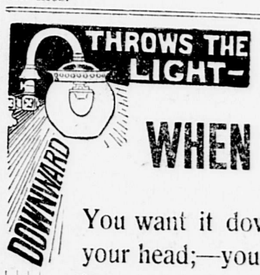

Racial and religious prosecution are responsible for the expulsion from the Old World, while the solicitation is offered by the sub agents of the big steamship companies.

Mr. Hurley was not opposed to those doing a legitimate business, but had a most scathing arraignment for those who lured immigrants by means of false standards to this country.

The latter part of the Commissioner's address dealt with the trajedy of the excluded. In the return of those immigrants the inspectors are charged with a grave responsibility.

Humor and pathos were both touched on in these human interest stories and many times Mr. Hurley drew hearty laughter and applause with some clever "take off" of the different nationalities.

Through the courtesy of the M. Steinert Company a concert by the Victor Victrola was enjoyed during the evening.

Anty Drudge Causes a Panic in Washboilers.

Anty Drudge—"Well, well, well! So my work is beginning to show even in the store windows. When I see washboilers offered at half price, I feel just as though the women were thanking me for releasing them from the slavery of the old-fashioned washday, with its back-breaking rubbing—its ruinous boiling—and its sickening smell. For Fels-Naptha changes washday to play-day."

Modern progress hasn't forgotten the woman at the tub.

Fels-Naptha proves that.

Time was when medicine wasn't considered good unless it was strong enough or tasted bad enough half to choke the patient.

Some folks who don't know about that new way of washing think that washday must be a day of seething suds, scalding water, perspiration and general misery.

But Fels-Naptha is converting these people who have been tied to the not-good-enough method.

You see there is a way to wash clothes summer or winter in cool or lukewarm water, a way that saves your strength, your time and your temper, and preserves the garments from the ruinous, fibre-destroying boiler.

That way is the Fels-Naptha way.

Look for the red and green wrapper.

The Christmas meeting of Quincy Alliance is being arranged by Mr. John W. Sanborn, and will be the only meeting of the month. It will be held in First church parlor Dec. 9th at three o'clock.

QUINCY YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

The regular monthly social of the Young Women's club was held Saturday evening. The social took the form of a Poverty party, and the members came dressed in the very poorest clothing. The evening was passed playing games and dancing. Lunches, wrapped in newspaper, and consisting of sandwiches and cake were served. The committee in charge were: Miss Mabel E. Lovejoy, chairman, Misses Maud Briggs, May Herne, Uuida Keay, May Young, Pearl Keay, Gertrude A. Shaw, Dorothy Kitson, Agnes Reardon and Florence Hart.

The second meeting of the dramatic committee of the club will be held next Saturday evening, at the club house. All those desiring to join are requested to be present.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The Quincy Women's club seldom has a stormy day for its meetings and though Tuesday was an exception, it being very wet, there was a goodly gathering of club members present to enjoy the fine musical program and lecture.

Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, president, called the meeting to order. Following the secretary's report the corresponding secretary made a report for the Art Committee of the State Federation urging a better acquaintance with art and more use of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. Interest the pupils in the schools hold exhibitions and stimulate interest in art. Club members were invited to attend a conference at the Art Museum Dec. 7, morning and afternoon. For admission use personal card with name of club.

The Arts and Crafts committee announced classes in millinery, dressmaking, china painting, basketry leather, jewelry, stenciling and Irish crochet. Terms moderate. Beautiful and artistic gifts could be made for Christmas at small expense as only three lessons at $1.50 would be needed in leather and Mrs. Horst the teacher would furnish beautiful designs and supply necessary tools and leather when desired. In basketry there would be six lessons for $2.50.

The Legislative committee asked members to not only put down in their own engagement calendar the date Jan. 8, gentlemen's night, but to also put it in their husband's as it was hoped to get out a large attendance of men as a fine entertainment was promised. Mrs. Emily Bishop would give Scenes from Congress, which other clubs had found exteremely entertaining and especially enjoyed by men. The committee wasalso keeping posted on legislation pertaining to women and told of the recent law passed in Illinois pensioning widows $10 per month and $5 additional for each child, which took a great burden from poor hardworking mothers. It was hoped to pass the same law in Massachusetts and a meeting was to be held Jan. 1 in Boston which members interested in the furtherance of the bill were urged to attend.

The Philanthropy committee had made out its Thanksgiving list for worthy people and arranged for a party at the Quincy home on Nov. 29. Members were asked to help stamp out socialism among Finnish girls by not employing girls belonging to the Socialist club. A committee of three had been appointed to see what could be done for these girls as an offset, in the way of attractive, wholesome entertainment. The Young Women's club which meets at the club house was flourishing but the girls very much wanted a gymnasium. It had been suggested that the use of Woodward or High school gym be asked for certain nights a week.

An exception was to be made in club rules for the annual musicale Dec. 12 and the committee announced that beside club members who would use their own membership card, there would be about 500 guests tickets on sale which could be procured of the Custodian and her committee also of the Club Treasurer and members of the Music committee as follows: Mrs. Badger, Mrs. Brewer, Mrs. Crocker, Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Magee, Mrs. Merrill, Mrs. McDonough, Mrs. Ricker, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Jameson, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Wellington, Mrs. H. W. Pinkham and Mrs. J. B. Worster. The tickets were limited but if any remained unsold they would be on sale at the door the afternoon of the musicale. The Exchange is to have a candy sale at the musicale.

Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham again spoke of the endowment for the General Federation and hoped members would feel like giving a free will offering towards it. Only $12 had been received so far and members could do better than that. Other clubs smaller than Quincy had contributed generously.

Mrs. Sheppard announced that a new committee had been formed to aid in the work of the social side of the club, to be known as the Reception committee.

Mrs. Albert E. Avery brought back an interesting and comprehensive account of the State Federation meeting at Haverhill which was attended by ten members from the club.

The muiscal part of the program fully realized the expectations of music lovers. Mr. Eurico Barraja's success was complete and well deserved.

At the sound of the first sonorous chords of Chopin's Polonaise, Op. 26, No. 1, the listener became aware that here was an uncommonly able musician.

Not a player with a loud, showy technique, but a real poet of the keyboard; possessing a soft, sweet touch and a perfect legato, qualities very seldom found in a young pianist and which permit him to bring out of a pianoforte, the singing effects of a string instrument. Mr. Barraja deserves the highest praise for his interpretation of Chopin's Polonaiset his rendering was highly individual and very interesting aesthetically, and we dare to say, very true to the composive conception! He has ably penetrated the character and style of this wonderful composition, which we regret to say is very seldom heard in concerts today. In his own "Scherzo" Op. 31, Mr. Barraja has revealed himself as an an original composer.

This "Scherzo" is really like a beam of light! It has freshness of inspiration, perfection of form, and correctness of development. One could perceive underlying it, that boldness of conception inherent in the Modern school of which Greig is the best known champion, and Debussy the master producer. One could feel the guiding influence of Creig's unequalled style and inexhaustible genius.

And why not? We certainly give praise to Mr. Barraja for baring the self-reliance to display the banner of this great master's school of independent frankness of composition. We should ike to hear more of Mr. Barraja's compositions.

Insistent applause at the end of the second number called for an encore, and Mr. Barraja responded with a "Romanza without words" by Guiseppe Martucci, the noted Italian composer, former head of the Naples Conservatory, now deceased.

This number, artistic in conception, graceful in development, gave the player an opportunity to display all his fine qualities as a skilled and resourceful pianist, perfect execution, color, and correctness of melodic line.

The audience was generous in giving Mr. Barraja well deserved applause and we join with them in giving him our best wishes for a brilliant and prosperous career.

The afternoon program was in charge of the Home Economics committee and Mrs. Stanley Bone, chairman, introduced Mrs. Mary H. Abel of Baltimore who spoke on "The new principle of Scientific Shop Management as applied to housekeeping."

Mrs. Abel came all the way from Baltimore to bring her message to the club and members were indeed fortunate to have one so experienced and well known speak to them. She was one of the founders of the New England Kitchen, started 20 years ago; one of the leaders at Lake Placid and a magazine writer of note.

Mrs. Abel said in opening that one cannot give time or money with a good conscience unless one has saved it and on this housekeeping rests. Scientific Shop management means better management, and she quoted five rules as follows:

1. Separation of planning and performing.
2. Putting the burden of results upon men who were responsible, those who give orders instead of upon the one who obeys orders.
3. Universal preparedness in advance.
4. Standardization of material and equipment. Making an analyses of each operation to find out how it can be done with the least expenses.
5. Paying of adequate reward for ability.

We are a wasteful people, wasteful of energy of women and children and of men. One of the commandments should be "Thou shalt not waste." In housekeeping especially in big places like hotels and restaurants time and energy could be saved. Time yourself on a given task and then keep to it. In making jelly or other things how much time is wasted as well as the jelly because you are not sure how to do it and each season make a try at it instead of finding out how. Much is printed now on all subjects and it was essential to know how to get at it. There were household columns of value in the daily papers and magazines and women should share their knowledge, also one could send direct to the Agricultural Department at Washington and get an answer to most household problems in food preparation and values.

How about our houses? Are not most of them ready made and misfits? Would we continue to wear clothing as illfitting as some houses? How about the kitchen is it well planned to save steps, or do you criss cross from stove to cupboard, and sink to stove? Are the doors and woodwork plain or has the architect (who never has to dust) put in some fancy grooves?

We cannot do much alone, but why not cooperate to make things easy in the house? Cooperation stores are a great success in England, also Germany and the big dairies of Denmark but here we are too individulastic. Not pressed by want we don't realize about saving.

Mrs. Abel said she had a hobby for all efforts are lost unless we do something. Find out what others have done for years. She believed every community should have a place where housekeepers can go to study conditions. No class needs help more. There was no sting in economy when one saved in one way to have more to use in a broader way, but one must understand how to rightly economize. She believed it would be money well spent for a city to appropriate from $1,000 to $10,000 to give women information on use and saving in coal, gas, food values, costs, etc. One needs to know history of what has been done, so there should be an information bureau for those who know how to teach those who don't. All that is needed to start a public service establishment is a desk, a woman and a card catalogue and in the beginning while the idea was taking root and growing the woman could be a consulting housekeeper to solve the problems in your house. Teach you to save in one way that you may spend in another and better way. Try to help some one else instead of yourself.

BRIEFS

A meeting of the City Council Committee on Streets was held Tuesday evening.

The striking of the fire alarm bells and blowing of whistles Tuesday night was due to a cross in the wires.

The Friend's club of the Atlantic M. E. church is planning to have a sale about the middle of December.

The Granite City club as usual will keep open house tonight and members and visiting friends will be made welcome.

Family parties will be the rule throughout the city tomorrow, Thanksgiving day, and good cheer will prevail.

Eugene R. Stone, Republican candidate for Mayor, who has been in Maine on a business trip, has returned and has commenced an aggressive campaign.

The Sunday evening service of the Atlantic M. E. church was in charge of the Epworth League. Rev. W. O. Schultz of the Boston University school of Theology led the meeting.

A short meeting of the Republican City Committee was held Tuesday evening, at which plans for the getting out of the full Republican vote next Tuesday were formulated.

Mrs. John Albee formerly of Atlantic and now living in Vermont has been very ill. She is slowly recovering and will return to Atlantic as soon as her health will permit.

A men's club has been formed in Atlantic by the men of the M. E. church. At the meeting held Saturday evening H. O. Cassidy was elected president, and Arthur Beale secretary.

The raid on the rooms of the Quincy associates continues to be the talk of the city and there is much speculation as to the identity of the men who were present when the raid was made.

Pickwick club is to have a musicale at its meeting on Wednesday evening, Dec. 6, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell and they are also the committee for the evening's entertainment.

Union Thanksgiving services will be held Thursday evening at 7.30 in the First Presbyterian church, corner Water and Quincy streets. The local churches will unite in this service. There will be special Thanksgiving music. All thankful ones, and others, are invited to this service.

A social and entertainment was held in the vestry of the Atlantic M. E. church Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Epworth League. There was a good entertainment and a collation was served. There were a large number present and everyone thoroughly enjoyed the pleasant evening.

MILTON GIVES A BRIDE.

George B. D. Pocher and Miss Pearl E. Beck, both of Milton, were married at 8 o'clock this evening in the First Baptist church, in the presence of many guests. A former pastor, Rev. Irad B. Hardy of Gloucester, officiated. He was assisted by Rev. Dr. J. W. Brigham of Dorchester and Rev. J. H. Woodsum, the present pastor.

Miss Florence M. Brigham of Dorchester was maid of honor and the best man was R. A. Stronach of Cambridge, Mildred E. Beck and Evelyn A. Beck of Dorchester and Margaret C. Hardy and Adelaide T. Hardy of Gloucester were flower girls. The ushers were Frank S. McLeod of Brookline, Sherman Beck of Dorchester, Roland D. Brown of Mattapan and William Johnston of Milton.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle, David J. Brown, was gowned in white satin. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. After a trip the couple will occupy their new home, Enghlenook," at 218 Edgehill road, Milton.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Styles Accepted by Best Dressers.

Handsome Top Coats in Favor.

Fashions have shaken down to an even level since the 1st of October. Things were not as chaotic even then as they were last year, when startling new ideas that threatened to revolutionize the styles were brought out. The trouser skirt, the queer coats, the barbaric colors, the fight between Russian and Byzantine effects, the hobble skirt, were all parts of a rebellious movement against what had been.

These innovations were heralded far and wide, and made as much of as the inventors hoped for, and then the public with its leaven of common sense rejected the most of the innovations, modified the grotesque things into graceful ones, and brought the sellers around to the viewpoint of the buyers.

This year the public was accustomed to the novelties of last year and suggested them again with certain reservations. Freakishness was still rampant in the gowns that were shown to compel attention, but it was not accepted by the mass of women, who had learned through two years of experience how to reject what was grotesque.

In the beginning of this revolution that overturned the stable things women were so bewildered that they gave tolerance to many things that had neither grace nor comfort about them. Thousands of women wore monstrous clothes because they did not know any better, and because their judgment was overturned by the confusion of the revolution. They wanted to be in the fashion, so they marched along with the rank and file instead of waiting to see what was going to happen and then abiding by their serious convictions.

All this lack of discretion in choosing clothes brought down ridicule and abuse upon the fashions of the day. They got a bad name, and it is difficult even now to get a good report of them, and yet they are the best fashions that have been invented for decades when used in moderation.

They had all the defects of their strength, and these could be easily caricatured by hundreds of women who would rather attract attention than be well dressed, for being well dressed does not mean being fashionably dressed. It means wearing the right clothes at the right time and wearing them well.

The leaven of good sense that permeated the attitude of the buyers of clothes this Autumn made them realize the comfort and grace of the narrow skirt, and so it was kept in fashion. It will still be exaggerated for there are women who would always wear things larger, or smaller, or more brilliant than their neighbors; but the two-yard skirt cut with straight seams and with sufficient trimming to relive its severity is the model skirt for the American woman.

The so-called mermaid skirt is again accepted for evening wear, but it does not curve in so much at the back, and therefore it has become more graceful. It outlines the hips, broadens the waist, clings to the ankles, and is finished by a queer fish tail that flops along the ground when the wearer walks.

When it is well made it is the best evening skirt we have had for many years, for it lends to a woman a grace which she sometimes does not possess, and it adds immeasurably to the graceful carriage of the woman who knows how to walk.

The two broad panels at the back of the walking skirts are among the best fashions over here, but it is only fair to warn women that they have almost disappeared in Paris. It is quite true that this capricious city used them on the best models that were made in August, but they were merely revamped from the Spring styles, and the skirt that is offered fashionable women in November in Paris is without these panels, and has in their place a shapely tunic overskirt which is divided in front, with one side lapped over the other and with a plain habit back.

This style will not suit every woman, and therefore the panels will remain in fashion during this winter, at least in America. They are not used in the style of last Winter—that is, one panel over another, or a single panel to imitate a box plait; there are two broad panels that take up the entire width of the back and hang to the hem, where they are heavily leaded and usually trimmed with braid or satin cords.

While skirts are taking on a wrapped drapery which really cuts their length, coats are growing perceptibly longer. One of the best models made by a well-known tailor reaches almost to the knees at the back and is sloped up in the front to follow the line of the tunic.

These new coats are slightly double-breasted at the waist line, and have only two buttons to keep them in place. While they open far down over the figure, they do not give that appearance because they have immense double revers or sailor collars that lap over at the bust.

Such information is not given to discourage the women who have bought the skirt with two panels and the coat that is half way to the hips, with a cord or belt across the back; it is to aid the women who are choosing their suits now. If they prefer the well-known coat with its seeming peplum from the waist line they will find it good style all Winter; but if they want to get something that is newer and just appearing over the horizon they will consider well these new affairs with their Napoleonic lines.

By the way, if you do choose such a suit, remember that the neck stock of other days is worn with it. These stocks are of white or gray satin sometimes of white chiffon cloth or lace, are well wrinkled and boned, with a turnover at the top and a bow with cascades in front.

This kind of neck finish goes in very well with the three large capes on the coat and the two large buttons at the waist, which remind one of the Beau Brummel effects in the days of the Regency.

Again, one must remember that only the slim neck can stand so much swathing, and it is a part of the same old story that all the fashions are made for thin women; as this seems likely to continue in the future as it has in the past, there is only one way out of it—the stout woman must get thin.

The styles are for the slender curves entirely; not for flesh and not for bones. There is the fashion for the fichu, which began last Spring, and reached its apex this Summer. It was really the forerunner of the new kind of shoulder drapery which is bound to be popular. It is alas, another of the revivals from the Victorian era, which all those who love good dress tremble to see. There was nothing graceful in the Victorian era, and nothing that an artistic nation should copy, yet just for the sake of the change Paris is taking up and advocating the dress of a time that was hopelessly inartistic.

Many of these new capes are combination of furs. They are not worn over coats, of course, but over one-piece frocks, and therefore they are a luxury for the woman who does not drive in a closed carriage or a limousine, but walks or goes in the trolley. However, there are many women who want just such an attractive finish to a one-piece frock for afternoon wear, and they are glad to invest in a shoulder cape rather than a large fur piece.

The "adjective," shoulder is advisedly used, for these little capes do not touch the middle of the figure. They are something in the nature of bretelles; there is a wide sloping band that goes over the shoulder and is caught at the waist, back and front, with an ornamental motif or buckle At the outer edge of the shoulder band there is a circular ruffle of material which hangs over the arm half way to the elbow. Under the buckle at the waist line, in the back, there starts a double cascade of material which falls to the knees.

This cascade at the back, by the way, is quite a feature of the smart new house gowns, although it has not appeared in any general way. It is quite easy to have one of these shoulder draperies made at a small cost if you have any presentable fur that can be cut up. It could be used for the wide bands and velvet used for the circular ruffle and the cascade at the back.

The buckle can be covered with fur, or, if one wants a touch of color, why not use one of the new Egyptian beaded affairs, which are striking and fashionable? Black velvet can be used for the ruffle with any kind of fur if one is wearing a black or white gown, but taupe-colored velvet with moleskin is the preferred choice of those who want a color that will go with any gown.

The muffs that go with these shoulder capes are fearfully expensive, and yet they look home made. There is a wide band of fur around the middle, and then three or four double ruffles of velvet put over a pillow-shaped foundation. Huge is the one word that describes them, and if they were of untrimmed fur they would be too large for beauty.

When made of velvet, lace, and satin they are not bulky, and they merely present a capricious ornament to a costume.—Annie Rittenhouse in New York Times.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

CHAPTER IX.

AS BETWEEN A MAN AND A WOMAN.

IT was Satan's inexhaustible energy and good spirits that most impressed them. His teeth seemed perpetually to ache with desire, and in lieu of black legs he husked the cocoanuts that fell from the trees in the compound, kept the enclosure clear of intruding hens, and made a hostile acquaintance with every boss boy who came to report.

Christian Young sailed away in the Minerva, carrying an invitation (that would be delivered nobody knew when) to Tommy Jones to drop in at Berande the next time he was passing.

"What are your plans when you get to Sydney?" Sheldon asked that night at dinner.

"First I've heard that I'm going to Sydney," Joan retorted. "I suppose you've received information, by bush telegraph, that that third assistant understrapper and ex-sailorman at Tulagi is going to deport me as an undesirable immigrant."

"Oh, no, nothing of the sort, I assure you," Sheldon began with awkward haste, fearful of having offended, though he knew not how. "I was just wondering, that was all. You see, with the loss of the schooner and—and all the rest—you understand—I was thinking that if—a—if—hang it all, until you could communicate with your friends, my agents at Sydney could advance you a loan, temporary you see, why I'd be only too glad and all the rest, you know. The proper"—

But his jaw dropped and he regarded her irritably and with apprehension.

"What is the matter?" he demanded, with a show of heat., "What have I done now?"

"Certainly not the unexpected," she said quietly. "Merely ignored me in your ordinary, everyday, man god, superior fashion. Naturally it counted for nothing, my telling you that I had no idea of going to Sydney. Go to Sydney I must, because you, in your superior wisdom, have so decreed."

She paused and looked at him curiously, as though he were some strange breed of animal.

"Of course I am grateful for your offer of assistance; but even that is no salve to wounded pride. For that matter, it is no more than one white man should expect from another. Shipwrecked mariners are always helped along their way. Only this particular mariner doesn't need any help. Furthermore, this mariner is not going to Sydney, thank you."

"But what do you intend to do?"

"Find some spot where I shall escape the indignity of being patronized and bossed by the superior sex."

"Come now, that is putting it a bit too strongly." Sheldon laughed, but the strain in his voice destroyed the effect of spontaneity. "You know yourself how impossible the situation is."

"I know nothing of the sort, sir. And if it is impossible, well, haven't I achieved it?"

"But it cannot continue. Really"—

"Oh, yes, it can. Having achieved it, I can go on achieving it. I intend to remain in the Solomons, but not on Berande. Tomorrow I am going to take the whaleboat over to Pari-Sulay. I was talking with Captain Young about it. He says there are at least four hundred acres, and every foot of it good for planting. First, I'll buy the island; next, get forty or fifty recruits and start clearing and planting; and at the same time I'll run up a bungalow; and then you'll be relieved of my embarrassing presence—now don't say that it isn't."

"It is embarrassing," he said bluntly. "But you refuse to see my point of view, so there is no use in discussing it. Now please forget all about it and consider me at your service concerning this—this project of yours. Suppose the government sells you Pari-Sulay at a pound an acre, clearing will cost you at least £4 more—that is, £5 for 400 acres, or, say, $10,000. Have you that much?"

"No; I haven't quite $8,000."

"Then here's another way of looking at it: You'll need, as you said, at least fifty boys. Not counting premiums, their wages are $30 a year."

"I pay my Tahitians $15 a month," she interpolated.

"They won't do on straight plantation work. But to return. The wages of fifty boys each year will come to £300—that is, $1,500. Very well. It will be seven years before your trees begin to bear. Seven times $1,500 is $10,500—more than you possess, and all eaten up by the boys' wages, with nothing to pay for bungalow, building, tools, quinine, trips to Sydney and so forth."

Sheldon shook his head gravely. "You'll have to abandon the idea."

"But I won't go to Sydney," she cried. "I simply won't. I'll buy in to the extent of my money as a small partner in some other plantation. Let me buy it in Berande?"

"Heaven forbid!" he cried in such genuine dismay that she broke into hearty laughter.

"There, I won't tease you. Really, you know, I'm not accustomed to forcing my presence where it is not desired. Yet as you said yourself, it was impossible for me to go away, so I had to stay. You wouldn't let me go to Tulagi. You compelled me to force myself upon you. But I won't buy in as partner with any one. I'll buy Pari-Sulay, but I'll put only ten boys on it and clear slowly. Also, I'll invest in some old ketch and take out a trading license. For that matter, I'll go recruiting on Malaita."

She looked for protest and found it in Sheldon's clenched hand and in every line of his clean cut face.

"Go ahead and say it," she challenged. "Please don't mind me. I'm—I'm getting used to it, you know. Really I am."

"I wish I were a woman so as to tell you how preposterously insane and impossible it is," he blurted out.

"Better than that, you are a man. So there is nothing to prevent your telling me, for I demand to be considered as a man. I didn't come down here to trail my woman's skirts over the Solomons. Please forget that I am accidentally anything else than a man with a man's living to make."

"I have told you," he began stiffly, "that recruiting on Malaita is impossible for a woman and that is all I care to say—or dare."

"And I tell you, in turn, that it is nothing of the sort. I am a navigator, and that is more than your Solomons captains are. And I am a seaman—a better seaman than you, when it comes right down to it and you know it. I can shoot. I am not a fool. I can take care of myself."

Sheldon made a hopeless gesture.

"That's right," she rattled on. "Wash your hands of me. But as Von used to say, 'You just watch my smoke!' I suppose you've been accustomed to Jane Eyres all your life. That's why you don't understand me. Come on, Satan; let's leave him to his old music."

He watched her morosely and without intention of speaking, till he saw her take a rifle from the stand, examine the magazine and start for the door.

"Where are you going?" he asked peremptorily.

"As between man and woman," she answered, "it would be too terribly—or—indecent for you to tell me why I shouldn't go alligatoring. Good night. Sleep well."

He shut off the phonograph with a snap, started toward the door after her, then abruptly flung himself into a chair.

"You're hoping a 'gator catches me, aren't you?" she called from the veranda, and as she went down the steps her rippling laughter drifted tantalizingly back through the wide doorway.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOME FRUIT SALADS.

IT should be written, Blessed are the salad eaters, for they shall have good health. Americans have not altogether awakened to the hygienic possibilities of good salads or these would form more frequent items on the daily bill of fare.

In autumn, when fruits are abundant, fruit salads afford the housewife an opportunity of varying the bill of fare. Recipes for fruit salads are as numerous as the kinds of fruits.

Apple Salad.

Among these apple salad is a staple. To make it take half a dozen large ripe apples, peel and core them neatly, then cut into slices.

Be careful to arrange these slices in a glass dish or salad bowl, putting a layer first on the bottom of the dish, sprinkling it with powdered sugar and a dash of cinnamon and so building up the salad into a pyramid, the top of which should be capped with two or three green or red grapes. Pour over the salad about half a cupful of sherry wine.

Bananas can be had almost anywhere. A delicious banana salad, suitable for luncheon, dinner or tea, is made by peeling and slicing several firm, ripe bananas and pouring over them a dressing consisting of half a cupful of sherry, one tablespoonful of maraschino and four tablespoonfuls of sugar. The banana salad may be decorated with grapes or with maraschino cherries.

Another banana salad is made by laying slices of banana on lettuce leaves, lemon juice having been sprinkled over the bananas to prevent discoloring. A mayonnaise dressing diluted with whipped cream should then be poured on the salad.

Grapes and Oranges.

To make grape and orange salad take white grapes, removing the skins and seeds. Blanch an equal quantity of almonds or English walnuts. Peel and slice several oranges. Dress each with lemon juice and oil. Combine the oranges, nuts and grapes and serve on lettuce leaves garnished with a mayonnaise dressing.

Fruit salad in glasses is made by putting into thin glasses layers of shredded pineapple, slices of banana, orange pulp and chopped angelica. Pour on this mixture half a gill of sirup, the juice of a strained lemon, one liquor glassful of maraschino and half a cupful of white grape juice.

The fruit salad is rapidly establishing its position in the menus of the popular restaurants. The prettier the salad looks when served the more appreciated it will be.

HINTS ON HOW TO COOK YOUR TURKEY

ROAST TURKEY.

Materials—Procure one 10-pound young turkey, from Berry Brothers, the Market with a reputation, NOW, one pint of cracker crumbs, one pint of bread crumbs, one half cup of butter, one teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of pepper, one tablespoon of grated onion and poultry seasoning to taste

Way of Preparing.—Pour a cup of hot water over the bread crumbs and squeese them dry. Mix them with the cracker crumbs add the butter melted and the seasonings. Clean and wipe the turkey dry inside and out. Stuff with the other mixture. Truss and cover the breast and legs with a thin coating of butter. Place in a pan and put into a hot oven, watch carefully and when nicely browned add a pint of boiling water. Reduce the heat and cook for two hours, basting frequently. The success in roasting a turkey perfectly depends on the basting and the proper heat. When the turkey is tender remove from the pan to a hot platter. Thicken the liquor in the pan with a little flour mixed with cold water. Strain into a gravy boat and serve. Garnish the platter on which you serve your turkey with fried sausage cakes, fried oysters, celery croquettes or chestnut croquettes.

OLEOMARGERINE CAUSES TROUBLE

Boarding House Keepers In Court For Serving Without Giving Notice

SEVERAL FINED

It was butterine or oleomargerine day at the district court this morning, for twelve of the boarding housekeepers of Quincy Point were arraigned on complaint of Frank C. Lombard of the state dairy bureau, for violation of the law from the fact that they did not display signs in their dining rooms stating that imitation butter was served and did not inform the guests to that effect.

During the early half of the month two agents of the bureau visited Quincy and called upon the different boarding houses where they had dinner. The supposed butter that was served to them was taken away in special boxes and analyzed and in every case was found to be oleomargerine. As a result of these visits warrants were sworn out against the parties and they were summoned into court.

The parties summoned were each served with two complaints. They were Henning Samuelson, Ada Spence, Joseph A. Harron, William Walker, John Bassett, William Hendrie, Mary A. Youle, Michael F. Sullivan, T. Alvin Wester, Laura W. Peters, Henry P. Donnell and Agnes McGrath.

Laura W. Peters declared that she did not serve butterine and intended to fight her case, so that one was continued to Dec. 8. The others with the exception of Wester, entered a plea of guilty and were fined $10 on one complaint and the second complaint was placed on file.

Wester hired a lawyer and he had three witnesses who testified that there was a sign on the door leading to the kitchen reading, "Butterine served here." The court, found him guilty and imposed fine of $20.

Wester's counsel thought this rather queer that his client should be fined $20 when the other cases were disposed of for $10. Judge Pratt, who was on the bench, then said that he would make the fine the same as in the other cases.

In addition to the boarding house keepers, Manley A. Perry and Arthur H. Raymond, employees at a City Square butter store, were also summoned into court for violation of the butter law. In the case of Perry, a plea of nolo was accepted and he was fined $25. The case against Raymond was placed on file.

Hawk's Head Within Cogwheel Is Iowa's Official Trademark

Des Moines, Nov. 29.—An official Iowa trademark was registered with the secretary of state yesterday. In the future, products of factors of the state will be stamped with a design of a hawk's head within a cogwheel, bearing the words "Made in Iowa."

Iowa is said to be the first state to have an official trademark. This was authorized by the session of the legislature and the Manufacturers' association had it registered.

SPENCER CLOSELY WATCHED

Fear That Slayer of Miss Blackstone May Attempt Suicide

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 29.—Bertram G. Spencer, convicted murderer of Martha Blackstone, is under constant guard lest he cheat the electric chair by the destruction of himself. Three custodians sit by his side in relays of eight hours each, as the once terror of Springfield tosses on his hospital in the York street jail.

The nervousness that the prisoner manifested during the trial has disappeared. He is sullen, silent and subdued. Physically he is almost a wreck. For that reason he has a place in the hospital ward instead of in a cell.

Twice before he began his career of crime in Springfield, Spencer attempted suicide. Once he threw himself into the river at Hartford and another time he took laudanum at his home in Lebanon. The jail officials are determined that Spencer will have no chance at suicide.

HYDE PARK WINS FROM LOCAL BOYS

The members of the Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. bowling team encountered the local Y. M. C. A. quintet at the local alleys of the local association last evening and emerged with a victory to the tune of 1336 to 1268. The game was closely contested at times, but the superiority of the visitors in striking down the pins, was readily made manifest. Farwell, who is high man in his league, was again the lone star of the contest, securing a mark of 112 for a single string.

His total for the three strings was 290 a mark which was beaten by Brooks, of the local team by two points. Brooks attained the 108 mark for a single string. Spains and Thomas also played well. The summary:

FOOTBALL GAME.

A football game of the high class order has been billed for tomorrow at Merrymount park between the All Collegians and the Quincy A. A. eleven. The calibre of the latter is too well known to require any mention of the sort of performance that is to be expected, but in the All Collegians, Captain McDonald's team will be up against a hard proposition. The team is composed of a number of college men who gained enviable reputations on the gridiron in the past and the fact that John S. Higgins is the manager is sufficient proof that a top notch team will enter the field. Nearly all of them will be local players and as a consequence a large crowd should be in attendance to witness the game.

In the afternoon the Quincy A. A. team will play the strong Cunningham Gym combination at Milton and on Saturday the U. S. S. Rhode Island contingency will be greeted for the second time this season.

Although 223 stone throwing Suffragettes have been arrested in London, it is doubtful if any of them hit what they aimed at.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

Mrs. Abele was given most appreciative applause and many enjoyed discussing pertinent questions at the close of the meeting.

A pleasant feature of the social tea was an informal reception to Mrs. Caroline A. Spear who was eighty-nine years young, for one surely could not call her old. Her birthday cake was also enjoyed.

The hostesses on hospitality were Mrs. Samuel E. Ames, Mrs. Fred E. Drake and Mrs. Charles Sampson and the pourers Mrs. Frank F. Prescott and Mrs. Albert E. Avery.

SHUT-IN SOCIETY.

The Massachusetts branch of the Shut-In Society has decided to include men in the distribution of candy at Christmas, and at the meeting in the Park Street church parlors, in Boston last week, an appeal was made for an extra supply of bags. Last Christmas about 625 bags of candy were sent to "shut-ins," and it now is planned to distribute one thousand packages.

Mrs. Frank B. Tracy of Wollaston president, presided at the meeting and reported that there were 230 "shut-ins" and 125 associate members and subscribers belonging to the Massachusetts branch, and twenty-three "shut-ins" and thirteen members and subscribers in the Rhode Island branch, which has come under the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts division.

Mrs. F. W. Ainsworth of Somerville made an appeal for more effort in behalf of those who are helpless and often forgotten or neglected by family and friends. The next meeting will be held Dec. 22.

ADVENTISTS MEETINGS.

Rev. S. Mortenson of Chicago, Ill., is to speak at the S. D. A. church, School street, Friday night, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and Sunday night at 7.15. Pastor Mortenson is known as an old speaker and author. He is at the present time in charge of the S. D. A. mission among the Swedish speaking people in America.

There will be songs and music at all the meetings and all who understand the Swedish language are invited to attend the meetings.

SETBACK FOR REBELS

Throw Away Their Arms and Flee From Chinese Loyalists

Pekin, Nov. 29.—An imperialist army has captured the city of Wu-Chang, driving out the rebel defenders after severe fighting, according to dispatches received in the capital. They add that the fall of Nanking, which is still held by the government soldiers, despite the fact that the rebels have captured the principal gates of the city, is imminent.

At Wu-Chang, loyalist troops pursued retreating rebels across the Yang-Tse-Kiang river into Wu-Chang, with frightful loss of life. The rebels, demoralized, retreated in disorder, throwing away their arms and leaving artillery and provisions behind.

VEGETABLE DIET THE BEST

Proves Superior to Meat In Long Tramp of the Buffum Brothers

Denver, Nov. 29.—That vegetables are more nourishing than meat is shown by Jesse Buffum and Warren H. Buffum, brothers, who are walking across the continent as an experiment under the direction of Harvard University, who proceeded from here on their journey toward the Pacific coast. One is eating meat and the other vegetables.

When they started there was but three pounds difference in their weights. Warren, the vegetable eater, is now fifteen pounds heavier than his brother.
